It would be interesting to point out to you how these men gradually threw off the shackles which bound them to the land for the benefit not of themselves but for the lords from whom they held the land in fee but I must confine myself briefly to touching on the growth in democratic power and the constant curbing of despotism on the part of rulers. There are five great charters of British freedom which you should never forget for without a doubt some of your ancestors fought and perhaps died on the battlefields of Edgehill, Marston Moore, or Naseby, in defence of the principles contained in these charters, namely, Magna Charta in the reign of John, Petition of Rights in the reign of Charles I, Habeas Corpus Act under Charles II and The Bill of Rights and The Act of Settlement under William and Mary. Without going into particulars, these different statutes stand out as milestones in the path taken by British people in preventing sovereigns obtaining such absolute power that they could peremptorily throw into prison or put to death any subject coming under the royal displeasure, and it is this that marks the distinction between the British people and the people who had gone before. The reign of the Stuarts is also noteworthy because under Charles I Parliament finally asserted its absolute right of taxation, thus preventing the king carrying on wars at his own volition, this being brought to a head by the famous John Hampden who inspired the well-known lines:

"Some village Hampden that with dauntless breast
The little tyrant of his fields withstood,
Some mute in glorious Milton here may rest
Some Cromwell guiltless of his country's blood."

The Restoration which followed the passing of Cromwell appeared to mark a period of reaction with the fruits of the Revolution lost but the spirit of the people soon manifested itself for under Charles II we had the abolition of all feudal tenures which created all kinds of obnoxious obligations under which land was held of the king and under James mainly as a result of the trial of seven bishops who had committed the crime of speaking their mind a movement began which ended in complete freedom of speech, even to the extent of criticizing the king himself. This was the final, complete and irrevocable assertion on the part of British people that kings rule not by divine right but by the right of the people in whom finally absolute sovereignty resides.

One of the contributory causes of the downfall of the Roman Empire was the centralization of all power at the city of the seven hills and the absolute impossibility of holding together such a huge heterogeneous mass of people by the iron bond of authority. The loss of the American colonies, together with the speeches of Chatham and Burke, indicate to us how difficult it was to persuade the King of England and his advisor to extend the freedom of the subject beyond the seas. It is now stated that the loss of the thirteen colonies was followed by a determination of the ruling powers to curb even closer the liberties possessed by the overseas colonies which still remained and it is a matter of pride that it was given to Canada to take the lead in all subsequent adjustments which have led to complete autonomy on the part of British colonies and the present happy condition of a British federation of free nations but all under one glorious flag. The famous report of Lord Durham, a governor here in the middle of the 19th century, revealed precisely the Canadian temper which refused to brook undue interference from the Colonial office and right now it is noteworthy that any pronouncement made by the Canadian government as to the policy of Canada in any matter pertaining to the Empire is accepted as a general policy by the other British Dominions. It is interesting to remember that when Canada refused to recognise that ill-fated pact known as the Protocol whereby we might have been dragged into wars not of our own making, our lead was quickly followed by Australia and South Africa. It is also most significant that when Austen Chamberlain a few weeks ago signed the treaty of Locarno which in the light of future peace may prove to be the most momentous treaty ever entered into by European nations it was distinctly understood that the British Dominions must of their own free will decide as to the placing of their imprimaturs upon this treaty.

Perhaps one of the happiest developments has been the adaptation of our Royal family to modern conditions. In all history there is no other instance of a ruling family so adapting itself to the growth of democracy which with the loss of constitutional authority here has been generated a power in the hearts of our people which makes our present king and his most popular son, the Prince of Wales, more secure in the throne and its succession than any monarch since the time of Alfred the Great.

I conclude with the expression of my belief in the ultimate value to the world of the example set by Great Britain and the Empire of such freedom as we enjoy, not spurious freedom of the specious found in Russia for instance, but the kind of ordered liberty that we enjoy right here in Canada.

I believe it will not be lost but rather that the flood of freedom, joining that great stream flowing from the United States, itself included of the British spirit of liberty, that the flood shall one day cover the earth, even as the waters cover the sea.

It is estimated that cusswords have been added to our language by every alarm clock.

MANY CEREMONIES WHEN HOUSE OPENS

For First Time Since War Troops Will Wear Dress Uniforms.

OTTAWA, November 27. Canadian Press. — With the opening of the 15th Parliament early in December, there will be ceremonials which have not been enacted since March, 1922, when the last parliament was opened. The difference between the opening of an ordinary session and the opening of the new parliament is mostly related to the election of a new speaker of the House of Commons.

This year there is the usual early demand for seats on the floor of the Senate for the opening ceremonies.

To what extent the official period of mourning will affect the brilliance of the assembly is not yet known.

The cavalry escort to his Excellency will return this year for the first time since the war to dress uniforms.

Recovery In Stock Prices Continues At New York

NEW YORK, Nov. 27. (Canadian Press).—Quiet strength characterized to-day's Stock Market. The recovery in prices, which started late Tuesday and continued through Wednesday's session, was resumed with U.S. Steel Common and a number of other popular industrials and railroad issues selling 5 to 20 points above the low levels established on the recent re-action. Steels displayed a strong undertone on reports that the plants of the United States Steel Corporation were now working at 83 per cent. of capacity, as against 81 per cent. a fortnight ago, with the shares of corporations located in the south receiving special attention because of the expanding building activities in that territory. Rails continued to benefit from the publication of additional October earnings reports comparing favorably with those of the preceding month and the corresponding month last year. Marking up of the call money rate to five per cent. in the early afternoon had no immediate effect on the price movement.

Trading Increased In Volume Spread Over Wide Mine List

TORONTO, Nov. 27 (Canadian Press)—Trading increased in volume and spread over a wide list on the Standard Mining Exchange this morning, Argonaut, Consolidated West Dome and Capitol absorbing the most individual volume, mixed, on the whole the market. Though the trend was slightly was firm. West Dome advanced to 17 easing a quarter for a net advance of a point and a half and Capitol closed a half point higher. Argonaut fluctuated between 17¼ and 16½, closing midway at noon, unchanged. Vipond, Keeley, Castle Tretheway, Goldale, and Keora, the latter heavily dealt in, were all fractionally higher. Softer stocks were Premier, Tough Oakes and Beaver.

Good Advances Recorded On Toronto Stock Exchange

TORONTO, Nov. 27. (Canadian Press).—Some good advances were recorded on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning, with British Columbia Fishing the new leader in a comparatively busy session.

Fishing sold up to 59 3-4, easing to 59 3-8 at the morning close, for a net gain of a point and an eighth, and Canadian Canners Preferred was marked up one and a half at 66. Twin City advanced a point and a half at 73. More moderate were the fractional advances of Atlantic Sugar, Barcelona and some others, while Smelters and Brazilian were selling respectively more than a point and a half points higher. Both eased down at the close to yesterday's mark.

Strength At Liverpool Caused Rise At Chicago

CHICAGO, Nov. 27 (Canadian Press).—Brisk new upturns today in wheat values here followed extraordinary strength shown by quotations at Liverpool, where the market was up as much as 8 1-4 cents a bushel compared with Wednesday's finish. General commission house buying was in evidence here and July delivery reached the highest prices yet this season. Further unfavorable crop advices from Argentina were at hand, with stocks of wheat at Liverpool reported as very low and the amount of wheat on ocean passage very small. Chicago opening prices 2 1-2 to 4 3-4 higher, new style, December 165 to 166 1-2 and May 162 to 164, were followed by numerous wide fluctuations but keeping within the initial range.

Corn and oats were firmer, sympathizing with wheat. After opening 3-8 to 7-8 higher, December 74 3-4 to 75, corn scored slight further gains.

Oats started unchanged to 1-8 up December 38 7-8 to 39. Later advances became general.

Provisions advanced parallel to hog values and grain.

TEACHERS' LUNCHEON.

The monthly luncheon meeting of the Teachers' Association of the Conservatory of Music took place on Thursday, the president, Mr. Charles Peaker, acting as chairman.

Three forthcoming recitals were referred to, the piano recital by Ernest Seitz on the 8th of December, Mrs. Park's pupils' recital on Tuesday next, and the recital of Miss Bessie Elcome on Saturday, December 5th.

Mr. Peaker gave a brief paper on "What Constitutes Musicianship" and in the discussion which followed, the members agreed that emphasis should be placed on aural appreciation of music, as compared with technical dexterity.

REICHSTAG RATIFIES LOCARNO TREATIES

Motion Also Included Entry To League—Vote Nearly Two to One.

BERLIN, Nov. 27.— (Canadian Press.)—The Reichstag to-day ratified the Security Pact and Arbitration treaties negotiated at the recent Locarno conference and approved Germany's entry into the League of Nations. The vote was 300 to 174.

GENEVA, Nov. 27.—(Canadian Press.)— Although the Reichstag ratified the Locarno treaties and approved Germany's entry into the League of Nations to-day, the impression prevails in League circles that Germany will not forward her application for membership until February, when the Cologne area will have been evacuated.

DRURY BELIEVES DOHERTY SINCERE

Former U.F.O. Minister Never Supported Anti-Protectionist Policy.

TORONTO, Nov. 27. — (Canadian Press.)—Commenting on the action of Manning Doherty, former U.F.O. minister, in resigning his seat in the Ontario Legislature in order to be free to support the Conservative policy in federal politics, Hon. E. C. Drury, former Premier, said he believed Mr. Doherty was sincere in the course he has adopted. "Mr. Doherty," added the former Premier, "never supported the anti-protectionist policy of the Progressive platform. His action would in no way affect the farmers' organizations on the question of protection."

PETERBORO GIRL AT REGINA "Y"

Miss Madeline Pulkinghorn Has Been Appointed Physical Director.

TWO ASSISTANTS.

Miss Madeline Pulkinghorn has been appointed physical director at the Y.W.C.A., Regina, succeeding Miss Flanagan, who has resigned and is returning to Montreal shortly. Miss Pulkinghorn recently joined the Regina "Y" staff as assistant physical director. She came to Regina from Montreal, where she took her training course. Her home is at Peterborough.

Miss Mildred Spooner and Miss Mimosa Pragnell, both of Regina, were yesterday appointed by the Y.W.C.A. board to take charge of the afternoon and evening swimming classes as Miss Pulkinghorn's assistants.

The reports given yesterday showed the finances of the "Y" to be in excellent shape and that 585 are registered in the swimming classes and 210 in the physical department. The Travellers' Aid secretaries met 400 trains within the month and assisted 536 women and children at the station. Many of these travellers spent a short time at the "Y."

The board members complimented each other and the staff on the improved appearance of the "Y" club room, which had been recently re-decorated and refurnished.

Society debutantes who are presented to the King and Queen of England at this year's Courts are to be permitted to wear shorter skirts than in the past.

SUNDERLAND-ARSENAL FIXTURE IS SATURDAY'S SOCCER FEATURE

CONFIDENCE IN BOTH CAMPS.

LONDON, Nov. 27 (Canadian Press Cable)—The season's test in the first division of the English football league will come on Saturday when Sunderland, present leaders of the senior string, lock horns with Arsenal ,the runners-up and Sunderland's most dangerous opponents. This game overshadows all other matches scheduled for the day, and among football fans it has been the sole topic of the week. A titanic battle is in prospect, and it is confidently anticipated that the Highbury ground will see a record crowd.

	Sunderland	Arsenal
Played	18	17
Won	10	10
Drawn	4	3
Lost	4	4
Goals for	48	43
Goals against	32	29
Total Points	24	23

Resume Stride

The League leaders resumed their stride a week ago when they swamped another metropolitan team, West Ham, and confidence in their prowess was restored particularly since this reassuring victory was gained after Sunderland had been wandering in the woods for several weeks. Previous to that they had been taken into camp by Leicester City, and that defeat succeeded three straight drawn games. Sunderland's supporters were manifesting a certain disquieture, which increased as the vital tilt with Arsenal approached and Sunderland apparently displaying no indication of returning to the sensational form of the early season's play. However, all is well in the County Durham camp, and the team is expected to put forward its best foot in their effort to retain hold on the crown.

Spared No Expense

Arsenal's followers a similar confidence prevails. The strength of their forward line, coupled with the stout defensive tactics of the intermediate string, is pointed to as a sure index of success. Among the wealthiest of the English professional teams, Arsenal has spared no expense to gather to the very best material that the football world can provide. They have entered into freak contracts—as for example that of Buchan, who will play against his old club-mates on Saturday—and they have paid straight cash in large amounts, seeking players from all over, from Scotland to South Africa. Their unbroken series of victories since October 31 is accepted as justifying their policy. A piquant touch will be added to the game should Buchen score against Sunderland, for then Arsenal will have to pay Sunderland the hundred pounds agreed to in Buchan's transfer contract for each counter Buchan registers. Sunderland's position is thus one of "Heads I win, tails you lose." Should Brain and Osborne also turn out, Arsenal's fans will feel that the game is already over.

Other Saturday Games

LONDON, Nov. 27 (Canadian Press cable)—Apart from the big game slated for Highbury when Arsenal entertain Sunderland, the fixtures for Saturday in the first division of the English League show no outstanding engagement. In the second division only eight games are scheduled, three clubs of that department engaging in the first round of the English Cup, while in the third division, all but four teams will be occupied in the annual contest. Darlington of the second division play off with Horden Athletic, an amateur combination; Oldham play Lytham, and Swansea Town play Exeter City. The thirty-eight cup games bring in all the varied leagues and alliances and combinations throughout the country, and not until the third round will the big leaguers take a hand in the fray.

With regard to scheduled games, the affray at Upton Park should attract some attention in the Metropolis where West Ham face Huddersfield Town. Provided that the Hammers have fully recovered from their severe handling at Sunderland last Saturday when they were badly trimmed, they should give the Yorkshiremen a good game. It will signalize Huddersfield's second visit to London, and perhaps the memory of the extraordinary game they played with the spurs on September 19, which resulted in a five-five draw, may now have been erased. Of the eight defeats sustained by West Ham this season, only two have been suffered on their own ground, by Arsenal and Sheffield United, but Huddersfield have won four of their victories away from home, so that the advantage of terrain may not mean as much as it seems.

Ashton Villa have an opportunity to acquire points when they play host to Manchester City at Villa Park. The city are in a bad way at the moment, bracketed as they are with Burnley in the humblest of positions, while the Villa are making stout efforts in the direction of the championship.

Manchester's Chance

Manchester United are hitting up a great pace at present, and have not lost a game since October 3 when they went down before Leeds. On Saturday they play Blackburn Rovers at Old Trafford, and their fans believe they will emerge at the long end of a good score. Of the two clubs that came up from the second division last year, Manchester United and Leicester City, the former have shown the better form and seem perfectly at home in senior circles. They constitute a real menace to other league aspirants, although at no time have they actually threatened to dethrone any of them. They are capable, however, of spoiling the leaders' hopes. A win over Blackburn would put them in a good position.

Bolton wanderers play at home against Cardiff City, and once more the opportunity will be presented to Cardiff to see how their expensive team, recruited mostly from the Scottish league, will shape up. They were disappointing since the notable game at Villa Park when they took Aston Villa into camp by two to nought, and followed it up by taking a couple of points from Leicester City. However, a draw with Newcastle United last week was creditable enough and it is not impossible that they may rise well to the occasion against Bolton.

Other scheduled games are:

Birmingham at Burnley; West Bromwich at Leeds; Everton at Leicester; Bury at Liverpool; Sheffield United at Newcastle; Tottenham at Nottingham (County).

INSIDE GOLF.

Maker of 51 Golf Champions "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans

By CHESTER HORTON

Many golfers have perhaps observed that when they have made shots while momentarily angered at the ball the distances obtained were suprising. One good asset in golf is the cultivation of a controlled grouch—with the ball. Every time you hit it precede the blow with a feeling of contempt and near anger toward the pock-marked lump of everything contrary. Such a feeling does two things: It releases powers that otherwise keep in abeyance and it promotes a concentration on the ball that is not otherwise obtainable. The player must be careful, however, to keep this feeling entirely out of the rest of his game—and of course no hint of it should ever be revealed to the other players in a round. I know some tournament players who cultivate a downright grouch at everything and everybody during their play. They say it aids them to concentrate, and also their manners gets on the opponent's nerves, which is an advantage too. That doesn't go in friendly golf, of course, but the big titles are now so valuable the players can hardly be blamed for bringing every advantage to bear while competing for them

GRANGE'S BEARS PLAY TIE GAME

DREW BLACK EYE.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27 — Harold "Red" Grange yesterday stepped from a college hero into business life as a professional football player, gained the hearty applause of a crowd of over 40,000, some $20,000 as his share of the receipts and a black eye. His team, the Chicago Bears, played a scoreless tie with the Chicago Cardinals, their bitter rivals of the South Side.

"I never played against a more expert team of football players," said Grange after the game. "I don't remember how I got the black eye, but I never saw a bit of intentional roughness and I enjoyed my first professional game immensely. I did my best but was able to practice with the team only a few days."

The Cardinals made every effort to keep their punts out of Grange's hands, but he managed to get hold of three which he ran back for 14, 25 and 30 yards. His longest gain from formation was but six yards and that was the next to the longest of the game for either side. He made one of the two first downs for his team.

Paddy Driscoll, former Northwestern star, made the only first down for the Cardinals and the famous Red-head stopped him then with a five-yard gain, Grange's only tackle of the game. The Cardinals only tried that one time around Grange's end. Driscoll once attempted a 43-yard drop kick, the ball sailing into a goalpost. Later from the 64-yard line his attempt was blocked.

Grange rested for a few minutes near the close of the second period and the start of the third, but rushed back into the game when the Cardinals reached the 19-yard-line, in time to intercept a pass under the goal posts and head off a touchdown. The Bears' only good chance for a score came later in the third period, but Sternaman fumbled on the 12-yard line in a dive through guard and the Cardinals recovered.

Grange opened up with passes in the last few minutes of the game, but all were knocked down by the Cardinals.

RUGBY STAR QUITS.

No "Pro" Money For Colgate's Captain.

PROVIDENCE, R.I., Nov. 27.—(Canadian Press).—"My final football game," declared Eddie Tryon, Colgate captain, as he doffed his gridiron togs at the conclusion of the Brown game here Thursday.

"I wouldn't play professional football if they offered me $10,000 a game," was Tryon's reply to a question of a friend if he was considering any of the offers tendered him.

SENATORS AND QUEEN'S READY

Senior Rugby Play-Off at Ottawa Should Be Great Game.

PRACTICES END.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 27 (Canadian Press)—Dave McCann had his Senators hard at work Thursday afternoon despite the fact that less than forty-eight hours will elapse before the Ottawa crew is sent into action against Queen's for the Eastern Canada rugby championship. The drill yesterday was not of the very heavy type, however, and the men were eased off from the severe practices that have been the regular programme for the past two weeks.

With every man fit and ready for the question there is little that can be done now unless round-table talks are indulged in to discuss plays and players. Today is a day of rest for the team although they may be gathered together tonight for a final chat.

It was learned Thursday that there may be a couple of changes in the line-up. Plans are laid to thwart the Queen's attack and in some particular styles there are men who have shown adeptness and they may be sent into the game at the start if the board of strategy decides to utilize the form of game mentioned. It is not thought probable, however, that there will be such deviation from the twelve that has carried the colors so successfully in the latter part of the Big Four race..

The players have little to say about the game, nor has Coach McCann. They all realize that in Queen's they meet a team trained to the minute and prepared to put up a desperate resistance to annex their fourth consecutive Dominion title. The Intercollegiate teams are noted for the shifty manner they form up and manouver their attack and the locals have been groomed to be on the alert every minute of the game. The greatest respect is entertained for Batstone, Chantler and Leadley, but in Connell, Emerson, Lynch and Miller the Senators have a quartet of secondary defence men who can all tackle like fiends. With firm footing one of the greatest battles of the season should be witnessed. The field is now in the best of shape and every effort will be made to keep it so until game time.

Queen's arrive today by bus and will rest here over night. The main guard of their supporters will arrive Saturday morning by train. Final arrangements as to officials have been completed and the weather is the only uncertainty now attending complete preparations for the contest.

Irrespective of conditions the crowd which will see the teams battle is expected to exceed all similar gatherings here for a number of years. The city is alive with football interest and the local twelve will certainly not lack for support no matter which way the verdict goes.

RUMORS FLYING UNDER BIG TENT

One Says That Walter Johnson Will Retire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—With the coming of cold weather, baseball rumors fly thick and fast in an effort to provide the fan winter food for thought. As a rule, most of the uncensored stuff is the bunk.

Here are a few of the wild rumors that have already been passed around.

The New York Yanks are willing to part with Pitcher Waite Hoyt to any club that will offer worth-while players in return.

The Boston Red Sox, dissatisfied with the showing of Howard Ehmke, are willing to listen to reason from any club that has trading material.

That "Goose" Goslin, unable to get along with Manager Harris, he having been disciplined several times during the season, will be traded.

The making of eight errors by Roger Peckinpaugh, losing the world series, has soured Washington and Owner Griffith on the veteran. He is reported going to the Red Sox as manager.

That Eddie Roush, of Cincinnati, annually sold or traded to the New York Giants, is again being sought by Manager John McGraw.

That a change will be made in the management of the Pittsburgh club, despite the fact that Bill McKechnie won a National League pennant and a world series.

That Walter Johnson had decided to retire and would never again pitch major league ball.

These are just a few of the baseball messages picked out of the air since the close of the world series.

Bowling

The Bobolinks, handicapped by having to use dummies, dropped all three games to the Robins. The Robins, however, rolled some nice games, Miss B. Smith's 198 and Miss Distin's 189 being high.

TURKS WON'T ARBITRATE.

LONDON, Nov. 27. (Canadian Press).—The Exchange Telegraph reports that the Turkish Council of Ministers under Mustapha Kemal Pasha, had decided to refuse compulsory arbitration by the League of Nations in the dispute with Great Britain over the Mosul territory, in Northern Mesopotamia.

FAMED STABLES TI JUANA MEET

Opening Was Celebrated With Eight Races and Famous Inaugural Handicap.

TIA JUANA, Mexico. Nov. 27.—(United Press).—Turf fans flocked to Ti Juana today for the annual inaugural of the racing season.

Thousands of holiday visitors gave a gala air to the premiere. It was a motley array, including noted turf figures, gamblers and movie idols from Hollywood.

Owners, trainers and jockeys were here from the nation's foremost stables. Some of the country's finest thoroughbreds were on hand for the inaugural races. Others will arrive throughout the season, which lasts 100 days or more.

The opening was celebrated with eight races and the famous Inaugural Handicap of a mile and 70 yards for a purse of $3,000, and added money.

There will be daily racing until the grand Coffroth Handicap, March 28. This is the richest of all turf stakes, $75,000 with added money, open to horses of all ages.

Other highlights of the Ti Juana season include the $20,000 Ti Juana Derby, March 14; Ti Juana Cup, $10,000 and added money, April 11; Ti Juana Futurity, $7,500 and added money, April 11; Ti Juana Futurity, added, April 4; Speed Handicap, $6,000 added, Feb. 21; Ti Juana Oaks $5,000 added, Feb. 28, and Juvenile Stakes, with $4,000 and added money, March 7.

Some of the country's leading stables have installed their horses at the Ti Juana tracks. Notable owners represented include Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Com. K. J. L. Ross, Mrs. Payne Whitney, A. M. Macomber, Baron Long, Fancocas Stable, Glen Riddle Stock Farm, Audley Stock Farm, John Rossester, J. J. Troxler, W J. Salmon, G. F. Croisant, La Brea Stables, and William Daniels.

Riddle is bringing his American Flag, leading money winner for 1925. Mrs Vanderbilt has shipped the noted Sarazen. Wrs Whitney has Cherry Pie, American mile record holder, and Macomber's stables includes Phulsa, the sensational French horse. Sunspero is here from the La Brea stable. Rancossas stables have Silver Fox, Mad Play and other well-known thoroughbreds.

Many old Ti Juana favorites, including General Thatcher, Osprey, Runstar and Atherstone have been entered in the big feature events and will be seen on the border oval before the season closes.

Jockey W. Kelsey, who rode the first winners of the Coffroth Handicap in 1917, was prominent among the riders at the Thanksgiving premiere Kelsey piloted Sasin to victory in the initial running of the stake in 1917.

M'GILL SECONDS READY FOR GAME

Final Heavy Drills Have Been Completed—Play on Saturday.

14 POINTS DOWN.

MONTREAL, Nov. 26 (Canadian Press). — McGill have completed their heavy drilling for the second game of the two-game series with St. Michael's College of Toronto, which will be played at the McGill Stadium, Saturday afternoon. The tussle will be for the Intercollegiate Intermediate championship and St. Mikes will enter the fray with a 14-point lead gained in the first game at Toronto last week.

With Gorrie considered fit to carry on the punting role for the entire game, McGill are confident that they can defeat St. Mike's and are hopeful that they can even overcome the 14-point deficit and take the title, but against St Mikes they will be pitted opposite a smart football machine, one which is considered, the best Intermediate squad developed in Ontario in several years and a combination which will take considerable beating

WOMAN GOVERNOR PARDONS HUNDRED

"Ma" Ferguson's Official Thanksgiving Day Clemency.

HUNTSVILLE, Texas, Nov. 27—One hundred and five prisoners were shown an open gate at the state penitentiary Thursday in compliance with Governor Miriam A. Ferguson's unprecedented Thanksgiving clemency proclamation orders.

Never before has any governor issued that many pardons in one day.

The total number of clemency proclamations issued by the woman governor to date is 1,089, or at the rate of 108 a month. Those freed today included 48 full pardons, 49 conditional pardons, seven paroles and one remission of a fine.

The list of those pardons include convictions on nearly every felony from theft to murder. Volstead law violators top the list.

ALEXANDRA DEPARTED

way, and Belgium. Princess Mary, the Duchess of Yorl and several scores of relatives. The Queen and her party had driven directly from the Palace, arriving more than half an hour before the funeral procession.

A Simple Service.

Queen Mary was visibly affected throughout the service. The Archbishop of Canterbury read the service, the lessons and the collect, between which hymns were sung. A short blessing, as the whole congregation knelt, followed the last hymn and the quiet funeral rites were ended with "God Save the King."

The King left his place, followed by the Queen and other royalties to the strains of Chopin's Funeral March, and after their withdrawal the congregation departed silently, leaving the casket on the catafalque alone before the altar of the great church. As the building was emptied the sun suddenly shone forth, its rays streaming through the windows and playing over the bier. At one o'clock in the afternoon the doors of the Abbey were again opened and the long procession began of those of the general public desirous of paying tribute to the dead Queen for the last time.

The coffin, after remaining in the Abbey all of tonight, will be carried tomorrow morning to Windsor for burial in the private Royal Chapel.

Stores Closed.

All of London's exchanges, stores and business houses were clored for one hour today, during the funeral services of the Queen Mother Alexandra. Cotton trading on the Liverpool Exchange was suspended for a like period.

Mourning will be carried out tonight with the darkening of all electric signs in the city, while all theatres except motion picture houses will be closed. The latter are closing this afternoon.

Memorial services were held today throughout the Empire, with a salute of forty guns wherever an English Garrison is stationed.

Services in Toronto.

TORONTO, Nov. 27 (Canadian Press).—Outstanding in the observances in this city of the funeral of the Queen Mother Alexandra in London, was the public memorial service in St. James Cathedral. Services were also held at new St. Andrew's and St. Simon's Churches. In addition to the official military garrison slaute of 40 minute guns fired in Queen's Park "Big Ben" in the City Hall tower tolled from 12.30 to 1 p.m., and a general silence of two minutes' duration was observed during the morning.

IN POLICE COURT

An Indian River youth pleaded guilty before Magistrate O. A. Langley in Police Court this morning to a charge of being drunk. Examination as to the source of supply brought to light the fact that it was beer that had caused the intoxication—two jugs of it. The man's brother had assisted in the drinking of the fluid. A fine of $10 was imposed.

At a sitting of the Norwood Court yetserday Herbert Cannon was remanded for one week.

WIRELESS MEN OF BRITISH SHIPS OUT ON STRIKE

CESSATION SLOW.

Those Who Signed On For Voyages Before Nov. 26 Will Keep Contracts.

LONDON, Nov. 27.— (Canadian Press.)—The strike of the wireless operators on British vessels which was called yesterday threatens seriously to effect shipping in the course of a few days. The strike was ordered as a protest against the proposed cut in the salaries of the operators of about $5 per month. Although some 5,000 members of the Wireless Telegraphist Union are involved by the strike, the cessation of work, if there is no settlement of the dispute, will be gradual as it is understood existing contracts will not be broken and men who signed for voyages before November 26, will fulfill their engagements.

HOCKEY WEEK AT THE REGENT

Special Wire For Niagara Falls-Petes Game To-night.

RUNNING STORY.

Hockey week at the Regent Theatre has been proving a great success and another crowded house is assured to-night when a running story of the Niagara Falls-Peterborough hockey game will be given by means of a special wire direct from the Niagara Falls arena. A special programme of high-class pictures has been arranged for to-night, while to-morrow at matinee and evening performances the sensational comedy success, "The Man on the Box," in which Syd Chaplin scores the hit of his career will be given for the last time. A percentage of the receipts of every performance this week is being donated by the management of the Regent to the Peterborough Hockey Club and the citizens are turning out enthusiastically to give the club a boost.

CHRISTMAS FAIR WELL PATRONIZED

George Street Ladies' Aid is Holding Annual Bazaar.

The Ladies' Aid Society of George Street Church are holding their annual Christmas Fair in the Sunday School rooms of their church. The two-day bazaar was formally opened yesterday afternoon with a brief address from the pastor, Rev. J. E. Todd, and had an excellent patronage during the afternoon and evening. The ladies in charge have accumulated a large quantity of pretty and useful things, and the Sunday School hall presents a bright and cheerful appearance, with the different booths decorated with bright-colored paper streamers and artificial flowers.

Mrs. B. Shortley is president of the Ladies' Aid Society. General convenors in charge of arrangements are Mrs. C. E. Smith and Mrs. H. F. Foote. A tea room arranged in the centre of the hall is in charge of the executive of the society, and is arranged with red bells and red-fringed lights, the tables centred with flowers.

A fowl supper is being served in the inner class-rooms, which are arranged attractively with tables crossed by bands of paper in mauve, yellow and green, the waitresses' caps adorned with the same pretty colors. The supper rooms are in charge of Mrs. J. W. Brock and Mrs. P. W. Hagerman, assisted by a corps of willing helpers.

A water-lily booth, with decorations of big paper water lilies, where whitewear is sold, is in charge of Miss E. Higgins and Mrs. Lowes. The handkerchief sale, in a dome-roofed booth done in orchid and pale yellow, is supervised by Mrs. A. M. Weldon and Mrs. H. M. Yelland, and blue and pink paper decorations adorn the apron section, in charge of Miss S. J. Miller. In the right-hand corner is a partiacularly attractive section, where fancy work is sold, in charge of Mrs. George Robertson. This is decorated with umbrella-like standards of yellow and orchid paper and a tall wicker stand filled with 'mums.

Mrs. F. Sanderson is convenor of the Country Store, a very business-like looking counter, with the attendants in white suits and everything arranged like a real store. There are baskets of vegetables and fruit on view here, with preserved fruits and pumpkins and clusters of grapes. Packaged goods also make a fine display at this section.

Delicious-looking home-made cooking is on sale at a counter in charge of Mrs. J. S. Stubbs, and home-made candy is sold at a dainty section where the pretty containers are made of different colors and shapes, with red poinsettias as central decoration. Mrs. G. L. Stevens is in charge of this sale.

Orange and blue paper and lines of flying bluebirds decorate the corner section devoted to the sale of novelties of many types, which is in charge of Mrs. M. McIntyre and Mrs. W. T. Belleghem.

LUNATIC'S RIGHT TO PROFITS IS TO BE DECIDED

ARISES FROM TRIAL.

Has Been Paid Into Coffers of Province, Evidence Shows.

TORONTO, Nov. 27 (Canadian Press).—The Ontario Government has submitted to its attorney general, Hon. W. F. Nickle, K.C., the question of lunatics to surplus profits earned upon their estates while in the hands of the public trustee. The point is one arising out of the recent trial of W. W. Dunlop, for many years inspector of prisons and hospitals, wherein evidence was given declaring that $110,000 in excess of bank interest had been earned by the estates of insane persons as a result of their investment by the Government.

Under the Drury Government the money, according to court evidence, was transferred to the Province's coffers, and went simply to swell the consolidated revenue and assist the Government's financial showing.

Theatre

AT THE CAPITOL

"THE DARK ANGEL."

Two handsome stars of the silver ver sheet, Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky are featured in"The Dark Angel," the big picture at the Capitol Theatre for this week end. They make an attractive pair and blend in beautifully with the general picturesque and romantic charm of a picture that has its scenes laid in England and in the war years of France. "The Dark Angel" is primarily a war picture but it does not elaborate too much on the tragedy of war. Death is the "dark angel" of the title, and a most extraordinary effect is achieved in this production by the representation of the dreaded Reaper, his dark shadow overpowering the figure of the hero on the distant battlefield,and touching with its cold fingers the girl in far-away England.

Vilma Banky, the new sensation of the screen is the heroine, Kitty Vane, daughter of Sir Hubert Vane, and Ronald Colman is her lover, Capt Alan Trent. When war clouds hover over their romance, he goes to France and the girl mourns for him later as dead. Captain Gerald Shannon is her faithful admirer but helps her in every way to find Alan, and later assists materially in the culmination of the romance. Alan is blinded and comes back to a home that believes him to have been killed in France. Hearing Kitty sing, as she passes him by in a boat with Gerald, he wishes to suicide but is prevented by the insistence of several small children, among them the small freckle-faced lad so familiar to screen lovers. So, with the kindly and easy methods of the "moving flockers," he becomes a great writer, dictating children's books to a faithful secretary. He is discovered accidentally by Gerald, who brings the lovers together on the eve of his own wedding to Kitty.

It is an interesting and beautifully-screened picture, with the handsome lovers as romantic figures and an appealing story.

AT THE GRAND

Patrons of the Grand Opera House are slated for an exceptionally good time as the latest "Bringing Up Father" show will be the next attraction, Saturday, December 5th. This is the same offering that had a long run at the Lyric Theatre, New York. Those who have seen it declare it the best offering based on the world famous Geo. McManus cartoons presented up to date. Nat LeRoy supplied the book and lyrics while the music is by Seymour Furth.

AT THE ROYAL.

BUSTER BROWN AT ROYAL.

The kiddies will have a good time Saturday afternoon at the Royal, when the first of a series of Buster Brown comedies is now playing. Buster,Mary and Tiger have stepped out of the cartoons and come to life. For good, clean. wholesome fun, they are hard to beat.

This was the Prince of Wales' remark after witnessing the first show ing of "Reveille" in London. Betty Balfour, the star in the picture, was present and was presented to the Prince. "Reveille" will be shown at the Royal Theatre for three days, starting Monday.

This is the first appearance of Betty Balfour since the famous Squibs series, and the latest of her pictures to reach Canada from the Old Country, where she is termed "The Mary Pickford of England."

ROYAL FILM FINE OFFERING.

"Price of Pleasure" Lives Up to Expectations.

Quite often a motion picture fails to live completely up to the enthusiastic recommendations of advance notices, but "The Price of Pleasure," which opened yesterday in the Royal Theatre is one which does justify all that has been said in its favor.

Virginia Valli and Norman Kerry are co-starred in the Universal-Jewel production, and as both are under contract to Universal one wonders why they have not been cast together before, for their 'team work' leaves nothing to be desired.

Among other things to be said in favor of "The Price of Pleasure" is that it is another example tended to convince that Carl Laemmle's oft-reiterated announcement of the policy to make clean pictures is a sincere announcement and not a pleasant phrase. The characters in the picture story are all wholesome, even if there are some whose ideas of right is not acceptable to the majority.

And this sentiment is caused by the mother-in-law whose refusal to accept into her home the woman loved by her son, set the high pace that two young folk were obliged to pay for pleasure.

Story Is Human.

The situations that led up to this are logically, and realistically told, without anything being overdone. There is comedy a-plenty, but the underlying motif is the tragedy that comes with a rude awakening from supreme happiness. It is the young man's mother who causes this awakening and she prefers to watch him suffer rather than put him in possession of the information that will aid him and restore his happiness.

While the woman he believes to be dead, is striving as best she may to provide decently for herself and their child. This part of the story is detailed in powerful manner, giving both stars opportunity to display their dramatic talents.

The supporting cast is more than adequate. and the direction by Edward Sloman leaves nothing to be desired.

G.W.V.A. LADIES HOLDING BAZAAR

Annual Two-Day Sale Opened Yesterday—Many Pretty Things.

GOOD PROGRAMME.

The Ladies' Auxiliary to the G.W.V.A. commenced their two-day bazaar yesterday afternoon in the G.W.V.A. Hall, with an opening address delivered by Major Winterbottom, taking the place of Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., who was scheduled to open the bazaar, but was absent from the city on business.

The ladies have a simple but effective arrangement for their bazaar, in low tables covered with pretty things, the standards between wound in blue and mauve paper and decorated with autumn leaves. Fancy paper lanterns and overhead pennants add a bright touch of color.

The president, Mrs. R. J. Devey, acts as general convenor. Mrs. J. W. Devall and Mrs. George Chambers have charge of the sale of aprons and woollen articles; Mrs. A. Tamblin and Mrs. A. Clark have the linens; Mrs. W. Hughes and Mrs. J. Mackness have the fancy work, and the kitchen table and sale of home-made cooking and quilts is in charge of Mrs. W. Sharp and Mrs. A. Thorndyke. A sale of candy in pretty containers, with pink rosebuds as decorations, is in charge of Mrs. H. Kelsey and Mrs. C. H. Porter, and the dolls are supervised by Mrs. F. M. McKinstry and Mrs. M. Peace.

Handkerchiefs, babies' wear and "Made in Canada" goods are sold by Mrs. B. F. McNeely, and Mrs. E. Houghton and Mrs. A. Cripps have the sale at the Country Store, where quantities of good second-hand clothing and other articles may be purchased.

Mrs. S. J. Budd and Mrs. E. Ivison are in charge of the fish pond, and Mrs. Bugg, assisted by Mrs. J. Lynch, are in the fortune-telling booth.

Afternoon tea is served at small flower-centered tables, with Mrs. J. Welsh in charge, assisted by Mrs. B. McLeod, Mrs. J. Black and Mrs. S. Millard. A big vase of 'mums decorated the central table, where tea was poured yesterday by Mrs. W. R. Morris and Mrs. R. J. Devey. Mrs. J. Black will pour tea today.

Yesterday afternoon, pianoforte numbers were rendered by Miss Margaret Flowers and Mrs. R. Bugg. Last evening, Leslie Abraham's Orchestra provided excellent music. A special musical progvamm: will be given this evening.

Mr. H. Lord has arranged an attractive table in the centre of the big hall, where examples of his work in reed and wicket baskets and vases are on sale.

OLD MAN BURNED IN HIS DWELLING

DEAD MAN WAS 93.

CHATHAM, Nov. 27.— (Canadian Press.) — William Coleridge, aged 93, was burned to death in a fire which early this morning destroyed his home near Palmyra.

George McFarlane, a hired man, was severely burned in attempting to rescue the old man. He was rushed to the Public General Hospital here for treatment. Coleridge and McFarlane lived together. The latter awakened about two o'clock this morning to find the dwelling in flames. With no time to dress, he rushed to the old man's room and endeavored to reach him, but was prevented by the flames. McFarlane escaped and sought aid from the neighbors.

WINTER NIGHTS FOR STUDYING THE STARS

Venus Will Be Magnificent Object Shortly After Sunset.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—(United Press.)— Though the state of the coal bins may cause natural doubts winter does not officially begin until 3:37 a.m. on December 22.

Still, points out the American Nature Association, cold weather provides the best season of all for star gazing and in the beauties of the skies the coal bin may be forgotten.

In December the constellations come into thier best view in the East says the Association. Five stars of the first magnitude in all, may be seen at this time in the Eastern sky in addition to many of the second magnitude. Venus will be at her best.

Venus will be a magnificent object in the southwest for about three hours after sunset. All during December Venus will parade a brilliance that reaches a maximum Jan. 2.

You will find in the East Taurus, The Bull, with its well-known groups of the Pleiades and Hyades and the ruddy Aldebaran, that represents the Eye of the Bull, and there is the magnificent Orion with its many stars of first and second magnitude.

To the North of Orion will be the brilliant Capela, The Goat, and her small kids of Hoedi close by forming a small triangular group that makes it easy for us to identify this brilliant star. Castor and Pollux, the twins, in the Northeast.

On Dec. 11 Mercury passed from East to West of the sun and after that will be in the morning sky and may possibly be seen in the Southwest before sunrise the last few days of the month when it will be at its greatest distance West of the sun. Saturn and Mars the American Nature Association points out will be in conjunction on Dec. 15.

In the North Cassiopeila is passing to the West of the meridian and the Big Dipper is swinging over to the East of the meridian though it is still close to advantage. The Great Square in Pegasus covers a large space in the Western sky and will be found about halfway between the horizon and the zenith.

Reproduction Of Sound Changed By Dr. De Forest

NEW YORK, November 27.— Canadian Press. — A basic patent covering what he terms a revolutionary principle in sound reproduction has been received by Dr. Lee De Forest, inventor of the radio tube.

According to Dr. De Forest his discovery is that a curved membrane can be made to reproduce sound waves without distortion by the application to its edges of an electric magnetic telephonic unit.

Reproduction at present is conduced on the principle of beating a drum. Dr. De Forest's idea is that of introducting the vibration by action on the edges of the diaphragm.

BRIAND COMPLETING HIS CABINET AFTER WEEK'S MANOEUVRING THAT STRIPPED SOCIALISTS OF ALLIES

BRIAND RESTRAINED BY ILLNESS.

PARIS, Nov. 28 (Canadian Press)—Repeated attempts to constitute a cabinet since the Painleve Ministry resigned almost a week ago have at last met with success, and the names of the Ministers probably will be made known officially today.

Aristide Briand, already accustomed to the duties of Premier, having served in that office a number of times, heads the cabinet. For the second time within a week he was requested by President Doumergue to form a ministry Thursday, and last night he announced that he had been successful in the task and that the new cabinet is virtually complete.

Louis Loucheur has been named as Minister of Finance, but there seemed to be doubt last night as to whether he would accept the portfolio. This Ministry, according to opinion, is the only cog lacking in the new government machine, although it was admitted that there might be last-minute changes in the list of Ministers as made public by the semi-official Havas Agency.

Premier and Minister of Foreign Affairs—M. Briand.
Minister of Finance — M. Loucheur.
Minister of War—Paul Painleve.
Minister of Justice — Camille Chautemps.
Interior—Edouard Deladier.
Navy—Georges Leygues.
Education—Herault Roustan.
Commerce—Daniel Vincent.
Public Works—Anatole De Monzie.
Labor—Antoine Durafour.
Colonies—Leon Perrier.
Agriculture—Jean Durand.

Objects to Night Work

After virtually completing his new cabinet, M. Briand broke off negotiations at 8.30 last night in order to comply with his new rule to do no night work. Just before he retired he announced that the cabinet would be completed this morning.

The formation of the combination went along smoothly Friday until early after, when just about the time M. Briand was to meet President Doumergue he found it necessary to sidestep difficulties placed in his way by a few disgruntled elements of the old Left coalition which are still unreconciled to the fact that the Left bloc is dead.

The Radicals raised the question of financial policy of the new Government; they wanted to know what measures it was proposed to substitute for the projects introduced by M. Painleve (including capital levy.)

"I am the policy of the coming Government," was the reply of M. Briand. "Until my cabinet has met to decide upon its Ministerial declaration, I am the whole thing. And, if any group is dissatisfied with the choice made by the president of the republic, let them go to Elysee Palace." (to the president).

Painleve's Task

In the course of the day M. Painleve was asked to resume the difficult task of unravelling the financial tangle, supposedly with the view of taking up his own projects as they stood before they were revised at the behest of the Socialists. He declared, however, that he preferred to leave the Finance Ministry since it was as Finance Minister he was overthrown. He consented to turn to the Ministry of War and put through the scheme for reorganization of the army which was on the programme when his first Government fell in October.

The new cabnet, as now shaped, involves only a very slight shift toward the Right. Former Premier Leygues is the only mark of the Moderate groups in the new combination. Consequently, it is supposed that M. Briand is satisfied with a slight enlargement of the parliamentary majority to make up for the Socialist defection, counting on the support of several independent groups not included in the new list.

Liberal Wants Recount Of Ballots Electing Perley

MONTREAL, Nov. 28. (Canadian Press).—Efforts to obtain a recount of ballots cast in the Federal election at Argenteuil County, where Sir George Perley, Conservative, was victorious which failed before Mr. Justice Cousineau at Joliette on November 13 last, were Friday carried in the Court of Appeals by L. L. Levault, defeated Liberal candidate.

Mr. Legault asked for permission to appeal Mr. Justice Cousineau's judgment refusing a recount, and after much argument between counsel, Chief Justice Lafontaine took the question under advisement, saying he would give judgment in the near future.

SMALL SALES MARKET TO-DAY

POTATOES $3.

The vendors on the farmers' market had plenty of produce for sale this morning, but the crowd wasn't buying to any extent. Many of the dealers spent the majority of their time in blowing on their fingers and stamping their feet. The frosty air and the snow carpet gave a crisp tingle to the outer section.

Eggs ranged in price from 50 cents a dozen on the square to 60 cents in the basket section. Butter was 43 and 45 cents a pound. Fowl was very plentiful. Chickens sold all the way from 18 cents a pound to 25 cents, with hens at 20 cents. Ducks and geese were 23 and 25 cents a pounds, and turkeys 33 cents.

Clover honey in sections was 18 cents in the basket section. Head cheese was 20 cents a pound.

Downstairs, apples were having a dragging sale. McIntosh Reds were 30 cents a peck and Baxters 25 cents. Spies were $5 a barrel for No. 1's, and $1.75 a bag for No. 2's.

Pork sold at 19 and 21 cents a pound, and lamb at 26 and 28 cents, with mutton priced at 16 and 18 cents a pound.

Mr. S. A. Oke had cider in gallon glass containers at 40 cents.

Mixed wood on the market this morning was $8 and $9 a load, and hay $11.

Potatoes were $3 a bag, one man offering 2 bag lots for $5.

QUEEN ALEXANDRA AT REST

The above exclusive photograph is the first to reach Canada of the obsequies of Queen Alexandra and shows her casket in Sandringham Church, with the wreaths sent by the King and Queen, and Queen Alexandra's coachman on guard before his mistress' bier. The photograph, taken in the Royal Church, was sent from London over the cable by the remarkable Bartlane photo transmission process.

King Sends Message To People of Empire

LONDON, Nov. 28 (Canadian Press)—Responding to many expressions of condolence on the death of his mother, the Dowager Queen Alexandra, King George today issued a message to the Empire reading as follows:

"To my people:—In my great sorrow I am helped by the flood of sincere and generous sympathy reaching me from every quarter of the British Empire, and indeed from all parts of the world.

"While deeply grateful for these expressions of good will, I also rejoice that my beloved mother enjoyed the constant and warm affection of my people. It is such proofs of allegiance to my throne and family that have given me confidence and strength in the many anxious days I have had to face during the past fifteen years."

BATTERY PRAISED FOR SPEEDY WORK

Brigadier General Hill Inspected Local Unit at Armouries.

A splendid showing was made by the 4th Field Battery Canadian Artillery at the Armouries last evening on the occasion of the annual inspection The manner in which the Battery executed the various movements, especially the speed with which they got their guns into action, reflected much credit on the Commanding Officer, Major D. J. Lauric, and his Officers. Brigadier General F. W. Hill, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., the inspecting officer, expressed himself as being well satisfield with the showing made by the Battery and complimented the men on their smart appearance.

At the conclusion of the inspection the Battery was entertained by the Why Worry Minstrels who with their witty stories and songs won their way to the hearts of their listeners. The programme as as follows:

Song—Doo Waka Doo, Entire company.
Song—Yes Sir, That's My Baby, Kelly and Abraham.
Song—Let it rain, let it pour, Entire chorus.
Song — Ukulele Lady, Entire chorus.
Monologue—Cullen.
Songs—"No Wonder" and "My Little Wooden Hut," Entire chorus.
Monologue—Abraham.
Song—On the Island of Coo-coo, Marshon and chorus.
Song—There Ain't No Flies on Auntie, Abraham.

YOUNG HUNTER SHOT.

Slipped on Log — Bullet Through Thigh.

LINDSAY, November 28. — Philip Taylor, the 16 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. James Taylor, of Elsie, Haliburton, is at present in the Ross Hospital here, suffering from the effects of a hunting accident.

The boy was shot in the thigh by a bullet from his own rifle. He was hunting with his father at Twelve Mile Lake, and while stepping on a wet log lost his footing and slipped, the rifle discharging its contents, which entered the boy's thigh. He was carried a mile to the lake shore, and paddled to his home, and later taken to the hospital.

Coal Strike Proposal To Be Submitted By Governor Pinchot To Anthracite Miners and Operators To-day

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 28 (Canadian Press) —Governor Pinchot last night invited the anthracite coal operators' negotiating committee and the United Mine Workers' officials to meet him here at 2.30 this afternoon to receive a proposition for a settlement of the anthracite suspension. The invitations were in the form of telegrams to Major W. W. Inglis, chairman of the operators' committee, and John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers.

IRISH BOUNDARY PARLEYS FAILED TO HEAL BREACH

Discussions Continuing — British Minister Regrets Premature Announcement.

SEEK MODERATION.

Expect Free State to Bear Share of National Debt.

DUBLIN, Nov. 28. — (Canadian Press).—Thursday's conferences at London between Sir James Craig, Premier of Ulster, and President Cosgrave, of the Free State Cabinet, concerning the boundary situation as between Northern and Southern Ireland, failed to help matters. Discussions will take place to-day with Kevin O'Higgins, Minister of Home Affairs, and Patrick MacGilligan, Minister of Commerce, playing a leading role, with a view to arranging a possible agreement.

The main desire of the British Government appears to be to exercise a restraining hand in every direction. The Ministers do not conceal their bitter disappointment at the premature publication of a forecast of the Boundary Commission's report which undoubtedly led to the resignation of Professor Eoin MacNeill, representative of the Irish Free State on the commission, and their chief appeal is for moderation of thought and speech not only in Ireland but in England also.

The Government is anxious to give whatever help is within their power to avoid friction between Ulster and the Free State, but they feel strongly that, if possible, any difficulties should be adjusted directly between Northern and Southern Ireland. The Ministers reject definitely the Dublin report of negotiations for a settlement proceeding on the basis of cancelling both Article 12 of the treaty, which deals with the boundary, and Article 5, which concerns the Free State's contribution to the Imperial exchequer.

According to this report the Free State would be prepared to waive any right it might have to a rectification of boundary in return for the cancellation of payments due from the Free State to the Imperial Exchequer in respect to the national debt and cost of war pensions. Ulster has paid her share under these heads to an amount of £20,000,000, but the Free State has not paid anything since the treaty was signed.

It seems to have been assumed in the Free State that Professor MacNeill's resignation rendered the Boundary Commission void, but the legal advisers of the Imperial Government have decided otherwise.

President Cosgrave's visit to London has also given rise in Dublin to the hope that steps may be taken by the British Government to prevent the publication of the commission's award. The notion that the Cabinet had any idea of postponing or suppressing the presentation of the report is declared to be ridiculous. It is pointed out for one thing that the commission is a statutory body and that a decision by a majority of its members has immediate legal effect. The findings of the commissions will, therefore, be published as soon as possible, which means in a few days.

GIVE UP SEARCH FOR TWO HUNTERS

No Trace of Winslow or Drain, Believed Drowned in Koshabog.

According to Robert W. Carson no trace has yet been found of either Winslow or Drain, who are thought to have been drowned in Koshabog Lake. About two weeks ago a canoe was found drifting there with two dogs leashed to the thwarts; the dogs were drowned. Mr. Carson said that the search had been given up.

Boob Outwitted Boobs In Sing Sing Prison Escape

OSSINGTON, N.Y., Nov. 28. (United Press).—A "boob" has escaped from Sing-Sing Prison, according to Warden Lewis Lawes.

The warden was discussing the departure from the prison walls of James Tana, a youthful Brooklyn burglar, who got out Friday by pretending he had a revolver in his hip pocket. The warden believes Tana is not the only "boob" at large, for he termed his escape "the most asinine thing I ever heard about."

TRIAL SHRINKS KIP'S FORTUNE

Disinherited By Father, His $300,000 Is Fast Disappearing.

MAY BE PENNILESS

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—The fortune of young Leonard Kip Rhinelander is fast disappearing as his suit to annul his marriage to the daughter of a Negro hack driver proceeds. There are indications he will be practically penniless when the trial ends.

In a preliminary hearing his counsel stated that his multi-millionaire father had disinherited him and that he had only a $300,000 legacy from his grandfather. It is understood that his father has not advanced one cent for expenses.

Attorneys' fees, alimony and investigations have eaten up the young man's fortune. One of the most expensive items was the tracing of the bride's ancestry back to England and the West Indies. An investigator was sent to Europe several times to gather evidence. This expense was made needless by the withdrawal at the beginning of the trial of the wife's formal denial that she had negro blood.

Call Wife's Father.

The first witness when the trial re-opens Monday is expected to be George Jones, the wife's mulatto father.

Mrs. Rhinelander also is expected to testify Monday. Her attorneys say they have only a few questions to ask and her husband's counsel profess to rely more upon her letters than upon her cross-examination. There is a possibility that she will be confronted with more of her own love letters.

"A lengthy cross-examination will not be necessary," said Isaac N. Mills, Rhinelander's trial lawyer. "We have her letters. What is written is written. I have a lot of other letters I do not intend to introduce unless something unexpected arises. I have introduced the most expressive ones."

Kip Not Through.

Rhinelander plans to take the stand again to deny testimony Wednesday of Ross Chidester, former chauffeur for Philip Rhinelander, that he told his employer's son three years before his marriage that the father of Alice Jones was a negro.

Predictions were made that the case would reach the jury by Thursday.

IRISH BARRACKS ATTACKED.

DUBLIN, Nov. 28. — (Canadian Press).—The civic barracks at Phillipstown and Tullamore, about 10 miles apart in King's County, were attacked from the streets at 2.30 o'clock Friday. There was intermittent rifle firing for twenty minutes, but no one in either of the barracks was injured.

Among certain savage tribes in Southeastern Africa, twins are regarded as Children of Heaven, and are believed to possess the power of controlling the elements.

BRITAIN'S QUEEN MOTHER IS BROUGHT HOME TO REST AMONG THE TOMBS OF KINGS

Canada's Exports Increase By $121,914,186 In Year

OTTAWA, Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press.)— With unparalleled increase in exports of $121,914,186, the net improvement in Canada's favorable balance of trade for the twelve months ended Oct. 31 last, as compared with the preceding twelve months, was $77,383,766, the increase in imports being only $46,530,420.

FAR INTO NIGHT LONDONERS PAID LAST RESPECTS

Public's Pilgrimage Past the Bier of Alexandra in Westminster Abbey.

WERE SIX ABREAST.

Column Extended Nearly Two Miles—Private Service To-day.

LONDON, Nov. 28. (Canadian Press).—Throughout the chill afternoon and far into the gloomy London night, Queen Mother Alexandra's subjects, moving slowly in a tremendous sorrowing column, passed by the scores of thousands into the dusk of Westminster Abbey Friday to pay their last respects at the bier of their departed sovereign.

The vast queue, which stretched for more than a mile outside the Abbey, furnished an impressive closing picture for this day of final tribute. In the morning, through the gently falling snow, a ghostly royal procession, proceeding without sound along the white-carpeted streets, followed the Queen Mother's coffin from St. James Palace to the Abbey, and after the solemn funeral ceremony was held, there the public began its pilgrimage past the bier.

An hour after the abbey was opened to the people the queue was a mile and a half long, with people six abreast, extending back from the doors through the streets. Those who went directly to the abbey to gain entrance had to walk twenty minutes to Grosvenor Road to take their places at the end of the column.

Early this morning a motor hearse took the Queen Mother's body to Windsor, where burial will take place at 11.30 o'clock. The grounds of Windsor Castle will be closed to the public, and only a brief private service for the Royal Family will be held before the remains are consigned to the tomb house under St. George's Chapel. There they will rest until the sarcophagus in the chapel for Alexandra and her husband, Edward VII., is completed.

AT WINDSOR CASTLE.

Flower Decked Chapel Holds All That is Mortal of Beloved Queen.

WINDSOR, Eng., Nov. 28. — (Canadian Press).—Britain's Queen Mother was brought home to rest among the tombs of the Kings at Windsor this morning.

While London slept Alexandra's body was taken from Westminster Abbey, where the funeral services were held yesterday, and conveyed by motor hearse to this, the most beautiful of all the Royal castles in England.

As the procession entered the palace ground, the sun's rays flashed on the flag-draped coffin and brought into strong relief the gray snow-capped towers of the ancient home of Royalty.

The casket was placed on a catafalque below the steps of the altar in St. George's Chapel, where it will rest amidst a profusion of flowers until a sarcophagus is prepared beside that of Alexandra's husband, Edward VII.

At 11.30 o'clock the simple commital service was held with all the Royal Family present. The ancient cloister abutting on the chapel was filled with wreaths from all parts of the world. Not since the funerals of Victoria and Edward VII. has such a magnificent collection of choice flowers been seen. By noon thousands of persons had already come to view the cloister and many more thousands are expected to-morrow.

CHILDREN AND GRAND CHILDREN AT ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Garvey Celebrated Their Golden Wedding.

MANY DESCENDANTS.

Presentations Showed Respect With Which Venerable Couple is Regarded.

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 26—Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Garvey celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding on Tuesday, November 24. Solemn high mass was sung in St. Paul's Church at 10 a.m., Rev. J. J. Garvey was the celebrant, Rev. J. . O'Brien acting as deacon, Rev. J. V. McAuley as sub-deacon and Rev. P. J. McGuire as master of ceremonies. The altar was beautifully decorated with golden chrysanthemums, typifying the golden anniversary. The childrens' choir of St. Paul's sang the mass, Miss Doreen Johnston presiding at the organ.

Afterwards the guests adojurned to "Maple Grove Farm" where a bountiful luncheon was served and the toasts were honored in the customary manner. Rev. J. J. Garvey was toastmaster and proposed the toast to the bride and groom, Mr. James Garvey replying on behalf of his parents. There were words of congratulation from Rev. P. J. McGuire, Rev. J. J. O'Brien and Rev. J. V. McAuley, Mr. Joseph Garvey and Mr. Henry O. Coones.

The table, which was centred by a wedding cake of generous proportions, was decorated with yellow 'mums and yellow streamers, presenting most attractive appearances.

Mr. Fred Garvey read the following address from the family to their parents and Miss Martha Garvey presented a purse of gold.

Dear Father and Mother,—It is a great pleasure and privilege for us to be with you today to join with you in celebrating this day of days, namely your golden wedding.

When fifty years ag today you set out together with high courage to make your way in the world, you, no doubt, with the happy optimism of youth, did not foresee any trouble or obstacles ahead but anticipated a sunny pathway fragrant with flowers such as lure the young to venture forth upon the highway of life for in dreams and in love there are no impossibilities. It is probable you soon encountered difficulties and setbacks such as lie in wait for most of us, and perhaps there were times too when discouragement laid hold upon you or maybe sorrow caused you seasons of grief and sadness; but we are sure that, whether in joy or sorrow, prosperity or adversity, health or sickness, you stood shoulder to shoulder like true helpmeets and with unshaken faith in Almigaty God to lead you only into such paths as were best for you and to give you strength and guidance sufficient for all your needs.

"Possibly at the outset of your married life you gave no thought to the measure of the years in store for you for it is at the end we take stock of our lives and not at the beginning, nor now as you look back over the vista of fifty years does it seem to you so long a time, but just a happy fulfillment of an epoch, as yet, we trust, far from ended.

And now, dear father and mother, as we gather about you with pride in you and love for you, we ask your acceptance of this gift which we offer you with thanksgiving to God for the nobility of character and tenderness of heart of the parents He gave us and we pray that we may never cease to prove worthy of your greatness and goodness and love.

Signed on behalf of your children.

Mr. and Mrs. Garvey had a large family numbering thirteen in all, ten of whom are living. One child died in infancy, Mrs. B. Blastorah died about a year and a half ago, and Mr. W. J. Garvey was fatally burned in the Quaker Oats fire in Peterboro several years ago. Of the ten living all were present for the happy occasion but the youngest son, Leo. J. Garvey, who is teaching in Port Arthur and was unable to be present. The members of the family who were present were: Mrs. Collins, Peterboro; Mrs. LeGrandeur, Toronto; Mrs. M. Allan, Lakefield, and Misses Laura and Martha at home; Messrs. Joseph and James of Peterboro, Timothy at home, and Fred of Toronto. Following the presentation of the gift of the family, Miss Josephine Collins of Peterboro read the following address on behalf of the grandchildren who number twenty-nine in all.

"Dear Grandpa and Grandma,—We, your dear grandchildren, gather round you today, to rejoice with you, on this the fiftieth anniversary of your wedding. We wish to express the love and affection we have always felt for you and to thank you for your many kindnesses shown to us. How we look forward to your visits to us and how delighted we are to spend our vacation days with you for there is no home like grandpa's. Today we cannot tell you how much we love you but we know you will understand and accept our feeble effort. May God bless you and spare you to us for many years.

"Signed, your devoted grandchildren."

Misses Alma LaGrandeur and Mary Allen presented their grandmother with a beautiful bouquet and Misses Eleanor Allen and Mary Garvey presented a similar bouquet to their grandfather.

A reception was held during the afternoon and evening at "Maple Grove Farm" which is well known for its hospitality and many friends and relatives availed themselves of the opportunity to add their queta to the general expression of good will toward Mr. and Mrs. Garvey.

Mr. Garvey looked very handsome in a gown of black chiffon velvet with mauve crepe scarf.

Fifty years ago Katherine Sheehan and Dennis Garvey were married in St. Joseph's Church, Douro, by Rev. Daniel O'Connell and began their wedded life in Douro, moving later to Otonabee and twenty five years ago they moved to "Maple Grove Farm," Smith, where they still reside, honored and respected by their neighbors and held in highest regard by the entire community.

Among the guests present at the golden wedding were Rev. J. J. Garvey, Lakefield; Rev. P. J. McGuire and Rev. J. J. O'Brien of Peterboro, Rev. J. V. McAuley of Ennismore, Mr. and Mrs. LaGrandeur, Miss Alma and Master Neil, Mr. and Mrs. Carlon, Mr. and Mrs. David Garvey and Mr. and Mrs. D. Heffernan of Norwood; Mrs. Collins and Miss Josephine, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Garvey, Miss Mary and Master Ray and Mr. James Garvey of Peterboro, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sullivan, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Leahy, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Moher, and Mr. Michael Garvey of Douro, Mrs. H. C. Garbutt and Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Coones, Smith, and Mrs. M. Allen and Miss Genevieve of Lakefield.

LABOR TEMPLE CO. BARS COMMUNISTS

Party May Not Use Building For Meetings Any Longer, Says Company.

TORONTO, Nov. 28. (Canadian Press). — In the interests of trade unionism, the directorate of the Labor Temple Company has denied the facilities of the Labor Temple to the Communist party. Tolerant for many years in its dealings with the Reds, the Labor Temple Company, it was announced yesterday, had, at its quarterly meeting this week, closed its doors to organized Communism.

O Come! Let Us Worship The Lord

PETERBOROUGH CHURCHES WELCOME YOU

My Idea of God

By J. GRESHAM MACHEN, D.D.
In The Woman's Home Companion.

IF MY idea of God were really mine, if it were one which I had evolved out of my own inner consciousness, I should attribute very little importance to it myself, and should certainly expect even less importance to be attributed to it by others. If God is merely a fact of human experience, if theology is merely a branch of psychology, then I for my part shall cease to be interested in the subject at all. The only God about whom I can feel concerned is eno who has objective existence, an existence independent of man.

But if there be such a really and independently existent being it seems extremely unlikely that there can be any knowledge of him unless he chooses to reveahimself; a divine being that could be discovered apart from revela tion would be either a mere name distinct from those ways that have just been mentioned; the Bible tells us things about God of which no slightest hint is found either in nature or in conscience. Of those things we shall speak in a moment. But first it should be observed that in addition to that fresh information the Bible also confirms the revelation which has already been given. The confirmation is certainly necessary, for the revelation of God both in nature and in conscience has been sadly obscured. The facts were already there, and also the gift of human reason for apprehension of them; but the light of reason somehow was obscured until in the Bible men were enabled to see what they ought to have seen before.

Thus in these three ways there is attained, I hold, a genuine and objective knowledge of God. Certainly that knowledge does not remove the feeling of wonder which is dear to the mystic's heart. Indeed, it ought to accentuate that feeling a thousandfold. There is nothing in the knowledge of God which should stifle, but everything which should awaken, the "numinous" quality in religion of which Otto speaks. God has gently pulled aside the curtain which veils his being from the gaze of men, but the look thus granted beyond only reveals anew the vastness of the unknown. If a man's knowledge of God removes his sense of wonder in the presence of the Eternal, then he has not yet known as he ought to know.

Yet partial knowledge is not necessarily false, and there are certain things which are known about God. At the very center of those things stands that which is most often denied to-day: the very center and core of Christian belief is found in the awful transcendence of God, the awful separateness between God and the world. That is denied by modern men in the interests of what is called, by a perversion of a great truth, the "immanence" of God. We will have nothing to do, men say, with the far-off God of historic theology; instead we will worship a God who exists only in and with the world, a God whose life is found only in that little life which pulsates through the life of every one of us. Pantheism is substituted for theism on the ground that it brings God nearer to man.

But has it really the desired effect? I for my part think not. Far from bringing God nearer to man, the pantheism of our day really pushes him very far off; it brings him physically near but at the same time makes him spiritually remote; it conceives of him as a sort of blind vital force but ceases to regard him as a person whom a man can love. Destroy the free personality of God and the possibility of fellowship with him is gone; we cannot love a God of whom we are parts.

Thus I for my part cling with all my heart to what are called the metaphysical attributes of God,—his infinity and omnipotence and creatorhood. The finite God of Mr. H. G. Wells seems to me to be but a curious product of a modern mythology; he is to my mind not God but "a" god; and in the presence of all such imaginings I for my part am obliged to turn, very humbly but resolutely, toward the dread, stupendous mystery of the infinite, and say with Augustine: "Thou hast made us for thyself and our heart is restless until it finds its rest in thee."

This devotion to the so-called metaphysical attributes of God is unpopular at the present day. There are many who tell us that we ought to cease to be interested in the question how the world was made, or what will be our fate when we pass through the dark portals of death. Instead, we are told, we ought to worship a God who is not powerful but merely good. Such is the "ethical theism" of Dr. McGiffert and many others; Jesus, it seems, was quite wrong in the stress that he undoubtedly laid upon the doctrine of heaven and hell and the sovereignty of God. We moderns, it seems, can find a higher, disinterested worship—far higher than that of Jesus—in the reverence for goodness divested of the vulgar trappings of power.

It sounds noble at first. But consider it for a moment and its glory turns and leaves us in despair. What is meant by a goodness that has not physical power? Is not "goodness" in itself the merest abstraction? Is it not altogether without meaning except as belonging to a person? And does not the very notion of a person involve the power to act? Goodness divorced from power is therefore no goodness at all. The truth is that overmuch abstraction has here destroyed even that which is intended to be conserved. Make God good and not powerful, and both God and goodness have been destroyed.

In the presence of all such abstractions the heart of man turns with new longing to the living and holy God, to the God who is revealed in nature, in the dread voice of conscience and in the Bible. But as one turns to such a God there is no comfort but only despair; the whole human race is separated from God by an awful abyss. Strange indeed, to us Christians, seems the complacency of the world; the very root of our religion is found in the consciousness of sin, but at that point, on the basis of such presuppositions, there comes the really distinctive revelation that the Bible contains. It is not a revelation of things that already were true, but the explanation of an act. The Christian religion is based not merely upon permanent truths of religion but also upon things that happened in Palestine nineteen hundred years ago; it is based not merely upon knowledge of what God is but also upon a record of what God did.

INTO our sinful world, the Christian holds, there came in God's good time a divine Redeemer. His coming for an aspect of man's nature—the feeling of reverence or loyalty or the like—or else, if possessing objective existence, a mere passive thing that would submit to human investigation like the substances that are analyzed in the laboratory. And in either case it would seem absurd to apply to such a being the name of God.

A really existent God, then, if he be more than merely passive, if he be a "living God," can be known only through his revelation of himself. And it is extremely unlikely that such revelation should have come to me alone. I reject, therefore, the whole subjectivizing tendency in religion that is so popular at the present time, the whole notion that faith is merely an "adventure" of the individual man. On the contrary, I am on the search for some revelation of God that has come to other men as well as to me, and that has come into human life not through a mere analysis of human states of consciousness but distinctly from the outside. Such revelation I find in the Christian religion.

THE idea of God, therefore, which I shall here endeavor to summarize is simply the Christian idea. I have indeed been enabled to make it my own. I love it with all my heart; but I should not love it if I thought that it had been discovered merely in the depths of my own soul. On the contrary, the very thing that I love about it is that it comes to me with anexternal authority which I hold to be the authority of God himself.

At this point, however, there will no doubt be an objection. We have spoken about the "knowledge" of God, but in reality the knowledge of God, it is often said, is unnecessary to our contact with him, or at least it occupies merely a secondary place, as the symbolic and necessarily changing expression of an experience which in itself is ineffable. Such depreciation of knowledge in the sphere of religion has been widely prevalent in the modern world, and at no time has it been more prevalent than now. It underlies the mysticism of Schleiermacher and his many successors; it underlies the Ritschlian rejection of "metaphysics"; it underlies the popular exaltation of "abiding experiences" at the expense of the "mental categories" in which they are supposed to be expressed; and in general it is at the roots of the entire separation between religion and theology, experience and doctrine, faith and knowledge, which is so marked a characteristic of the religious teaching of the present day.

In opposition to this entire tendency I for my part must still insist upon the primacy of the intellect. It may seem strange that the intellect should have to be defended by one who has so slight an experimental acquaintance with it as I; but Reason in our days has been deposed by Pragmatism the usurper from her queenly throne, and wandering in exile, as she does, cannot be too critical of any humble persons who rally to her defense. And, as a matter of fact, the passionate anti-intellectualism of the present age is having its natural fruit in a lamentable intellectual as well as moral decline. Such decadence can be checked, I for my part believe, only by a re-emphasis upon truth as distinguished from practice, and in particular only by a return from all anti-intellectual mysticism or positivism to the knowledge of God.

CERTAINLY, unless our contact with God is based upon knowledge of him it ceases to possess any moral quality at all. Pure feeling is non-moral; what makes my affection for a human friend, for example, such an ennobling thing is the knowledge which I possess of the character of my friend. So it is also with our relation to God: religion is moral and personal only if it is based upon truth.

If, then, in order that there may be a moral and personal relation to God there must be knowledge of him, how may that knowledge be attained? I have no new ways to suggest; the only ways of knowing God which I can detect are found in nature, in conscience and in the Bible.

God is revealed, I hold, in the first place through the things that he has made. "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork." This revelation of God through nature is commonly called, or used to be commonly called, "natural religion." And natural religion is by no means altogether dead. Modern men of science, if they be thoughtful, admit that there is a mystery in the presence of which the wisdom of the wisest men is dumb; the true man of science stands at length before a curtain that is never lifted, a mystery that rebukes all pride. But this revelation through nature is far richer than many men of science suppose; in reality it presents to us not merely a blank mystery but the mighty God. The revelation comes to different men in different ways. When I viewed, for example, the spectacle of the total eclipse of the sun at New Haven on the twenty-fourth of January, 1925, I was confirmed in my theism. Such phenomena make us conscious of the wonderful mechanism of the universe, as we ought to be conscious of it every day; at such moments anything like materialism seems to be but a very pitiful and very unreasonable thing. I am no astronomer, but of one thing I was certain: when the strange flitting shadows were gone and the world was bathed again in the wholesome light of day, I knew that the sun, despite its vastness, was made for us personal beings and not we for the sun, and that it was made for us personal beings by the living God.

In the second place, God is revealed by his voice within us. I am perfectly well aware that that voice is not always heard. Conscience has fallen on evil days; it is drowned by a jargon of psychological terms; it is supposed to be rendered unnecessary by an all-embracing network of legislative enactments. The categories of guilt and retribution are in many quarters thought to be out of date, and scientific sociology is substituted for the distinction between right and wrong. But I for my part am not favorably impressed with the change; self-interest seems to me to be but a feeble substitute for the moral law; and its feebleness, despite bureaucratic regulation of the details of human life, and despite scientific study both of individual human behavior and of the phenomena of human society, seems to be becoming evident in an alarming moral decline. The raging sea of passion cannot permanently be kept back by the flimsy mud embankments of utilitarianism, but recourse may again have to be had to the solid masonry of the law of God.

IN THE third place, God is revealed in the Bible. He is revealed in the Bible in a way which is entirely marked a stupendous miracle, was a voluntary act of condescension and love. During the days of his flesh he proclaimed by his word and example the law of God; he proclaimed it in a new and terrible way that of itself could only deepen our despair. But with his proclamation of the law there went his proclamation of the Gospel; with his pronouncement of the divine judgment upon sin there went his offer of himself as Saviour. When that offer was received in faith there was not only cure of bodily ills but also forgiveness in the presence of God.

At first faith was implicit; men trusted themselves to Jesus without fully knowing how it was that he could save. But even while he was on earth he pointed forward with ever-increasing clearness to the redeeming work which he had come into the world to do. And at last, on the cross, that work was done. The divine Saviour and Lord, for the love wherewith he loved us, bore all the guilt of our sins, made white and clean the dark page of our account and reconciled us to God. There is the centre of our religion. But how pitiful are my words! I may perhaps make men understand what we think, but I can never quite make them sympathize with what we feel. The holy and righteous God, the dreadful guilt and uncleanness of sin, the wonder of God's grace in the gift of our Saviour Jesus Christ, the entrance through Christ into the very house of God, the new birth by the power of God's Spirit, the communion with the risen and ascended Lord through his Holy Spirit present in the Christian's heart—these are the convictions upon which rest our very lives.

WANTED FOR THEFTS.

Prisoner at Windsor Faces Other Charges.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Nov. 28. — (Canadian Press). — Point Grey police believe they have discovered the man responsible for a number of thefts in the municipality during recent months, and have issued a warrant for the arrest of H. O. Reid, who is held in Windsor, Ont., charged with theft in Point Grey and at Windsor.

The accused is alleged to have been connected with robbery of a Shaughnessy Heights residence last August, when $5,000 worth of jewellery was stolen.

GOOD PROGRAMME AT LEAGUE MEETING

Debate Was Centre of Interest For Marmora Young People.

MARMORA, Nov. 28.—One of the most striking programmes ever featuring in Young People's League work was forthcoming at the United Church on Wednesday evening, Miss M. Topper, Vice-President of the Citizenship Department, was in charge.

After devotional exercises, Mrs. E. C. Prentice gave a very able paper on "Success." Next followed a reading of a poem, "A Step Towerds Heaven," by Miss Gladys Williams. Mr. Percy Archer revealed himself as a singer of much promise in his excellent rendition of "Where My Caravan Has Rested." Mrs. W. Litt played a very pleasing organ solo, which was followed by a chorus from members of the Citizenship Department. The event of the evening, which was partly responsible for another record attendance, was the debate, wherein it was resolved "That opportunity does more towards success than ability." Both sides were ably represented. Mr. George Aunger and Mr. E. C. Prentice took the affirmative side, while Miss Longmore and Mr. J. Collins looked after the negative side. Most logical arguments were produced, making the judging in the hands of Dr. Curtis, Mr. W. J .Cottrell and Miss Nellie Williams no easy task. The verdict eventually went to the negative side. The meeting finally closed with the National Anthem.

Miscellaneous Shower.

Relatives and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Leal on Wednesday evening to tender them a miscellaneous shower. At the appointed time, a very fine array of useful and ornamental presents was unveiled. Dancing and refreshments beguiled away the hours of the evening.

Local Druggists Have Modern Remedy for Colds

When Vicks VapoRub, the "external" method of treating sore throat, bronchitis, deep chest colds, or croup, is applied over throat or chest, the ingredients are released as vapors by the body heat.

These vapors, inhaled with each breath carry the medication directly to the affected air passages, loosening the phlegm and relieving the congestion.

Colds are usually relieved over night.

THE KIWANIS SUCCESS.

The Kiwanis Club of Peterboro is to be congratulated upon the success scored by its musical comedy, "Miss Bob White," at the Grand last night, a success, the Examiner is happy to say, both artistically and financially.

The Kiwanis organization has done much since its formation in Peterboro to help under-privileged children, and it is gratifying, therefore, to note the patronage extended to this entertainment last night and to hear that the prospects are bright for a continuance of that patronage tonight when the musical comedy will be repeated.

"Miss Bob White" is well worth seeing on its own account, and doubly so because it affords the public a chance to assist the Kiwanians in worthwhile community service.

The final performance tonight should, therefore, be greeted by an audience large enough to tax the accommodation of the theatre.

THE FADING PROGRESSIVES.

An interesting and unexpected political development which will tend to further demoralize the Progressive organization in this Province is the desertion of Hon. Manning Doherty, who has resigned his seat in the Legislature because he believes that his sympathies for the Conservative Federal policies make it inconsistent for him to sit as a Progressive in the Ontario House.

Hon. Mr. Doherty was Minister of Agriculture during the Drury regime, and was generally regarded as one of the few members of the Cabinet at that time who were capable of filling the lofty positions in which they found themselves.

His resignation now is merely another sign that the Progressive party in this Province has run its race.

With only one Ontario Progressive in the Federal House and with such leaders as Hon. Manning Doherty leaving the party, the agrarian political movement in Ontario may be considered as at an end—unless the rumours that the Ferguson Government intends to go to the country on a policy of Government control prove to be correct.

In that event the dry sentiment in rural constituencies may serve the Progressives in good stead and prolong their existence, inasmuch as the agrarian party will oppose any relaxation in the Ontario Temperance Act tooth and nail.

UP TO THE PROVINCE.

The Simcoe County Council, in voting against passing a bylaw to make lights on vehicles compulsory at nights, indulged in considerable criticism of the Legislature for dodging its responsibility and "trying to make the County Councils bear the odium among the country people for putting such legislation into effect."

The Examiner, while unable to agree with the vote against compulsory lights on vehicles, feels that the criticism which accompanied the decision is justifiable.

The Legislature should be big enough to tackle this problem on its own responsibility, instead of passing it on to the municipal councils.

Apparently the opposition of many farmers to such legislation has led the members of the Provincial House to think that it would be safer politics to pass the buck.

Safer driving conditions and not safer politics should be the factor to determine the attitude of the Legislature to this question.

And there is no possibility of safe driving conditions so long as unilluminated horse-drawn vehicles are permitted on the roads of Ontario after dark.

The situation calls for Provincial legislation, and the members should have courage enough to see that such legislation is put into force.

SHOP EARLY AND IN PETERBORO.

Christmas shopping should not only be done early, but so far as Peterboro people are concerned, it should be done in Peterboro.

In the city's stores elaborate preparations have been made for the Christmas season; Yuletide gifts are to be found everywhere.

There is no reason why every Peterboro citizen's holiday shopping cannot be done here at home, any more than that there is any reason why all Peterboro's shopping the year in should not be done at home.

The Examiner wonders if the housewives of Peterboro ever stop to think seriously of this question.

Is your dollar a boomerang? Does it come back to you?

A part of every dollar you spend with your local merchants is in turn spent by them for taxes, rents, wages, advertising, delivery, office supplies, etc.

This part of your dollar goes into local channels of trade and comes back to you. It benefits you and your breadwinners who are employed here.

The firm in some other city, selling to you by canvasser or catalogue, pays its business expenses in its own city. With the exception of the down payment, which is the agent's commission, not one penny of your transaction at your front door can ever get back to you. It's gone.

Before you send any more of your dollars to another city, just remember that your local merchant will be glad to stand comparison in quality and value on any article you want.

Give him an equal chance to satisfy you—that's all he asks.

BUILDING IN WINTER.

The Standard has for a long time past been urging that Canada should pay special attention to the question of going on with building work during the winter months, says the Kingston Standard. The cold weather has been urged against this, but eminent authorities and practical experience have proved this to be utterly wrong and a myth. Many big buildings have been erected in the country during the winter months, notably at Montreal, and that city has cold enough weather.

We are glad to see the Hamilton Spectator has again taken the subject up. It points out that the obstinate conviction that building operations must be suspended during the winter months is responsible for a great deal of unnecessary loss of employment and waste of money, and that it is only of recent years that the idea was so much as challenged, and an attempt made to provide work during the colder months for those engaged in the various branches of the industry. Locally it states a certain amount of progress has been made in this direction, and it has been demonstrated that the notion that building operations must cease during the winter, especially as regards interior work, is erroneous.

If we turn to the United States; "Custom, not climate, is mainly responsible for seasonal idleness in the construction industries," reports the Special Committee appointed by Secretary Hoover to consider the situation in the United States. At Rochester in the winter of 1921 over 17,000 days of work were provided. Through a publicity campaign urging winter remodeling and decorative work carried out, every succeeding winter has increased substantially. In 1921 December-March permits for building were 20 per cent. of the year's total; while in 1924 the proportion had risen to 27 per cent.

The Spectator examines into the economic results of the absence of work during the winter, stating that the natural result is that wages have to be raised to a level which allows for this periodic inactivity. According to a survey made by a building congress in Boston, referred to in the Financial Post, workmen in the construction industry are occupied for about 75 per cent. of the year, or nine months, in that city. "During the time when they are employed they must be paid enough to support them and their families in the idle period, the equivalent of an entire three months' vacation with pay. The Congress estimates that this costs the owners of property and renters in Boston $10,800,000 annually," which works out at about $14.80 per capita per year for the citizens. Enough has been said to prove that building in winter is worth considering in Canada.

THE FUR FACTOR OF FICTION.

Readers of American fiction are familiar with the sort of tale which has its scenes laid in what is usually termed the "frozen North," and which represents, or rather misrepresents, life in north-west Canada as a perpetual battle between a primitive and not too law-abiding people and the relentless forces of nature in her wildest and sternest moods. It is a form of melodramatic romance that has become highly popular south of the line in recent years, providing material in abundance for a certain class of magazine serial writers and moving picture scenario producers, whose knowledge of the conditions they seek to depict is limited to a belief that Canada is a frozen waste inhabited by bears, half-breeds, fur traders and mounted police.

The characters of these stories and films are of a common mould. The heroine is usually the daughter or ward of a drunken brute of a fur trader or factor, invariably Scotch, who finds herself pursued by some strange destiny or fearsome fate, from which she is rescued, after many hair-raising experiences by a handsome hero, as often as not, a "Mountie," who when not engaged in making love in the wilderness, or rescuing damsels, white or colored, in distress is "getting his man." Then, of course, there is the inevitable half-breed, always up to mischief; sometimes a dusky maiden, beautiful but treacherous, and a French-Canadian trapper or voyageur, light-hearted and gay, or cunning and villainous as the circumstances require. Out of these types, variously colored, has been woven a web of fiction which, though highly creditable to the imagination of the spinners is a grotesque disfigurement of Canadian conditions.

Some time ago, the Commission of the Royal Canadian North West Mounted Police found it necessary to enter a protest against the caricaturing of the members of that famous force at the hands of American fiction writers and "movie" producers, who pictured them as uniformed Adonises, continually philandering, running down ruffians, and taking part in all sorts of romantic adventures entirely out of keeping with the discipline and tradition of the corps. Now it is the turn of the Hudson's Bay Company to make its voice heard against the misrepresentations, amounting in many cases to slender, of the same class of fictionists.

No tale of the "frozen North" would be complete without a fur trader, and, presumably, to give an air of verisimilitude or realism to the character it has become a habit among the authors of these stories to portray him as a Hudson's Bay Company "factor," which to them, apparently, is a term synonymous with all that is vile and inhuman. Factor Mac—something, or-other is commonly depicted as a drunken, blustering, truculent bully, without principle or scruple, and capable of the most hideous crimes. In one instance, it is pointed out, he was represented as "a wild, unkempt, repulsive brute, whose whole object was to get physical possession of the heroine in the story, and who finally killed the girl's father."

The implication that the Hudson's Bay Company have men of this type in their employ, or that they are capable of condoning such villainy is, of course, clearly libellous; and in issuing a warning to the publishers of this sort of fiction, as well as to moving picture producers in the United States, that legal action will in future follow the detection of such slanderous tales, the Governor and directors of the company have taken a step that should be as salutary as it is justified. It is time that these shoddy fiction-mongers, who fill the pages of American magazines with lurid tales of a life that exists only in their imagination, should be made to realize that they cannot, even under the guise of romance, libel Canadian conditions and Canadian people with immunity.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

In justice it must be said of Red Grange that he has been the greatest advertisement the ice business ever got.

Peace River has at last decided that it elected a Progressive on October 29th. The defeated candidates had a good run for their money, nevertheless.

Apparently the Oshawa magistrate and the Oshawa crown attorney are the only individuals who can see the justice of a four-year sentence on a Barnardo Home boy in a case involving $4.50.

Briand seems to be France's favourite political pinch-hitter. He is generally called on when the situation becomes desperate.

Our idea of an optomist is the citizen who watched a snow-plough coming down the street yesterday and mused. "We'll get our Indian summer now."

BASKET SOCIAL POPULAR EVENT

Many Attended That Held By Millbrook United Church C.G.I.T. Group.

PROCEEDS HIGH.

MILLBROOK, Nov. 28.—Evidently basket socials are a popular form of entertainment locally at least, as was proved conclusively on Wednesday evening when the basement of the United Church was filled to capacity for the event of this nature held under the auspices of the "Wide Awakes" C.G.I.T. group.

Streamers of purple and gold, colored shades on the lights, and other suitable decorations gave the rooms a most attractive appearance, the large table filled with daintily decorated baskets, many of original design, being a feature that particularly drew the attention of all. Mrs. A. J. Brown looked after the baskets as they were brought in, and arranged them in the space provided. The judges, Mrs. H. W. Johnston, Miss M. Needham, and Mr. Johnston, had some difficulty in awarding the prizes for the two best decorated baskets among the many from which choice must be made, but finally gave first place to that of Miss Marjorie Sayles, and second to Miss Helen Larmer's.

Rev. F. H. Howard was chairman, and the accompanists of the evening were Mrs. H. W. Johnston, Miss Estelle Hetherington and Miss Ella Elson.

An interesting and unusual feature of the programme was the addresses by the candidates who are competing for the honor of representing East Durham in the Fifth Older Boys' Parliament, Messrs. R. L. Sainsbury and Willard Meldrum, with introductory remarks by their respective supporters, Messrs. Foster Hamilton and R. Snaid. All the four speakers come from Port Hope.

Following the opening hymn, and an invocation by the pastor, for which all remained standing, Mr. Howard gave a brief outline of the Canadian Girls-in-Training program, and explained that the local group is endeavoring to raise funds to send two of their number to one of the C.G.I.T. training camps next summer.

The other numbers on the programme were:

Piano solo, with encore, by Miss Kathleen Sutton.

Recitation, "Miss Perkins came to call", by Hazel McMahon.

Reading, "An Irish view of the Chinese Question," by Elsie Spence.

Song, (in costume), "In Berry-Pickin' Time," by Jean Stinson and Lawrence Rowland; encore, "Where are you going, my pretty maid?"

Cornet duet by Messrs. G. E. and Ernest Burnham.

Piano duet, Misses Elson and Hetherington.

Pageant, "The Gate that leads to Womanhood", by the C.G.I.T. group. Characters:

Childhood—Jean Stinson.
Girlhood—Margaret Howard.
Womanhood—Jean Burnham.
Seamstress—Pearl Davis.
Artist—H. McMahon.
Cook—Elsie Spence.
Stenographer—Helen Larmer.
Musician—Flossie McMahon.
Physical Director—Wilma Fallis.
Librarian—Eleanor Fallis. Children who change books—Jack Stinson, Helen Mitchell, and Madeline McDowell.
Teacher—Alvira Davis
Nurse—Elma Davis, with Annie McMahon as patient.
Missionary—Hazel McMahon.

Mother—Marjorie Sayles, with Teddy Stinson and Beatrice McDowell as children. During the tableau Mrs Johnston sang, "Home, Sweet Home."

Councillor G. W. Sayles made a most successful auctioneer for the baskets, the prizes, boxes of home-made candy, being presented to the winners by the chairman just previous to the beginning of the sale. About twenty-five dollars was realized from the baskets, the bidding running up to four dollars in one case, the one prepared by Marjorie Sayles, a dainty creation in green and silver, with the letters, "C.G.I.T." standing upright on the cover, bringing this figure.

The bidding on the autograph quilt, prepared by the Mission Circle, was not as brisk as had been hoped for, and the reserve bid not being reached, the sale was not affected on this occasion. Probably the lateness of the hour when this article was offered, had a good deal to do with the apparent lack of interest in its disposal.

Lunch was served to those who had not brought baskets, and the refreshment hour was evidently quite as enjoyable as any other item on the programme.

The total proceeds were in the neighborhood of sixty dollars.

THE MARKETS

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Nov. 27.—Upwards of 8000 head of cattle were received at the Union Stock Yards this week for sale, and except for a few hundred stockers and feeders, these were disposed of. Any price changes this week occurred in the export cattle, and these were 10 to 25 cents a cwt. higher in steers, and 25 to 50 cents a cwt. on cows and bulls. One load of steers sold at $8.75 a cwt.; heifers topped at $7.50 a cwt., and bulls and cows were $6 a cwt. These advances were probably due to a desire to fill space together wth competition though small, from two new shippers.

In the handyweight butchers there was a very limited supply of choice heifers and steers, and most of those really good were gathered in by the exporters at $7 to $7.25 a cwt. The local demand was taken care of with fair quality butchers, from $5.50 to $6.50 a cwt., and the cut-rate trade will be supplied with light butchers bought at from $4 to $5 a cwt. Heifers in this class were draggy and down about 25 cents a cwt. A small number of baby beeves sold from $8.50 to $11 a cwt.

There has been a good market in cows from canners up. Finished fat cows have held between $5 and $6.25 a cwt.; good cows, $4.50 up; medium $3.50 to $3.75, and common, $3 to $3.50. The demand for canners was not fully supplied, and the standing bid on these is $2.50 a cwt. The exporters will want up to 600 from this market next week. There are not many finished cattle in the country, and many were held on the grass too long. There are no doubts felt regarding a firm market for any quality butchers.

The supply of calves this week prevented the Buffalo buyers from getting more than a car and average prices are up 50 cents a cwt. for the week. Choice veals are 13 cents, good calves 11 to 12 cents and mediums 9 to 10 cents a pound. Grassers are $5.50 a cwt. and there are very few common calves to be had.

Lambs have retained a steady firmness all week at 13 1-2 to 13 3-4 cents a pound, with 14 cents for any selects. Sheep equally firm at 7 cents a pound for good 140 lb. butchers.

Last week's advance in hog prices had the expected result of coaxing out shipments and over 9,000 came in this week. The offering brought the price down 50 cents a cwt. to $11.75 f.o.b., and for Saturday's loading the packer's bid is $11.50 a cwt. f.o.b.

EGG PRICES

OTTAWA, Nov. 27 (Canadian Press).—The egg market generally is unchanged although an easy tendency is developing in the Eastern storage situation. American storage eggs are higher.

Montreal—Market unchanged with fresh stock very firm and storage easy. Offers have been made of best grade of Westetrn dressed turkeys 29 1-2 to 30 1-2 f.o.b. Saskatchewan, and 32 to 34 f.o.b. Winnipeg.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Nov. 27 (Canadian Press).—Wheat made lively fresh gains in price here today influenced by the fact that Liverpool quotations today had jumped to a premium of about 5 cents a bushel over Chicago as against a discount of 14 cents hardly more than a fortnight ago. The Chicago wheat market closed nervous at 2 to 3 1-2 cents net advance, new style, December $1.65 to $1.65 1-4, and May $1.61 to $1.61 3-4, with corn at 3-8c decline to 1-8c gain, oats 1-8 to 1-4c off to 1-4c up, and provisions unchanged to 30 cents down.

On the upward swing of the wheat market here, general commission buying was active and July delivery reached the highest price yet this season. Heavy profit-taking sales, however, quickly set in, and the maximum advance in Chicago was limited to 4 3-4 cents as compared with Wednesday's finish. Holders' efforts to realize profits continued throughout the day, and tended to keep the market here down, notwithstanding that Liverpool was at one time as much as 8 1-4 cents higher than was the case before Thanksgiving. Meanwhile, further unfavorable crop reports from Argentina were current, together with word of unusual scantiness of stocks of wheat both at Liverpool and afloat for Europe.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Nov. 27 (Canadian Press).—Local wheat exporters today reported very little demand from foreign buyers owing to the higher prices asked, but there was a fair enquiry for oats and barley and a moderate amount of business was transacted. The domestic cash grain market was more active as there was an improved demand from both export and local buyers for supplies.

The strength of the local flour market was more pronounced today and some millers marked up prices another 40 cents per barrel, but this was not general. The export trade was quiet, nor was there any improvement in the domestic demand. The market for winter wheat flour was again stronger and a further advance in prices of 20 cents per barrel was announced.

The receipts of butter were 512 packages, as compared with 215 for the same day last week, and 798 for the corresponding day a year ago. The market was without any new feature to note, the undertone being still firm with a small business passing for local requirements. The trade in a wholesale jobbing way was reported fair for the season of the year and prices were unchanged.

The receipts of cheese were 3,354 boxes, as against 3,955 for the same day last week, and 4,396 for the corresponding day a year ago. The condition of the market was unchanged owing to the continued indifferent demand from all sources for supplies, and the volume of business was small. Prices on spot were nominally unchanged.

STERLING RATES

Sterling cables $4.83 5-8.
Sterling demand $4.84.

SYNOPSIS

By midnight Connemara Moore was to announce her engagement to one of two suitors or be disinherited by Aunt Celimena. Instead she is now speeding through Greenwich, miles from home, at the side of young David Lacy of New York, whom she didn't know but whom she hailed as he was passing auntie's. And now a traffic cop has halted them and threatened to arrest them for speeding. And Connie, garbed as a nun, is pleading for mercy. At Aunt Celimena's home, miles back in Connecticut, excitement runs high.

In the reflected glow the face of the policeman altered its expression slowly. It ran from anger, through surprise to bewilderment. Still Lacy could not see her face, yet from the effect upon the policeman he understood that it was no ordinary face. An ordinary face couldn't possibly have such an effect.

"It's not a mask I'm wearing." Again she was interrupted, this time by a sneeze so violent and so realistic that Lacy was tempted to slap her regardless of her dignified robes, well in the middle of the back. "It's not a mask I'm wearing," and again a sneeze. It's a thing—a sort of thing to keep out the dust. I suffer so from hay fever."

The cop yielded, but he was cynical. "Well, it sounds fishy to me, but I guess it's all right. But look out for Hogan at the Portchester line. He won't let you off so easy."

Lacy started the motor, and when he turned again, the face of his companion was once more hidden by the mask. She was sneezing delicately this time, with just the proper effect. The car moved off, leaving behind it in the shadow the policeman whose face made so good and yet so tantalizing a mirror.

"Where is this sick aunt?" growled Lacy.

There was a faint laugh. "Why, she's the one I'm running away from."

"We can't go on like this," he continued in the same gruff voice, "being stopped at every cross road. One of these cops will arrest me for abduction." At that moment they passed the tower of Pickwick Inn, and Lacy, noticing the clock, said, "It's ten minutes to eleven. We can just make the last ferry. We'll turn off here and go over to Long Island. I've a house not far from Glen Cove. You can change into some other clothes."

Before his companion was able to protest, the big car swung around the corner, turned into the main street, and swept with a catlike, insinuating purr beneath the railway bridge.

In the little harbor the tide was low, and the muggy, miasmic smell of the bare mud hung over everything. Somehow it was an ominous smell, hinting of stranded ships, of pirates, of wild adventure . . . the smell of salt marshes at low tide, of rotting ships. Through the gathering mists the tall masts of the fishing boats stood against the dull gray blue of the sky like black pencils.

The car drove down, down, down along the cobblestone streets, until at length it turned into the ferry way. At the end stood the waiting boat, its gateway yawning black as the mouth of a sea monster. When at last Lacy turned to regard his companion, he found that she had gathered about her the blanket that lay in the back of the car. She was hidden now all save the beautiful shapely head with the hair so tightly concealed, and the eyes so bright now with a sense of mystery and adventure. She still wore the mask.

Lacy regarded her and thought to himself, "No, there has never been anything like this. And to happen in Connecticut of all places!"

To the grizzled gatekeeper Lacy muttered, "How long before you start?"

"Five minutes," the fellow replied.

Somehow Lacy felt nearer suddenly to this strange woman beside him. Perhaps it was the sense of their being bound together by the same peril, the same adventure.

From the depths of the ferry house he heard the grizzled gatekeeper spit suddenly and exclaim, "It's a great night for bootleggers. I reckon this fog'll thicken up steadily till morning." And then the same voice lifted to shout to the pilot high up on the ferry deck, "Don't be running any of 'em down tonight, Sam. Can't afford to waste good liquor on fishes."

It is impossible to know what sort of picture Lacy had of the world from which she had escaped. It must have been a strange one, and certainly it was different from the picture in the mind of his companion. She saw a ballroom filled with excited people, two lovers hunting desperately among the syringas and perennial borders, and through it all Aunt Celimena moving about, angry and composed, in a black ball gown trimmed in 1880 jet.

"I say," said her companion presently in a puzzled voice, "haven't we met somewhere—before you entered a nunnery?"

CHAPTER IV.
By Elsie Janis.

In the two hours following that brief, altogether unsatisfactory talk with her niece, Miss Celimena was guilty of forgetting several times the rigid code of hospitality in which she had been trained and staring openly and anxiously at the painted face of the big grandfather clock in the hall.

If she could have done it without being seen, it is not at all certain she would not also have gone so far as to push the hands forward, to lessen the sheer nervous torture of those dragging minutes until midnight.

This latest escapade of Connemara's was not only utter foolishness, but it made the girl and Miss Celimena herself seem undignified. It was unthinkable that a Moore of Moorelands should resort to such cheap buffoonery for the announcing of her engagement—which ought, properly, to be a serious, not to say ceremonious occasion. Thus, over and over, back and forth in the same track, like frightened and feebly indignant mice, ran the thoughts of Miss Celimena.

And even oftener than she studied the clock, this much-harassed lady studied the faces of the two other people most concerned in Connemara's outrageous behavior.

It was easy to see that Saltonstall Adams had little liking for the sudden blaze of limelight in which he found himself. Salt, like Miss Celimena, had been brought up to see dignity weigh much more heavily in the scales than romance. Or perhaps his definition of what constituted romance differed from spoiled young Connemara's. At any rate, as any and everyone could see, he looked very stiff and disapproving indeed as he danced, correctly and dutifully, with one after another of Connemara's guests, gallantly trying to live up to what was expected of him, but—as only the discerning noticed—with a faintly wistful bewilderment underlying the disapproval, as if his rather slow brain had not entirely caught up with the meaning of what was happening to him.

Bingham Carrington, on the contrary, was carrying the awkward situation off with a high hand. Inwardly he resented it, if possible, even more bitterly than his rival, for Bing was an emotional youngster and very genuinely in love. But he held his handsome blond head well back, with his chin lifted a half inch or so more than usual, and had a drawled come-back for every innuendo of the over-curious.

SOUTH AFRICAN MILLERS CLAIM HEAVY DAMAGES

Suit Against Their Government Involves Price of 1921 Canadian Grain.

ASK $3,000,000.

Arbitration Board to Determine the Compensation to be Paid.

MONTREAL, Nov. 28. (Canadian Press).—The probe into fluctuations in the price of Canadian wheat and flour in 1921, undertaken here following a judgment of the South African Supreme Court in the case taken by the millers of South Africa against the Union Government, came to a close Friday, and Charles M. Holt, K.C., presiding commissioner, will now complete the record and transmit the document to Cape Town.

Sanford Evans, former Mayor of Winnipeg, was the last witness. Now connected with statistical organizations, Mr. Evans testified as to the prices of the Canadian commodities during the period in question.

Peter Bercovitch, K.C., M.L.A., counsel for the Government of the Union of South Africa, and R. T. Heneker, K.C., counsel for the South African milling firms, examined and cross-examined.

The inquiry here ran concurrently with investigations in London, New York, Melbourne and Buenos Aires, the purpose of which was to adjudge damage, if any, to which the South African Government has been condemned in suits involving in all some $3,000,000.

The importation into South Africa during 1921 of Canadian wheat and flour, and claims by South African millers that they thereby suffered heavy losses, resulted in damage actions which concluded early this year. The Supreme Court of South Africa decided in favor of the petitioners, but stipulated that an arbitration board should be named to fix the damage figures.

BUSINESS GOOD ACROSS CANADA

Prospects For December Trade Are Promising—Collections Fair.

WINNIPEG, Mar. November 28.—Canadian Press. — The weekly trade report of the Canadian Credit Men's Trust Association, Limited, reads:

Halifax: Wholesalers report no important change has taken place since last report, trade conditions remaining fair for this time of the year.

St. John: Trade conditions generally in wholesale and retail lines quite satisfactory with a good demand for Christmas goods; collections are fair.

Montreal: Both wholesale and retail trade generally reported good; manufacturing and industry is spotty and collections slow.

Toronto: Wholesale: There appears to be a good volume of business conducted by the various firms, the majority of cases being considerably in excess of last yea. Retail trade reported as good; collections are satisfactory in comparison to last year.

Winnipeg: Wholesalers generally report little change in business conditions, all staple and seasonable lines being in good demand; retail business fairly active in the city; collections are fair.

Regina: Conditions generally in wholesale circles fair to good, and retail trade good; collections are showing improvement over previous week.

Saskatoon: Both wholesale and retail trade is good, threshing operations have been completed in the northern sections with the result that collections are good.

Vancouver: Wholesale trade generally fair with the wholesale grocery houses reporting business as good, with signs of improvement, no doubt due to Christmas season. Retailers report business fairly good; collections fair to good.

Albino Deer Was Shot At Cloyne. Near Madoc

MADOC, Nov. 28.—An unusual spectacle in the woods north of Cloyne last week was the appearance of two perfectly white deer. One of them was shot by a Cloyne resident, but the other was allowed to escape. Many hunters gathered at Cloyne to see this splendid specimen of Albino deer.

BYNG CONDOLES WITH SIAMESE

Governor-General Sends Regrets Upon Death of King Rama.

THROUGH CONSUL.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Nov. 28. — (Canadian Press).—Conveying the regrets of His Excellency Baron Byng of Vimy, Governor-General of Canada, upon hearing of the death of Rama VI., King of Siam, the following telegram was received yesterday by Wm. E. Armstrong, Consular representative of Siam in Canada:

"I am desired by His Excellency the Governor-General to acknowledge receipt of your telegram of Thursday in which you inform him of the death of His Majesty Rama VI., King of Siam. His Excellency has heard the news with the deepest regret, and desired me to convey to you his sincere sympathy in the great loss that has befallen the Siamese people.

(Signed)
"A. F. Staden, Governor-General's Secretary."

MERCHANT GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER

Poured Acid Over Wife While She Slept.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 28. (Canadian Press).—Maurice Desmedt, a merchant of St. Vital, Man., was found guilty of manslaughter in Assize Court here Friday. He will be sentenced later. Desmedt was accused of murdering his wife last May by pouring acid over her face and body, while she slept. The jury reduced the charge to one of manslaughter.

Alex. Shupeniuk, convicted of manslaughter in connection with the slaying of John Rodway, aged farmer of Inwood, Man., was sentenced to serve five years in Stony Mountain Penitentiary. He was recently given a three-year term for escaping from the Provincial Jail with four other prisoners. The sentences will run concurrently.

Peter Capar, John Medmid and Sebastian Kytychuk, found guilty of manslaughter in the same case, were sent down for 23 months in the Provincial Jail.

ASSAULT VICTIM CONSCIOUS AGAIN

But Unable to Explain Attack Near Montreal.

MONTREAL, Nov. 28. (Canadian Press).—After being unconscious for five days, Clement Haineault, 26, of Lanoraie, opened his eyes Friday in the Notre Dame Hospital, whither he was taken last Wednesday after being found lying on a deserted road near his home with a badly battered head. Owing to his weak condition, however, he was not asked to explain how he received his wounds. From their nature, police believe he was held up while riding home on his bicycle and attacked. A sum of money in his pockets is responsible for the belief that robbery was not the motive of the crime.

A PRIZE HERD.

Brandon Aberdeen Angus Win at Kansas City.

BRANDON, Man., Nov. 28. — (Canadian Press).—Aberdeen-Angus cattle from the famous Glencarnock Farms herd, owned by James D. McGregor, of Brandon, have been highly successful at the American Royal Livestock Show in Kansas City, and the Pacific International Livestock Exposition, Portland, Ore. The McGregor entries won many first awards. They will be exhibited at the Chicago International Exposition.

ROSENEATH NEWS

ROSENEATH, Nov. 27.— Rev. Lovelace who has been away in the northy country hunting the wily deer has returned with his trophy and took charge of the union service on Sunday evening. Rev. McCord was also present and assisted in the service. At the conclusion the members held a meeting when it was decided to have a Christmas entertainment.

On Tuesday evening at another meeting it was decided to hold the entertainment on Christmas Eve and to have a tree for the Sunday school children. It is expected with the large congregation there now is of union members to have a better concert than ever.

Mr. G. A. Dawe is having the interior of his house decorated before he and Mrs. Dawe move their effects from Warkworth.

Mr. S. Haughton has painted the new sign of Union Church on the former Methodist Church.

On Tuesday afternoon the Methodist W.M.S. members quilted two quilts for their missionary bale. The meeting will be held at Centenary Church on Tuesday evening.

Mrs. (Dr.) Hershey has returned from a visit to Toronto.

Mr. Harry Hogg, while on his way to Cobourg to see his wife who has been in the Cobourg Hospital for an operation, collided with Mr. Frank Brown. Mr. Hogg was driving by the light of a lantern. Considerable damage was done to both the car and the buggy which Mr. Brown was driving.

It was certainly a nice bright morning. The sun was just coming up.

Wess Johnson had already had his breakfast and was all dressed up in his Robin Hood suit of green, waiting for the Merry Men to show up in full force, for today was to be a winner, if the beginning was any sign.

The Merry Men began to gather at the log cabin over in the Greenwood, not long after breakfast, and it would not be hard to imagine the days of long ago in Sherwood Forest in England, with the bold original Robin Hood and his band, when looking at Wess and Don Bonter and Jimmy Britton and Big Bill Davis and Bernie Brown and Ned Lewis and all the rest of them.

There they were, every one of them, and all dressed in the Merry Men green, in suits made exactly like those of the original woodland robbers, be they considered good, bad or worse. What a pity the real Robin Hood could not see them. He would be very pleased I am sure, for his ideas of right and wrong were closer to the golden rule than the wicked Sheriff of Nottingham would care to admit, and Wess Johnson, as Robin Hood, was indeed clean and brave and strong, with a knowelge of the woods which would make the old Sheriff green with envy, were he alive to know Wess, and I am sure Robin Hood himself would say to the Merry Men, "Boys, when Wess Johnson blows a lusty blast of his horn, in the Greenwood, of a Saturday morning, do not doubt but that I hear it, for it is the call of one who is what I was, and who does as I would do, and if you watch carefully, and listen keenly, you will see that your leader knows more than I did, for the sound of his horn in the woods, is sweet music to the wild creatures. It is a signal to bird and beast, to field and flower, to woods and waters, to moss and meadow, and to wind and wing, that Wess Johnson is afield, and among them, and they are safe with him."

Every Merry Man had brought his lunch excepting the very man of all who should have set a good example. That man was our famous Don Bonter, our more or less successful Little John, mostly more but this time less. Much less! A whole dinner less!

Little John was delegated by Robin Hood to count noses and lunches and see that every Merry Man had his suit of green put on with the front where it ought to be and at least a fern in his hat, if he couldn't sport a chicken feather. Most of the ferns in the woods were brown and dead, but nice fresh ones can be found, even in winter, if one knows the woods and ferns.

Well, Little John reported to Robin Hood that all men, all lunches and all caps with feathers were present.

"Where's your lunch, Little John?" asked Robin Hood.

Poor Don! He had forgotten his lunch!

The Merry Men howled and yelled in ridicule.

This made Little John determined to show them he was no small potatoes, even without a lunch.

"Dont be so smart, you guys. Just wait until meal time. Maybe you will not laugh so much." And with this final shot, Little John banked the fire in the fireplace, covering the log with wood ashes, and went outside.

Robin Hood whispered something to Little John, about "nuts and apples and potatoes," then blew his horn three times, and the whole band moved through the forest in single file, led by their leader.

After Robin Hood came Little John, then Friar Tuck, then Big Bill Davis, and so on.

Little John slipped away for a while, nobody knew where, and rejoined the band later, with bulging pockets, in which were potatoes, apples and hickory nuts.

What a grand day it was. Cold but glorious in the sunshine of the leafless forest, with a scattering of snow here and there in shady places.

Ten o'clock arrived all too soon, but to most of the lads, it might just as well have been noon, they were so hungry; but also they were curious to see Little John eat without a lunch. They were fooled very nicely, for Little John coated his big potato with mud and placed it in the bonfire around which the Merry Men had found places. But better still, he ran a sharp stick through his big sound apple, then stuck the stick in the ground near the fire. Friar Tuck was asked to turn the apple stick once in a while.

Little John went off to a big stone and began hammering hickory nuts, and, before long, was picking them with a little sharp stick until he had a handful of clean nut meats.

When the potato was pulled out, broken open, and found to be steaming and fluffy and just right for eating, and the apple juice ran down the stick and grew thick as candy, with the apple burst and almost ready to fall, and when the nice fresh hickory nut meats were placed on a clean piece of birch bark, it was an eye-opener to the common lunch folks.

"Here, Robin Hood, have a taste of this apple, or potato," said Little John, as he felt in great debt to his leader for saving his face and telling him what to do and how to do it, but Robin Hood thanked him and then said, "No, Little John, you must not share that meal with anyone who laugheds at your shortcomings, but let it be an example to all, that only those can live in the woods who know how to live. The only man I did not see laugh was our jolly Friar Tuck. I think he was frowning. Anyway, he held the apple for you, so let him taste baked potato, hickory nuts and roasted apple, just to confirm the wonderful flavor."

"Oh, Boy" said Friar Tuck. "I wish I had forgotten my lunch, too."

Then an astonishing thing happened.

The boys were all seated around the fire, which was in a little hollow and clearing among the trees, with a big rock on the north side and shielding them from the wind, though it was not a high rock.

Suddenly, at a moment of quietness, a twig was heard to crack among the trees to windward. Robin Hood raised a finger for silence. Not a man moved.

Then, a little to one side, in the rear of the hollow, and among the trees, stood a proud but gentle looking deer.

How noble he was! How soft and gentle his eyes! How alert, how noble, how well groomed he seemed. Robin Hood, with the aid of his shining horn and a pocket mirror, reflecting the sun, held him curious for a second or two. Then, placing the horn to his lips Robin Hood gave a long blast. The deer started, stood transfixed for a second, then floated through the air, as a feather, and was gone.

"Why are the deer so afraid of us?" asked Wilder Yet (our Walter Wilder), 'I wish I could see more of them." (Copyright.)

SUFFERED TERRIBLY FROM CONSTIPATION

FOUND COMPLETE RELIEF AND HEALTH BY TAKING "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

MR. J. BEATON

"It is with great pleasure I recommend your medicine. I suffered terribly from Constipation, Biliousness and Kidney Trouble. I read about "Fruit-a-tives" in the newspapers and how promptly they relieved these diseases. I decided to try a box; after taking only one box all my trouble was gone. I continued to take this splendid Fruit Medicine and now I am enjoying good health. I believe "Fruit-a-tives" is the best remedy in the world for Constipation, Liver and Kidney troubles." — John J. Beaton, Mabou Mines, N. S.

"Fruit-a-tives" are Nature's own remedy for Constipation and other distressing troubles due to a weakened condition of the liver and bowels. They are made from the intensified juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes, combined with tonics. They will always relieve Constipation, Biliousness, Headaches, Kidney and Liver Trouble. 25c. and 50c a box.

"I don't understand why I should be so tired in the mornings."

"ARE you often that way?"

"Why, for months I have felt wretched every morning. And it is not because I do not go to bed early enough."

"How do you sleep?"

"Not very well. Lots of nights I lie awake for hours, restless and fidgetty, thinking about everything, but not resting or sleeping."

"Have you consulted a doctor?"

"Yes. The doctor says I am anaemic; the blood is thin and watery, and the nervous system run down for want of proper nutrition."

"Are you taking any medicine?"

"No, not now; he gave me some tablets to make me sleep, but I had to keep on taking them, and I could not see that they were of any lasting benefit. I don't like drugging myself that way."

"Why don't you try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food?"

"I don't know just why, unless it is because I thought it was only for the nerves, whereas what I need is something to enrich the blood."

"Well, that is exactly what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food does. It is only by enriching the blood that you can restore exhausted nerves."

"Perhaps I should try it.

"I certainly would if I were you, for I know it is wonderful the way it helps some people who are anaemic and generally run down in health."

"I have no appetite, you know, and what I do eat does not seem to go to the improvement of the blood. When one gets in that condition it is most discouraging. This is why I have such blue days sometimes, and I do hope the Nerve Food will help me."

"I am sure you will not be disappointed, and if I were you I would not lose a day before getting started with this treatment."

A rubber shoe-making process—entirely new in Canada—higher standards of quality—longer wear—better appearance and fit—costs no more.

For many years the name Goodrich has represented the highest quality in rubber products. Public opinion placed Goodrich Silvertown Cord Tires on the highest plane of perfection during the many years that Silvertowns were imported and sold at higher prices in Canada. With the acquisition of a rubber manufacturing plant two years ago, it became possible to sell these Goodrich Silvertown Cord Tires at the same level of prices as other tires of domestic make. The sweeping success of Goodrich Silvertowns in Canada has paved the way for a still further development in the Goodrich Company's activities, and now Goodrich announces the manufacture in Canada of the famous Hi-Press line of rubber footwear.

"Hi-Press" in its field ranks with Silvertown and other Goodrich products in quality standards and is made after exclusive Goodrich formulae and processes. The Goodrich process of manufacturing footwear is revolutionary and during the past ten years has attained new standards of service for all classes of light and heavy rubbers. The processes and equipment are exclusive to Goodrich and cannot be duplicated. In those parts of Canada where the service conditions demand absolutely the utmost in quality, Goodrich footwear is already well-known, having been imported and purchased at considerably higher prices by those users to whom long service in footwear is an absolute necessity.

Goodrich has given its expert attention to the development of Rubber Footwear particularly suitable for the city-dweller, the farmer, the miner, the lumberman, the deep-sea fisherman—the sportsman, etc. In each case Goodrich positively sets the pace in style and quality.

It is no longer necessary for you to make footwear purchases with any degree of uncertainty, because the name "Goodrich" is the guarantee of maximum value regardless of the footwear your particular needs may require.

Goodrich ZIPPER BOOT

THE women of Canada will undoubtedly be most interested in the "Zipper" boot—the greatest contribution to winter footwear comfort that has ever been made by any rubber company. The genuine "Zipper" was originated and is made only by the Goodrich Company.

The main feature of the "Zipper" is the patent fastening device which, as its name implies, permits the opening and closing of the boot with ease and speed. There is nothing to hook, button, lace or tie, it opens with a Zip and closes with a Zip.

Added quality features of the "Zipper" boot are certain reinforcements which lend fit, neatness, stylish appearance and longer wear. These are found only in the "Zipper" type of golosh.

The "Zipper" will undoubtedly be the vogue in Canada as it is in the centers of fashion wherever overshoes are worn. While it was introduced primarily for women, it is now made also for men to whom the ease of opening and closing appeals strongly.

NOTE:

Goodrich Footwear is now sold by the better class of footwear dealers throughout Canada, or may be secured by any dealer on short notice through the complete chain of Goodrich warehouses located in all distributing centres from Halifax to Vancouver.

ROBBERS MISS $7,000 HAUL

Three Men Hold Up Hamilton Plant—Get Away With $1,600.

USED REVOLVER.

HAMILTON, Nov. 28. (Canadian Press). — A well planned robbery carried out yesterday afternoon by three men cost the Pure Milk Co. $1,600, but the robbers missed a package of $7,000, the pay for the week, which was only a few feet away.

While three men participated in the robbery, only two entered the office, the other man being at the wheel of the car, which made a quick dash away after the two came running from the building.

The two who entered the office did not wear masks, and the police were able to obtain a complete description of them.

One man kept the staff covered with a revolver, while the other walked through the side entrance into the main office and appeared before eight girls who were checking receipts for the day. They, too, were told to throw up their hands, and he carefully swept the cash from the table into a black bag which he apparently brought for the purpose.

Missed Mistress Much: Pet Pomeranian Passes

MOSSBANK, Sask., Nov. 28. —(Canadian Press).—This is a story of a dog that died of a broken heart. Mrs. N. Hay of this district possessed a pet pomeranian which was greatly attached to her. Called suddenly to Winnipeg, the owner was unable to make arrangements for the shipment of the dog. It was taken to friends where it was given every attention. The dog took up a patient watch at the house door, and whined and cried for its mistress. Not a particle of food would the animal touch. For two weeks the devoted pet kept guard, but the strain proved too great and a few days before the owner returned, the dog died. Now Mrs. Hay is grieving.

INSANE ASYLUM REFORM IS NOW ISSUE IN FRANCE

Perennial Agitation Has Recommenced For Changes in Law.

AIDS CRIMINALS.

Before the reassembling of the French Chamber and the Senate, perennial agitation about the treatment of the insane has begun. According to the present law it is sufficient for one doctor to certify to insanity. Such a system, it is pointed out, makes it easy for criminally minded persons having some money interest at stake to cause a relative to be "put away." The connivance of a medical man and a little apathy on the part of the asylum administration are alone needed.

It is not believed that such extreme cases are frequent, wrong being more often done inadvertently. A French alienist thus summed up the situation a short time ago: "Under the present system there is no inconvenience attached to certifying as insane a person who is not insane, while there may be the most serious consequences if one asserts that a person is not insane and it afterward turns out that he is."

So many violent crimes are committed in France by persons mentally "unbalanced" that doctors are extremely wary. Only the other day a man newly liberated from an asylum as "cured" murdered his wife and their two children. Immediately, of course, outcries were raised against the keepers and nurses that had had the man under observation for a number of years, and against the alienists that had conducted his final examination.

Apart from the inmates of expensive private instutions and those who are privately cared for in their own homes, France has at present 80,000 persons shut up in State asylums for the insane. A recent publication declares that fully 50,000 of these could be set at liberty without danger either to themselves or to society.

Public opinion is at present agitating for broad reforms in the administration of such institutions. It is urged that there should be a better system of keeping the harmless and the curable separated from the dangerous and the incurable; that the preliminary examination should always be made by several medical men, one at least being appointed by the State.

The great difficulty in the path of realizing these reforms is pecuniary. France has no money to spend on carrying out asylum reforms, even were they legislated. The managers of these retreats are at present allowed by the State from 9 francs to 4 francs 75 centimes for each patient—this to cover all expenses. Out of that sum (the franc is now worth 4 cents) they have to feed their unforunate patients and provide their own personnel. Inmates are said to be half-starved, and, owing to the desperate shortage of attendants, they have largely to be confined.

SUPER WOMAN SAFE, MISSING TWO WEEKS

Woman Prospector Crossed 6 Lakes in 12-Foot Canoe.

SASKATOON, Sask., Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press). — There has been sincere rejoicing throughout the Herb Lake, Man., district on receipt of reports that Miss Kathleen Rice, B.A., woman prospector, missing for two weeks, had returned to her camp safely.

While a storm was raging that prevented men from crossing the lake for ten days, Miss Rice started with her 12-foot canoe and made her way over six lakes and twenty-two portages to Sturgeon Landing and thence to The Pas.

In a country where men take their lives in their own hands daily, Miss Rice is regarded as a superwoman. Herb Lake's woman prospector has travelled alone in all weather and under the most trying conditions and carries with her the respect of white men and Indians alike.

While repeated attempts have been made to prevail upon Miss Rice to set down her experiences for the edification of her fellowbeings, she has declined and modestly turned her attentions to tasks hitherto regarded as the special calling of strong, red-blooded males.

At Boulogne one of the most interesting sights of the year is the solemn blessing of the fishing fleet, before it leaves on its annual trip to the far-off northern waters.

German Hot Dogs Again Capture Gay Paris Cafes

PARIS, Nov. 27.—Frankfurters, sauerkraut and pilsener on the one hand and peace conferences on the other seemingly are unrelated, but they are in France.

For a long time Paris tried to get along with Strasburg sausages. They were on the menu cards as Strasburgers, but the public would have none of them. Then the real Frankfurt hot dogs were imported under various names to disguise their German origin.

Since the Locarno conference, however, the masks have been dropped and now Paris is eating Frankfurters and sauerkraut and washing them down with pilsener just as it did before the war.

TOLSTOY MUSEUM TAKEN BY SOVIETS

Government Will Make It a Permanent Edifice to Honor Writer.

TULA, Nov 27.—Soviet Russia will recognize the attainments of Leo Tolstoy, the famous novelist and social reformer, with the issue of a centenary edition of his works at the celebration September 10, 1928, of the writer's hundredth anniversary. The Tolstoy Museum in Moscow will be made a permanent edifice.

All the buildings at Yasnaya Polyana, Tolstoy's home and birthplace, near here, will be repaired and the village made over into something of a national shrine and educational center. Already a Tolstoy museum has been established there, the curator being Tolstoy's daughter, Alexandra.

PAINTED PORTRAIT FROM THEATRE BOX

Artist Outwitted Actress Who Shunned Publicity—Made Sketch.

PARIS, Nov. 28. — (United Press.)—A persistent American artist has outwitted Raquel Meller, the elusive senorita of the French stage.

As Senorita Meller's own press agent will tell you, she hates publicity. She will not pose for photographers and smiles pityingly at an artist who suggests a few sittings of five hours each.

But J. W. de R. Quistgaard, a young American artist, had set his heart upon painting the singer so, nothing daunted, he packed his brushes and tubes, engaged a box at the musical hall where she appears nightly and calmly finished his sketch. Then finding a model who closely resembled the Spanish singer, he quick expanded his sketch into a large portrait.

ANOTHER GIRL ATTACKED.

Desperado Frightened Away When Victim's Screams Brought Help.

TORONTO, Nov. 28. (Canadian Press).—Another complaint reached the police last night of the depredations of an unidentified man who has for his object the molestation of girls and women walking in the neighborhood of Jarvis Street. The latest victim is a 14-year-old girl.

She struggled with a man to such good purpose, however, that she managed to wriggle free. The girl screamed for help, and a cyclist hurried to the scene. At this the desperado ran away. This is the seventh victim of such attacks during the past two months in this particular neighborhood.

HAVELOCK PEOPLE COLLECT FOR BECK

Objective For Village Has Been Set at $1.00 Per Hydro User.

HAVELOCK, Nov. 28—A meeting was held in the Town Hall on Tuesday evening for the purpose of organization for the campaign in aid of the Beck Endowment Fund for the Queen Alexandra Sanatorium. The following officers were appointed:

President—Reeve W. T. Curtis.
Secretary—P. Yeull.
Treasurer—H. F. McNichol.

Collectors were also appointed and started to work on Thursday morning. The result of the canvass will be known on Saturday and those in charge of the drive are confident of attaining their objective which is one dollar for each Hydro subscriber, amounting to three hundred and fifty or four hundred dollars.

TRENT RIVER NEWS.

TRENT RIVER, Nov. 28.—Mrs. George McQuigge of Marmora spent this week at Cedar Isle.

The Misses Eva and Marion Inkster were at the parental home for over Sunday.

Miss Lila Ruttan has three months leave from her position in Toronto, and will remain at home during that time.

Dr. Allen Michell and Joe McNeely have returned from the north country.

Mr. and Mrs G. Barrie of Birdsall, Mr. and Mrs. T. Cardwell, and family of Westwood, and Mr. and Mrs. W. Cross, and Mr. and Mrs. W. Cochrane of Norwood Road were Sunday visitors with Mr and Mrs. Jas. Longmuir and family, Havelock Road.

A meeting in the interests of the Fish and Game and Sports Association is to be held Monday evening at Inkster's store, for the following business: (1) To elect officers; (2) To draft by-laws; (3) To complete the purchase of the ball grounds; (4) To have Trent River re-stocked with fish; (5) To try and have a resident inspector for this part of Trent River.

Still Enjoying Life at 84
Thanks To That Wonderful Remedy
MILBURN'S HEART NERVE PILLS

Mrs. F. H. Miller, 1843-11th Ave. East, Vancouver, B.C., writes:—"Five years ago my husband suffered terribly with severe attacks of palpitation of the heart and smothering spells, and two doctors stated that he could not possibly live six months.

A friend recommended Milburn's H. and N. Pills, with the result that my husband is still enjoying life at the age of 84 years.

He has improved so wonderfully that he can now climb the stairs without having those awful pains in his heart."

FARM NEWS AND PROBLEMS

MANY POINTS OF EXCELLENCE ARE TO BE CONSIDERED WHEN LIGHT HORSES ARE BEING JUDGED

Refinement of Character, High Spirit, Nerve and Stamina Are Necessary.

BLOOD WILL SHOW

Light Horse Must be Beautiful and Graceful, as Well as Strong.

According to its special purpose the light horse requirements are refinement of character throughout the frame, excellence of quality, high spirit, nerve, stamina, endurance, grace, action and intelligence. The light horse must have the specialty highly developed and be perfectly equipped in every way for the performance of its work. "Blood" shows even more prominently in light horses than in the more phlegmatic drafter and should be evidenced by style, nobility, grace, beauty of every curve and outline, dignity and refinement. The skin should be thin, pliable, glossy, showing veins and tendons plainly, while the hair should be silky, free from coarseness and fine, long and flowing in mane and tail. The body and limbs should show every requirement of strength and endurance, lack all impediments to speed and free action and give the impression of trained athletic capacities.

Head.—A clean "breedy" looking head, free from surplus flesh and fat, wide between the eyes, straight neither Roman-nosed or dished, fine in skin, showing veins and muscles distinctly; neat, firm, refined in muzzle, having large flexible nostrils, lined with pink membrances; lips, thin and firmly controlled; jaw bones wide apart and clean; eyes, full, clear, fearless, yet mild, bright, sound; ears, fine-cut, pointed, alert, free from coarse hairs erect, and of proper proportion, characterize the aristocratic trotter, thoroughbred and "gentleman's horse." Departures from any of these requisites detract from the beauty, breed, character or utility.

Neck.—While the draft horse's neck is somewhat short and heavy from wealth of powerful muscle that of the light horse should be long, graceful, covered with long, thin, refined muscles, prettily blended into the head at the throatlatch, free from pronounced glands about the throat, arched, comparatively thin, not "ewe-necked," not notched downward in front of the withers, but smoothly molding into that part and the shoulders. A large, prominent windpipe, together with wide, flexible nostrils indicates lung capacity and necessarily endurance. A small windpipe and dilated, rigid or over-distended nostrils may indicate defective respiratory organs.

Chest.—In connection with what has been said about nostrils and windpipe the shape of the chest may next be most properly considered. While a great width of chest is less common and none so necessary in the light horse, as compared with the draft horse, it is imperative that there should be great depth and capacity for fully utilized lungs and heart. Great speed would be prevented by too much spring of rib under the shoulders of light horses, but the girth should be large and the sternum (the breast bone) well let down.

Shoulders.—While we have set down the correct type of shoulders for the draft horse as "moderately sloping," the light horse on the contrary should have long, oblique shoulders to give him great leverage and strong control over his legs for fast, free, long striding gait at the walk, trot or run. Such a shoulder is also necessary to the safe saddler that must not stumble and must be springy and elastic in his action for comfortable riding and in the high stepper to make "trappy" knee action possible. Upright shoulders and pasterns of similar shape cause stilty, stumbling, stubby action and are even more objectionable in light than in draft horses. Together with proper conformation in the respects noted, the muscular development of the shoulder should be as perfect as possible.

Bones, Joints and Feet.—Both in front and behind the light horse should have leg bones of the finest quality—flat, cordy, like a razor blade with the wide part forward and the thin edge behind and from it protruding, boldly, prominently, great, dense, clean straight tendons. Such legs last, stand wear and tear, are formed of dense ivory-like bone and are free from meatiness. All of the points should be large, clean, set at correct angles, free from puffs, bony growths and other forms of unsoundness and should be perfectly flexed when walking or trotting. Long forearms and gaskins with short, strong cannons, long sloping, well supported and perfectly clean pasterns, springing from open, large coronets and above sound, dense, waxy, smooth round hoofs that are not too low or too high at the heels give the muscular, well bred light horse ability to go fast, endure work, withstand concussion and beget the right stamp of underpinning, if he is used for breeding purposes. Departures from correct conformation in any one of the points mentioned will be apt to injure the action of a light more than that of a draft horse. Absolute soundness and perfect quality of material are necessary in the legs of a horse that has to be campaigned and any weakness will soon aggravate into an unsoundness or cause of lameness under the stress of fast work.

Body.—Great depth of body is desirable at the heart girth and here the, elbows should not cling too close to the, sides or they will impede action. Similar depth of barrel, viewing the horse from the side, is often due to lack of spring of rib and this is undesirable. Well sprung ribs are undesirable in all horses, although they may give an appearance of legginess which is not actually present. A round barrel, with low flank, means good keeping qualities and, even in the fast horse, this shape is to be desired, although training will reduce the size of the abdomen and so, apparently, raise the flank and possibly give the coupling an appearance of too great a length A short, strong coupling is desirable so long as the underline is long, but not too much cut up in flank. The back should be broad, well covered with muscles, the croup lon gand muscular, the thighs deep, full and plump with muscle extending well down over the gaskins, while the quarters, viewed from behind, should be full, thickly muscled and not of the too common "cat-hammed" type.

Hind Legs.—What has been said of the legs in general should be borne in mind and it is especially important to insist upon strong stifles and the largest and soundest of hock joints, which, in trotters, are set low on account of long gaskins but should not incline to "sickle' shape encouraging the throwing out of curbs or be too straight, shortening action and inducing thorough-pins and bog spavins.

Tendons should be large, free from puffs and straight when viewed from the side. "Bowed" tendons, broken down pasterns and unsound feet generally indicate some error in conformation that has given rise to undue strain or concussion.

Edmonton District Crop Good Local Man There All Summer

Mr. Harry Long returned home recently after spending seven months in Alberta. He reports that in the Edmonton district crops were good, and threshing was finished despite very catchy weather in the harvest season. Much grain is still standing in the fields in stooks in Saskatchewan. On October 27 and 28 the temperature was 20 below zero at Edmonton. This was followed by very fine weather.

UNITED KINGDOM IS BEST MARKET FOR APPLE CROP

Great Part of Canada's Exports Go to Old Country.

DEMAND GROWING

Vast Expansion in Production is Possible in Several Provinces.

In Canada it has been estimated that at the present time over 200,000 acres are devoted to the production of apples and an estimated value of $120,000,000 is placed on Dominion apple orchards. The 1924 apple crop of Canada was estimated at 3,225,713 barrels, which was only about 72 per cent. of the 1923 crop, which reached 4,493,850 barrels. Yet to-day a but relatively small proportion of the orchard lands of Canada have been developed and rendered productive, and the apple-growing industry is capable of very great expansion were markets assured for the increased output.

Rather particular interest attaches to apple growing in Canada at the present time in view of the movement in the British Isles towards the greater consumption of Empire food products and the large dependence of the United Kingdom on apples from outside sources. The apple was one of the main items on which Canada was to obtain preference at the last Imperial conference, and it is expected that this will be one of the first considerations for assistance under the scheme as recommended by the Imperial Economic Committee.

United Kingdom Largest Market.

In the past three years exports of Canadian apples have been 1,460,656 barrels, worth $6,452,044; 1,653,206 barrels, worth $7,271,683; and 1,406,237 barrels, worth $6,136,020. By far the largest market has been the United Kingdom, which took respectively 1,325,658 barrels, worth $5,842,200; 1,537,996 barrels, worth $6,739,347, and 1,271,922 barrels, worth $5,667,291. Other lesser markets were the United States, Bermuda, British South Africa, China, Denmark, Irish Free State, Newfoundland, New Zealand, Norway, Sweden, and other countries.

Having regard only to the largest market, the United Kingdom, there is a possibility of a great expansion in exports with some sort of assistance provided. Great Britain's three great sources of outside supply are the United States, Canada and Australia. Imports from Australia are small, ranging between the years 1920 and 1923 from nine per cent. of the total to 18 per cent. In the same period Canada's quota has been from 29 per cent. to 38 per cent., the lower figure being reached in 1923, the last year of record. Against this the United Kingdom imported from the United States from 37 per cent. to 45 per cent. of its outside needs in apples, the United States highest figure being reached in 1923 when the Canadian was lowest.

Not only might the production of apples be increased considerably on those lands already under orchard cultivation in all parts of Canada, but many sections of the Dominion—in British Columbia, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Ontario and Quebec—possess raw lands, to be cheaply acquired, with the possibility of enhancing Canadian apple output manyfold. And there is no question as to the favorable reception of the product on the British market. At all international fruit shows held in the British Isles, Canada consistently carries away more than her share of apple honors in competition with all the other fruit-growing countries of the world.

CANADA NOW IN GOOD POSITION TO DISPOSE CROP

Short Crops in Other Fall Harvesting Countries Leaves Wheat Market Open.

COMPETITION SOON

Crops From Southern Hemisphere Will Soon be on the Market.

OTTAWA, Canada.—In a bulletin published on the world's wheat situation by the Canadian Federal Department of Agriculture, the statement is made that "Canada is in a good position to dispose of her huge wheat crop of 422,000,000 bushels, the second largest reaped in Canada. The lack of exports from Russia and the Balkans, and the very short crops in India and the United States, have left the export market for the autumn months almost entirely to Canada, whose splendid hard spring wheat is in great demand.

"Special interest is now being taken in the crops of the Southern Hemisphere, soon to be harvested, and which will begin to appear on the markets in competition with Canada early in the new year. Reports from Argentina are favourable, and a good wheat crop on an increased acreage is now almost assured for that country. The rainfall in October and the drought has not been much relieved since. It is reported that the wheat crop will be at least 40,000,000 bushels less than that of last year.

"The total yield of wheat this year in the Northern Hemisphere, excluding Russia, is now estimated at 2,909,379,000 bushels as compared with 2,644,216,000 in 1924 and 3,014,596,000 in 1923. This year's production is thus 265,000,000 bushels more than that of last year but 106,000,000 less than the huge crop of 1923.

"The total wheat crop of Europe, outside of Russia, is 1,313,649,000 bushels against 1,028,432,000 last year and 1,222,256,000 in 1923, an increase of 286,000,000 bushels over last year and of 91,000,000 over 1923.

"In September the Soviet Government estimated the wheat crop of Russia, including Siberia, at 661,000,000 bushels against 382,000,000 in 1924. Since then they have stated that this estimate should be reduced by twenty per cent."

Farm Notes

CAVAN, Nov. 28.—Much ploughing remains to be done but during the last couple of fine days many farmers are again trying it.

The fowl are being removed to winter quarters and stables and other outbuildings prepared for winter.

MADOC, Nov. 28.—Cheese Board met in Madoc on Saturday. The settling of the New Zealand strike and the consequent flooding of the market with New Zealand cheese is given as the reason for the drop in price. Three hundred cheese of November make were sold, and the price went down to 19½.

There was an excellent apple crop in this district, but tremendous loss is reported owing to frost and lack of pickers. Mr. J. Laskey shipped a carload of apples, but reports a loss of about 50 barrels, frozen on the trees. The root crop is good on the whole and no damage is reported. It is said that in the more northerly districts a good many people did not get all their potatoes in before the frost came. Potatoes are worth $3 a bag here now.

EGG LAYING RECORD.

AGASSIZ, British Columbia, Nov. 28 (United Press).—The pen of ten white Leghorn hens owned by J. H. Mufford, Milner poultryman, established a new egg-laying record for Canada in the fifth annual contest at the Dominion experimental farm here.

The two best individual records also were made by white Leghorn hens. An experimental farm entry was first with 332 eggs.

GAIN MADE BY EARLY FALL PLOUGHING.

Weeds materially reduce the yields of grain. Early fall ploughing aids very much in holding weeds in check and eradicating them. Ploughing biennial and perennial weeds under early checks their growth; if when they show above ground these parts are destroyed, real progress in eradication may be made during the fall months.

Early fall ploughing will conserve the moisture already in the soil, and puts the fields in condition to take up readily any rain that occurs during the autumn. Various insect pests harmful to crops are largely controlled by early fall ploughing, due to disturbance in their more or less dormant stages or to actual exposure aboveergr ground

In preparation for the seeding of fall grains, early ploughing just before sowing in that it provides a firm seed bed in which the seed should germinate immediately and the plants make a steady growth from the start.

TREATMENT FOR BOT FLY LARVAE.

Heavy infectations may causes indigestion. Give the horse a chance; help him to be comfortable by removing the too numerous bot fly larvae from his stomach.

Fast the horse twenty-four hours and give three capsules of carbon alsulphide, to be given one at a time, at three hour intervals.

The larvae generally pass from the stomach in June; go into the soil for six weeks and then re-appear to start their devilish work over again.—Dept. of Extension, O.A.C., Guelph.

Canadian Farmers Will Have Large Representation At International Live Stock Exposition This Year

Ottawa.—When the International Live Stock Exposition and Hay and Grain Show opens at Chicago on Saturday, November 28th, the farmers of Canada will be very largely represented in competition with the best that exhibitors from the United States can produce. Last year Canadian exhibitors swept the boards in the Hay and Grain Show and also won some of the most coveted blue ribbons for horses, cattle and sheep. The most outstanding victory won by Canada last year was when J. C. Mitchell of Dahinda, Saskatchewan, won the world's wheat prize, making the third time he had scored this honour and the thirteenth time that Canada had won it in the fourteen years the competition has been held. Mitchell's prize bushel of Marquis wheat was the best in over 600 displays from all parts of the United States and Canada. He is competing this year and has hopes of winning again.

H. R. H. the Prince of Wales is entering his famous Shorthorn bull, "King of the Fairies," which was a championship winner at this year's Royal Winter Fair in Toronto. This bull, which is being sent from the Prince's Ranch near High River, Alberta, won a fourth at Chicago last year. It has won championships in the most important live stock shows in Western Canada and has been awarded a gold medal by the British Shorthorn Breeders' Association.

At last year's International Show Canadian grains and seeds captured 122 prizes including the world's championship for wheat, and the highest awards for alfalfa seed, flax, flint corn, and field peas, 25 out of the 30 premiums for hard spring wheat and 24 out of 30 in oats.

As in other years one of the attractions at the show will be the Canadian Government exhibit showing the great variety of products of the farms and orchards in all parts of Canada and indicating the opportunities the Dominion offers to settlers on its fertile lands, 240,000,000 acres of which still await settlement.

HAS RESIGNED.

Aaron Sapiro, Chicago lawyer and organizer of co-operative movements among producers, has resigned as consulting counsel to the Central Selling Agency of the Canadian wheat pools, according to announcement made this week.

LIVE STOCK MAN DEAD

Joseph Wilson, of Toronto, one of the oldest and best known live stock men of Canada, who died suddenly at Edmonton last week. Mr. Wilson was an expert judge and authority in the live stock world.

BEETLE SLEEPS DURING WINTER

Potato Bug Survives Better If It Hibernates Early in Fall.

IN SHALLOW BURROW.

The Colorado bettle is a most persistent insect. It starts to hibernate in August, September or early October, and turns up ready for business in the spring. In Ottawa, as told by the Entomological Branch in Bulletin 52 of the Dominion Department of Agriculture on "The Colorado Potato Beetle in Canada," tests have been made as to length of life of the creature and under what circumstances it will retain vitality. In wintering cage tests with beetles in New Brunswick, several lots were forced into hibernation at an early date by confining them in wire cages on the soil with only enough food for one day. All had burrowed within three days after the food had gone. From three lots put in the cages August 30 and September 5, 205 beetles out of 600 emerged the following spring. Out of 200 put in September 10, 42 emerged and out of 3,320 put in the cages on September 13 and later, only 360 emerged in the spring. This would seem to indicate as the bulletin says, that the earlier the pests hibernate in the autumn the better they survive. The beetles commonly go into the soil immediately below the place where they last fed. In a damp, cold clay loam they have been found within 2 inches of the surface and none at all below 6 inches, while in a loose, sandy soil only a few hundred feet away none were found at less than 14 and some at 17 inches. In a dense gravel-loam soil, only an occasional beetle was turned out when the plough was cutting 5 inches deep, but a number could be found by digging 3 inches more in the bottom of the furrow.—Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa

DAIRYING IN THE WEST.

WINNIPEG, Man.—Up to the end of last October, Manitoba had exported, mostly to Great Britain, more creamery butter than was exported by the province for the whole season of 1916. In 1910 the three Prairie Provinces, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta together produced less than 6,000,000 pounds of butter; in 1924 they made over 47½ million pounds of creamery butter worth over 15½ million dollars and the total returns for dairy products of all classes was over 55 million dollars. This indicates how extensively Western Canada has gone into mixed farming.

TEN-POUND POTATO.

JACKSON, Miss., Nov. 28 (United Press).—B. M. Whittington, a farmer living near Gloster, Amite county, brought the production of one sweet potato vine grown on his small farm into Gloster to convince his skeptical friends that he was in earnest when he boasted about his record crop of yams.

The four potatoes were placed on the scales separately and the largest one weighed ten pounds which is believed to be a record for the county and probably for the whole country.

ATTENTION NOW GIVEN TO TOWN MILK SUPPLIES

Farmer Can Control Over 99 Per Cent. of Contamination, It Is Found.

MANY BACTERIA.

Even When Fresh From the Cow—Is Good Field For Growth.

Considerable attention has been given, in recent years, by competent authorities towards the securing of a relatively pure milk supply. As a result of scientific research, it has been demonstrated beyond the shadow of a doubt that well over 99 per cent. of milk contamination is controllable by the producer, i.e., the farmer.

There is always a certain percentage of bacterial content in milk, even when it is fresh from the cow's udder. Further, milk is an almost perfect environment for the multiplication and development of certain varieties of bacteria, many of them harmful to the human system. Some time ago, inspectors in Washington, D. C., took 260 samples of ice cream from vendors in the city. The average number of bacteria in the samples was 26 million per cubic centimetre. The city of Chicago has now passed a by-law forbidding the sale within the city limits of milk with bacterial content in excess of 16 million per cubic inch.

These figures appear stupendous, but are quite eclipsed by the 397 million bacteria per cubic centimetre which are often found in milk from barns where careless, unsanitary conditions prevail. It may be said at once, that no farm within an extensive radius of Peterborough produces milk contaminated to this extent, and farmers here have usually shown themselves ready to fall in with suggestions likely to bring about an improvement in the quality of milk produced.

Two Important Factors.

Two factors stand out prominently in contributing to the contamination of otherwise good milk, namely, improperly cleaned utensils and failure to keep the animal in good, sanitary condition. Thus the use of open instead of covered pails in milkng, substitution of hot water for steam in cleaning milk-pails, or, worse still, using cold water for the purpose, the neglect to brush the cattle daily, the use of water instead of disinfectant, to wipe the udder, and the feeding of hay to the animals before milking, all contribute their quota toward the pollution of the milk. Bacteria develop in traces of milk left in pails which have not been thoroughly cleaned or, what is probably more important, improperly dried. Infinitesimal portions of dried manure falling into the pails during the milking operation often lead to deterioration. Naturally, neglect in removing manure from contact with the animal plays an important part in this. It has now been thoroughly well established that the removal of manure twice in preference to once per day is invariably followed by beneficial effects.

Special tests have also demonstrated the fact that the disturbance of air caused by sweeping the barn, immediately before milking, is followed by a slight increase in the amount of germ infection.

Milking Methods.

The methods used by the milker are also reflected, although in a lesser degree, by the bacteriological condition of the fluid. The washing of the hands has long been part of the ritual in every up-to-date dairy farm; while the discarding of the foremilk invariably leads to greater purity of the supply. The foremilk is, in all cases, the most heavily laden with germs. This is due to the washing out of bacteria lodged in the teat canal. But the contamination from this source is small as compared with that arising from general insanitary conditions.

Wet Versus Dry Milking.

Acrid discussions have frequently been waged as to the relative values of wet and dry milking. In this case, cool investigation and unbiased experiment have pronounced unequivocally in favor of the latter; wet milking always slightly raises the germ content. Here again, however, the change from wet to dry milking is of little avail unless the more important requirement of clean and healthful environment is fully met.

The use of wood shavings instead of straw as bedding also reduces bacterial content, mainly because of the fact that in this case less dust is afloat in the air.

All Factors Combined.

At present the belief generally held is that the proper care of the pails is the most important single step towards securing a lessening of the bacterial count, the actual effect on the germ content of the milk exerted by any other single factor being largely interdependent upon prevailing conditions. Only when attention is given to barns, milking, animals and utensils alike can the cleanest milk be obtained. With every precaution taken, milk of a bacterial content of 3,200 per cubic centimetre can be produced. This is the ideal towards which every progressive (using the word in a non-political sense) farmer should strive. No expensive equipment is called for in order to reach this goal, for all that is required is the adoption of simple everyday precautions and ordinary rules of hygiene based on a knowledge of the chief sources of contamination.

PROPER BOXES ARE NEEDED FOR PACKING BUTTER

Some Kinds of Wood Will Taint the Produce in Them.

WHITE SPRUCE USED

New Zealand is Coming in Market for Canadian Boxes.

Canada has a great number of species of trees, comprising softwoods and hardwoods, some suitable for one purpose and some for another, while some are entirely unsuitable for some purposes. It is therefore essential that the proper kind of wood be used where a wrong class would have a deleterious effect. In this connection the Forest Products Laboratories of the Forestry Service, Department of the Interior, has been doing some excellent work.

Canada, during the present year, has made a tremendous advancement in her exports of butter, to the British market particularly, says the Natural Resources Intelligence Service of the Department of the Interior. There she has to meet the competition of all agricultural countries, particularly New Zealand and Denmark. It is consequently of the utmost importance that Canadian butter reach the consumer in the best possible condition, and the condition of the container means much in securing this result. As an evidence of this, the experience of New Zealand dairy men is interesting. As reported in the "New Zealand Produce Exporter," 'a certain type of Swedish box was held responsible for a taint developing in the butter, and experiments were conducted to find means for overcoming the difficulty.' In Canada the white spruce is used almost exclusively for butter boxes. These are made in two sizes, those for wrapped pound blocks to hold 48 pounds, and those for bulk butter to hold 56 pounds. It is the latter that are used almost exclusively for export, and the cost is about 35 cents each.

New Zealand is becoming an extensive exporter of butter, and is very sensitive as to quality. They have organized a Dairy Produce Export Board, and adopted a brand mark which will be used by all shippers so as to standardize their product in the British market. An opportunity may be awaiting some of Canada's butter box makers to secure a portion of the requirements of the dairy industry of New Zealand for containers.

Former Mexican President Settles Down To Farm Life

He has extensive land holdings in the state of Sonora, and makes his home in Navajoa. It is reported that he has invested approximately $1,500,000 in land.

General Obregon also is working on development plans and has consulted American capitalists regarding the building of a dam on the Mayo river. The project would bring many thousands of acres under irrigation. The cost has been estimated at 25,000,000 pesos.

PROPER HOUSING IS NECESSARY IF HENS ARE TO BE PROFITABLE ALL THROUGH WINTER MONTHS

A CLEAN FLOOR

Plenty of Drinking Water and Proper Food Should be Kept on Hand.

If you want to keep hens in winter

Keep them in a draughty house with one square foot of floor space per bird.

Make sure the water pail is nearly always frozen over, or better still, empty and turned over.

Have a door in both the east and west end that does not fit, so that the cold winds may blow right through the house uninterrupted.

Let the hens outside to wade in the snow and slush every fine day.

Never feed a dry mash containing fifteen per cent. beef scrap; it is expensive and eggs may not go over one dollar a dozen this winter.

What To Do.

But, if you want hens to keep you in winter:

Keep them in an absolutely draught proof house, giving from three to four square feet of floor per bird

See that there is from six to eight inches of clean, dry straw on a clean floor, remembering that the floor to Biddy, the hen, is the same as the dinner plate to you—keep it clean.

Make sure the water pail is placed where it cannot be turned over, or litter kicked into it, and not frozen over. Better still, feed skimmed milk or buttermilk; and keep a pail full of clean snow in the corner of the house in case the water does freeze over during the night. A hen needs a drink as soon as she comes off the perch, and she likes snow.

Fix up the front of the house with lots of light. A row of eight by ten-inch four light windows right along the front, two feet, six inches from the floor and a row of cotton, same size (flour bags are fine), just on top of the glass windows. It is best to make frames for the cotton so as to open them on fine days, giving the birds lots of air, not draught.

One ply of tar paper lathed every foot all over an old shell of a house, then well covered with straw and front fixed as above will make comfortable winter quarters.

Have a tight fitting door, preferably in the south, to open out. Board up two feet high inside on the studs to stop floor draught. A small storm porch in which to keep feed and tools is a luxury one would hate to be without after once having one.

Feed To Use.

Feed half wheat and half good plump oats sparingly several times a day, well scattered and buried in the litter. Make Biddy work, keep a dry mash in a long trough or hopper before the birds at all times. Mash recommended (by weight): Two parts wheat, two parts good plump oats, one part corn, or barley ground very fine. Take 85 pounds of above, 15 pounds beef scrap, one pound fine salt, one-half pound sulphur; thoroughly mix, especially the salt.

Keep sugar beets, mangels or cabbage, hanging on spikes driven into the wall, before the birds always, renew when frozen or stale.

Kill an old horse or old cow, skin and ship the hide, cut up in convenient chunks; nail up the chunks on the north side of the barn out of reach of dogs; take a chunk in the house to thaw out and when thoroughly thawed, hang up in the hen house, thaw again when frozen, cut off dried outside and cut up in pieces the size of a peanut, throw to the hens and watch them scramble. You will have lots of fun watching them, also lots of fun gath[illegible] fun, more eggs [illegible] sure [illegible] are in their winter quarters, never let them out again until spring; keep them in: never mind how fine the day. Stormy days they will have to stay in, then they will pine and fret to get out; a laying hen is a happy hen, a miserable hen is a non-producer.

Remember, a hen's laying machinery is like a chain, one weak link spoils the chain. Keep her laying; she needs a little care every day, Sundays included; she is a heathen and works on Sundays too.

Use Gasoline Lantern.

Hang a gasoline lantern in the hen house every afternoon just before dusk and at dark feed the tidbits to encourage her to work by artificial light. Our days are too short here in the north for Biddy. Turn the gasoline lantern out at nine o'clock and hang up an ordinary stable lantern to give her light enough to see to get on the perch.

Quite a lot of trouble? You will not think so when you gather the eggs from clean nests nicely packed down with clean straw or fine hay. Make sure there are lots of nests and that the birds cannot roost on them. There should be no place for them to roost except on the perches all along the back of the house and all the same height from the ground.

Biddy will pay you well this winter for these little attentions.

THE PROFITABLE HENS

It is not always the hen that lays the most eggs that is most profitable. It is the hen that lays the most eggs when prices are highest that shows the highest profit. In one of the laying competitions, a hen that stood fifth in the number of eggs she laid stood first in the value of her eggs.

Eighty-Five-Pound Lamb Suits Canadian Market

(Issued by the Director of Publicity, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.)

At a recently held lamb fair organized by a county Agronomist and carried out with the co-operation of the federal Live Stock Branch in the province of Quebec, out of 250 lambs, 187 were rated as first quality, bringing the top price for the day. These lambs, consisting of ewes and wethers, ranged between 70 and 100 pounds, averaging 85 pounds per head. The remainder of the stock were small and unfinished, ranging around 60 pounds per head, and sold at from one to two cents per pound less money.

HONEY CROP IS INCREASED BY BETTER COMBS

REDUCE LOSSES

Fewer Combs Are Broken at Extracting Time—Keep Down Swarms.

(Experimental Farms Note.)

The difference between good and bad combs is often the difference between success and failure to secure a good crop of honey. Everything else being equal, good combs enable a beekeeper to build up his colonies with worker bees with a minimum amount of labour; they lessen the tendencies to swarm and also reduce the losses resulting from broken combs at extracting time. Bad combs, on the other hand, prevent the colonies from building up rapidly, encourage the production of drone instead of worker bees, increase natural swarming, increase labour, and too often result in a lot of broken combs and loss of honey during extracting time. It is therefore, advisable and profitable for every beekeeper to use only those combs that are straight, strong and contain as few drone cells as possible, and to consign all crooked, drone, or weak combs to the melting pot.

Since the advent of comb foundation, it is possible to have every comb a good one. By wiring each frame with at least four horizontal wires, using full sheets of light or medium brood foundation and embedding the wires firmly into the foundation, straight, strong combs, consisting mainly of worker cells, can be obtained. Foundation should not be given to the bees excepting when there is a good flow of nectar, or otherwise buckling may occur and crooked combs result. To get the combs attached to all sides of the frame, they should only be drawn out in the extracting supers; bees seldom attach the combs to the lower bars when drawn in the brood-chamber. The 1923 and 1924 reports of the Bee Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, contain results of experiments on comb building.—C. B. Gooderham, Dominion Apiarist.

PLANT LICE ARE FLORISTS' PEST

Greenhouse Men Are Constantly Waging War Against Aphids.

NICOTINE SPRAY

Aphids or plant lice—the so-called "green flies" and black flies—are a pestiferous nuisance that every florist has to maintain war against. They feed on the sap of the tender growth of plants, sometimes entirely ruining them and often injuring the flowers. Their presence on plants is frequently indicated by a curled and distorted condition of the leaves. They have marvellous powers of multiplication, but as Bulletin No. 7 of the Dominion Department of Agriculture on "Insects Affecting Greenhouse Plants" states, they are happily easily controlled by spraying with nicotine preparations or by fumigating with tobacco extracts or hydrocianic gas. The ngeeral practice, says the bulletin, should be to spray when only a few plants are attacked and to fumigate when nearly or quite all the house is infected. Care should be taken in using commercial tobacco extracts to follow the manufacturer's instructions, always remembering that violets are liable to injury from tobacco fumigation and nicotine sprays. In combatting violet aphis hydrocianic acid gas should be used but with the greatest care to see that none is breathed into the lungs, as the gas is a deadly poison. Further, the greenhouse should be thoroughly aired for half an hour after its use.

Stock Prices Turn Back On New York Market

NEW YORK, Nov. 28 (Canadian Press).—Stock prices turned reactionary after an early display of strength in today's market. Selling presumably was inspired by a spectacular belief that immediate requirements of the short interest had been met and that orders from so-called bargain hunters had not come up to expectations, considering the drastic nature of the recent decline.

Motors, which had registered the sharpest recoveries, were offered in a large volume, breaking 3 to nearly 5 points below their earlier high levels. The reaction was not associated with anything in the day's news, the few business and trade reports coming to hand being of a favorable nature.

Black Rust In Argentine Counters Liverpool Price

CHICAGO, Nov. 28 (Canadian Press). — Notwithstanding declines at the start, wheat prices today soon showed fresh upward trend. Initial set-backs were attributed to downturn in Liverpool quotations. On the other hand, Buenos Aires advices received here, telling of black rust over the entire west section of Argentina and part of the south, said the crop situation was critical and that many believe the Argentine export surplus will not amount to 100,000,000 bushels. Chicago opening prices 3-8 to 1 3-4c lower, new style, December 164 3-8 to 164 5-8, and May 160 to 160 3-4, were followed by a rise to 166 1-2 for December and 162 5-8 for May.

Corn and oats swayed with wheat. After opening at 1-8c to 3-4c down, December 72 5-8 to 73c, the corn market recovered all of the loss. Oats started at a shade to 1-4c off, May 39 1-2 to 38 5-8, sagged a trifle more, and then rallied.

Provisions were responsive to lower quotations on hogs.

Declines In Majority In Light Toronto Session

TORONTO, Nov. 28 (Canadian Press).—Trading continued light during the closing session of the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning and the trend was mixed, with declines in the majority. British Columbia Fishing was again the active leader, but it closed a quarter point lower at 59 1-4, Canadian Bakeries Common, new issue, was marked up a point and a half at 36, and the Preferred advanced a point at 96. Consolidated Smelters sold down a point and an eighth at 151 3-4, and International Nickel eased three-quarters of a point. Mines were strong.

POODLE IN CELLS WAS DISORDERLY

Residents of Ashburnham Had Him Arrested as Nuisance.

NO CLAIMANT.

"Stone walls do not a prison make nor iron bars a cage," was the quotation which a fuzzy little poodle seemed to bark as he peered through the vertical barriers of a police station cell this morning. He had been brought in by some constable on the complaint of an Ashburnham resident who averred the diminutive fellow was by way of being a public nuisance. Because of his unkempt, even dilapidated, appearance, it is thought that he has none to care for him, as the long hair which might be so silky now hangs in muddy strings. The eyes, however, still shine with a welcoming gleam which the caudal appendage bears out vociferously. There is no collar or any distinguishing tag and the police wish that the owner would come to claim him. If no one comes the little chappie with the friendly eyes will be forced to launch his frail bark on the troubled waters of the Styx, but just now he is blissfully unconscious of the fate impending.

SLOW, STEADY IMPROVEMENT SEEN IN CANADA'S BUSINESS DURING LAST TWELVE MONTHS

Vincent Eastwood Sees Betterment Following Good Farming Results—Expects Increased Circulation of Money in Next Three or Four Months.

CANADA IS GOOD COUNTRY TO STAY IN.

There has been without doubt a very slow, steady improvement in business over the last twelve months, Vincent Eastwood, manager of Royal Bank and Chairman of Peterboro Clearing House, told the Examiner. During last winter the immediate showing in the city was inclined to be unfavorable and unsatisfactory, largely due to the industrial dullness, but there has been a gradual quickening in almost everything, and that feeling is accentuated by the very favorable agricultural betterment on account of the excellent crops.

Conditions latterly, as far as farming is concerned, are practically ideal, with a 422 million bushel crop of wheat and all other crops generally good. In addition to that, the exceedingly favorable conditions for dairying almost leads to a very definite prospect of early and substantial betterment in general business, so much so that in the next three or four months I expect to see a very large increase in the circulation of money, which means the payment of debts and financial betterment for the merchants and manufacturers throughout the country. As an instance, the present price of butter is abnormal, and in addition, the stocks of butter in the country are practically sold out. Prices for hogs are good and the prices for cattle are improving.

Summing up the situation, together with the prospects of increased immigration next year, Canada to me looks like a very good country to stay in. Speaking from the standpoint of the city proper, I would expect to see a considerable increase in building activities at a reduction in cost, due in part to a temporary cessation of construction in the larger cities. The gradual decrease in the cost of manufactured goods is slowly tending to encourage greater consumption, and this should help to quicken business generally.

REPORT OF BANK OF MONTREAL REFLECTS TRADE IMPROVEMENT

Larger Demands for Business Expansion Shown by Increase in Current Loans.

ASSETS INCREASED

Resources of Bank Will Take Care of Even More Expansion.

Indications of steady improvement the general business of the country provide one of many satisfactory features of the annual statement of the Bank of Montreal. For some months past, due in a measure to satisfactory crops, trade throughout the country has been showing improvement and this is now reflected in the figures of the Bank published at the close of its fiscal year. During a period of six months the total assets of the Bank have increased to $755,147,876, as against $718,194,797 at the end of the half year period, and current loans and discounts in Canada total $225,219,598, as compared with $211,096,703 these latter figures indicating a greater demand during the past six months for funds by commercial borrowers throughout Canada.

Strong Liquid Position.

The general statement of assets and liabilities reveals the Bank in its usual strong position. While business has been on an expanding scale, the resources of the Bank are so ample that they will permit of a very much larger amount being taken care of whenever the legitimate requirements of business may call for it. Reflecting the banking strength are liquid assets of $450,459,068, being equivalent to 66.37% of total liabilities to the public, while cash holdings amount to $103,829,406, equal to 15.30% of public liabilities. Included in liquid assets are total call loans and balances with other banks of $152,262,528, as compared with $159,444,531, at the end of the half year. Other principal accounts are Dominion and Provincial Government securities, $96,542,710, compared with $99,911,141; Canadian Municipal securities, and British, Foreign and Colonial Public securities, other than Canadian, $39,937,591, against $45,756,338; Railway and other bonds, debentures and stocks $3,666,616, compared with $4,315,132; notes of other banks, $3,935,077, up from $2,980,420; cheques on other banks $49,594,159, as against $25,012,043. The premises account of the Bank has been further written down $250,000, presumably from the sale of banking offices acquired through the acquisition of other institutions.

Expansion in Business.

Total current loans are $270,087,143, as compared with $260,535,065, and of this, total current loans and discounts in Canada have increased to $225,219,598, from $211,096,703.

The last half of the year has also shown considerable growth in deposits the total now standing at $631,454,427, as compared with $604,851,114.

Earnings Well Maintained.

The Profit and Loss Account, owing to the absorption of the Molsons Bank, does not permit of a complete comparison with the previous year. The profits for the year, after deducting charges of management and making full provision for all bad and doubtful debts, have permitted of the payment of the regular dividends and usual bonus on the larger capital, and of an addition to Rest Account. Profits amounted to $4,604,962, as compared with $4,454,504 for the previous year, and, added to the balance of Profit and Loss, brought the amount available for distribution up to $5,366,348. This was distributed as follows: dividends and bonus $4,161,671 and provision for taxes, Dominion Government, $291,389, leaving a balance of $913,488. From this amount there was transferred to Rest Account $316,700, leaving a balance to be carried forward of $596,788.

Following the acquisition of The Molsons Bank, the Capital has been increased to $29,916,700. The Rest Account has also been increased to $29,916,700, equal to the total Capital, this through the addition of the estimated surplus assets of The Molsons Bank in excess of the value at par of the Capital stock of the Bank of Montreal, and cash, given in payment for that institution, amounting to $2,350,000, and $316,700, transferred from the balance of profits. At the end of the previous year Capital and Rest Accounts stood at $27,250,000.

The bank has two branches in Peterborough, managed by E. S. Martin and C. S. Cummer.

MASQUERADE BALL HELD BY SHRINERS

Over 600 Attended Dance Held in Masonic Temple.

Six hundred members and their wives attended the masquerade ball given last night by Rameses Temple. It was held in the Masonic Temple, Yonge street, under the direction of a committee composed of Percy Cadieux, Sarl Warren, E. Manifold, J. Wright, W. Simpson, W. Bowerman, D. Pearce and C. Cope. Potentate Gus Hay and Mrs. Hay of Peterborough were present. Mrs. Hay was presented with a bouquet of roses by U. E. Gillen.

The prize winners of the ball were: Ladies' fancy costume, Mrs. Story, Mrs. Lawrence and Miss Verner. Comic costume—Mrs. E. Manifold, Mrs. L. Robinson. Men's fancy costumes—Mr. Story, Dr. C. M. Porter and Mr. Craig. Men's comic costume — P. Eversfield, George Wright. The prize for the best costume of a member of Rameses Patrol was won by W. Bowerman.

The prizes were presented by the Potentate.

Youth Showing Prosperity Receive Plenty Of Publicity

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28 (United Press)—Don't give lavish tips if you want to keep out of trouble. Two youths who went into a hotel for dinner were so generous with their large bank rolls that suspicions ere aroused and the police, who are engaged in a frantic effort to halt a crime wave, seized the boys. Additional suspicion was aroused when one of them sent himself a telegram and was paged through the lobby. They were released after a night in jail. Hotel waiters declared it was an outrage.

ANNUAL MEETING BUSINESS GIRLS

Miss J. Waddell is New President of Flourishing Club.

BANQUET HELD.

The eleventh annual meeting of the Business Girls' Club of the city took the form last evening of a jolly banquet held at the Empress Hotel, attended by forty of the members. The president, Miss Aleitha Davidson, was in the chair.

The banquet was a very enjoyable one and was enlivened by a number of community choruses, which were delivered with great enthusiasm. Other entertaining numbers were an action song, "Smile Awhile"; a vocal solo by Miss Geraldine Collins, and a reading by Mrs. Hazel Davidson McClelland. A playlet was another amusing interlude; entitled "Tickets, Please," and set in a hotel lobby; those taking part were the Misses Winnie Coon, Hazel Miller, Marjorie Best and Gladys Coon.

Reports were given by the president, Miss Aleitha Davidson, the secretary; Miss Winnie Coon, and the treasurer, Miss Annie Deyell.

Mrs. W. R. Morris, who was present, gave a brief address on "Bolshevism in Canada."

At the conclusion of the evening, Miss Aleitha Davidson, the president last year, was presented with a bouquet of flowers, the presentation being made by Miss Grace Evans.

Election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: Honorary president, Mrs. W. R. Morris; President, Miss J. Waddell; first vice president, Miss Aleitha Davidson; 2nd vice-president, Miss J. Saunders; 3rd vice-president, Miss J. Gillespie; secretary, Miss W. Coon; treasurer, Miss Annie Deyell; executive; Mrs. A. W. Clysdale, Miss Grace Evans, Miss Lillian Hall, Miss Ethel Rae and Miss Phyllis Hood.

Nickels Still Look Good To Many a Restaurant Man

A nickel is still five cents in hundreds of eating places. Take a certain lunch room, for example. A man may feast there with only a quarter to spend, and follow his feast with the luxury of a shoe shine, if he has a spare five cents. There are places where the ubiquitous "orange drink, ten cents," may be had for a nickel, and a fat frankfurter in a roll, usually a dime, sells for half. There is, in addition to these stands-in-the-wall, a full-fledged restaurant, well known to office boys and aged clerks for its five cent fare.

A three-course luncheon may be had at the counter for fifteen cents, a surprise indeed for those accustomed to paying that price for a bowl of soup. In many places in the neighborhood the minimum rush-hour check must be two cents, but here a lone nickel is not spurned. And no one knows the meaning of "tip."

This shrine of the nickel puts up a gay front at a corner of an alley. It is resplendent outside and in with bright blue paint. Customers serve themselves from the counter, but they eat sitting down in chairs at tables with white enameled tops. In one respect it differs from most restaurants; its has no kitchen back of the scene. A screen cuts off from view a pair of women washing and wiping plates and mugs; but the stove with its dishpans full of hot food is plainly in sight, just back of the counter. This arrangement has advantages from the customer's point of view. The meal has no secret tricks.

Here a good, healthy helping of baked beans, steaming hot, may be had for five cents. At the same price sell sandwiches, all kinds—ham, sardine, liverwurst, salmon, egg tomato or choice of cheese. One such sandwich contributes a substantial part toward a meal. It compares well in size with those offered for 15 or 20 cents elsewhere, even to its lettuce leaf. The buyer knows in advance, moreover, exactly what he will get—how many slices of egg or tomato or how thick the slab of cheese. The sandwiches are displayed, open-faced and unwrapped in a glass case. One may even watch the sandwich maker at work.

DUNLOP LEAVES TO SERVE TERM

Refused to Talk to Reporters at Union Station To-day.

WIFE WITH HIM.

TORONTO, Nov. 28 (Canadian Press).—W. W. Dunlop, former inspector of prisons and charities for Ontario, left Toronto Jail this morning and started for Kingston, where he will enter Portsmouth Penitentiary to serve the four-year term passed on him by the court, for stealing upwards of $40,000 of Government funds. On the train with him this morning, en route to Kingston, besides two police officers, were his wife and brother-in-law. Approached by reporters for a statement just before the train pulled out of the Union Station, Dunlop said: "Tell the world I am feeling fine—and beat it."

To further questions, the prisoner returned no answer, but was soon engrossed in quiet conversation with his wife.

MORE TOURISTS WILL BE SOUGHT

Provincial Campaign to Increase Business Opens Nov. 27.

VALUE RECOGNIZED

Revenue derived from tourist traffic to the Dominion exceeded the value of pulp and paper exported from Canada to other countries and in twenty-five leading products exported was only exceeded in value by one, that of grain and its products.

Tourist traffic can to all intents and purposes be considered export trade with the one beneficial difference, viz. that our raw materials are not depleted accordingly. Much has been done to maintain a favourable trade balance by increasing our export trade, but no such effort has been made to develop the most lucrative business in the tourist industry. During the past few years Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and British Columbia, have taken definite action through the respective provincial tourist associations to develop this business. Ontario now has its Tourist Association organized during the past season to conduct during the coming year a comprehensive campaign, mainly in the United States, to inform the prospective tourist of the holidaying possibilities to be enjoyed in this Province. The work of the Tourist Association will not stop at bringing the tourist to the Province but through its widespread organization will do everything possible to ensure satisfaction and fair treatment during the period of the visitors' stay. A satisfied tourist returning to his home will give more favourable publicity than could be calculated in dollars and cents.

Ontario's province wide campaign will take the initial step at the First Annual Meeting of The Tourist Association to be held in Toronto on Friday, November 27th. The Ontario Government during past few years has carried out a considerable amount of publicity work and the co-operation of the Government to the activities of the newly-formed public organization will be explained at this meeting by the Hon. Geo. S. Henry, Minister of Public Works and Highways.

Toronto, the leading centre of the Province, will, through its City Council, entertain the delegates from all over the Province representing the municipal councils, boards of trade, chambers of commerce, motor clubs and private corporations which comprise the membership of the Tourist Association.

Switzerland, California and Florida have demonstrated what can be accomplished by the development of tourist traffic. It is now up to Ontario. The estimated revenue of forty million dollars to the Province during this year from tourist traffic can be increased to at least fifty million with an almost insignificant investment and will incidentally return a substantial dividend in increased business, throughout the entire Province.

Music Has No Charms Small Boy Runs Away

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 28. — United Press. — Music hath charms for some, but not for 14 year old Charles Burglaid.

Weary, discouraged and hungry the young runaway was picked up at the union station by two parolmen. His father was notified and is on the way to take him back home.

MADOC NEWS

MADOC, Nov. 28.—Among those who took part in the concert held by the Bethesda Church anniversary services were Mr. Seutton, violinist, and Miss Norma Fair, both of Madoc, and the Madoc orchestra.

One of Alberta's recently elected members for the House of Commons is Hon. Charles Wilson Cross, Liberal member-elect for Athabasca. Mr. Cross was a Madoc boy, being the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cross. After graduating as a lawyer, Charlie, as he is known in Madoc and in Edmonton, went to the latter place to hang out his shingle. He soon became a member of one of Edmonton's most prominent law firms. He was also interested in politics and became a member of the Alberta Legislature. Now he has advanced another step and will become a unit of the Dominion Parliament at its next opening session.

Miss Helen Tumelty is in the Kingston General Hospital, where she has undergone an operation. Her many friends will be pleased to hear that she is reported to be progressing favorably.

Dr. and Mrs. McTavish of Belleville, formerly of Madoc, are removing to Brighton, where Dr. McTavish will act as minister in charge of the Presbyterian Church for the winter.

NINE-YEAR-OLD RUSSIAN ORPHAN TRAVELLED ALONE TO NEW HOME

FROM RUSSIA ALONE.

Harold Weisburg, nine-year-old Russian orphan, who made the long trip to Canada from Russia unaccompanied. His father was killed in the anti-Jewish pogrom in Russia, and his mother was the victim of famine.

Harold Weisberg Reached Toronto in Safety After Long Trip.

FATHER SLAIN

Lost Life in Anti-Jewish Riot —Mother Died in Famine.

TORONTO, Nov. 28 (Special).—Among the newcomers to Canada on the last westbound voyage of the "Empress of Scotland" was a nine-year-old Russian orphan who was travelling alone from his birthplace near the shores of the Black Sea to Toronto. His father massacred in an anti-Jewish pogrom and his mother a victim of the famine which swept the Ukraine after the revolution. Harold Weisberg has had more tragedy and adventure crowded into his young life than fall to the lot of most men in a lifetime, but he found an ending to his troubles when C. P. R. officials handed him over to his cousin, Isaac Kaufman, at the Union Station yesterday. From Moscow, across Russia, the little chap had been in the care of agents and officials of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company.

It was about two years ago that Mr. Kaufman heard of his young cousin's plight from a Russian woman from Uman who had arrived at Buffalo and who told him how towards the close of the war the baby's father, after being three times wounded while fighting for Russia, was massacred in an anti-Jewish pogrom, how in the famine of 1919 his mother died of starvation, leaving her three-year-old baby to what charity her few remaining friends—the very few who survived the fury of the pogrom and the famine—could afford.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silvar

DORIS MEETS MR. CHAMELEON.

When Doris saw something move on the leaves outside her window, she ran out to see what it was.

"Well, of all things!" she cried merrily, "I thought you were brown, you're not, you're just as green as the leaf you're sitting on. Isn't that funny?"

"You mean, it would be funny if I didn't change my color to suit the object I'm on," chuckled the queer little creature. "I can see very plainly, you haven't lived down South here very long, or you'd know me better."

"I don't live here at all," replied Doris. "I'm just visiting my Aunt. May I be so bold as to ask your name? Mine is Doris Day."

"Certainly, certainly," chuckled the funny little creature. "I'm Mr. Chameleon, at your service. So you've never seen a Chameleon before? Well, take a good look at me and the next time you see any of my relatives, you'll be able to tell us from the neighbors around here. Most newcomers, insist on calling the Lizard Family, Chameleons. You see my head isn't shaped anything at all like a lizard's. My head is much broader and my legs being longer than Lizzy Lizard's, it makes me look funny."

"Yes, and you have a tail like a Spider Monkey, haven't you?" Doris declared, as she watched Mr. Chameleon wrap his long tail around the twig. "And you use it the same way he does, don't you?"

"See This Tongue?"

"Sure do," laughed Mr. Chameleon. "It's just a fifth hand with me and helps me out in a good many tight places."

"I should think it would help you, when you want your two front feet to catch your dinner," said Doris.

"It might do that, if I depended on my front feet to get my meals," answered Mr. Chameleon. "But you see I don't. See this tongue?" and Mr. Chameleon darted out his long slender tongue. It shot out at such a distance from his big mouth, that Doris laughed.

"I should think you'd miss what you're trying to catch," she said.

"Not with this tongue," replied Mr. Chameleon. Just then a big fly lighted on a leaf above Mr. Chameleon and quick as a flash, he darted out the twig, shot out his tongue and touching the fly, carried it back to his mouth. "What do you think of that?" he laughed, swallowing the fly.

"I'll say that was sure and quick," agreed Doris. "But how in the world did you get that fly to stay on the end of your tongue? That's what I couldn't see. You went so fast."

"It's this way," said Mr. Chameleon, and he stuck out his tongue and asked Doris to touch the end of it with her finger. "See how sticky the end of my tongue is? That answers the question. Once a victim touched my tongue, it's glued there so tightly it very seldom gets away. I'll bet I did that so fast, that fly didn't even know what had happened to him."

"I'll bet he didn't either," answered Doris.

Just then she heard her Aunt calling and bidding her new friend goodby, Doris ran into the house.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

SUNDAY AND MONDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 30.

Sunday's horoscope is a propitious one both for business and other affiliations. All things should prosper under the benignant Jupiter and Venus rule.

Those whose birthday it is may count on a year of prosperity and happiness with many benefits and possible advantages through change or travel. A child born on this day may be successful and happy but should guard against deception.

Monday's astrological forecast may not be read as favorable either to business, employment or to any phase of the personal relations. All are under baneful planetary aspects. It would be well to refrain from unnecessary activities.

Those whose birthday it is may find it a year of difficulties and complications which only good management will obviate. Wise handling of money, safeguarding the employment and remaining close in the routine grooves may save the situation from hazard. A child born on this day should be given sound schooling in the safe and sane handling of all its affairs, as it may be called upon to surmount many difficulties in its career.

YOUR HEALTH

By Royal S. Copeland, M. D.,

It is surprising how careless man is of his body and its organs. In the industries it is difficult to get the workmen to use the protective devices which have been invented to lessen the hazards.

The establishment of the various governmental bodies for the promotion of safety in industry and for the compensation of workmen have taught us a lot about accidents. We know how they happen and what damage they produce.

What do you suppose is the cause of a tremendous number of accidents, some of them very serious? The common nail.

During 1924 in the State of New York there were 1,338 accidents due to nails which were compensated for by the insurance companies. I have no doubt there were twice as many more of which there is no official record.

How did the accidents happen? By stepping on an exposed nail in the floor, from a nail on the inside of a board, the nailed filled cover of a packing case fell on the arm and hand—these are a few of the recorded accidents. In my own medical experience, a flying nail has damaged the eye. I suppose I have seen three hundred or more such wounds.

The ultimate result of a nail accident depends on whether or not the wound becomes infected, certainly the sight will be lost.

It should be the rule in every household, on every farm, in every barn and factory, in the public ways of every community, to get rid of projecting nails. You will see nails sticking up from sidewalks, in entry ways, on the stairs, in the kitchen table drawer, in the corner of a chair, even in a broken door. Every such nail is a menace to the safety and even to the lives of your family and the public.

You should never permit yourself to pass by without pounding in bending down or pulling out every such nail. If everybody would make this a rule for one week there wouldn't be left a projecting nail in the world.

What do you do when you puncture the skin with a nail? You should make the wound bleed, wash out the debris with clean water and apply 2+ iodine. Then the wound should be protected with gauze, kept in place by adhesive or a bandage.

If the accident is to the face, or the eye, do not fail to see a doctor at once. All face cuts, especially with infected articles, are dangerous. Every eye accident, no matter how trivial it may seem, is serious.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES.

A. V. C. Q.—I have had stomach trouble for years and find that drinking about a pint of hot water before breakfast is better than medicine in its results. Is this harmful?

A.—A glassful of hot water before breakfast is very beneficial. It is unnecessary to take more than that. Careful diet and regular intestinal elimination should help your stomach condition. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

CANADIAN BOOK WEEK.

Next week will be recognized as Canadian Book Week, when efforts will be made through the press and on the platform to bring before the public the merits of Canadian authors. Canadian writers, who remain in the Dominion, work at a disadvantage. The Canadian field is small compared with the hundred million odd people of the United States and their vast market. In addition, the book market in Canada is circumscribed by the fact that nearly a third of the population are French-Canadians, with their own peculiar literature. Our geographical and sectional differences, also, make difficult the development of a national literature. All the more credit is due to Canadian authors who loyally stand by the Dominion, despite the richer rewards to be found across the line.

One difficulty a Canadian author faces is the fact that there are few Canadian magazines, and those that do exist have, as a rule, a precarious existence. From the standpoint of the development of national sentiment it is discouraging to see the vast piles of American magazines, many of them of doubtful moral character, piled high on our news stands, while American Sunday papers, with their reams of sensationalism, come into this country by the thousands. These publications are blatantly American. It is a situation which cannot be barred out of Canada, but it is all the more reason why efforts should be made to encourage authors and Canadian publications.

Incidentally, it is interesting to note that a young Canadian author, Martha Ostenso, won this year the prize of $13,500 offered by Dodd, Mead & Co., of New York, for the best new novel of the year. Miss Ostenso, who was a Manitoba school-teacher of Norwegian origin, has written a novel dealing with her experiences as a school-teacher in a foreign settlement of Northern Manitoba, under the title, "Wild Geese." Redolent of the soil, "Wild Geese" reveals with power and insight the arduous life of those who in the Far North are redeeming the wilderness.

Her novel calls attention to the contribution that those people of other than British stock, who are a part of our Canadian nation to-day, are already making, and will make in the future, to the literary, musical and artistic life of the Dominion.

'Little Women' Leads 40 Children's Books

The United States Federal Bureau of Education has compiled a list of forty books "that all children" should read before they are 16 years of age. "Little Women," by Louisa M. Alcott, heads the list, and Mark Twain and Rudyard Kipling appear most often, three works of each being included in the list.

The titles and authors of the selected books are: "Little Women," by Louisa M. Alcott; "Robinson Crusoe," by Daniel Defoe; "Tanglewood Tales," by Nathaniel Hawthorne; "Uncle Remus," by Joel Chandler Harris; Anderson's Fairy Tales; "The Jungle Book," by Rudyard Kipling; "Alice in Wonderland," by Lewis Carroll; "Treasure Island," by Robert Louis Stevenson; "Just So Stories," by Rudyard Kipling; "Heidi," by Johana Spyri; "Arabian Nights"; "The Adventures of Odysseus," by Padriac Colum; "The Oregon Trail," by Francis Parkman; "Hans Brinker," by Mary Mapes Dodge; "Swiss Family Robinson," by Johann David Wyss; "Merry Adevntures of Robin Hood," by Howard Pyle; "Captains Courageous," by Rudyard Kipling; "Boys' King Arthur," by Sir T. Mallory; "Ivanhoe," by Sir Walter Scott.

Aesop's Fables; "Water Babies," by Charles Kingsley; "The child's Garden of Verse," by Robert Louis Stevenson; "Master Skylark," by John Bennett; "Little Men," by Louisa M. Alcott; "The Little Lame Prince," by Dinal Craig Mulock; "Gulliver's Travels," by Jonathan Swift; "Boys' Life of Abraham Lincoln," by Helen Nicolay; "The Story of a Bad Boy," by Thomas Bailey Aldrich; "Huckleberry Finn," by Mark Twain; "The Prince and the Pauper," by Mark Twain; Grimm's "Fairy Tales"; "Story of Mr. Doolittle," by Hugh Lofting; "Wonderful Adventures of Nils," by Selma Lagerlog; "Joan of Arc," by L. M. Boutet de Mouvel; "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," by Kate Douglas Wiggin; "The Man Without a Country," by Edward Everett Hale; "Men of Iron," by Howard Pyle; "Understood Betsy," by Dorothy Canfield; "A Dog of Flanders," by Ouida.

BEREAVED FATHER TOOK HEROIC ROLE

Gave Blood Transfusion to Foreigner Day After Baby Died.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 28.— (Canadian Press.)— A tale of compassion and genuine brotherhood has been disclosed by hospital authorities here, who for several days have been fighting to save the life of George Schlontz, who recently was injured in a St. Boniface packing plant. Schlontz accidentally fell on a hook used to hoist hogs. His leg was nearly severed, necessitating amputation. The doctors decided that blood transfusion was necessary to save the man's life. Volunteers were called.

Among those who stepped forward were three students of the University of Manitoba, an hospital interne and several of the injured man's work mates. S. A. Finlay, one of the plant employes was ultimately selected.

Immediately after giving his blood, Findlay, who served with the Canadian forces during the war, was summoned to the Children's hospital here, where his three-year-old daughter was dying of pneumonia.

On the following day, when the hospital authorities called for Findlay, they learned the baby was dead. The father, however, despite his bereavement, at once answered the call in an effort to save the life of his friend.

Schlontz now has a fair chance of recovery.

Easy Lessons in AUCTION BRIDGE

New Series by WYNNE FERGUSON

Author of "Ferguson on Auction Bridge"

Copyright 1925 by Hoyle, Jr.

ARTICLE No. 13

In a preceding article it was suggested that a good way to improve one's game was to put the expert "under the lens" at every opportunity and carefully examine and analyze his methods of bidding and play. The following hand is a fine example of how the expert handled a difficult but not unusual situation. It was rubber game and YZ were no score and AB were 20. Z dealt and bid one no-trump, A doubled and Y, the expert, held the following hand:

Hearts—10, 9, 6, 2
Clubs—8, 6, 3
Diamonds—K, 7
Spades—10, 8, 4, 3

It was a hand with which practically every player, expert or otherwise, would have passed with the thought, "Well, here goes game and rubber," but not so with Y. He had courage and imagination. He reasoned that by bidding two no-trump, he could block B from bidding two of a suit that he would probably make and thus score game and rubber. Unless B had an unusually good hand, he would probably not be able to bid three of a suit or double the two no-trump bid. If he did bid three of a suit, it would be just one trick harder to get and, therefore, give YZ just that much better chance to save game. If B passed, Z also would undoubtedly pass and A would be bluffed from further bidding. It was a bold bid and well thought out. B happened to have a good hand, however, so bid three hearts and all passed. The hands of all four players are as follows:

	Hearts—10, 9, 6, 2 Clubs—8, 6, 3 Diamonds—K, 7 Spades—10, 8, 4, 3
Hearts—K, 7, 4 Clubs—Q, J, 7 Diamonds—A, 8, 2 Spades—K, J, 9, 2	Y	Hearts—Q, J, 8, 3 Clubs—A, K, 10, 9 Diamonds—9, 6, 4 Spades—6, 5
	A B Z
	Hearts—A, 5 Clubs—5, 4, 2 Diamonds—Q, J, 10, 5, 3 Spades—A, Q, 7

In the play of the hand, Z opened the queen of diamonds and he and his partner made five tricks, two hearts, two diamonds and one spade trick. On the next hand, YZ made game and rubber so Y's courage and daring received a proper reward.

The expert is continually striving to improve his game. One of the best ways to accomplish this result is by eliminating chance whenever possible. In the old days if your partner bid one no-trump and you had good support, you let him play no-trump even though you had a good suit bid. Under the modern system of bidding, distribution means just as much to the expert as high cards. If his partner bids no-trump, he now considers his hand not only for high cards but also for distribution. If his hand contains a singleton or a void suit, experience has shown that a suit bid produces much better results than the no-trump. For example, take the following hand:

	Hearts—6, 5 Clubs—A, Q, 10, 9, 7, 5 Diamonds—7 Spades—A, J, 9, 5
Hearts—J, 9, 2 Clubs—6, 2 Diamonds—Q, J, 10, 6, 4 Spades—K, 7, 3	Y	Hearts—K, Q, 10, 7 Clubs—K, 8, 3 Diamonds—K, 9, 5, 3 Spades—6, 2
	A B Z
	Hearts—A, 8, 4, 3 Clubs—J, 4 Diamonds—A, 8, 2 Spades—Q, 10, 8, 4

No score, rubber game. Z dealt, bid one no-trump and A passed. Under the old system Y would have passed and let Z play the hand at no-trump. A would have opened his queen of diamonds and Z would have made but two no-trump. Y, however, was an expert, one of the modern type who is always trying to improve his game. He had noted that with a hand distributed 6-4-2-1, a suit bid always produced better results. He, therefore, bid two clubs and made five odd, losing only one club and one heart trick. It is a fine example of modern bidding and of a sound take out of partner's no-trump bid with a minor suit.

CONSIDERATION OF HUMAN NEED MOST ESSENTIAL IN INSURANCE BUSINESS, MR. BOULTON STATES

Speaker at Branch Underwriters' Banquet Scores Record-Breaking Tendency.

POLICY TO SUIT NEEDS.

Salesman Should Think Himself Into Position Occupied By His Prospect.

Declaring that the great object in selling life insurance was to appreciate human values and supply human needs, William Boulton, speaking before members of the local branch of the Underwriters' Association, at the Empress, last night, scored heavily against the modern trend of record-breaking sales. "I hope the day will soon come," he declared, "that we shall look upon those high-pressure methods as a professional scandal. Our calling is too big that we should descend to those methods of doing business."

Following a banquet the eighteen members present adjourned to a committee room. Isaac P. McNabb, president of the branch, acted as chairman. After the singing of "O Canada," a roll call of members was taken, the men rising and giving their names with the companies represented. Two members were then appointed for the Central Association. Each branch is entitled to one such member of every fifty on the roll and as the Peterborough department has increased to sixty members the extra appointment was necessary. The president, Mr. McNabb, and W. W. Richman were nominated. Mr. Boulton was then called upon for his address.

How to Break Record.

"Every man here has wondered why he can't go out and break records by writing up over a hundred applications in a day," he said. "Your methods are wrong, that's all. You don't prepare your field. In order to get a record breaking day you must have a number of speakers and you must put on an advertising campaign which will sweep the country. You must also make a list of all your present policy holders, and you must rent the biggest barn or house in the city in which to house all the goods and chattels, farm stock and implements which you are going to receive in trade. In addition to all this, you must not send in to headquarters any applications for about a month, you must thoroughly canvass all the crippled, aged and tubercular and finally importune your head office to send you the best high pressure salesman on the staff. With a programme like that, it is easy as falling off a log to get a record breaking day's applications."

And now, he went on, what would be the result of all this. The salesman would get his picture in the local paper and even receive considerable mention in the Association periodical. Mr. Boulton hoped that this practice would be stopped although, he declared, that many salesmen were not availing themselves of all expedients.

Index of Salesmanship.

"We belong to a privileged class of men," he stated. "It is not given to every man to serve humanity as we do. The meeting of human needs is the index of good salesmanship and a good salesman will have the requirements of his customer in view irrespective of the volume of business produced."

The speaker at this point quoted a number of examples, the most of them pertinent to this district, for the purpose of showing how the life insurance salesman should co-operate with his customers and give him the policy which will be of the greatest value. It was necessary to study the individual needs which he declared might be classified as primary and secondary. The primary dealt with essentials, while the secondary dealt with superfluities or acquired needs. The up-to-date salesman with a nose for business has a nose also for human needs, he said, and was able to place himself in the position occupied by the prospect and judge whether to submit a policy for primary needs, from day to day essentials, responsibilities, obligations to business or incomplete contracts such as mortgages. There were four recognized types: Personal insurance for final expenses; family needs, need for old age, and business necessities.

"This business of wearing out shoe leather is all right," the speaker concluded, "but the salesman should also make provisions for a mental equipment. He should read books so that he can think himself into the prospect's picture. The man who can discuss the individual need of each prospect lays a mental track along which the salesman and prospect travel in harmony. We must meet human needs, for a policy will never stay sold unless they are considered."

After observing a momentary silence in honor of the Queen Mother Alexandra, the meeting was brought to a close by singing God Save The King.

SAVANT DECLARES FORECASTS FAKED

People Fail to Place Confidence in Predictions—Few Correct.

SASKATOON, Sask., Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press). — "We have no means whatever of making long-range forecasts, and those who profess such supernatural powers and publish their results are fakes of the worst sort, and their forecasts should be prohibited by law, Dr. E. L. Harrington, professor of physics at the University of Saskatchewan, declared in an address here.

"If it were known that a certain group of well-trained scientists had the power to see far in advance the approaching variations in weather and that their forecasts proved true, people would be quite willing to place great confidence in them," Dr. Harrington said. Only a small percentage of the weather predictions, he claimed, were ever correct.

"Fortunately we have on this continent a genuine group of scientists, whose observations make possible the construction of weather maps which fairly accurately set out the nature of the weather which may be expected in any section of the country. These are vastly more reliable than any of the conjectural forecasts."

There are five classes of weather harbingers, according to Dr. Harrington. The first referred to atmospheric conditions. The others, however, which related to the influence of astronomical bodies, that of past weather upon future conditions, and to the peculiarities of animals and plants as indicating the kind of weather to be expected, were without any scientific basis whatever, he asserted.

The population of London is equivalent to that of the whole of Australia.

JANETVILLE LEAGUE VISITED PONTYPOOL

Young People of Two Societies Spent Enjoyable Evening Together.

PONTYPOOL, Nov. 28—A very pleasant evening was held in the basement of the church, Pontypool, on Wednesday, November 25, when the Young People's League of Janetville came out to entertain the League here. They arrived in cars, some 30 or 40 of them, about half past seven and were much disappointed to find all locked up and no fire ,owing to some misunderstanding of the party who had the responsibility. However, there was a special effort made when the keys were secured to hurry the fire and soon the Leaguers opened the meeting with more enthusiasm for having had to wait. The president, Miss Gladys Grey, took the chair, and announced the hymn "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," after which Rev. H. Wilkinson led in prayer. Then there were song sheets distributed and they indulged in community singing with great earnestness. Contests were then introduced and other games were indulged in. When finally all were coupled up to have refreshments which the Pontypool ladies had provided. After lunch Rev. Patterson tendered a vote of thanks to the Pontypool League for their generous hospitality which was responded to by a hearty clap of the hands. All joined in singing Auld Lang Syne. Mr. Wilkinson wishing them to come back in the near future notwithstanding that they had had a cool reception this time, promised a better one in the future.

LODGE ENTERTAINED.

Brethren of L.O.L. 41 Were Guests of Bethel Lodge For Social.

EAST EMILY, Nov. 28.—The Orange Lodge, No. 294, of East Emily held a social evening in the lodge room on Wednesday evening, Nov. 25, and entertained the members of lodge No. 41 also.

Rev. Mr. Rowland acted as chairman and opened the programme with a few words of welcome and thankfulness to see so many people present.

The numbers on the programme were as follows:

Solo—Miss Eleanor Sherin.

Instrumental — Messrs. Eugene Switzer, Elwood Harrison and Harold Harrison.

Solo—Rev. Mr. Rowland.

Community singing—Directed by Miss Pearl Reid.

Instrumental — E. Switzer and Harrison brothers.

Mr. Walter Magee gave a very interesting but short talk on how the Orange Lodge work and church work are alike.

The next item was a contest in which nineteen people from the audience were called to the platform to pin the tail on the donkey, which caused much fun.

Then came the most welcome part of the programme. This was the refreshments, which every person enjoyed very much. A vote of thanks was moved by Mr. Walter Magee on behalf of 41 lodge and seconded by Mr. Pierce Lowes, for the very pleasant way in which the Bethel members entertained their brethren.

WEDDING BELLS.

DUNLAY—MCMILLEN.

HASTINGS, Nov. 28.—A wedding of local interest took place on Wednesday morning at the Church of Our Lady, Mount Carmel, when Loretta Isabelle, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McMillen of the Dutch Line, Percy, became the bride of Mr. Daniel Joseph Dunlay, also of Percy township. The bride was attired in blonde satin faced canton with cut velvet trimmings, and carried a bouquet of white 'mums.

Miss Kathleen McMillen, sister of the bride, made a charming bridesmaid, and was gowned in cocoa georgette with cut velvet trimmings, and carried yellow 'mums. Little Miss Helen Burte of Peterboro made a lovely bride attendant.

Rev. Father G. A. Bretherton performed the ceremony, during which appropriate music was rendered by St. Mary's choir, of which the bride was organist for some time.

COLDS TAHT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action, it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchical asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or 'flu.

Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. As your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

CREOMULSION

BRIAND COMPLETING

Briand's Recent Career.

After the last elections the Left bloc, headed by M. Herriot and made up of Radical Socialists (his party) and Unified Socialists, plus two small groups, held a majority of about 30 votes in the Chamber They started out by refusing to approve any Premier named by President Millerand, who had led the opposition during the electoral campaign and forced him to quit the Elysee.

It has always been suspected that M. Briand, who was on the right edge of the Left bloc, engineered this to get revenge for M. Millerand's having broken up his Cannes plan for an English guarantee against Germany. But apparently seeing the enormous power the Left bloc would have with their candidate in the Elysee, M. Briand engineered a swift deal with M. Poincare, and by the vote of the Right of the Chamber and all of the Senate put M. Doumergue in the Presidency instead of Paul Painleve, the candidate of M. Herriot.

M. Herriot became Premier and little by little gave way to the Socialists, whose 100 votes he always needed. Some right side members of the Left, including M. Briand, became weary of this programme, and when last Spring M. Herriot was obliged to admit being responsible for rigging the weekly statement of the Bank of France to hide inflation, against which he was always declaiming, enough members of the moderate Left quit him to cause his fall.

The Advent of Caillaux.

M. Painleve succeeded M. Herriot and brought M. Caillaux as Finance Minister. M. Caillaux lost out because of poltical enmities he incurred and incidentally because of his failure at Washington, but also because he opposed the Socialists' capital levy plan. Then M. Painleve took the Finance Minstry, and the Socialists immediately started to work again for a capital levy and got M. Painleve to accept what was so near it that he fell, causing the present crisis.

Last Sunday when M. Briand was asked to form a government he at once faced the decision of the Left bloc parties to stick together, which meant that he could not have a majority with them against him. He, therefore, invited the members of all the Left parties, including the Socialists, to come in with him. When the Socialists demanded seven ministries, including the Premiership, Finance, War and Interior, M. Briand decided to quit trying that tack.

He advised President Doumergue to send for his friend Senator Paul Doumer, the purpose of M. Briand being to show that it was impossible to have a government dominated by the Socialists for the reason that the Senate would never vote measures such a Cabinet would propose. M. Doumer refused when he had investigated the situation for 24 hours, and then M. Doumergue, naturally at M. Briand's advice, sent for M. Herriott Wednesday.

The purpose of this move was either to have M. Herriot form a Socialist-controlled government which could be beaten in the Senate or else see himself beforehand that the bloc arrangement would not work any longer.

M. Herriot bit and invited his Socialist friends, who had long ago cast aside their principle of non-participation, either to take places in his Cabinet or else promise him their support. The Socialist then imposed the condition that if they came into the Cabinet they must have the controlling position or else if they promised to support M. Herriot he must accept their financial plans. M. Herriot quickly saw he was caught between two eddies and when the Socialists turned a deaf ear to his pleas he went to the Elysee and gave up the effort.

Leads Revolt Against Socialists.

Then he called a meeting of all the Left bloc parties except the Socialists and had a motion passed approving his refusal to accept the Socialists' conditions . Meanwhile, the Socialists, whom M. Briand will probably place in a hopeless minority, have learned that they could not run the Chamber with one-sixth of its votes.

After his quick trip to the Elysee M. Briand announced that he was going to bed and would begin work Friday morning.

A most unfortunate angle of the situation is M. Briand's bad health. Since a month ago, when he had a hemmorhage in the course of a violent Cabinet argument with M. Caillaux, he has been constantly under a doctor's care. Cigarettes, wine and meat are forbidden to him and it is believed he is suffering from hardening of the arteries. One of the conditions he made at the Elysee Thursday was that he pass two days weekly in the country and that he be not called upon to attend any night sessions of Parliament. His friends say that if he is unable to bear the strain of heated Chamber debates he will probably give up the Premiership after getting his Cabinet going and content himself with the work of the Foreign Office.

Of course the Briand Cabinet will encounter the financial issue in all its gravity, for whatever may be done the Treasury faces the need of money, and further inflation of 5,000,000,000 or 6,000,000,000 francs month seems unavoidable. Those who knew him think that instead of going into complicated and revoltuionary financial plans, M. Briand will advocate simply an increase of existing taxes by the same proportion as M. Poincare did when by adding 20 per cent. he increased the State's revenue 7,000,000,000 francs.

SOCIAL EVENING AT HASTINGS CHURCH

Norwood Presbyterian Y. P. S. and St. Paul's Tuxis Boys Were Guests.

HASTINGS, Nov. 28.—On Tuesday evening, November 24th, a social evening was held in the school room of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church in connection with the Young People's Society. Guests were present form Norwood and the Tuxis Boys from St. Paul's church, Peterboro.

The programme was given by the young people of Norwood. After the opening hymn prayer was said by Rev. Thomson and Miss Ruth Wildmore read the scripture reading. The topic, on "Frederick the Great" was given by Miss Jean Tedford. Mrs. John Rogers gave a vocal solo. A piano duet was rendered by Misses Edith and Jean Tedford.

Mr. Alex Wilson, president of the society, welcomed the visitors. Mr. Tom Dutton, Mentor of the Tuxis Boys, gave a short address on the Tuxis Work and Boys' Parliament, and Mr. Adam Sands of Peterboro made a few remarks regarding the latter subject.

Lunch was served in cafeteria style after which the Tuxis Boys, led by Mr. Dutton, demonstrated games.

WILL SPEND SIX YEARS IN JAIL

Saskatoon Thief's 21 Year Sentences Run Concurrently.

OTHER PENALTIES.

REGINA, Sask., Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press).—Following his confession to thirteen charges of shopbreaking and theft in District Court Monday, Nick Lylow, of Saskatoon, was sentenced to a total of 21 years in Prince Albert Jail with hard labor when he made his second appearance before Judge Hannon for sentence Friday.

Judge Hannon afterwards ordered that two terms of three years each were to run concurrently, the balance of 11 sentences varying from one to two years, to run concurrently, making a total of six years actually to be served.

Mick Boychuk, Broadview, Sask., charged with complicity in five of the robberies, pleaded guilty to four of them and not guilty to one of theft of an auto at Whitewood. On the four he was sentenced to a total of eight years, five to run concurrently, leaving three to be served in Prince Albert Penitentiary.

18 Years in Prison.

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 28. — (Canadian Press).—Wasyl Podora, farmer from the district of Arborg, Man., was Friday sentenced to 18 years in Stony Mountain Penitentiary for manslaughter. Podora was tried for the murder of Daniel Zatore at Arborg on March 7 last. The jury reduced the charge to manslaughter.

UNITED COUNTIES CHILDREN'S AID MET

Reports Were Received at Annual Meeting of Society.

COBOURG, Nov. 28.—The annual meeting of the Children's Aid Society of Northumberland and Durham was held in the Library Building, Port Hope, on Tuesday afternoon, and was a most interesting one. The reports detailed the many sided nature of the work as it affects neglected and dependent children and the homes in which they are found.

The very serious accident which befell Rev. Dr. Daley, Superintendent and Secretary, caused a small reduction in the contributions collected from private citizens and lessened the cash balance usually on hand at this season of the year, to meet the heavier expenses of the winter, when the income is usually smaller.

It is exceedingly gratifying to the members that Dr. Daley has so far recovered as to take full charge of the work in which he is an especial success.

The reports showed total receipts to be over $7,000, and the balance at the close of the year $200.

Very gratifying reports came from children placed in foster homes. An increasing number of them have been adopted under the Adoption Act, which gives them all the rights and privileges of children born into the family. The work under the Unmarried Parents' Act is claiming considerable attention with beneficial results. Warden McCamus represented the Counties Council and gave a short address. Citizens from Bowmanville, Brighton, Cobourg and Port Hope were present.

RHEUMATIC PEOPLE NOW FIND RELIEF

By Driving the Poisonous Acid From the System.

Rheumatism attacks people when the blood is thin and watery or charged up with impurities, thus setting up inflammation of the muscles and joints. Cold, wet weather or sharp winds may start the pains, but the cause is rooted in the blood, and to get relief it must be treated through the blood. As a blood builder and nerve tonic Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are unsurpassed, and for that reason do not fail to give relief to rheumatic sufferers when given a fair trial. Among the rheumatic sufferers who have proved the great value of this medicine is Mr. N. M. Foley, Windsor, N.S. who says:—"My trouble started with a bad cold, the result of working in a heavy rain storm. From that it developed into rheumatism which badly crippled me and kept me confined to bed for upwards of six months. The doctor who treated me did not help me, and every friend who called to see me had something different to advise. Some of these remedies I tried, but with no better results. My legs were stiff from the hips down, and every move I made caused intense pain, and constantly I was growing weaker. Then a friend from Falmouth, who came to see me, asked if I had tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had taken so much medicine without benefit that I was skeptical and said so. My friend, however, had so much faith in the pills that he got me a supply and to please him I began taking them. I had not been taking them long when I began to feel a change for the better, and I gladly got a further supply. Soon I was able to get out of bed and walk around on crutches. Still taking the pills I used in all seventeen boxes, by which time I was a well man and at work every day. Now I always keep a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in the house and if I feel an ache or pain I take them, and always with good results. I believe I would still be a bed-ridden cripple but for these pills, and I shall always praise and recommend them."

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

PRESENTATIONS TO MR. AND MRS. CHANT

LAKEFIELD, November 28. — On Monday evening last at the regular meeting of Lakefield Lodge, No. 358, I.O.O.F., Mr. Charles H. Hunter, N.G., read the following address, and Mr. D. H. Charlton presented Mr. J. H. Chant with a handsome club bag as a token of esteem from the members of the lodge. Mr. Chant was a valuable member who, no matter what other attractions there were never forgot his obligations to his member's pledge.

Though taken by surprise and very much touched, Mr. Chant made a very graceful reply, assuring his fellow members of his continued interest in the welfare of the Lodge and its individual members.

Lakefield, November 23, 1925.

Past Grand Brother Chant:

Dear Brother: It is with great regret that we learn of your departure from our village and from Lakefield Lodge No. 358 I.O.O.F. You came among us when our lodge was in its infancy, and as our lodge continued to grow and prosper you have grown with it and into it and have always done your utmost to further the work of our lodge in this community. You have filled many offices in our lodge from the lowest to the highest, and no matter what office or duty you were called upon to assume it was always done in the same willing and self-sacrificing spirit. And as the years have rolled along and there have been so many other attractions to divert attention from the work of our order you have stood by us, and when our members were few you have always been "on the job" (if we may put it that way) and willing to do your part in whatever came before us.

As you leave us to take up residence in your home community we sincerely hope that you may be spared to take as large a part in the work of Oddfellowship in this community as you have done in Lakefield, for it is only by working as you have worked and by showing the spirit which you have shown that we may rightly wear the Three Links of Friendship, Love and Truth, which characterizes a true Oddfellow. We ask you to accept this gift as a slight token of appreciation of the valuable services rendered to our lodge during your stay in Lakefield.

Signed on behalf of the officers and Brothers of Lakefield Lodge, No. 358 I.O.O.F.

CHAS. H. HUNTER, N.G.
WM. J. FAIRBAIRN, V.G.
F. J. BURGESS, Rec.-Sec.

Before Mr. and Mrs. Chant left on the 4.40 train on Thursday, a delegation representing the business men of the village presented Mr. Chant with a beautiful silver tea service and tray as a mark of esteem and as a reminder of the friends made during his 21 years residence in the village. The gift was accompanied by the following address:

Lakefield, November 26, 1925.

Dear Mr. Chant: We, the business men of Lakefield, are extremely sorry to hear of your departure from our village. The past score of years in which you have been with us there has existed between us the most pleasant social and business relationships, and it is with regret that we are called upon to say good-bye.

We all join in wishing for you and Mrs. Chant, Health, Happiness and Prosperity for the years that are to come. We ask you to accept this gift as a slight token of the esteem in which you are held by the business men of Lakefield.

Signed on behalf of the business men.

W. J. CHARLTON,
P. SPENCE.
S. J. CHARLTON.
WM. STABLER.

A number of friends gathered at the station to take leave of those who for more than a score of years had been identified with the station and railway in Lakefield.

Mr. Chant was a prominent member of Lodge No .358 I.O.O.F. and of No. 313 Clementi Lodge A.F. & A. M.; he was treasurer for more than 12 years of the Presbyterian church ,and also was a member of the Lakefield curling club.

Mrs. Chant was also one of the chief executive officers of the W.M.S. of the Presbyterian Church and kindred organizations.

Mr. and Mrs. Chant will take up residence in Mr. Chant's home tow of Unionville, Ont.

On Wednesday morning at 6.30 th siren fire alarm brought out the fir brigade, who quickly responded t the call ,which was a chimney fire at Mr Bert Everetts house on Regent street. Prompt measures quenched the blaze with a minimum of damage

Rev. A. W. Mackenzie received the news of the death of his mother, Mrs. G. C. Mackenzie, in Montreal. Mrs. Mackenzie has been an invalid for several years and her death was not altogether unexpected. The sympathy of the community is with Mr. Mackenzie and his family in their bereavement.

SURPRISE PARTY TO NORWOOD MAN

Friends of Roy English Gathered in Honor of His Birthday.

NORWOOD, Nov. 28.—Mr. Roy English was tendered a surprise party on Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Copen. About twenty of Mr. English's young friends joined in celebrating his birthday. The evening was spent in games, cards, music and dancing. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. Copen.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Young People's Guild were entertained on Tuesday evening by the Young People's Guild of Hastings Church. The Tuxis Boys of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Peterboro, were also present. The programme was given by the Norwood young folks.

On Monday evening a fowl supper was served in the basement of the United Church by the ladies of the congregation. Over four hundred sat down to the sumptuous repast provided by them. Such a generous amount of provisions was supplied that a tea was held on Tuesday evening. The total proceeds amounted to about $240.00. On Monday evening while the guests were being served, Mrs. Thomas Cruikshank of Peterboro gave much pleasure to her audience in an informal group of organ numbers. Of particular interest were three numbers by the eminent blind organist, Alfred Hollins of London, England, who is at present a centre of interest to organists and lovers of organ music on his tour of Canada and the United States. After the supper the following programme was rendered: Hymn, "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name"; prayer, Rev. T. M. Wesley; anthem, "I Will Praise Thy Holy Name," the choir; chairman's address, Rev. R. F. Stillman; solo, Miss Una Duffield; recitation, Miss Rhea Preston; duett, Misses Angeline and Florence Scott; recitation, Miss Stella Burgess; mixed quartette, Misses B. E. Pearce, Ona Finlay, Messrs. W. J. Stares and Gordon Wright; address, Rev. J. P. McLennan; male quartette, Gordon Wright, J. Alf. Finlay, K. G. Thomson and W. J. Stares; address, Rev. T. M. Wesley; male quartette, Messrs. Wright, Finlay, Thomson and Stares; God Save the King.

Chief Newhall Suggests Traffic Signals

Motorists Must Take Measures For Their Own Protection—Simple Signs Approved as Best.

Because of the greatly increased number of accidents resulting directly from the use of the automobile as a means of locomotion, Police Chief S. Newhall is of the opinion that certain preventative measures should be adopted by the motorists themselves and not leave the onus of protection with the civic authorities. That some recognized system of signals should be adopted is his firm conviction and he states that those pictured here would serve the purpose of preventing many collisions, although they "will not be of any use when a headlong person who thinks he is in a hurry rushes madly through the intersections without any regard for other drivers or pedestrians. They may be laboring under some delusion about a 'right of way' but there is never any right of way in case of a serious accident."

There has always been the signal for a left turn but it is amazing that a number of car drivers fail to give even that warning of their intentions. While a special sign for a right turn would not seem to be very essential, the Chief believes that it would be well to adopt one in order that the driver behind has a chance to know what to do; a person taking a right turn naturally slows down to do so and it is at this time that a motorist following closely should have some warning.

That there should be a widely accepted stop signal is generally granted and accessory manufacturers have attempted to solve the problem by a flash warning. Every motor car however is not equipped with one and for this reason the use of the warning as shown would be of advantage.

Drivers of cars which have been parked along the street should give some intimation of their intention when they desire to leave the parking area. The hand outstretched and pointing forward would take but little time and the resultant saving in fenders, lamps, and running boards would justify that expenditure.

BEST RESULTS IN VOLTMETER

Every Receiving Set Will Be Better if Batteries Checked Up.

BY J. CALCATERRA.

While the dry cell tubes are very popular and many sets are equipped with them so that they can be operated on dry cells, there are many other types of receivers using five-volt tubes, which are operated with a six-volt storage battery.

The hydrometer method of testing the condition of the "A" battery itself still remains the most popular testing method. The hydrometer, however, can only test the condition of the battery. It gives no indication of the voltage at which the tubes are operated or the current that is being made to flow through the filament.

For best operation, not only from the standpoint of efficient operation, but also from the standpoint of economy, it is important that you know at what voltage the filaments are being operated and to have some visible indicating means that will enable you to adjust the voltage applied to the filaments of the tubes.

For use with UV-199, C-299 or other tubes which are designed to be operated at three volts, a voltmeter having a scale reading up to five volts is the best one to use. These meters are made in small sizes and can be mounted on the panel and connected to give a voltage reading across the filament terminal of the tube.

Link Tubes in Parallel.

In multitube sets the filaments of the tubes can be connected in parallel and controlled by a single rheostat with the voltmeter connected across the terminals, the other filaments merely being connected in parallel with the first filament, or across terminals A and B. This arrangement is very satisfactory where only one rheostat is used to control all the tubes, but where two or more rheostats are used and it is desired to test each control unit separately, some switching arrangement must be provided.

The three-reading voltmeter has been designed to fill this need. In this type of instrument a three-point switch of small design has been incorporated as part of the instrument. The positive terminal of the voltmeter is connected with the positive "A" battery lead. The number 1 terminal of the meter is connected with the negative filament terminal of the first tube, the number 2 terminal is connected with the negative filament terminal of the second tube and the number 3 terminal of the meter is connected with the negative filament terminal of the third tube. An individual reading of the filament voltage across the filament of each tube can then be taken by moving the pointer of the switch from point to point and the voltage in each tube can then be adjusted by means of its associated filament rheostat.

Use One Rheostat.

This three-reading voltmeter can be used with a five-tube set by connecting the tubes so that the two radio frequency tubes are controlled from one rheostat and with the number 1 terminal of the meter; the detector tube can be controlled separately by a rheostat and connected with the number 2 position of the meter and the two audio frequency tubes can be controlled by another rheostat and connected with the third position of the meter.

The use of the meter will make it possible to adjust the filaments to their best operating points, will lengthen the life of the tubes and will give better results in tuning by making it possible to log the set more effectively.

ABOUT YOUR CAR.

By W. Z.

COLD-WEATHER STARTING OF CAR.

Did you ever notice, when starting your car in cold weather, your engine has a dislike to respond very quickly? Principally, this is caused by insufficient heat to vaporize the gasoline. When the engine becomes warmed up, "missing," and jerking generally ceases. You have noticed when the weather is warm your engine starts much easier; this is due to the gasoline being more readily vaporized and easily ignited. But in cold weather it is different. Your battery needs to be fully charged to give a good hot spark; and a choker or primer has to be used to enrich the mixture to start with.

Many methods are employed at the present time to inject a rich mixture into the cylinders to start the engine on a cold day. The usual method is that of closing the main air intake, causing raw gasoline to be drawn into cylinder. This is termed "choking" he air supply. After the engine has started, run until warm enough too vaporize the gasoline, gradually opening choke or air valve until usual amount of air is being taken in.

Priming an engine in cold-weather starting has a disadvantage, in that raw gasoline on a cool cylinder is not thoroughly used up for combustion. Lack of oxygen, due to choking of air intake valve, causes the unused gasoline to form into carbon, coating, as a result, the head of piston, combustion chamber and spark plug.

You therefore realize the importance of having air supplied as quickly as possible,—heating gasoline so that vapor and air are used in preference to the raw mixture which carbonizes the head of your engine.

Your engine will not warm up in a minute. It takes a little time. Cold solidifies lubricant in the transmission, rear axle, and so on, requiring great energy on the self-starting motor to revolve the engine. If the clutch is "in" when starting, with gears in neutral, the transmission counter-shaft gears are directly in this solid, cold lubricant when cranking.

When your car has been standing over night in a cold garage, or standing for a considerable time at the curb, to be thoroughly chilled, you will have greater ease in starting by "throwing out the clutch." This method prevents the transmission gears plowing through the cold grease.

Remember, do not use the "choker" unnecessarily because raw gasoline is permitted to be drawn into the engine, a portion of which will pass down into the crank case, thereby rendering the lubricating oil to become thinned.

Never run your engine in a closed garage. You have repeatedly read of deaths from this dangerous habit, and more precaution should be taken at this season of the year when a richer mixture is used, causing denser carbon monoxide gas poison than would be given off with a leaner gas mixture in warmer weather.

BROADCAST RECIPES.

Christmas Dishes Will Be Detailed From W. H. T.

During the next few weeks all the home service talks broadcast by Betty Crocker from WHT will deal with Christmas preparations, which should be started at least three weeks in advance, according to this cooking expert. Her talk, to be broadcast at 10:45 o'clock in the morning of November 30, will consist of recipes for Christmas cakes and cookies, including the methods in which they should be decorated, packed and served.

RADIO A LUXURY.

Japan Levies 100 Per Cent. Tax on Importations of Equipment.

TOKYO, Japan, Nov. 28.—That foreign-made radio apparatus is a luxury in Japan is the opinion of the financial authorities, who are reported to be planning the application of a luxury tax of 100 per cent. ad valorem on all imported radio goods.

At the time the luxury law went into effect in July last year radio in Japan was in an infant stage of development, and no consideration was given to the application of the law to radio instruments imported here from foreign countries.

With broadcasting started early this year, radio has become popular all over the country, and receivers alone are imported to the amount of 100,000 yen a month. Duties averaging from 20 to 30 per cent. have been charged.

Mr. Tomida, chief of the financial bureau of the finance department, said that "radio in Japan is not yet practical for commercial purposes, and is still a luxury. We intend to limit the importation of foreign radio goods."

ART PROGRAMS.

K. S. D. Will Inaugurate Feature For Women Next Month.

Station KSD, St. Louis, will inaugurate next month a new series of women's programs, presented under the auspices of the Wednesday club of St. Louis, from 4 to 5 o'clock every Thursday afternoon. The programs will include dramatics, history, science, music, travel, hygiene and many others, and each will be under the direction of the chairman of the section which is presenting it.

The first program, to go on the air December 3 at 4 o'clock, will have as its subject "The Newest Things in Dramatics," which will be conducted by Mrs. Everett W. Pattison, chairman of the dramatic section.

No telling what you could hear every day with the energy you spend talking about nothing.

PERFORMANCE

Only Chrysler Four Combines These Performance Abilities

The Chrysler Four's extraordinary performance—itself the direct and positive evidence of the highest quality in design, materials and craftsmanship—literally leaves no alternative in its field.

In speed, the Chrysler Four gives you a new standard—58 miles an hour, achieved quickly and easily, not for a momentary spurt, but for eager mile after mile, as long as you like.

When you would dash away ahead of the crowd in traffic, the Chrysler Four whisks you from 5 to 25 miles in 8 seconds—with sure-footed reliability and purring smoothness.

Yet, with all the super-power necessary for such speed and such swift pick-up, you can get 30 miles to the gallon.

Any one of these exceptional abilities would be sufficient evidence of value for any manufacturer except Chrysler: the three of them clinch the assurance of Chrysler Four's transcendent quality and worth.

We are eager to afford you the opportunity of proving the superiority of this favored Four. Then, we believe, you will inevitably share in the enthusiasm of its tens of thousands of owners.

DODGE BROTHERS SPECIAL SEDAN

If Dodge Brothers had deliberately built the Special Sedan for women, they could not more perfectly have met feminine requirements.

That women recognize this fact is plentifully evidenced on every hand. The car's striking beauty, its ease of handling and world-famous dependability are features which every motorist values—but which women value the most.

Ball and roller bearings throughout are much larger than ordinary. As a result, thousands of 10-year-old Dodge Brothers Motor Cars are still in service every day.

UNIQUE CANADIAN-ENGLISH INSTITUTION ON LAKE SHORE AT LAKEFIELD IS NOTED FOR EXCELLENCY OF SPIRIT AND TEACHING

Learning at This Prep School is a Pleasant Thing and the Seventy-three Boys Have Wonderful Time in Class and on Playing Field.

HEAD MASTER IS ONE OF THE BOYS

Rev. A. W. Mackenzie Retains Spirit of Youth and Respect of Scholars—"Cane is Fool Way of Keeping Discipline," He Says.

By J. R. H.

SEVENTY-THREE healthy, happy, lively, boys learn their lessons, play their games and imbibe the spirit of sportsmanship at Lakefield Preparatory School—the school that is noted for its training wherever Canadians make their homes. And not least of the attributes of the Grove School—as it is more familiarly known in this district—is the last-named spirit of sportsmanship in which every activity is carried out. Very like an English grammar school, where cricket is cricket and everyone plays the game according to the rules, The Grove is yet thoroughly Canadian in its training and objects. Rev. A. W. Mackenzie, M.A., the Head Master, sums up the high aim of his endeavours in the words of the school motto: "A sound mind in a healthy body."

One of the outstanding virtues of the school system is the absence of cramming subjects into the packed budget which some educational establishments put before the public as a curriculum. In these organizations, with their heavy over-loads, the whole machinery whizzes, bangs, grumbles, and hums like a factory; but very little education results. A stream of bright, keen, lively, little boys arrive, half after half, ready to work, full of interest, ready to listen breathlessly to anything that strikes their fancy, ready to ask questions—excellent material. But at the other end of the machine there depart a slow river of cheerful and conventional boys, well-dressed, well-mannered, thoroughly nice, reasonable, sensible, and good-humoured creatures, but knowing next to nothing, without intellectual interests, and indeed, honestly despising them. There are, of course, always a few well-educated boys among them, but these were boys of outstanding ability, with a real aptitude for classics and mathematics and all the other "ics" that are crowded into the curriculum, so that they slipped through between the cogs and were not crushed.

In Lakefield Preparatory School, the ego of every boy maintains its individuality from the first day of the first half until the end of the last term, only it is broadened instructively, and expanded sympathetically by careful indoctrination and nurture. No machine method could be half so effective as the personal touch of the capable Head Master and his proficient staff. Nothing could more encourage the development of a vigorous mentality in a wholesome body than the environment of the school, woods, lake, and hills. And in the home life of the institution—for the paradox of home life in an institution does not apply to the Grove School—there is a happy family of boys respecting and loving

THE school building itself is well known to travellers on the Lakefield road, north of the village. Since it was established in 1879, it has grown by additions and alterations until today it includes ten dormitories, an infirmary, dining room, prep. room, and large reading room, besides quarters for the staff and the usual class rooms. That the equipment is thoroughly up-to-date is evidenced by the ten bath rooms with running hot and cold water, the showers that refresh the rugby and hockey players after their games, and the well-equipped laundry and kitchen. There is also a Chapel, built by the Old Boys of the school as a memorial to the twenty-three Grove boys who fell in the great war.

The dormitories are airy and well-equipped, every boy having his private cupboard for his clothing and personal treasures. On the second floor, and situated in the midst of the dormitories, is the attractive suite of the matron; and on the third floor a master keeps a watchful eye on the sleeping quarters.

The infirmary, situated in the newly completed extension wing, is a large, well-lighted room with an outlook calculated to keep patients there until driven out. From the windows may be seen the lake, the playing fields, and the skating rink. It is the only un-occupied room in the building, for not a case of sickness is to be found among the seventy-three boys. Indeed, it is but seldom that one of the boys is indisposed, the healthy outdoor exercise and wholesome food and splendid care all working against sickness.

This infirmary will be furnished by the Ladies' Guild of the school, composed of mothers and sisters of the boys now enrolled, and mothers, sisters, and wives of old boys. Most of the members of the Guild reside in Toronto, but throughout the world, from the village of Lakefield, in an organization that reaches to India and Cuba, the ladies are working for the Grove School.

In the boys' reading room there is a real home-like atmosphere. The boys were, on the occasion of a call this week, sitting around the blazing open fire, reading or talking. A long table with benches gives space for the reading of magazines—all the best magazines are taken by the school—and books. The library available to the boys contains over a thousand volumes, and is being constantly added to. On the walls are many photographs of old teams that have made sporting history for The Grove, hockey, cricket, baseball, rugby. Many of the boys who were killed in France were among the stars of their teams, and carried the sporting spirit they learned at the school into the greater game of life and war.

A barber's shop is among the necessary conveniences of the school, and a printing shop is one of the educational branches. The boys produce their own magazine, The Spare Period, unassisted and uncensored by masters or prefects. The abandon with which the articles criticize and poke fun at the prefects is sufficient to show the originality of the contributions and the unhampered production and circulation of the magazine. In the November 14 issue, carrying in its caption: "Pour Passer le Temps; Rugby Term," the prefects are referred to in poetry as "stuck-up insects, beastly bores," and as having "nothing in their cranery." Associated with the prefects in the minds of the boys who write for The Spare Period are the rising bell, sheik hair-cuts, and over-much (they think) washing of necks and faces. The magazine is a very creditable production, and the exercise of writing for it proves a valuable adjunct to the teaching of English.

The school has another magazine, this one official. It is The Grove Chronicle (Rev. A. W. Mackenzie is editor-in-chief), containing month by month a current history of school life and development told in reports written by masters and boys. While, as is to be expected, the contributions run a great deal to sport, there is a wealth of inspirational and instructional matter between its covers. This magazine, which runs to twelve or more pages, with a wide circulation, is not printed on the small school press.

CARING for the boys necessitates a great deal of work and planning—work that is efficiently done at Grove School. The school uses, for instance, eight thousand gallons of water every day. A huge tank holding 16,000 gallons is pumped full every second day, through pipes laid from the lake. A deep well supplies drinking water of a quality and coolness unsurpassed anywhere. Vegetables are grown in the school grounds, and a private dairy is maintained. The entire building is comfortably heated by steam.

There are twenty acres of playing fields, including places for rugby, skating, baseball, cricket, tennis, and drilling, with a dense bush that lends itself admirably to scouting and Indian games. In the bush the boys have built huts, in and around which they play all the games dear to the outdoor loving youth. One has been turned into a restaurant, where of a Saturday afternoon may be obtained refreshments of varied nature.

The school tuck shop has the usual patronage of such institutions, and the lack of candy and cake in parcels from home (omitted by request of the school authorities), is made up out of spending money.

In the Cadet Corps the boys find a necessary training, and so efficient are they in the arts of manoeuvre and drilling that last year General Hill, who inspected the Corps, gave it special mention for all-round proficiency and exceptional quickness in carrying out orders. The boys are drilled by one of the masters, Captain B. Marling, who was a member of the 93rd Battalion.

Very young boys, leaving home for the first time, are given special care, and are mothered by Mrs. Fawcett, the matron, who is a trained nurse. The Head Master himself lives among the boys and has his meals with them. Boys are received at seven or eight years of age and are carried up to matriculation. Many then enter university or R. M. C., while a few continue in Ridley or Upper Canada College. Some formerly entered the Naval College.

Grove School is destined to have a distinguished alumni, but is too young yet for its graduates to have attained fame in any numbers. It does not advertise for pupils, and yet its application lists are away ahead of accommodation. It is the object of the Head Master to keep the number of boys strictly limited, so that personal attention may be given every one. The wisdom of this policy is seen in the results. The school's graduates are its best boosters. It is advertised by its successes.

Pupils now in the school come from Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton, Huntsville, Maryland, Ottawa, Cobourg, Woodstock, New York, Ohio, Boston, Guelph, Peterborough, Kingston, Picton, Lakefield, Sturgeon Falls, India, Nevada and Cuba. Herein lies one of the advantages of this unique school—the boys have contact with many widely scattered places in the world; they learn many different viewpoints, and the result cannot be other than a broadening of the mind and outlook.

The school is Anglican, because the Head Master is Anglican, but it is not controlled by any Senate or Church body. Religious education forms part of the curriculum, progressing from study of selections from the Old Testament in form 1 to an outline of Scripture History in form 4.

The hours of study are scientifically planned to give the boys the greatest amount of time for outdoor recreation. In summer the study periods are 9 to 12.30 and 2 to 3.30. In winter, when daylight fails earlier, the hours are changed to 9 to 12.30 and 4 to 5.45, so that the boys may be out-of-doors in the warmth and light of early afternoon. Evening prep is from 7.15 to 8.30. Smaller boys go to bed at 7.30, and lights are extinguished at 9.

After Chapel at 7.30, in the morning, there is a five-minute period of physical training in the flagged courtyard.

Despite the freedom the boys enjoy in their sports, strict supervision is kept over their activities to prevent accidents. None is allowed to go on or near the lake without permission and supervision, and parents are always consulted as to this privilege. Athletic activities are managed by the Grove Athletic Association, which also arranges the annual field day. The Grove Bank is an institution that teaches business methods and thrift. The boys deposit their money in the regular way and draw it by cheque.

Discipline is easy in this ideal school. The cane is seldom used—in fact "it is a fool way of keeping discipline" is the opinion of the Head Master. So highly do the boys respect him and his corps of helpers that Rev. Mr. Mackenzie rarely finds whipping warranted.

The principal himself teaches all yda long, and manages sometime to crush in his executive work in mysteriously obtained spare hours. His office is the library of a student—lined in with ceiling-high shelves of books. Personally, he has the manner and poise of a college don, with an added grace of bonhomie that attracts visitor and pupil alike, and accounts perhaps, in no small measure, for his remarkable success and for the outstanding results of his educational efforts. In the school motto, "Mens sana in corpore sano" is named as the object of the school training, and, whether he knows it or not, the Head Master's example is the greatest lesson before the boys. Benson, in one of his inimitable essays, prints youth in his look and manner, in his smile and laugh.

No review of the activities at Grove School would be complete without mention of the sport triumphs of the boys. A splendid rugby team is seeking a game with Peterborough Collegiate Institute after winning from U.C.C. and the U.T.S. thirds. The hockey team will enter in the O.H.A. junior schedule, and will give a good account of itself. The cross-country races—the series of three Seaforth handicaps—are annual events of importance in the school calendar. Boxing fills in as training between rugby and hockey, and is being taken advantage of by a number of the boys under capable instruction. Cricket, the old English game, is played with a universally good record of wins.

On the literary side there are debates throughout the winter terms, accompanied by programs put on by the boys. The orchestra is to the fore at these and at other social events that punctuate the story of everyday activity at points out honesty, vision, and gayety of spirits as the three essentials in an instructor of boys. Rev. Mr. Mackenzie is one man in whom it is easy to find all three qualities. His efforts are directed toward bringing out the highest and noblest in the youths placed under his care; and his gayety of spirit as it was in the days when the fathers of the present pupils hazed one another after lights out and cut their initials in the bark of trees that have in their growing almost obliterated the deeply-cut letters. It is no academical sweat shop where "education" is pounded into the boys, willy-nilly, irrespective of ability and adaptability. Schooling at The Grove is a pleasant thing. The staples of education—French, mathematics, history, geography, Latin, are efficiently taught. The literary ability of certain boys is developed by encouraging them to write for the school magazines. And if any boy's thoughts turn to farming, gardening, or music—there is an opportunity given him to develop his talents along the line he desires.

There is no intellectual cynicism among Grove School graduates. They have been led by the attractive presentation of subjects and the efficiency of everything connected with the school to find the best in life and to develop their minds along broad lines. And on this triumph in educational endeavour, Rev. Mr. Mackenzie and his proficient helpers are to be congratulated. Their effort is unique in Canada.

Why does Quick Quaker cook in 3 to 5 minutes?

Other small-flaked oats are whole grains, undeveloped and insipid. They are not prepared for quick cooking.

These other small-flaked oats cannot have the quality and flavour of Quick Quaker. Out of a bushel of the finest oats grown, only ten pounds are plump enough and rich enough—one reason why Quick Quaker is the only oats as good as Quaker Oats.

Try Quick Quaker. Get a package today and cook according to the recipe on the carton. Then you'll know a new and delicious breakfast dish—hot, wholesome, appetizing oats that cook while coffee boils.

Quick Quaker for speed breakfasts. Quaker Oats for those who prefer the large, regular flake. Your grocer has both. Use the kind you like best.

November 28th THE JUNIOR EXAMINER For Boys & Girls

How Do You Do?

Dear Boys and Girls:

The Editor of The Examiner is going to give us this corner of the paper every Saturday for our very own. It will be a place where we can talk about things we are interested in, and will be known as "The Junior Examiner."

There will be stories about history and travel and nature, with a crossword puzzle and other puzzles every week. Perhaps, best of all, there will be a little space where I can answer questions which you may ask.

Always I shall be glad to hear from you, and I hope you will tell what you most want to see in our corner. Address your letters to me in care of The Examiner.

Your friend,
Uncle John.

The Wonder Column.

RADIO

Radio is the latest marvel of a wonderful age. One wonderful invention has followed another in quick succession, and we take them all as a matter of course, without thinking how different is the world to-day from that in which our fathers went to school. Here in this section every week I will tell about some of these wonders. If there is any particular thing in which you are interested, such as steam engines, telephones, motor cars, airplanes, the telegraph or electricity, or if you want to know how things are made, write and let me know.

It was thought a wonderful thing when wires carried messages, but the world gasped a few years ago when it was announced that the same messages could be carried without wires. Much study and many experiments were necessary before instruments were perfected which would carry clearly the sounds of speech and deliver them without change.

But now the radio is well known to all of us. There are half a dozen stores in Peterborough where radio receivers are sold, and many boys make their own. And yet when your daddy was a boy the radio was not known!

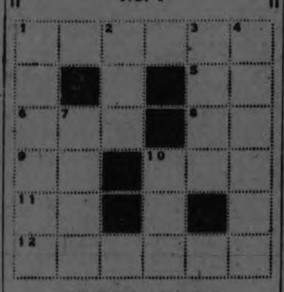
What is radio? Sound waves travel through the air at the rate of a mile in about 5 seconds, but electromagnetic waves—call them "radio waves"—travel as fast as light; that is, 186,000 miles a second. The waves pass not only through the air, but also through walls, forests and mountains. Some of them are lost, but enough get through to bring you the music or speeches whether you are in the attic or cellar of your home, or in a cave in a mountain. They are all around you now, but without a receiving set you cannot hear them.

These waves travel in all directions. Throw a stone into a pond and watch how the little waves spread, getting wider and weaker, until the reach the bank. That is how the radio waves spread in every direction.

This is all we have room for now. Remember we are leaving the radio waves spreading everywhere through the air. Next Saturday I will tell you about how the waves are started on their journey.

The Junior Examiner CROSS WORD PUZZLE

NO. 1



READING ACROSS:

1. The name of Peterborough's Mayor.
5. Daddy.
6. Out of date.
8. General manager (short form).
9. Yourself.
10. The net a spider weaves.
11. One of the articles.
12. Walked.

READING DOWN:

1. A boy's name. A boy of this name was noted as the piper's son.
2. The danger color.
3. The sharp part of a knife.
4. Wander through the country.
7. Loaned.
10. To court.

(The Solution will appear on Monday.)

ARE YOU CLEVER?

The answers to today's problems will appear next Saturday.

1. Tom says his uncle's sister is not his aunt.

If Tom's uncle's sister is not Tom's aunt, who is she?

2. A brick weighs six pounds and half of its own weight. What is the weight of the brick?

A GAME FOR TO-NIGHT.

To play the game of "Buz" the players take it in turn to count up to 100, but instead of saying "seven" the word "Buz" must be used, and repeated at 14, 21, and all the multiples of 7. When the number 70 is reached you say "Buz"; for 71, "Buz one"; for 72, "Buz two"; and so on. Seventy-seven is "Buz Buz." The one who makes a mistake pays a forfeit.

Nature Story.

ANIMALS THAT SLEEP IN WINTER.

We all know that some animals go to sleep for the winter—hibernate as it is called—but how many know that some fish go to sleep for the summer? And that in tropical countries some animals also choose the summer for their long sleep? Mud fishes in tropical rivers make places for themselves in the mud. The water of the river gets lower and leaves the mud to be dried out by the sun, while the fish lies asleep inside, absolutely unharmed. Fish have been dug up in this condition and brought across the ocean in their mud nests. The mud has then been washed off and the fish lived and flourished in tanks in one of our conservatories.

The crocodile acts in the same way, but we have never heard of a crocodile being carried across the ocean in a mud case!

In our own country animals go to sleep for the winter months, and cosily they prepare their dens. The bears, for instance, eat and eat all through the autumn, and become very fat. Then they find some snug, sheltered cave or hollow tree, or hole, where the wind will not reach them, and there they go to sleep. Their food is drawn from the masses of fat stored up in their bodies by the heavy feeding of autumn.

The bear is likely to be cross if the time for sleep comes before he has enough food stored up in his body for winter, and he is also cross when he wakes up hungry in spring.

Other animals that sleep through the winter are the raccoons, badgers, hares, bats, frogs, squirrels, and chipmunks. Some of these do not hibernate in the true scientific sense. Scientists say an animal does not hibernate unless it is in a state of complete torpor, and to all appearance dead. Bats hibernate in this true sense. A bat in its winter sleep can be placed in a bucket of water and kept there for half an hour, and it will know nothing about it, and be none the worse.

An animal in this state is one of the world's greatest mysteries—a mystery that is being enacted all around us at this time of year. The breathing practically ceases, the heart beats faintly; the body heat of the animal sinks to the temperature of the place in which it lies.

Before ending this little talk on the winter sleep of animals I wish to tell you about a strange animal—an elephant tortoise. At the time of his death he was over 350 years old, and he had slept in all 200 years. He slept twelve hours out of the 24 in every summer day, and wasn't satisfied. As soon as the dull days of autumn came he went to sleep and never woke until the spring sun warmed the air. He never, in all his 350 years, saw a winter.

USES OF WORDS.

ABILITY AND CAPACITY.

Of these two, ability is the more inclusive term, including capacity. Ability implies active exercise of power, capacity may be more or less passive receptivity. One might have capacity for learning without ability to teach.

A STORY IN FRENCH.

The English version will appear next Saturday. A story in French will appear every month.

L'ENFANT QUI CRIAIT "AU LOUP."

Il y avait une fois un petit berger qui gardait un troupeau de moutons dans les champs. Par plaisanterie, il criait souvent: "Au loup! Au loup!" A ce cri, les hommes qui travaillaient dans les champs voisins, couraient au secours, mais après avoir été trompés deux ou trois fois de cette manière, ils résolurent de ne plus faire attention aux cris de l'enfant.

Quelque temps après, un loup vint réellement et le petit berger appela pour le bon mais personne ne s'inquiéta de ses cris, et ainsi, ses moutons furent tués par le loup.

Little Trips To Faraway Places

Where should a secret rock-hewn staircase lead? While in Belgium I climbed one that led to an old fortress, the castle of Godfroi de Bouillon, who in the old crusading days became the first King of Jerusalem. Perched high above the Semois, with dark haunted passages and dungeons of despair, it is the ideal stronghold for all who want the thrill and mystery of "Old, unhappy, far-off things,

Bouillon, where the castle is to be found, will also show us the Hotel de la Poste, where Napoleon III. stayed in 1870 after Sedan.

At Moha, also in Belgium, there is another old castle with secret stairway and deep dungeons. Though the castle is built on a high rock, one of the dungeons reaches away down to running water. The well at this old fortress is said to hold the golden goat that was the chief treasure of Albert, master of the village. When enemy chiefs battered at the walls, and seemed certain to capture the fort, Albert of Moha is reported as having said: "You may get my castle, but you won't get my goat"—and he threw the goat down the well. Of course, we cannot believe all the reports we hear of these far-off times, but at that Albert acted very sensibly, don't you think?

The secret stairway here leads from a tunnel opening on the river bank, up through the solid rock, into a cellar of the castle. The only other way of entering the castle is by a road that winds around the walls. Any enemy climbing this roadway was met by flights of arrows, and from holes and chutes in the walls boiling water, and some say molten metal, was poured on him.

During the German invasion of Belgium the old castle and a nearby cave served as hiding places for Belgians who had offended the German authorities.

How I Earned My First Dollar

JOE WEARING.

An ingratiating but inquisitive reporter asks me how I earned my first money.

Alas, to hark back to those distant days when the weight of years was ten instead of—pardon the reticence!

I refuse, however, to take second place to our genial Mayor in the matter of youthful pride when at the age of ten I was able to announce that I had acquired "a paper route" which paid the astounding remuneration of "a shilling a week." Unfortunately, I attached myself to the staff of a morning instead of an evening paper, which necessitated a trip of three miles before school time.

Early hours? Yes. But what of the memories of the beautiful medieval suburbs of my native English city; and the old windmill, and the stone quarry, and the dewy hedgerowed lanes alive with thrush, and linnet, and blackbird, and the song of the lark overhead?

Precious memories; to say nothing of the magnificent gesture with which that first shilling was handed over to the maternal head of the household in true English fashion.

Brownton Woman Challenges Men To Stop Her Chickens Cackling

Municipal Mother Has Different Views From Mr. Hickey —Agrees That Sparking is Different From Her Day.

By The Sleuth.

Last week, after we had shuffled off, leaving Bill Hickey swinging his cudgel at imaginary roosters and no-account pups and auto-parking-midnight-visitors, we decided we had better learn the other side of the controversy that is shaking Brownton to its civic foundations. It seemed only fair. Verandah meetings have been held and resolutions drawn up, signed, sealed, and delivered; oratory has been dispensed freely. But though Mr. Hickey and the municipal fathers may see fit to legislate noise out of Brownton, there is another determined viewpoint—that of the municipal mothers.

A leading spokeswoman of this viewpoint lived in a house of the sort that used to be the home of most Canadians. It was two-storey and white, with green blinds, set back from the street in a yard where flower beds were invitingly attractive. The Sleuth opened a well-oiled gate and started along the path. He had not gone far when a rumble arose from a little house to one side. A big mongrel dog came forth, breathing dislike in very certain tones.

At the opportune moment for our peace of mind the spokeswoman for the opposition appeared—middle-aged and stout, with her hair parted in the old-fashioned way and "slicked down" over her ears. She hastened around from the back yard where a great clattering of hens betokened surprise at her sudden departure. In her hand was a pan of chicken food. A single question sufficed to obtain her views.

"Those men ought to be ashamed of themselves," she said, decisively. "I wonder if they haven't got anything else to do. Land sakes, can't a hen cackle or a dog bark without a lot of neurasthenics objecting to it? I have owned dogs and chickens all my life and nobody is going to stop mine from making as much noise as they like. It's nature's way, and not for man to stop. Whoever heard of a dog's bark keeping anyone awake? No dog ever barked more than a few minutes at a time. As for myself, I like to hear one bark in the night, and another one answer far off. It sounds kind of friendly and reassuring, as if a body wasn't all alone in the world. These men make me tired. Somebody's been poisoning dogs here right and left; throwing down poisoned food for them to pick up, and never caring for the agonies of the poor animal, or whether a child picked up the food and ate it instead.

"My chickens? Let anybody try to stop them from cackling! I would just like to see them doing it. My hens shall make all the noise they like, and no one can come in my yard to make them stop. I wouldn't let my chickens tear up a neighbor's garden. I should call that a nuisance myself. But you can say for me that as long as there is any liberty left in this land, my dogs and my chickens are not going to be restrained of the powers that nature gave them.

"I am a Daughter of the Empire, and I believe we must stop some of this nonsense. Why did our fathers come here if we are to be deprived of the liberty of keeping dogs and chickens? Young man, it is time that we stood up for the institutions of this country and I for one am going to do it. We have to protect our chickens and our dogs from these men. Why the first thing we know they will want to run our homes and tell us women when we can talk, I suppose. The time to oppose them is right this minute, and I propose to see that my rights are preserved. If any man comes in that gate to bother my chickens or my dog—well, Jupiter shall settle with him."

Jupiter looked fully equal to the task, and equally willing to practice upon the visitor. But his mistress stroked his broad arched back and corroborated Mr. Hickey in certain details.

Blames Automobiles.

"I remember when Brownton—it wasn't Brownton then—was so quiet that it was comforting to hear a rooster crow," she said. "Now they complain about the noise. Most of it comes from these automobiles, and I think myself something should be done to keep their horns quiet. They go off in the night real sudden like, and almost scare a body out of bed. But I haven't complained. I turn over and go back to sleep, and I say the rest of these people should do the same.

"Land sakes, if I was that nervous, as some of them say they are, I would go to see a doctor. I'll tell you what, some of it isn't noise, but conscience. People are living too fast these days. And they get awake in the night when their conscience hurts, instead of being asleep like Christian men and women. If they will do an honest day's work and not be gadding around half the night to dances and card parties, they will sleep when the time comes. Then they wouldn't be bothered by chickens and dogs.

"As for the cars being parked on the street up till midnight when young fellows from Peterborough come here sparking, I can't see that they do much harm. And if the parents of the girls are satisfied, why should I worry? Dear knows, when I was being courted it was as much as my life was worth to burn the parlor lamp after ten o'clock, and if the stable door didn't creak when my young man went to get his horse out at five after, I heard about it from upstairs."

The lady's reasoning is past dispute. And as it has been previously acknowledged that Bill Hickey's argument was airtight, I am compelled to leave the great civic issues of Brownton to be settled by process of law, or the people's own common sense.

The plowman homeward plods his weary way no more—he zips by in a motor car.

Unless you're ashamed of yourself now and then you're not honest.

Here's Yours Chance; Teeth Pulled Free

Here is one of those opportunities that come only once in a lifetime. Have you an aching tooth? Do you want to get it out? Would you like to have it done free of charge? And, furthermore, would you like to have your name go down to posterity as that of one who was willing to try a singular test in the interests of modern science?

A Chicago surgeon says that he recently performed a delicate operation without the aid of any anaesthetic, using as the only means of deadening pain, violin music played by an attendant musician.

Peterboro' doctors don't think much of the idea, but a Peterboro' dentist is willing to take a chance. He offers to extract a tooth or teeth free of charge, if the intending patient will consent to have it done while music is being played to distract his attention, and without the use of any anaesthetic, local or otherwise.

Ask The Examiner for his name, if you are willing to take a chance.

Disease Germs Doomed

Many have lost terrors for the Scientist

The progress of recent years in medical research is little short of marvellous. Daily, science kills germs by the million. Daily, new ones are being discovered, isolated and exterminated by the march of medicine.

Science is winning. What were once regarded as serious diseases are now laughed out of countenance by the doctors. Fearlessly they plunge naked hands into swarms of them, their only precaution being to rinse their hands afterwards with a reliable germicidal preparation. We are witnessing the birth of an era when the world will have little to fear from microbes.

Music Hasn't Enough Charms To Take Anaesthetics' Place

Peterborough Doctors and Musicians Scoff at Claim of Chicago Surgeon — Test Open to Everyone.

(By Jeannette)

If you were going to have your appendix removed, or your tonsils drawn out, or an ingrowing toenail displaced from its too affectionate hold on your foot, or any other of those little internal dressmaking stunts performed that have become an ordinary event in the life of the worldly pilgrim, would you go to a doctor who would see that you were securely strapped down to a specially sterilized table and wafted into blissful unconsciousness while he inspected your innards and fixed you up to suit himself, or would you patronize a new-fangled practitioner who assured you that all you had to do was to lie down quietly and listen to the strains of—well, something like the Tannhauser March and you wouldn't feel a thing—not a thing, while he cut and sawed and scissored and sewed?

Well, it all depends. If you are one of those accommodating people who believe in the doctrine of Steve Brodie, you might take a chance. And if you are a conservative-minded person (and you know, the man said he didn't like conservative people, because they were all such meigh-en things) you will probably be quite content to get along with the little old whiff of ether or chloroform, as the case may be. Instead of listening to the merry quaver of the strings playing "Yes, Sir, that's my Baby," you will be gliding along gently on a golden cloud somewhere, while your mortal body, that is being carved and stitched in the meantime, is probably emitting weird sounds, like the ordinarily pious young woman of the hospital tale, who swore steadily all the time she was being operated on.

Doctors Sceptical.

Peterboro physicians don't think much of this "music-replacing-anaesthetic" idea at all. Several of them who were interrogated lifted a collective derisive eyebrow, as it were, and remarked, with the polite restraint that is a characteristic of the medical profession, that, as far as they were concerned, they were satisfied to continue with present methods. "It's all a fake," remarked one, and "It's a joke" said another. A third thought the physician had probably hypnotized his patient before he commenced work on him, and a fourth thought that stovaine, the peculiar anaesthetic that works on one section of the body while the patient's headpiece remains perfectly normal, might have had something to do with it. Another suggested that the experiment be tried in such a minor operation as pulling a tooth, for instance, which suggestion led up to the consent of a local dentist to undertake such an experiment.

"Music hath charms, but I don't think they extend far enough for that," said one surgeon who subscribed to the general attitude of treating the idea as so much applesauce.

Musicians Doubtful.

Musicians when asked about the theory had very little to say. They know, none better, just what effect it has on the nerves to hear an amateur but persevering violinist draw "the hairs from a horse's tail over the innards of a cat," as the comedian in "My China Doll" remarked of the violin bow. They can realize the excruciating anguish endured when a youthful performer essays to render a series of harmonics or do the scales in the third position, but they seemed mighty doubtful as to the mind-relieving faculties of music when its hearer is being operated upon.

One lady cited the case of a child born mentally perfect but physically deficient, with stunted legs and arms. This child was a nervous wreck and had great difficulty in eating. The only way in which it could consume its meals and finally, even take a bath or do any other item in its attenuated daily round, was to have the phonograph played constantly in the room. Of course, this would palpably be an instance of nervous attention drawn from diseased centres to focus on the soothing music.

The subject has its possibilities. When they fix you up nicely on the table and the nurse slips her hand down stealthily and grasps your wrist firmly, and inserts it in the little bracelets along the side of the revolving contrivance, it would be appropriate to play softly "The Prsioner's Song." When the surgeon bends over and tells you that it isn't going to hurt a bit, if you will just lie quiet and listen to the nice music, "When Eyes of Blue are Fooling you," would be quite in order, that is, if he happened to have blue eyes. Then, when the operation began, they could play "Just as I am," or "Let's wander away," and "Smile all the while" would be a good cheerer-up for the ensuing moments. "Mighty blue" would be another appropriate tune, or "The farmer took another load away, hay! hay!" if the operation proved to be what they call a "major" one. "It's nice to get up in the morning, but it's nicer to lie in your bed" would be a comforting suggestion for the aftermath, or "I'll remember when you forget." The musician, of course, would have to be cautioned a gainst playing anything like "Climbing up the Golden Stairs," or the "Dead March," from Saul. In fact, jazz music, with its distracting melody or lack of it, would probably be quite the last type of music. The patient who didn't like jazz would be occupied with hating it that he wouldn't feel the lesser pain in his anatomy, and the one who did could give himself up to the luxury of it regardless of everything else. "Everything is Hotsy Totsy Now," would be singularly effective as the surgeon rolled down his sleeves after the final stitch, with "I Want a little Lovin'" as a reminder to the folks waiting in the corridor. The music could revert to old-time favorites and normal feeling very nicely if the violinist would play softly "Souvenir" as the patient was wheeled to his room, just as a reminder that he could see the appendix or the tonsil any time if he took a notion to wonder just what they took out of him.

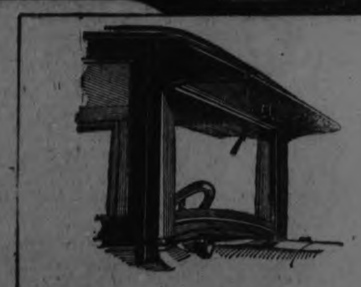
An important fact about CHEVROLET



THIS one-piece windshield is the same construction as found on the much more expensive Fisher Body closed cars. It permits full, unobstructed vision and, when raised, perfect ventilation.

When partially raised it functions as a cowl ventilator the full width of the cowl. The windshield is raised and lowered by a few turns of a Ternstedt regulator.

All closed models are equipped with automatic windshield wiper. A textile leather-covered steel sun visor and cowl lamps are also standard equipment.

Peterborough People Talk Over Five Years on Phone In Every Twelve Month

Sheiks and Queens Help To Swell Heavy Hours By Making or Breaking Dates— 24,500 Calls in City in Twenty-four Hours.

TEN, TWO AND SEVEN ARE PEAK HOURS.

Bigger Building and Staff Needed To Handle Increasing Business—Numbers of People Calling The Examiner For Hockey Bulletins Not Given.

By J. B.

EIGHT million, nine hundred and forty-two thousand five hundred telephone calls per year! That, you say, is the quota for Toronto, or at the outside, for Hamilton. Not so! that is the number of telephone conversations carried on over the local lines of the Bell Telephone Company in Peterborough and its suburbs. The long distance lines add another 180,000 to this figure. Every day, Sunday or week day, work day or holiday, the people of Peterborough put through the local exchange 24,500 calls. With forty-five hundred telephones on the exchange, and two 'phones used in every call, this means that the average 'phone on the Peterborough exchange is used for eleven conversations every day. No wonder, then, that the company is extending its local exchange building, so that more operators can be put on, as the twenty operators who work at the periods of heaviest load are becoming rushed too much and the boards are overcrowded.

Figure it another way. In every one of the 1,440 minutes in a day there would be, if the load were equaly distributed, seventeen calls completed. But at night there are very few calls, while at some periods of the day there are many times seventeen calls in a minute.

Some more figures. Say the average conversation is three minutes long. The swain conducting a telephone flirtation with the lady of his affections will doubtless talk longer than that, as would two ladies discussing the faults and foibles of their acquaintances. Then again, a great many conversations are short and to the point and take up less than even one minute. Taking, then, three minutes as the average time of connection, the total for one day would be 73,500 minutes, or 1,225 hours, which is over fifty-one days of talk. Yet a German got into the news the other day because he proposed to beat a talking record of some forty-five hours!

Taking the matter up further, the stupendous total of 26,827,500 minutes of telephone conversation every year is reached. This, boiled down a little, is 447,125 hours, still a terrible total. A little more concentration brings the amount to 1,863 days and five hours. There are only 365 days in a year, with 366 in leap year, so that four average years would amount to 1,461 days. Still there are 402 days left, which is a year and 37 days, is that the conversations carried on over the lines of the Bell Telephone system in Peterborough in one year reach a total of five years, thirty-seven days, and five hours.

Cherches le Femme!

IN THIS connection, a married man volunteers the opinion that the fair sex talks the five years, while the sterner males are content with the remaining 37 days.

Further calculation, based on the number of words spoken in a minute, would produce rows of figures such as the astronomers use in talking about star distances. They would be hard to squeeze within the limits of a newspaper column and it would be impossible for anybody really to grasp their meaning. Yet all this talk is confined, or at least passes through, one small building on Hunter street, which would not, to the ordinary passerby, seem to be the centre of such a thriving industry.

This tremndous tide of conversation, like other tides, ebbs and flows. At early hours in the morning, the boards are practically dead. Gradually, as factories and stores open, the flow increases, until at ten o'clock the peak is reached, as every business is then hard at work. About 11:30 the drop commences, and at noon hour the boards are comparatively quiet. About two o'clock the high point is again reached, remaining until three or shortly after. Again, a gradual subsidence takes place, which gives the girls a little respite until after supper. Then the third and last peak of the day comes as all the sheiks begin to call up their queens, to make dates, to make excuses, or simply to load the lines with piffle.

Little Army Busy.

THE shifts worked by the girls are arranged to care for these fluctuations. The girls, whose good looks, pleasant voices, and happy smiles are not always appreciated by surly patrons, are always coming and going, in a seemingly unsystematic way, but there always seem to be enough of them there to handle the work, and the time of greatest load is the time of greatest staff.

The staff which handles this business in Peterborough, under the direct authority of W. R. Northgrave, district manager, consists of about eighty-five people, of whom about half are operators. There are in addition to the operators, linemen, installers, clerks, stenographers, and all the other employees of an ordinary business office.

The building in which the work is done at present was erected nineteen years ago, and was expected to be large enough to handle the business for twenty years. The forecasts of the company's engineers were quite accurate, as the new portion will be ready for occupation early next year. More land has been purchased west of the present building and another extension will be made shortly so that the capacity of the building will be increased by over fifty per cent.

Among the apparatus to be installed in the new building, besides extensions to the switchboard, will be a mechanism to check up on the service. All the little annoyances will be traced more easily, loss of time in answering will be checked up, and the whole system will function more efficiently. A new heating outfit has been installed, and new storage batteries. One of the interesting things in the basement of the building is a still, whose product, however, is nothing stronger than distilled water for the batteries.

Among the things which have discontinued in the past few years is the old practice Of telli n the time. No longer does Central give out the time, as it was found that such requests were most frequent at periods of maximum load, coming from housewives preparing the meals or young people making ready for a trip to a show. In Toronto it was estimated that eight extra operators were needed just to tell the time to enquiring subscribers, which made the courtesy far too costly to the company.

A new departure, which has drawn favorable comment, is the addition of "Please" to the end of Central's crisp request, "Number." The new salutation, "Number, please," is often reciprocated by the subscriber, who comes back with "1234, please," in answer.

Altogether, the vast amount of conversation by wire, considered necessary by the citizens of Peterborough for their business and social life, is efficiently and courteously handled by the staff of the local exchange, although to many people the whole system is but a 'phone and a voice that says, "Number, please."

So Long Old Pal

So long! old pal,
For come what may,
The night must end
The brightest day.
The old clock chimes . . .
Just one more song,
We've had good times,
Ah, well, so long!

So long! old pal,
The years have been Too fair to part;
No cloud between,
To say "Good-bye"
Would all be wrong.
A sob, a sigh,
Ah, well, so long!

So long, sweet Life,
The rose must fall:
A little strife,
A little gall.
Then, when we die,
A faith so strong
That our "Good-bye"
Is but . . . "So long!"

TEN BOOKS OF MY CHOICE.

1.—The Odyssey ..... Homer
2. Shakespearean Tragedy ..... Bradley
3.—The Golden Treasury ..... Palgrave
4.—Pride and Prejudice ..... Austen
5.—Old Mortality ..... Scott
6.—David Copperfield ..... Dickens
7.—Esmond ..... Thackeray
8.—Essays of Elia ..... Lamb
9.—The Story of Creation ..... Clodd
10.—Far Away and Long Ago ..... Hudson

The "Ten Books" which I have chosen are taken from a wide field and arranged partly by time and partly by subject into a series of groups My first belongs to the dawn of history and my last to a few years ago.

Homer's Odyssey is the earliest and the greatest "romance" of civilized man in Europe, perhaps in the world. A poem of consummate art composed in an age of high culture, it embodies much of the primitive folklore and fairy tales that lie behind history and have their counterpart, conscious or unconscious, in The Arabian Nights, Gulliver, Hans Andersen and Grimm. It is a story of love and adventure, breathing the true spirit of chivalry and romance. Ulysses is the first here to show real "character", able to use his head as well as his hands. It has been a model for the great writers of all ages, from Virgil and Dante, to Scott and Tennyson.

Bradley's "Shakespearean Tragedy" is a penetrating study of 'Macbeth", "King Lear", "Othello", and "Hamlet". These masterpieces of human passion, the supreme art of the greatest genuis that ever put pen to paper, were never better interpreted by Coleridge or Hazlitt, Dowden or Stopford Brooke than by A C. Bradley in this series of lectures delivered at the University of Liverpool. Both here and in his book on Tennyson's "In Memoriam" the author shows a wonderful fairness and balance of judgment in putting the arguments for both sides of the case. No student of Shakespeare can afford to miss so masterly a piece of constructive criticism.

Palgrave's "Golden Treasury" is the best collection of short poems and lyrics in the English language. All the varied emotions of the human heart, "from grave to gay, from lively to severe" find fit expression in immortal words between its covers.

So here in my first three books, you have food for the poetic spirit in epic story, dramatic action, and lyric song. The next four of my choice are novels of the XIXth century, two in its opening years, and two at the middle.

"Pride and Prejudice" was written by Jane Austen when she was little more than twenty years old; yet it shows perfect mastery of handling. With every little excitement of plot and the most humdrum every-day kind of action, the story is yet of engrossing interest from first to last; the characters, especially the women, and their conversation are so real and so natural that the art of the writer "conceals itself", a supreme triumph. The underlying vein of irony and satire gives spice to the banquet of human comedy. No one had a greater admiration for Jane Austen's work than the Wizard of the North. Sir Walter Scott. I choose "Old Mortality" out of all his books, because it was the first I ever read and so for me the magic door by which I entered the greatest portrait gallery of humanity, next to Shakespeare in all English. Scott was a great-hearted genial man-of-affairs and with all his learning quite modest and unassuming; he had an abiding sense of romance, a poet's eye for scenery and description, a great understanding of human nature, wide sympathies and jovial humor, and he put all the gifts of his rich genius into the Waverley novels.

By infusing a strong strain of character into his personages and the reality of historic truth into his scenes and action Scott turned the old impossible romance into a real novel. Just that side of life which he left untreated, Jane Austen took in hand. Between them they covered the whole field; they have been well called the father and mother of the XIXth century novel, that form of literature which ever since their day has taken the place of the drama in holding a mirror up to Nature. For fifty years authors were content to follow—often slavishly—in their footsteps.

Then came Thackeray with his brilliant but essentially kindly satire of Society with a big "S", and Dickens with his lively humour and astonishingly fertile imagination. His is a world of fantasy, no doubt, but the best answer to those who complain that they never saw Dickens' characters in real life is surely the answer Turner made to the critics of his sunsets—"No, but don't you wish you could see them." All the world, as Thackeray said, should be grateful to Dickens for his unsullied page and the innocent laughter he has afforded to tens of thousands.

We have chosen "David Copperfield" because it was Dickens' own favorite and shows best one of the authors clearest marks of genius, his ability to re-enter at will the Garden of Eden from which most of us are for ever shut out, the world of childhood and youth.

"Esmond" is our choice in Thackeray, because it is one of the greatest historical novels in the language; it is an amazing revival of the past, and has all the drawing power of the direct method in which the story is told by one of the characters; a method invented by Bunyan and Defoe and adopted with telling effect in Gulliver's Travels, Jane Eyre, Lorna Doone and the Master of Ballantrae. Besides, it is the beginning of the long chain of reappearing scenes and characters whose main links are The Virginians, Vanity Fair, Pendennis and the Newcomes. This re-union of old friends gives intense pleasure to the erader; it has never been better done than by Thackeray, but it forms a notable feature of John Galsworthy's great "Forsyte Saga."

There are moods when we tire of fiction, even short stories; and then we love to turn to a volume of essays. The essay at its best has a double interest, its subject—matter and its author. There surely never was a more lovable man or a more charming writer than shy, stammering, tender-hearted Charles Lamb, the gentle, droll and whimsical Elia. From Montaigne to Matthew Arnold and the moderns of Ernest Rhys's beautiful collection, search where we will, we shall not look upon his like again.

I close my series with two books that have brought me very great pleasure, each in a different way; Edward Clodd's "Story of Creation" and W. H. Hudson's "Far Away and Long Ago." The first of these gave me a clear and artistically written account of one of the great truths of modern science, a truth foretold by the Greeks 2500 years ago, but never really proved till our own day in the work of Darwin and his successors. The story is told by Edward Clodd with no small sense of beauty and power of imagination, so that the reader is able to arrive at the truth with gain rather than loss of reverence and wonder.

The story of Hudsons childhood and youth long ago in the far-away land of LaPlata, written by the author as an old man in England and given to the world only seven years ago, was nothing short of a revelation to me; it satisfied all my passion for travel and biography better than any other book I had ever read, whether Darwin's Journal, the Travels of Wallace and Bates on the Amazon, or Bet's Nicaragua. And it was something far more than these; it was the life-story of a nature-lover like myself, and the truth and passion of it all came home to me with all the fascination of Wordsworth's Poetry or Richard Jeffries' "Story of My Heart."

Time, the general idea of successive existence, or that in which events take place, plays a big part in modern activities to-day. Most of us are regulated in our daily tasks by time and the main factor in keeping this old world up to the scratch in this all important matter are the much abused watch and clock. Nearly every man, sooner or later, will proceed to tell about his watch and how it has not lost a minute for weeks or months, just as his fancy dictates.

With a view to ascertaining just how many watches can really be relied upon an Examiner reporter set out on a tour to-day and enquired the time from twenty of the people whom he met on his round.

Prior to commencing the test, the reporter stepped into Schneider's jewelery store for the purpose of synchronizing his own watch with that of the jeweller's so that there would be no room for argument with the different owners of watches that he was to meet in his travels, and found much to his disgust that his own watch was two minutes fast.

However with his watch properly adjusted he stepped outside fully assured that if his watch was found to be wrong there must be more in the same condition.

He found that 15 of the twenty people he asked had watches that registered anywhere from one minute to ten minutes slow, three persons had watches that registered from one to two minutes fast, and only two had watches that could be considered accurate time pieces. Need it be said that the proud owners of these perfect watches were railroad men whose first and last care is their watch, for on it depends their safety and the safety of countless passengers and their fellow employees in the course of a single day.

On prominent man on being asked the time confessed that he did not carry a watch as on one occasion he took his watch to the jeweller's to be cleaned and it had not worked since. He was so disgusted, he said, that he has never had the heart to look a watch straight in the face since.

One remarkable feature of the trip was the number of people whose watches were either fast or slow to their own knowledge, for when asked for the time they would give it correct to the minute. It would merely be a matter of a second or so for them to adjust their watches correctly but apparently they would rather figure the question of time in their own minds than have it shown correctly on the face of their trusty time pieces.

Nine Bodies Are Engaged In City's Administration

But City Council is Only One With Legislative Powers—Who May Be Elected and Who May Vote.

The principal governing and administrative body of Peterborough is its City Council, and it is the only body which has legislative powers, apart from administrative duties. It can enact laws applicable to the inhabitants of the city on a variety of subjects, including sanitary matters, the use of the streets, prevention of fires, disturbances and all other matters of public interest.

It is not always recognized, however, that the power of municipal councils is limited, as is the case with all corporations. An individual, so far as the legality of his actions is concerned, may do anything unless the law says that his acts infringe on the rights of others, or that he must not do certain things. A corporation, at variance with this rule may do only those things which the law says it may do.

Often when the city Council is asked to make a grant for some purpose and does not do so because the granting of such request is not within its authority and, when, furthermore, such a concession would be illegal, the ground for refusal is quite frequently misunderstood. The people then rise up asking for an explanation.

Structure of Council.

In Ontario the general law provides that a council shall be composed of the mayor and one or two aldermen from each ward, or if the aldermen are elected by general vote, one alderman is appointed for each 1,000 of the city's population, provided that that population does not exceed 15,000. In other cities the same number of aldermen are elected as if they were ward representatives. It also provides that all the members of the council shall be elected annually but that, with the assent of the electors the council extend the term of the mayor and aldermen to two years.

In Peterborough, the provisions of the general law have been departed from, under the authority of a special Act of the Legislature, and while the Mayor is elected annually and the Aldermen for two years, one-half of them retiring each year, the number of aldermen is fixed at ten.

Anyone may be elected to the City Council who is a householder residing in the municipality, or who is assessed in his own right for an amount sufficient to entitle him to vote and resides in or within five miles of the municipality. In addition his name must be entered on the Voters' List; he must be a British subject at least twenty-one years of age, and not disqualified by law.

The general law provides a choice of three dates for the purpose of holding municipal elections—as on the first Monday in January, on New Year's Day or on the first Monday in December. In Peterborough the elections are held on New Year's Day and the nominations on December 23, previous. Everyone in this city is entitled to vote who has attained the age of 21 years, is a British subject, and is assessed for $400.00 of land or income or is the wife or husband of a person assessed for that amount as owner or tenant, and is not disqualified by the Act.

Others Besides Council.

In addition to the City Council, there are several other bodies of an administrative character. THE UTILITIES COMMISSION operates the hydro-electric distributing system and the waterworks, owned by the City. It is composed of three members, each elected for three years, one retiring annually.

THE CITY TRUST, (which is an institution peculiar to Peterborough) controls and manages real estate owned by the City and not used for municipal purposes. The Council pays to the Trust each year, the sums required for interest on, and sinking funds for, debentures. The Trust pays the interest to the debenture holders and invests the sinking funds until they are required to pay off debentures when they are due. These are in all, five City Trust Commissioners, one of whom is appointed each year by the City Council for a term of five years.

THE POLICE COMMISSION is composed of the County Judge, the Mayor and the Police Magistrate. They employ the members of the police force, pay the requisite salaries and procure the supplies required by the force. The expenses are met by funds furnished by the City Council.

THE CITY BOARD OF HEALTH has large powers in dealing with such matters as affect the public health. The members of the Board are: the Mayor, the Medical Officer of Health and three rate-payers, appointed each year by the City Council.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY BOARD has charge of all matters pertinent to the conducting of the library. Three members receive their appointment by the City Council, three by the Board of Education, and two by the Separate School Board. The Mayor is a member of the Library governing body.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION has jurisdiction over the Collegiate Institute and the public schools. Nine of the members are elected by public school supporters for a term of two years, four elected one year and five the next. The Separate School Board may appoint a member who will vote only on matters related to the management of the Collegiate Institute.

THE SEPARATE SCHOOL BOARD has charge of the Separate Schools and it consists of ten members, five of whom are elected each year by supporters of the Separate Schools.

THE NICHOLS HOSPITAL, for which the City is so deeply indebted to the late Mrs. Charlotte Nicholls is controlled by the Nicholls Hospital Trust, composed of the Mayor, two members appointed by St. Andrew's Church, two by St. Paul's Church and one from each of the other Protestant churches of the city. The Trust may demand from the Council each year, the amount it requires for maintaining the hospital over the income received from the endowment and other sources. The amount is raised by a special levy on the Protestant ratepayers.

THE CENTRAL CHARITY BOARD is a body not constituted by law, but by the City Council. It is composed of a representation from each church and the Children's Aid Society. It disburses funds provided by the City Council.

Thus there are nine bodies engaged in the government of the city and the administration of the different departments and institutions.

Kick In Modern Dance Was Lacking Of Old

But Peterborough People Are Not Carried Away By Love of Art, Sport, or Whatever It Be Called.

By W. D.

While Peterborough people like to dance they do not indulge in the practise to an immoderate degree; this fact is emphasized in nothing more strongly than by the fact that in this city of more than 27,000 souls there is not one full-time or scheduled dance hall. Further, it is a matter of doubt whether such a place would receive sufficient patronage to keep the proverbial wolf from yapping at the portal.

Any dance devotee in Peterborough will say that the clientele of that art is split in two elements which make it impossible to hold regular dances successfully. At functions of great magnitude all the larger luminaries dig out their formal habiliments and invest much of the family exchequer in new and startling creations. On such an occasion the taxi facilities prove all too inadequate and many a conversation is carried on by floral tributes to the city's fairest. So Peterborough is not democratic on the dance floor because the society damsel never may be found on the same expanse of hardwood which the factory maid spurns so lightly and it is clandestinely or with a vast condescention that the son of the merchant prince prances at the same time and place as the dark-haired sheik from the foundry.

While the top cards of the social deck tread to a merry measure the music is as nothing when compared with the motive energy supplied to actuate the more nimble feet of those not constrained to such an extent by the usages and rock-ribbed conventions of the upper ten. The somnolent strains of the waltz seldom are produced by the jazz artists who spur the 'Ironmongers' or 'Rubber Reclaimers' to increased efforts. Legs must be nimble if they would cavort to the inspiring refrain of the Charleston or Strut which have lately taken the dancing public by storm. Perhaps traceable to the ancient toddle days, the Charleston has taken on many intriguing characteristics of its own which make it a subject for intense study by all aspirants to terpsichorean honors.

Some Specialized.

Some three or four years ago North America was siezed in a veritable frenzy of new steps. The tango was importuned for ideas and the colleges turned out several classes accomplished in the art of intricate dance steps. Many in order to bring about this end danced with but one partner; with her, the youth would be a marvel of the fantastic, pivotting gliding and whirling with all the mystery and grace of the Spanish fandango. The tendency then was for individualism, as each person was busy evolving some new triumph with which to amaze his friends or confound his rival. That laudable spirit appears to be lacking in the present generation of dance patrons who hailed the creation of the Collegiate Strut with a general shout of approval and with one accord the dancers went into an orgy of strutting which has lasted to the present day. Fox-trot time has been speeded up more than ever and he who would retain the long sweeping and graceful strides of a former day does so in the face of disaster for there is always someone in the immediate rear trying to step into his shoes.

The modern dance fails to conform in many respects to a certain authoritative definition given by an encyclopedia, which says that a dance is a studied and rythmical movement of the limbs generally adjusted to the measure of a tune. There is no doubt about the movement being studied. It is studied in the first place that it might be acquired to be reproduced later on the dance-floor in conjunction with a hundred others doing the same step and it is studied carefully by spectators who have no intention of trying to learn its intricacies. There may be rhythm in some senses of the word but it is certainly not the smooth and supple flowing rhythm which should be the hall mark of this bodily expression. The definition specifies a movement of the limbs but the modern dance involves the muscular display found in strenuous pastimes like rowing or rugby and which might account for the athletic trend of the age. There is a vagueness about the last condition which may detract from any censure that might be hurled at o-day's trippers. It says "generally" adjusted to the measure of a tune, which kindly provision frees the modern saxophone felon from any serious penalty which would be otherwise due him

The Modern Trend.

The ancients, contrary to the Peterborough usage, employed the dance as a means of expressing religious, patriotic, or military fervor as exemplified by David when he was constrained to dance before the ark, or the Greeks in their national Choric dances. The Romans enjoyed the dance but did not participate, themselves; when a patrician wished to while away a social hour and have a few in he sent a messenger down to the central agency with an order for a dozen of the neatest and most agile kickers who would be despatched forthwith to the lordly home to amuse the edified guests. The girls were trained especially and, as they were slaves, little regard was entertained for their well-being, as the supply was practically unlimited. True, some maiden supremely gifted might rise to a position of eminence, but as a general rule the lot of a slave dancer was an unhappy one.

Indians celebrated all great affairs of peace or war with a dance and feast In wartime then, as in peace now, the young bucks were wont to gird their loins, daub their features with cosmetics, and dance a few weird steps and sally forth to the conquest.

History records that in the middle ages a dancing disease swept throughout central Europe. In one instance at the festival of Saint John at Aix-la-Chappelle, in 1734, such a frenzy siezed the people that when they once started to dance they could not desist until they dropped from exhaustion. In more modern times such a disease must have acted upon many of the dancers for there developed a mania for marathon trials during which several contenders danced through a number of hours until their shoes were completely worn out and bodies were racked with pain. The motive had nothing to do with religion, patriotism, or the military, but the contests were followed with a high degree of interest by all dance lovers on the continent and much newspaper publicity was accorded the winners of the various meets.

The encyclopedia states that the solemn character of the dance has disappeared and that the youthful modern employs it to unleash some of the surplus animal energy, which if held in check, might not be in accord with the impressionistic spirit of the age.

PATTERN SERVICE IS SOMETHING NEW

The Examiner Has Arranged for Series of Up-to-Date Styles.

As a service to the women of Peterborough, The Examiner has arranged for a series of patterns for all kinds of women's and children's clothing. These are Canadian patterns and may be obtained in any size and any style.

The first illustration appears on the Women's Page today, and one will be published every day except on Monday next. For that day the illustration will be omitted, and instead there will appear an article telling how to judge sizes so as to get the best results. It will appear on only the one day, and should be clipped and saved for future reference. Even if you do not require a pattern now you should save this article so that you will have it when needed.

If you require any information on the pattern service, or would like to look over the styles offered, drop in at The Examiner office and ask for Miss McCarthy.

CHILDREN LIKE BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Because They Are Tasteless and Are Esy to Take.

One of the strongest points in favor of any medicine for children is that it is so agreeable that the mother does not have to force it down the little one's throat.

Baby's Own Tablets have no drug taste, may be crushed to a powder if desired, and babies like them. They are perfectly safe for they contain no opiate or narcotic. They sweeten the stomach and remove the cause of fretfulness.

Mrs. Arthur Charlebois, Pawtucket, R.I., says:—"I have found Baby's Own Tablets to be a gentle laxative and a safe remedy for stomach disorders in children. Our little boy has been given harsh catharties but these tables worked more effectively without the severe griping. I can recommend them to all mothers of little children."

The Princess Frock

There's magic in the word "princess"—it seems to mean something slim and delicate and very lovely; and there's magic in the princess frock, too, for it gives one a slim silhouette and smart appearance. The versatile neck may be worn high, or low with turn-back revers and set-under vestee. The sleeves are long and button trimmed. Cuckoo brown mirrolean fashions this model, having silk crêpe in a contrasting color facing the revers and the long tie collar. Golden brown velvet or velveteen would make one of the smartest dresses, with the revers, vestee and tie of gold metal cloth. The diagram pictures the simplicity of the partly finished frock. No. 1245 is in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust. Size 38 bust requires 5 yards of 36-inch, or 3 yards of 54-inch material. Price 20 cents.

Many styles of smart apparel may be found in our Fashion Book. Our designers originate their patterns in the heart of the style centers, and their creations are those of tested popularity, brought within the means of the average woman. Price of the book 10 cents the copy.

WOMEN ATTEND 'TECH' SCHOOL

Favorite Evening Resort For All Ages and Tastes in Toronto.

ART AND SCIENCE.

TORONTO, Nov. 28 (By Canadian Press).—More and more the technical school is becoming a favorite evening resort for women of all ages and all sorts of tastes. A punctured tire, or some difficulty with the engine, presents no problem to the woman who has learned at the Central Technical School the why and wherefore of motor collapses and how to remedy them. Again, in an age when women are doing men's work, it is not surprising to find them students of carpentry. Last year fifteen public school teachers presented themselves at classes in manual training, and so quickly did they progress that when the night school term was over each proudly displayed a tea wagon constructed by her own hands. Wood-carving attracts those of a more artistic bent, and a few very ambitious girls have taken instruction in architecture.

Classes in cooking, household management, dressmaking, millinery, drafting and designing, and embroidery, are always well patronized, and not a few girls are interested in the making of pottery, the construction of jewelry, and the art of photography. Many seek to improve their monetary position by learning show-card writing; some master illustrating, while others devote their attention to object and antique drawing. The study of textiles and of methods of cleaning and washing different fabrics, also appeals to a good many practical housekeepers. Of the 500 students of electricity at present enrolled at the Technical school, 5 per cent. are women and occasionally a mere female enlists in the chemistry classes.

CLEAN HEAD LOTION.

Where City's Furs Go In the Summer Time

Thousands of Dollars Worth Being Taken Out of Cold Storage in Peterborough Now—How to Keep Them Perfect.

We know, because we have listened to a popular songster tell us all about it, where the flies go to in the winter time. But a more interesting question to the majority of women is the consideration of where furs go to in the summer time? True, fur neckpieces don't fade into obscurity. They may be seen any hot day on the main boulevards, but the vogue for wearing fur coats in torrid weather has not yet struck the North American continent—not yet, anyway.

Cold in winter and cold in summer is the fate of the fur coats. In melting days, they are comfortably enxconced in specially constructed vaults whose cold temperature is a matter of concern to their owners. In Peterboro, the Barries, Limited, store, and the Lech establishment take care of the fur coats of the city's feminine population. In the three western branches of their concern and in the local store, Barrie's, Limited estimate that between $120,000 and $150,000 worth of furs are stored during the summer, and the Lech store houses about $40,000 worth of private furs every year, from a period starting about the first of April and continuing on until November. These furs are given a thorough cleaning on receipt in the vaults, are inspected thoroughly once a month by a man who devotes his whole time to this one job, and are protected against burglary, fire and moths. The customer sets the valuation on the articles stored or this is done for him or her by the establishment receiving them.

The majority of fur coat wearers, it is said, store their furs in this manner, especially apartment house inhabitants. The practise of hanging them in bags in a hot attic is detrimental, not so much to the fur itself, as to the leather, which is also very sensitive to damp or mildew, which makes it tender, while the heat tends to cause evaporation of the natural and necessary oils, and makes the leather lose in brilliance and in strength. The gasoline bath used in cleaning furs is also considered injurious, for gasoline eats up the essential oil and causes the leather to disintegrate. Furs that have been taken care of in the proper manner may be re-made after fifteen or twenty years' use if the oil and natural suppleness of the leather have been retained.

In soft, silky furs the tendency is greater to rub or wear off, and the hair drops out more quickly than in strong haired, coarser furs. The most durable furs are said to be Russian sable, Hudson Bay sable, stone and baum marten, fitch, fisher, mink, Northern muskrat, raccoon of all kinds bear, dogskin, skunk, oppossum, otter, beaver, wolverine, heavy seal and dyed muskrat, while next in order come ermine, kolinsky, Japanese marten, white Thibet, Persian lamb, astrakhan, pony, Japanese mink, natural and blended muskrat, wolf of all kinds, Alaska seal, Sealdyed muskrat, wallaby, civet cat, and lynx. Delicate furs are listed as chinchilla, mole, broadtail, caracul, Asiatic kid, Mongolian lamb, wildcat, squirrel and fox and conies of all kinds.

Manufacture Interesting.

THE process of manufacture of fur garments is interesting. After the skins have been taken they are stretched over shaped boards to dry and shipped to receiving houses or manufacturers. They are sold in the raw state and the manufacturer has them tanned and dressed. This is done by putting the skins in brine-soaked sawdust for twenty-four hours to soften them. Then, the leather is shaved with machine-run knives to remove the flesh and make the leather thinner. The skins are then partially dried and butter is worked into them, to make them pliable. They are then pulled, stretched and pounded, to "leather" them.

Next, the skins are placed in huge revolving drums and rolled in sawdust, which absorbs the excess grease in leather. They are then cleaned.

All imperfections, such as shotholes, etc., must be cut out. A dart is cut out of the skin and these slits sewed up, after which the skins are moistened and stretched out to make them flat again. The skins are then matched according to color, length of hair, nature of fur, quality and size. They are then assorted according to coats and neckwear.

A booklet issued by Barries, Limited, gives some hints as to the proper care of furs; a great consideration in their use. —They should be brushed well from time to time, to keep them looking fresh. Do not allow them to remain near a hot radiator or stove, especially while covered with rain or snow—this will dry out the leather and crack the fur. When furs are damp they should be brushed with the nap of the fur until the hairs are all smoothed down. Then hang them in a moderately cool place to dry. After the fur is dry, fluff it out again by shaking the garment or by whipping the fur soundly with a flexible stick. Short-haired furs such as sealskin and beaver, can be greatly improved in appearance by brushing them with a dampened clothes-brush, with the nap, whenever the fur looks crushed or ruffled. Then allow it to dry and fluff the fur out by shaking or whipping the garment. Small furs such as fox scarfs can be greatly improved in this way.

Australian oppossum, raccoon and other long-haired furs may look matted after some service—whip them out soundly with a flexible stick and comb the fur out with a very coarse comb. You will be greatly surprised at the improvement after doing this.

SELF MADE WOMAN IS MISS M'PHAIL

Learned Art of Working From Her Peasant Grandmother.

TORONTO, Nov. 28 (By Canadian Press).—When Miss Agnes Macphail, M. P., goes to Ottawa next session she will take with her for the opening ceremonies a boy of 13, Teddy Jones, who won the fall fair championship of Grey County for public speaking. This is her "prize" awarded to him. Last year she had for guest a little girl. The Star Weekly features Miss Macphail in a front page 'story,' the writer summing up like this: "She is no man's woman, matrimonially or politically. She does her own thinking. She is an individualist as women always are, but an independent as women seldom are. But she is more than an insurgent, for insurgents are frequently snowed under as Bolsheviks. And she is no Bolshevik. She is above all a woman, wise as a serpent, guileless as a dove. And yet while her mind and her outlook, one judges, are feminine, her methods are masculine. She makes no soft or sentimental appeal because she is a woman. She succeeds, not because of her sex, but in spite of it. She has ideals and dreams—but she has extraordinary organizing ability. She is right down on earth where a hearty voice or a handshake may mean a vote but where it takes work to win victory. Her first hobby is: 'People. I had no desire when I went to Ottawa to crawl out of my class. I like farm life but I don't like all its hardships.'

"She pointed to a photograph on the wall, a strong, old face full of character and experience. 'That's the woman from whom I first got my desire to serve,' she said simply. 'Grandmother Campbell—my mother's mother. She was from Scotland—what other countries would call a peasant?—she went to work when she was nine. But she taught herself. And I was devoted to her. She was a woman who always put first things first. She never got her values mixed. And she taught me something of that at an early age. For she loved people with a great love.'"

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

THANKS BOARD.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir.—Will you kindly publish the following note of appreciation:

I wish to thank the members of the Peterboro' Industrial Exhibition Board, the U. F. O., Mr. Denne, and all who helped to put on the livestock judging competition for the young men.

I wish to say to Mr. Denne especially that the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair is an ideal place to spend a few days. As well as the pleasure derived, it is educational and profitable. You see some of the best stock, fruit and seed that Canada and United States produce.

The class that attracted a great deal of attention and interest was the senior fat baby beef class, which had 68 entries, on the whole, of excellent quality. Perhaps the exhibit that attracted the most interest was the Prince of Wales' exhibit.

What attracted us most was the dairy exhibits and especially our own favorite, the black and white, which interest, we noted, was general, they being represented from as far east as Prince Edward Island and as far west as British Columbia.

Chivalry is Not Dead But Only Spread Out To Take in the Lowly

Trivial Things, Such as Removing Hat in Elevator, Don't Count.

PETERBORO'S VIEWS.

Indolent Youth May Neglect Frills, But Substance is Improved.

Peterborough elevator operators, when questioned about the chivalry of the present-day male, remained discreetly silent. Some of them, when asked if a gentleman doffed his hat when a lady stepped in the lift, replied that while some of them did, the cases were exceptional. They explained this lack of respect by the fact that the shafts were not of such height as to warrant a bared pate. If a man happened to know a certain lady he would usually touch his hat or even lift it temporarily but the stay in the little cell was too short. There was no more reason for a man to take his hat off in an elevator than in the store itself or in a street car, said others, warmly defensive to the alleged slight to their sex.

Taking all things into consideration there is probably more chivalry evidenced in Peterborough to-day than there was in any Frankish or Anglican city in the middle ages. True, history and fiction declare that period as the salad day of knightly prowess in all departments, notably the defence of beleaguered maidens. Canned lords toured the country in search of some doughty opponent who would joust with them for the love of their ladies. But would he fight with an inferior—a minion—a varlet—troth would not he! He would not soil his blade with such blood. In the defence of his fair one he must clash with steel of equal purity. His blood called for contest only with blood of a matched marine tint. It is recorded that while on such campaigns away from the castle of his loved one, there was much chin-chucking of barmaids and blandishment of fair agrarian daughters. But then the vaunted chivalry of the age was never intended to apply to such mediocrity. Oh, dear me, no.

So, while Peterborough youth are never exceedingly agile in rescuing dropped handkerchiefs or giving up seats in street cars when ladies bestow imploring glances or gratuitous smiles, there is in truth less demand for their services. How many ladies screamed that they were fainting and wanted smelling salts during yesterday or last week? What! You can't recall one! What has become of us? In the days when knights were falling all over the pike the daily good deed consisted of carrying some fainted (or feinting) Queen of Beauty to the nearest rill and dashing water into her face after which treatment her bosom resumed its heaving and her eyelids took a revived interest in the daily affairs.

A mouse in the olden days might have killed a lass but the stout-hearted maid of to-day would pursue such nefarious vermin and if the chase happens to be successful an awful fate is that of the unfortunate mouse. Of course the movies and magazine covers have preserved the superstition obviously with the view attracting attention but in real life no girl would concede such a victory but would grasp the nearest broom with deadly purpose.

Time was, a few decades ago, when the country school teacher attempted to inculcate some of the rudiments of good manners into the boy's conduct. The youth was taught to lift his hat whenever the dread person of the teacher hove in sight. If she dropped a book, or piece of chalk, with one accord, there would be a general rush to the scene and a good healthy scramble would ensue for the honour of retrieving the dropped article. After leaving school, however, the fond children must have forgotten that acquirement along with certain information about square root and when "Cartier from St. Malo sailed away."

Men of this day are regarding the women as equals, which fact may account for the lack of subservience. In the middle ages the cavaliers prated about the "light of their lives" and their "guarding angels," while in their presence. There is no doubt, however, that private opinions regarding women were not flattering.

The boys in collegiates and universities are forced to burn the midnight Hydro in order to keep in sight of their fair classmates while the performance of female athletes on the playing fields is encouraging the belief that Atlanta and Diana were not mere myths.

A dictionary definition of chivalry says that it entailed "a war-like spirit, a lofty devotion to the female sex (the latter somewhat questionable), a love of adventure and an indefinable thirst for glory."

Even considering that the crusades lent a religious turn to the chivalric spirit, but even so according to the definition given above, chivalry was not as rosy as it has been painted by coloratura novelists. In those days only the lords of high degree were supposed to be possessed of the spirit—to-day the lowliest urchin on the street shows a spirit just as fine and laudable as in the halcyon, hey-days when knighthood was in clover.

KNOCKS FLIRTING.

FRENCH WAR FLIER KILLED.

PARIS, Nov. 27.—Maurice Bizot, a member of Capt. Guynemer's famous "Storks escadrille" during the World War, was killed Friday when a speed plane which he was testing, overturned during an attempted landing at 100 miles an hour. He planned to use the plane in the near future in an attempt to set a new world's speed record. Bizot was officially credited with destroying 12 enemy planes during the war.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorncliffe

DESCRIBING A NEW STREET FROCK OF BLACK SUEDE CLOTH.

"How do you like suede cloth?" Pam asked me to-day.

"I love it," I answered promptly. "I think it makes a stunning material for coats or frocks."

"Then you'll like this new frock I have designed for myself," Pam announced with assurance.

"Let's have a look," I suggested, noticing a sketch that she held in her hand.

"You know I've always been fond of black," Pam explained. "I also think suede cloth is such a lovely, soft medium for black, and I know you'll agree with me that this frock is sufficiently youthful in spirit to vie with the new frocks of the season."

I took the proffered sketch, and saw that it depicted a frock which caught my eye at once because of its novel pocket.

"One pocket and one pleat!" I commented. "Very effective!"

"Well, ask me what the pocket is made of," Pam instructed. "It's an idea of my own."

"Very well, what is it made of?" I queried.

"White crepe with an all-over applique of the black suede cloth," Pam informed me.

"Very good," I commented.

"The cuffs are also white crepe, and the buttons at the hips are covered with the crepe," Pam added.

Then she went on to explain that the neckline was simply a round one, with a crepe-lined scarf of the material attached at one side, so the scarf could be worn wound around the neck.

"When are you going to make it?" I asked.

"I'm going to start on it right away," Pam answered.

"That black felt with its white felt facing at the back was what really inspired me to design the frock," Pam admitted. "I saw it in a window and liked it so well that I bought it, and then set to work to create a frock I could wear with it."

"You have a stunning outfit," I assured her. Then I sketched a copy of it to keep here in my diary.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By Annie Laurie

Dear Annie Laurie,—I have been reading your advise to girl's column in the Peterboro Examiner and wondered if you would give me some advice.

I have been going with a boy who I like very much. Lately he has been going out with other girls, and at the same time being very nice to me.

Could you advise me how I might regain his friendship once more.

Down Hearted.

DOWNHEARTED: This situation appears to crop up frequently in the correspondence addressed to this column. As the young man is apparently not engaged to you, at least you do not say so, why shouldn't he go out with other girls? Your own commonsense will tell you this. Of course, commonsense will not answer your problem. What you really mean is that you are in love with him and you want him all to yourself. Well, you may have lost your charm for him, perhaps through this increasing affection of yours. You see, at first you were probably an unknown quantity and he wanted to see if you would fall for him. Now that you have done so, he is off to try the same game with someone else, and really, why shouldn't he if he wishes to. A safe rule with most men is "Never take them seriously." How about doing a little flirting on your own account and forget that you are downhearted. In a few months' time, you may be wondering why you liked this young man and criticizing severely the way he parts his hair and the cut of his coat.

IMPORTANT TRANSACTION MADE IN PETERBOROUGH THEATRES

Grand Opera House and the Royal Taken by Theatrical Enterprises, Limited.

SOLD BY LOCAL MEN

Local Syndicate Safeguarded the Theatre Interests of Citizens.

Within the past few days there has been concluded a real estate transaction of much importance to the citizens of Peterboro and district, whereby two prominent Peterboro theatre properties have been transferred to Theatrical Enterprises, Ltd., with headquarters in Toronto.

During the summer of 1924 the Grand Opera House, which was put on the market by the liquidator of Trans-Canada Theatres, Ltd., was purchased by a small syndicate of local men, who secured it with the object of saving the theatre for theatrical purposes, having in mind holding and running it until such times as a theatrical organization, whose business it was to conduct theatrical enterprises, could be found to take it over.

Negotiations were entered into a short while ago with Theatrical Enterprises, Ltd., and brought to a conclusion this week, whereby the Grand Opera House is now under the control of the above company, which has already obtained a number of other legitimate theatres throughout the province, and will have a string of theatres, whereby first class attractions can be placed and guaranteed bookings, which previously has been very difficult of accomplishment.

It has been the endeavour of the local syndicate to give high class performances to the citizens of Peterboro and district, which has been appreciated, as shown by the support that has been given during the past and present season. That the theatre is an important institution in a city of this kind, may be appreciated when as many as 350 residents of adjacent towns and villages have attended some of the attractions at the Grand.

The theatregoing people will no doubt also appreciate the efforts of the local syndicate in getting the Grand Opera House into so capable hands as Theatrical Enterprises, Ltd., who have stated that they will exercise their ability and position in procuring for Peterboro patrons the very best attractions on the road.

At the same time the Royal Theatre, which has been operated as a moving picture house for many years, was taken over by the same organization.

During the past year and a half it has been under the control of the J. R. Stratton Estate, and through the management of Mr. W. P. McGeachie and the staff he has had, it has given to the citizens of Peterborough pleasurable entertainment of a first class quality, which has been enjoyed by thousands of Peterboro citizens each week.

It is the intention of Theatrical Enterprises to give to the Royal Theatre programmes of merit, and with the advantage of their wide business connection they will be able to take care of their patrons in the very best possible manner. Those who have been attending the programmes at the Royal Theatre will also be pleased that this popular picture house is going into the hands of so responsible a party The transaction, as above stated, is an important one for this city, as it guarantees high class entertainment which is so necessary in a city the size of Peterboro, which is the centre of so many activities in sport and entertainment in this district.

Elk, Deer, Bear and Beaver Throng Fairways of Golf Course.

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press)—Elk, deer, bear and beaver are helping to make the Jasper National Park golf course one of the most attractive in the dominion, according to a report received from Stanley Thompson, architect in charge of creating the new course. The thrifty Scottish plan of turning sheep on to a golf course in order to save the cost of mowing, has been improved upon

According to Mr. Thompson nearly 200 elk and deer are daily grazing on the course and orders have been issued giving protection to these animals. Bears are also reported to be numerous in the vicinity of the afirways and greens and on Lac Beauvert, close to one of the greens, beavers have built a house which has greatly added to the attractiveness of one of the natural hazards of the course.

FORD CO. BEGINS ROLLING STEEL

First Unit of New Mills Put Into Operation Friday.

BY ELECTRICITY.

DETROIT, Nov. 28. —The first unit of the big new steel rolling mills at the River Rouge plant of the Ford Motor Co. was put into operation yesterday. Test runs have been going on for several days, but the rolling of billets into bars for use in the Ford products started yesterday morning. The new unit will handle between 15,000 and 20,000 tons of steel a month and marks another long step of the company to perform ever step in its industry from taking the raw materials from the earth until they comeforth as finished cars and tractors.

The rolling mill is housed in a steel and brick structure, 1,600 feet long and 460 feet wide, one of the largest industrial structures in the world. Every movement of operation from the moment steel billets move into the re-heating furnaces at one end until the steel emerges in the form of steel bars of various sizes at the other, having passed and re-passed through several stands of rollers, is done by electricity under automatic control. As manual labor has been reduced to a point never before attained in America's steel industry, the opening of the unit marks the beginning of a new era in steel manufacturing practice.

In another great building, closely adjoinng, open hearth furnaces are being erected and, next April, when this completing unit starts operation, it will supply the billets of steel for the rolling mills. At present they are being purchased from other sources. Production will be increased monthly so that, when the open hearth furnaces are in operation, the rolling mills will be prepared to handle the entire output of the furnaces.

ONTARIO TOURIST ASSOCIATION MET

Reports of Organization Show Good Work Done in First Year.

The Ontario Tourists Association held its first annual meeting in Toronto yesterday. A this meeting the annual statement was presented together with the auditors report which showed a small balance on hand after all accounts had been paid. The constitution and bylaws were adopted as prepared and presented by F. D. Kerr, the Association's legal advisor. During organization a directorate of 28 were elected out of which the executive officers were chosen. Mr. J. J. Duffus of Peterboro was again elected vice-president of the association.

Last year the organization did not get under way until the tourist season opened but despite this handicap much was done to sell Ontario to the sister provinces and the United States. The Ontario government has lent sympathetic support to the Association by furnishing free office space and printing for dsitribution thousands of booklets showing the natural beauty and means of reaching all parts of the province. This publication was in tremendous demand with the result the Department of Highways have decided to continue the issue for free distribution through channels where the best results will be obtained. In addition, the government was responsible for the broadcasting done by Roxy and his gang, this piece of publicity being of great advantage to the province in depicting the scenery and describing the many lakes and rivers throughout the province. A complimentary banquet was tendered to the delegates by the Mayor and citizens of Toronto in the King Edward Hotel, where splendid addresses were delivered endorsing the work of the association.

Those representing the city were F. D. Kerr, K.C., President Trent Waterways Association, J. Wells Fraser, President Chamber of Commerce, Gordon K. Fraser, Past President of the Trent Waterway Association, J. J. Duffus, Vice-President of the Ontario Tourists Association and representative of the Associated Boards of Trade. Mayor J. J. Turner, and Alderman R. N. Jones.

Custodian Of Westminster Died After Funeral Service

LONDON, Nov. 28 (United Press). — Canon Herbert F. Westlike, custodian of Westminster is dead, following his participation in the services for Queen Mother Alexandra in the Abbey yesterday.

HUGE LIBRARY IS NOW LIGHTED

Fear of Fire Prevented Installation in Bibliotheque Nationale.

ELECTRIC LIGHTS.

That largest of libraries, the Bibliotheque Nationale in Paris, at last has been equipped with artificial light. It is 600 years old and has been 200 years in its present building. This library's administrators steadfastly refused to add to the lighting, which was neither more nor less than nature supplied. Those who wished more were welcome to read elsewhere; for the Bibliotheque Nationale the sun was enough.

Of a Winter afternoon researchers and students would carry their books to the small, high windows, so that they might work a little longer. They had to stop and go home when daylight faded. On dark days they would pause in their reading and wait for the clouds to lift. The library held more than 5,000,000 volumes, all that heart could wish, except light.

epublican times known as the Bibliortheque du Roi, the Bibliotheque Royale and the Bibliotheque Imperial—has more books than the British Museum or the American Library of Congress, and on genera subjects is probably richer than the Library of the Vatican. St. Louis, who died in 1270, began the collection of books for France, and Charles V added to them. But the royal library was sold to the Duke of Bedford in 1423, and it remained for Louis XII, who died in 1515, to re-establish the library, having treasured the books of his predecessor, Charles VII, in his Chateau of Blois, and having bought, besides, the library of Sforza of Milan and that of the Gruuthuuse family of Bruges.

Francis I moved the library to Fontainebleau and enlarged it considerably through his decree that a copy of every work printed in France should be sent to its shelves. Later the collection was moved to Paris and placed by Henry IV in the suppressed Jesuit College de Clermont, the property of which was sold to provide the books with bindings. Louis XIV enlarged the library by the purchase of 9,000 volumes from du Puy, 10,000 from Mentel and others from other collectors. His successor had all these works transferred to the present building in 1724 and after the Revolution all the precious books of the suppressed religious orders were added. Since then additions both modern and ancient have been made year after year.

Among its treasures are some of the world's most valuable manuscripts from the fifth to the fifteenth century, and some of the richest bindings ever, studded with gems and embossed with the arms of kings. There may be seen there the originals of the gospels of Charlemagne, Lothaire and Louis le Debbonnaire. There, too, is the Christianismi Restitutio of Michael Servetus, for the writing of which Calvin ordered the author to be burned at the stake in 1553.

Among music manuscripts is the autographed score of Gluck's "Alcestis," and music manuscripts of Jean Jacques Rousseau. Numerous autographs of famous men and women have been preserved—letters of Rabelais, Montaigne, Racine, Voltaire, Moliere, Corneille, Mme. de Sevigne and Mary Stuart.

Beneath the fine ceiling paintings of the Galeric Mazarin, which was part of the palace of Cardinal Mazarin, is the Mazarin Bible, probably from the press of Gutenberg and Fust at Mayence, also the first book imprinted with a date, a Latin psalter of 1457.

In the archives are ancient wax tablets with accounts set down in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, and a roll with the oldest catalogue of the library's books, dated 1373. There is Nithard's history, recording the oath taken by the sons of Louis le Debonnaire in 842. In addition to its wealth of literature, the Bibliotheque Nationale holds a museum of medals, gems, intaglios, cameos and other antiques.

Undoubtedly fire in the building would cause damage that could never be repaired, and in a form of artificial lighting the authorities saw danger of fire. Hence the library has depended solely upon daylight. Now, at last, the increase of fire-preventive devices has caused the authorities to yield, and a complete electric lighting plant has been installed.

Gum Wouldn't Come Out Girl Was Trying Fire Box

WEBSTER, Mass., November 28. — United Press. — Little Sadie P[illegible] called the fire engines.

When the big red trucks clanged to box 52, six year old Sadie, with tears in her eyes, was still pulling the hook. She explained her trouble thus:

"The chew gum sticking in there wos't come out."

FOREIGNERS IN PEKING PREPARE FOR TROUBLES

More Guards Are Being Engaged By Various Legations.

USING BARBED WIRE.

Further Demonstrations By Students and Strikers Are Expected.

PEKING, Nov. 28. — (United Press). — Foreign and Chinese guards in the Legation quarters were strengthened to-day, and new barbed wire barriers were placed in anticipation of great student demonstrations advocating a radical treaty abolition programme. This proposed move appeared to be a recrudence of the demonstrations of last summer, when the student and striker elements sought the removal of what they termed unequal foreign treaties. It was rumored that soldiers were distributing arms and that a general strike was being fomented.

A major clash between the rebels and the forces of Chang Tso Lin in the north was reported to be imminent.

BUCKMASTER HEAD OF BIG OIL COMPANY

Former Lord Chancellor Succeeds Sir Edward Mackey Edgar.

LONDON, Nov. 28. (Canadian Press).—Lord Buckmaster, formerly Lord Chancellor, has been elected to the chairmanship of the British Controlled Oil Fields, Limited, which has vast concessions in various parts of South America. He will succeed Sir Edward Mackay Edgar.

AT THE REGENT

"THE MYSTIC" IS FINEST BROWNING PICTURE TO DATE.

Tod Browning, the most famous director of film crook plays, has again hit the nail on the head in "The Mystic," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, being shown at the Regent Theatre on Monday.

Years ago Browning gave to the screen a great crook drama in "Outside the Law," which he wrote and directed. The picture was a popular hit and Browning has since written and directed the most thrilling plays of that type that have ever appeared on the screen.

Browning is said to have been prompted to write the story of "The Mystic" by recent police raids against fake mediums and clairvoyants of Los Angeles. Some of the most startling bits of business in the story originated from the sensational testimony given before the Los Angeles County grand jury probing the connection between fake mediums and organized gangs of swindlers.

The story opens in Hungary where an American crook discovers a gypsy mystic and brings her to America, where he begins to prey on wealthy people desirous of communicating with dead friends and relatives. The story is a first class melodrama replete with thrills and following a romance between the American crook and the gypsy mystic, who by the way is a fake medium.

The story is interpreted by a notable all star cost, with Aileen Pringle and Conway Tearle in the featured roles. The cast also includes Mitchell Lewis, Robert Ober, Stanton Heck, Gladys Hulette, David Torrence and DeWitt Pennings.

RUDOLPH VALENTINO AND NITA NALDI IN "COBRA," AT THE CAPITOL MONDAY.

Rudolph Valentino heads a fine cast in the screen version of 'Cobra,' Martin Brown's successful Broadway play, which comes to the Capitol Theatre, commencing Monday. "Cobra" is an ideal vehicle for the star. It gives him abundant opportunities to make love to fascinating women in his own inimitable way. The plot deals with a young Italian aristocrat, who, in need of money, comes to America, to accept a position in a New York art shop. Trying to fight down his weakness for women, he is faced with a situation wherein the wife of his best friend falls in love with him. Then ensues a series of interest compelling complications which end in an unusual way.

AT THE GRAND

"BRINGING UP FATHER IN GAY NEW YORK

"Bringing Up Father in Gay New York," the latest musical comedy based on the world-renowned George McManus cartoons of the same title, will be the next attraction at the Grand Opera House, on Saturday, December 5, with the customary matinee. It contains six scenes and is divided into two acts. Nat Leroy supplying the book and lyrics with Seymour Furth contributing the music. Unusual novelties, screams, infectious fun, rollicking and side-splitting comedy situations, expertly blended along with other inimitable features are promised. "Bringing Up Father in Gay New York" is said to be the best of the series offered up to date. At any rate, the critics said so when the production was originally presented in New York, at the Lyric Theater, Broadway's leading playhouse earlier in the season.

THE DUMBELLS' NEW SHOW.

This is the seventh year of the Dumbells in Canada. "Lucky 7" is the name of their latest revue. The name is well chosen, for the show is the best they have yet produced, and when it is presented at the Grand Theatre on Wednesday evening, December 9th, the correctness of this statement will again be generally conceeded here, just as it has been all along the line wherever the Dumbells have played since "Lucky 7" was first given.

Better balanced than ever, with greater variety in sketches and songs, with greater novelty in costumes and more ambitious effects in scenic settings and in lighting, "Lucky 7" marks the most pretentious and spectacular achievement of the Dumbells up to date.

"Red" Newman in an uproariously funny sketch, entitled "Red Goes on Leave," and with his best new song, "Let's Start the War Again," which promises to rival "Oh, It's a Lovely War" in popularity; Al. Plunkett in his old form with "Whiter Than Snow," "Hi, Hi, Ho" and a lilting chorus, and a notable feature song, "As Long as She Loves Me"; Ross Hamilton with two spectacular song features in lovely settings, as "Marjorie"; Morley Plunkett in "High St., Africa," with its weird costumes; Pat Rafferty, as irresistibly funny as ever; Stan. Bennett as the irrepressible "Johnnie"; Jock Holland, Ben Allen, Glen Allen in delightful dances with remarkable female impersonation; Jimmie Devon in lively stepping; Capt. Plunkett's jazz orchestra, with a new feature of stage pictures shown on a raised platform within a picture frame—all these things go to make up a show that for liveliness, genuine humor and first-class entertainment cannot be beaten in Canada today.

AT THE ROYAL.

NEW SERIES "ADVENTURES OF MAZIE," AT ROYAL ON MONDAY—EACH ONE COMPLETE.

Alberta Vaughn, the "Girl with a Million Friends," popular heroine of "The Telephone Girl," and "Fighting Blood" series, will appear at the Royal every Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, in her newest laugh-provoking series, "The Adventures of Mazie.' Alberta is supported by Larcy Kent, Kit Guard and Al Cooke. These stories of the slangy stenographer have been read by millions in the Top Notch Magazine and a ready made audience awaits them in Peterboro on Monday.

BETTY BALFOUR, BETTER KNOWN AS "SQUIBBS," AT ROYAL MONDAY, IN "REVEILLE."

Prince of Wales Praises Photodrama.

The gala performance of "Reveille," which was given at the Palace Theatre, London, recently, before a distinguished audience, which included the Prince of Wales, is looked upon as one of the greatest events in the theatre history of England.

The Prince called it "a jolly good film," an appreciation obviously sincere to the wonderful audience that was gathered together at the Palace theatre, by the way he rocked with laughter over the memories of army days during the war. There is tragedy in the film—this is inevitable in a picture which is the first true commentary on the great tragedy of our generaton — but there is also much to laugh at and with, as well. The author has found an army character in "Whelks," played by Frankie Stanmore, who is a sheer delight in his drollery and an inspiration in his optimism. He doesn't understand the reason for the war, he doesn't understand the tragedy of the aftermath of the war, but he keeps right on smiling. Unemployment and shattered romance is all the same to him. "The answer is a lemon" is his only observation.

But most important of all is Betty Balfour, who passes through every phase of war and post-war life, tasting both in joys and sorrows, and still remaining a symbol of hope and courage. It is her romance that is shattered, but it is her spirit, typical of the spirit of British womanhood, that prevents revolution.

"Reveille" is an epic of laughter and tears, each in its place, and both will live long in the memories of those who witness this remarkable photoplay.

SENATORS' BATTLE WITH QUEEN'S IS TODAY'S BIG RUGBY FEATURE

Ottawa Have Waited a Long Time For This Afternoon's Chance.

OTHER PLAYOFFS.

Saturday's Rugby card is smaller than usual, but it is very important. Here are the games:—

Senior.

Canadian Eastern final—Queen's at Ottawa.

Intermediate.

Intercollegiate Union Final — St. Michael's at McGill.

Ontario Union Final—Sarnia vs. Kitchener, at London.

Junior.

Intercollegiate Union Final—Varsity at Queen's.

Interscholastic.

Ottawa's Big Rugby Show.

OTTAWA, Nov. 28 (Canadian Press)—A steady fall of snow which continued all day has blanketed Lansdowne Park with a carpet a few inches deep. It is on such a field that Queen's and Ottawa Senators meet this afternoon in the final game for the Eastern Canada Rugby Championship.

Scrapers and a gang of shovellers were employed this morning, and the gridiron may be swept and then burned with gasoline.

All arrangements have been completed and the stage is set for the biggest rugby show that it has been Ottawa fans' privilege to enjoy for a long terms of years. Despite the wintry conditions, football topics are the chief items of discussion throughout the city.

Ottawas polished off their preparations with a signal practice at five o'clock Friday afternoon. The team is in good shape, well-trained and ready for battle. If they go under to the tri-color this afternoon, it will not be until they have given the Kingston twelve a real argument.

The Queen's players, in charge of Coach Billy Hughes, arrived last evening and are billetted at the Chateau Laurier. The team is billed to attend tonight's opening N.H.L. game here between Ottawa and Montreal Maroons, as guests of the Ottawa Hockey Association.

Kitchener's Chance.

Champions in the Intermediate and Junior series of the O.R.F.U. will be declared today. Sarnia, last year's Intermediate champions, and Kitchener, first-time finalists in rugby, clash at London in a sudden-death affair. Sarnia should win because of their experience, but many would like to see the honors go to Kitchener. It would create increased interest in rugby up around that part of the province. However, Sarnia have designs on another title. Down in Montreal, St. Michael's meet McGill and with a nice lead St. Michael's should take the round and the Intercollegiate title. It is more than like that St. Michael's and Sarnia or Kitchener will meet next week in the first Canadian semi-final.

Up at Varsity Stadium today two smart Junior teams clash when Argonauts take on Dundas. Argonauts won the first game in Dundas, but were hard pressed all the way. Dundas, the town that has developed many good rugby players, is endeavoring to do the same thing again and is concentrating on Junior this season.

In one of the other two Junior games carded, Varsity go to Kingston to meet Queen's in a sudden-death affair for the Intercollegiate title. Varsity won this title last season and are keen to repeat. In Montreal the Winged Wheelers take on Ottawa Rideaus in the final for the Quebec Union title. As Montreal won easily in Ottawa last Saturday they should repeat today and take the title. On December 5 Argonauts, likely O.R.F.U. winners, will go to Montreal to meet M.A.A.A. in the final for the Canadian title.

Since that sensational game provided by University Schools and Oakwood Collegiate on Monday in which U.T.S. emerged victors after overtime play, many fans are following these interscholastic contests with great interest. Today U.T.S. travel to Oakville to meet Central Collegiate of Hamilton in a sudden-death semi-final. The winner of this will meet Sarnia Collegiate in the final.

U. S. FOOTBALL FINALE.

Army and Navy Play in New York To-day.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28 (Canadian Press)—The football season comes to its final climax today throughout the country with the classic battle between the Army and Navy at the Polo Grounds as the chief centre of interest.

While the service rivals are having it out in their annual fray with the cadets as favorites to triumph over the midshipmen, a scattered few elevens in other parts of the country will take the gridiron for the last time in a season which will go down as one of the most spectacular on record.

Of the 478,235 persons who died in England and Wales last year no less than 37.7 per cent. were over 20 but under 65.

INSIDE GOLF.

Makes of 51 Golf Champions, "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans

By CHESTER HORTON

From 50 yards off the edge of the green, what's the correct play—pitch it or run it up? If the green is open, run it up. If any serious obstruction you will have to pitch. By running it up I mean the ball is to be skipped across the intervening turf to the edge of the green and then made to run up toward the pin. The pitch shot, at the distance, should be made only as a necessity, not by choice. The run-up is more easily controlled and the theory that rough spots on the ground may interfere with the ball does not constitute a danger equal to the difficulty of pitching the ball accurately from the distance. One great point in these short shots is that the ball must be hit cleanly and crisply despite the short distance. Take it easy and you will invariably dub it. Always hit the ball sharply and crisply, with a fairly firm grip in the fingers.

NEW YORK TEAM INCLUDED AMONG N.H.L. FAVORITES

Americans, With Most of the Hamilton Tigers, Should Be in Running.

OPENING TO-NIGHT.

Three Games at Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal—All Are Ready.

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 28 (Canadian Press)—Professional hockey in the east got away to a hesitant and somewhat surprising start Thursday night when Pittsburgh defeated the Bruins at Boston. Tonight the National Hockey League will commence its winter's campaign with three games on the card. Odie Cleghorn and his new Pittsburgh Pirate sextette play Canadiens at the Mount Royal Arena here; Montreal Maroons travel to Ottawa where they will meet the Ottawa Senators, while Art Ross and his Boston players will assist St. Patrick's to officially open the N.H.L. season in Toronto. The New York club drew the bye.

Odie Cleghorn and his former Pittsburgh Yellow Jackets, of the U.S.A.H.A., who jumped as a team to the "pro" ranks when the Smokey City entered the pro game this fall, arrived in Montreal last night from Boston for their match against Canadiens. The young players got away to a good start with their win Thursday over Boston and, according to Manager Cleghorn, have got the basis of a winning morale through the confidence inspired by riding on the crest in their opening tilt. The Pirates are a team of young players, Darragh, Milks, Conacher, McCurry, Cotton, Drury, all having starred in amateur ranks in Canada a few seasons back.

Johnny McKinnon, the Western amateur, who last year played with the Pittsburgh Hornets in the U.S. A.H.A., is expected to reach the city this morning from Minneapolis and will be in uniform on the Canadien bench ready to jump into the fray should Canadiens need his services.

Maroons at Ottawa

Eddie Gerard will lead the Montreal team to Ottawa today and this afternoon the players will be the guests of the club president, James Strachan, at the Eastern Rugby final between Queen's and the Ottawa Senators, playing the Ottawa pro hockey team this eevning. The maroon-clad players are, with the exception of Shorty Horne, in the best of early season form and are ready for a fast, close tussle against the sextette of the capital, which will go into the fray with the advantage of having worked together as a team for at least one year more than the local players.

With the teams on the threshold of the 36-game campaign there is much speculation as to the probable outcome of this year's battles, especially as to which teams will reach the play-off series for the League title.

Three Favorites

However, three clubs seem well in the race from the start, Ottawa, New York and Toronto St. Patricks. These teams have the same players as last year and have added additional strength. All were in the running last season till near the end and, barring accidents, should be among the top clubs this season. New York is practically the same as the Hamilton Tigers, who entered the League play-off last season, but lost out when the players went on strike. Ottawa finished last season probably stronger than any club in the loop and on that showing are highly rated this year, while St. Patricks are practically in the same category as the Senators.

Canadiens have still their great trio of forwards, Morenz, Joliat and Boucher. The defence of Mantha and Coutu looked strong against the Victoria Cougars and if they measure up throughout the year the champions should be battling along merrily in defence of their honors.

Boston ended last season with a great spurt The many new players Art Ross had last year will show the benefits of experience gained in their first season as pros. The addition of Sprague Cleghorn to the defence is expected to prove of inestimable value in steadying the team, which is particularly well fortified with substitutes of tested ability.

PRO HOCKEY IS FASTEST GAME

Is Expected To Increase Its Popularity in States This Season.

CANADIAN PLAYERS.

TORONTO, Nov. 28.—(By Canadian Press).—"The fastest game in the world," professional hockey, is expected to increase its popularity with American fans during the coming winter, as New York and Pittsburgh, in addition to Boston, have seriously adopted Canada's National winter sport.

Boston, with their middle class team of last year, drew very fair crowds, while Pitsburgh's success in the amateur ranks speaks well for the success of their "Pro" club. Hockey, however, is a new venture in New York City itself. Games in the metropolis are to be played in Madison Square Garden, under the management of Tex Rickard.

Canadians form the major portion of all American teams entered in the league. Boston has Carson Cooper, Charlie Stewart, Schnarr, and Sprague Cleghorn as the Canadian representation.

Pittsburgh has Lionel Conacher, crack Canadian all-round athlete, who will captain the squad, and Odie Cleghorn formerly of the Canadiens. The more notable performers on the Smoky City squad outside of the two mentioned are Worters, Drury, Cotton and McCurry, who are all graduates from the Toronto amateur ranks.

New York has practically the entire Hamilton, Ont., team, which had the championship almost in their grasp last year when a dispute between players and owners forced their withdrawal. Probable starters for the Gotham team includes Forbes, Red and Shorty Green, Randall, Burch and Langlois, all Canadians.

Montreal's two teams, the former world's champion Canadiens and the lesser known Maroons, are well supplied with players. Canadiens have Vezina, Mantha, Coutu, Morenz, Joliet and Boucher on their roster, practically their complete team of last year, and in addition are well supplied with substitutes

Maroons have a considerably younger team than their fellow-citizens. Their lineup includes: Benedict, Munro, Noble, Broadbent, Stewart, Siebert, Dinsmore and Rothchild.

The Ottawa Senators are exected to field Connell, Ironsides, Boucher, Clancy, Dennenay, Smith and Nighbor. They seem to have a nicely balanced, fast team.

St. Patricks of Toronto will have Roach, McCaffery, Corbeau, Adams, "Babe" Dye, "Happy" Day, Bellefeuille, Reid, Gallagher and Holway.

Cooper, Schnarr, Conacher, Worters, Drury McCurry, Munro McCaffery and Day are all comparative newcomers to professional ranks having taken the step during the last two years.

The first game of the season was played at Boston when the Pittsburgh Hornets met the Boston Bruins Thursday night and defeated them 2-1. Canadians will have a chance to see the new American teams in action tonight with Pittsburgh at Canadiens and on December 2 when New York will meet St. Pats. in Toronto.

Inside Sporting Dope

By A. Wise Cracker

Mr. Sporting Editor:

Yr. humble servant wishes to start this letter with something important, so right here will say that the news that the City Hockey League is going to operate this season is mighty good tidings.

For why?

Cause the junior section of it, anyway, means we're going to start in developeing some hockey players, and, honest to pete, we need to do that very same thing.

"How about this years' Petes?" I hear you asking, and then you answer yourself, "A sweet team."

You said it, Mister Sporting Editor—but what's next?

Like me old friend, Ethel Barrymore, used to say, "That's all there is. There ain't any more."

There ain't nobody coming on to take the place of Joe Dwyer and the other birds in the blue and White unies.

How many players have we got in Peterboro ready to step in?

Why even the guy that's dumb enough to think that a sleeping partner is another name for a night watchman knows the answer to that one.

There's just about as many as there is birds here who could beat up Dempsey.

There ain't no reason why Peterboro can't develope some young players—except we haven't tried hard to encourage the junior game. The local kids is born with the same number of arms and legs and about as much brains as kids anywhere else, and they'll make hockey players if they get one-half a chance.

Take a slant at this year's Petes—not a big town product in the gang—they all come from small centres, except Mister Bailey, who is a native of Bracebridge, which ain't big enough to be called a centre.

Collingwood sent out two of them—that northern town that raises hockey players as easy as other places raises their taxes. It's a burg that turns out ships and puck-chasers, and one wise bird yaps that the hockey players is as good floaters as the boats—if you get my meaning. However, as the Canadian Woollens catalogue says, "That's another yarn."

What I hope to tell you is that Collingwood has raised two players for us, which is about all we have raised for ourselves in the last four, five years. We need some of that look-after-home-industry that Mister Meighen tried to sell us about our hockey, and that's why I hope everybody will boost for this kids' league.

USES POOR JUDGEMENT.

The Balmy beach-Queen's football game last Sat. failed to produce no surprises. This Mister Batstone, whose mean bat helped Ken. Collings' poor memory give the Ponies the baseball Title last summer, swung a nasty hoof as usual for Queen's. There are a lot of Peterboro ball fans who wish the Redtop, as I have nicknamed him, would do more booting in the ball season instead of leaving it all for Oct. and Nov.

Everything is hotsy-totsy for the S.P.s. serious. The Petes is stacked up against the Toronto canoe Club on Wed. and will run into a fast bunch of kids, all rarin' to go. A combination like them is dangerous at this season of the year, but the Petes, while in no mid-winter form—ask Mister Parker, he knows—hope to take the paddlers.

NIPPED THE PEACHES.

Joe Dwyer and his men was responsible for the Grimsby peaches being nipped by an early frost on Tuesday night. Mister Dwyer staged his usual number of falls, Mister Ranger drew his usual number of penalties and Mister Bailey got his usual mess of goals, so the season is now pried open, about the time in the old days when the gang used to hold the annual meeting of the club.

Our fair city is not doing much in the rugby line, but I want to tell you some pretty nifty footballers has graduated from this burg. If you don't believe me, ask Charlie Goode, for in picking an all-star Canadian team of all time Mister Goode chooses two birds that used to be Peterboro boys for a place, naming Ross Craig as inside wing and Pete Campbell for the big job of quarter-back. Hitting the line was one thing that Craig never did nothing else but, and they don't make 'em no faster either in thinking nor in footwork than was Mister Campbell when he was with Varsity.

THE BEST EVER—MEBBE.

Speaking about rugby, I see where a guy on a Belleville paper says this year's Queen's is the greatest team on record. Chances is the fellow that pulled that one never seen any football till Queen's winning streak brought championship rugby close enough to Belleville for the odd trip in the family ford to take in the doins' at Kingston. Mister Batstone heads a right smart team, but when you call them the best in the game's history, Mac, you got to forget some mighty capable gridiron gangs—the old-time M.A.A.A. team, the Hamilton tigers that used to be and Varsity in the days of Mister Maynard and Gall and Dixon and Campbell and them birds.

You can talk about your Bud Thomas, but where is there an outside wing with the speed of Ted Savage of Montreal? All respects to Harry Batstone, but how about Hughie Gall? Pep Leadley may be able to kick, but what price Ben Simpson or Eddie Gleason? Red McKelvery hits the line hard, but the guy that says Ross Craig didn't is just plain goofy.

Well, Mister Sporting Editor, those names won't mean nothing more than the contents of King Tut's tomb to most of your readers, so I guess I'll go off the air for this week.

Sportfully yrs.,
A. WISE CRACKER.

PETERBOROUGH LOST TO FALLS 5-2 IN FAST EXHIBITION GAME

Both Clubs Showed Flashes of Mid-Season Form During Game.

NEW MEN GOOD.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Nov. 28—(Special). — The Niagara Falls and Peterboro clubs coupled up in an exhibition game at the Falls Arena yesterday evening before fifteen hundred fans. Among the spectators were Tommy Gorman, manager of the New York club, and Shorty and Red Green and Billy Burch of the Metropolitan club.

Despite the fact that both clubs have had only a short time to get into condition, the game was exciting and both clubs showed flashes of mid-season form. The final result was 5 to 2, with the Falls on the big end. The best performers on the Falls club were Fraser, Kelterbourne, Murray and Herrington. Mayo in the nets made several remarkable saves. Connors and Burmester, the new comers, came along at different times and look like finds.

Bailey was the best man of the visitors. He made many sweet rushes and worked like a trojan throughout. Collins showed a lot of class, while Ranger, combined with his mates on the front line on a number of occasions. Parker, an old favorite in this district, showed the form that made him famous in past seasons, while Dwyer in the nets arose to the occasion on more than one occasion.

Play in the first period was very even. The Falls club scored the first goal in eight minutes on a long shot from right wing by Burmester. Cox, of the visitors, evened three minutes later on a pass from Bailey when close in.

The second period started off fast and Kelterbourne broke the tie after seven minutes of play by stopping a Peterboro puck carrier beyond the defence and going in close. Murray scored seven minutes later from the goal-mouth on a pass from Pennie. A minute and a half later Bailey scored for the Petes on a pass from Ranger in close, and Mayo had no chance. The Falls got their next goal by Connors scoring after four minutes of play by taking a pass from Fraser while in close. The final goal was scored by Fraser after twelve minutes on a lone rush.

The teams:

Niagara Falls—Goal, Mayo; defence, Murray and Fraser; centre, Connors; right wing, Herrington; left wing, Kelterbourne; subs., Burmister, Pennie, McAteer, Taylor, Dewar, Steele and Brown.

Referee—Burmister, Welland.

HUNTERS RETURN FROM THE CHASE

(Leaving Their Deer Behind Them.)

BUT RABBITS ARE STILL PLENTIFUL

BOOM! BANG! Owoo-Owoo! Every Saturday afternoon in the fall and winter months, and on many another afternoon too, the peaceful pastures and swamps within a radius of ten or twelve miles of Peterborough resound to the sound of rifles and shotguns, and the baying of hounds on the chase, and probably, if the poor little cottontail or wood rabbit who is the object of the hunt could talk, his frightened wail would be added to the chorus.

Hunting is one of the principal diversions of a large portion of the male population of Peterborough. To many of the Nimrods, of course, hunting means deer hunting, and nothing less aristocratic. To a great many more, however, the only kind of hunting within reach is that to be found in the woods and swamps within, at most, an hour's motor distance, and in many cases within the distance that can reasonably be traversed by "Shank's mare" in an afternoon.

The deer hunting season is now over and does not intimately concern the environs of the city. Many of the citizens take their annual vacations and go back into the northern parts of the county, or into the next counties, there to live for two weeks under conditions which, at home, would arouse violent protests, and return at the end of the two weeks, tired and happy, and telling the whole world what a whale of a time they had. The return, of course, is more joyous, and the splendid outing is enhanced, if a deer form part of the exhibit, while the slayer of a bear thinks he ranks with Daniel Boone or "The Deerslayer" as a pioneer and hunter.

Coming Near Home.

On every road leading from the city there may be seen, of an afternoon, men on foot, men in buggies and wagons, and men in cars: men with rifles, old or new, men with shotguns, and boys with "twenty-twos" or airguns; men with hounds, men with beagles, men with dogs of uncertain lineage and breed, and men without dogs; all bound for their favorite shooting grounds. At present only the cottontail rabbit, and the slightly larger wood rabbit or hare, are sought for to any great extent. Ducks are still in season, but are rarely seen; the season for partridge ended last week, although an odd one probably finds its way home in a game bag; foxes will be eagerly sought when there is a little snow on the ground.

Dogs play a great part in the hunt. There are dogs, old stagers at the game, whose masters seek an open space and leave it to Fido, or Nero, or Gyp. The chase may be long, or it may be short, but sooner or later a rabbit will be driven past the hunter's station, and there will be rabbit pie, or rabbit stew in some city home the next day. Other dogs like the chase short and sweet, and will soon give up and let bunny go while they return to their masters. The cottontail, which does not turn white in wintertime, will take to a stump or hollow log, or dive into a hole or a stone fence when hard pressed, and the dog has then to go and look for another, but the wood rabbit, which is often called a hare, will run until exhausted rather than seek cover. The latter, which is larger, and according to epicures, not so good eating, turns white when winter comes, and is better able to run and hide from his enemies.

Coon hunting is a favorite sport with many hunters, and this year, it is said, the animals are plentiful and several have already been shot by local men.

Some of the hunters, or more properly, gunmen, of the city, prefer domestic fowl, and patronise the many shooting matches which are held all through the fall and early winter. Many a Thanksgiving or Christmas goose or turkey is obtained by the prowess of the head of the house in shooting at a mark with either rifle or shotgun. Farmers having an extra large supply of geese, turkeys, or ducks, are wont to arrange these matches, and as the fee to shoot for each bird is usually a quarter, a fair price is obtained without the trouble of killing and dressing the birds and conveying them to market. The prizes at the shooting matches are always alive in the pens and the winners select their own, and carry them home alive, where the trophy is summarily executed, or else is kept for Sunday or holiday meals.

WITH PITTSBURGH.

Jess Spring, member of the New York pro hockey team, has been sold to Pittsburg. Tommy Gorman would not divulge the price received. Spring reported to Pittsburg on Monday, and will probably form the regular defense with Lionel Conacher.

DEMPSEY-WILLS BOUT CANCELLED

Breach Between Fitzsimmons and Colleagues As Reported as Cause.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Nov. 28. (Canadian Press).—Jack Dempsey, world's champion heavyweight boxer, will not fight Harry Wills, Negro challenger, in their proposed 1926 bout at Michigan City, Ind., informants at the Dempsey camp made it known here yesterday. The reason, unverified here, is due to a reported breach between Promoter Floyd Fitzsimmons and his South Bend, Ind., colleagues engaged in staging the affair.

C.G.E. LADIES' TEAM MADE PRESENTATION

Mrs. W. Gandy, a Former Player, Was Given Silver Tea Service.

Last night members and friends of the C.G.E. Ladies' Softball Club gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Simmons, Orpington Road, for the purpose of making a presentation to Mrs. Wilfred Gandy. Mrs. Gandy was formerly Miss Dorothy Hayes, one of the leading players on the team, and was married in Rochester early thsi fall. Last night was the first opportunity given her former team-mates to congratulate her on securing a team-mate for life.

Many beautiful and useful gifts were given by the individual members, while from the club she received a silver tea service, while the following address was read:

Mrs. W. Gandy.

Dear Friend,—We have met on this occasion to perform a very pleasant duty in extending to you our heartfelt congratulations on your recent marriage. We wish you and your husband every felicity that time in its progress can bring you.

Your associations with us at work, and more especially in sport, were always of the brightest, and most pleasant nature. Your presence on the field of sport always inspired your associates with the greatest confidence, and it was to that confidence, combined with the consistent clever displays you always showed in our games, that our great success in softball was due. We cannot afford to lose such a friend and clean sport from our midst. But in embarking on your new life in a new land, we sincerely hope and trust that you will be endowed with every comfort that can be bestowed upon you. And the sincerest wishes of the members and Executive of the C. G. E. Ladies' Softball Club to you and your husband are long life, happiness and prosperity.

We now ask you to accept this present, not for its monetary value, but as a token of the deep admiration in which you are held by the members and Executive of the C.G.E. Ladies' Softball Club.

PINCHOT CARRIES ON SETTLEMENT PLAN

Will Submit His Proposal to Miners Even if Operators Stay Away.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 28. — (Canadan Press.)—Governor Pinchot decided to-day to go forward with his plans to submit a proposal for settlement of the anthracite suspension to representatives of the miners here this afternoon, despite the announcement from the operators that they would be unable to attend the meeting to which they also had been invited.

Hospital for Sick Children

67 College St., Toronto, 2, Ont.

Christmas, 1925.

Dear Mr. Editor:—

This is the fiftieth year—the semi-centennial of the Hospital for Sick Children. It is the Golden Anniversary of an institution which started out in 1875 with a six-bed equipment to cure children medically of their illnesses and to rid them surgically of their disabilities. Fifty years have passed and the tiny hospital has grown into one of the greatest institutions of its kind in the whole world.

The people of this province demanded this service — and they have made it possible by their Christmas Time gifts. They are rewarded by the knowledge that thousands of Ontario children will grow up into manhood or womanhood blessing the "little blue cots" wherein they were restored and strengthened to play a full part in the battle of life.

To win back health for six thousand boys and girls was the measure of the Hospital's ward-service alone this year. Besides that there were over half a hundred thousand attendances in the Out-Patient Department, where the less serious cases are treated. All this costs a great deal of money, even though the doctors give freely of their skill and the nurses of their care. There is board and lodging and laundry to be provided, besides the best that can be procured in the way of all the medical and surgical supplies required to treat the myrial ailments and accidents to which children are subject.

In order to maintain its high standard of efficiency and also to widen the scope of its service through clinics conducted all over Ontario, the Hospital is compelled to borrow heavily during the year. On the occasion of its fiftieth Christmas an appeal is made to the public for the funds which will allow the Hospital for Sick Children to enter upon its second half-century of service with its courage renewed by a credit balance in the bank.

It is indeed a noble cause which I feel sure you will cordially commend to your readers.

Faithfully yours,
IRVING E. ROBERTSON,
Chairman Appeal Committee

Note—This Hospital does not receive an appropriation from the Federation for Community Service Drive.

PLAY SCOUT BALL

Everybody admires a good sportsman. All of us like to be considered good sportsmen. And we like to believe that Canadians as a whole are all round good sportsmen.

But have we reason to be sure of that? The criticism has been made that we have lost much of the spirit of true sportsmanship through the influence of baseball, particularly the established baseball habit of attempting to "rattle" the visiting pitchers, the "razzing" of home players who make errors, the baiting of umpires, etc. As an extreme example of this you may recall the newspaper story, a month ago, of a prominent Brooklyn National League player who anpounced that he and several others of the team were seriously considering giving up the game, because of the extremely unpleasant remarks continuously thrown at them from the grand stands and bleachers.

What has been your own experience at baseball games? Have you not many times heard the crowd howl mockingly when some player, doing his best, fumbled a ball, or at some exciting moment made a misplay? And have you not frequently heard a crowd, when a home pitcher, previously heroized, has lost control, yell angrily and derisively, "Take him out! Take him out!" ....? Did you ever hear anyone call out, when a pitcher was knocked from the box, and walked despondently from the field, "Never mind, old chap, you'll get them over next time?" Very seldom—although it has been recorded. It was pleasant to read in one newspaper account of the closing incidents of the deciding game of this year's big league championship that the excited Pittsburgh crowd became silent as Walter Johnson, the great Washington pitcher, passed toward the gate, and "hand after hand reached to grasp his and many a time he was told, "We're sorry, Walter, that it had to be you!"

It is an unfortunate fact, however, that this spirit is seldom shown by baseball crowds. And the attitude seems to have crept into the rest of our sport. At Rugby, soccer and hockey games, decisions which do not favor the home team are very frequently booed and hooted. There have been instances of crowds in certain seat sections at professional hockey matches throwing things upon the ice, in order to trip the players. Another angle of bad sportsmanship in amateur baseball or hockey, particularly in small town leagues, is the bringing in of outside players, calling them 'Simon Pures,' and paying them in some surreptitious way for their services.

As to Canadian athletes themselves, their present day standard of sportsmanship is as high as one could find anywhere. While such things as "marking" good men, and "putting them out of business," has not been unknown, this has greatly diminished during recent years, and to-day our boys generally play the game straight, accept the rulings of the referee, and take their knocks in good temper. In this our colleges are setting a splendid lead.

Here is an incident which has passed into the sporting traditions of McGill as a sample of "McGill sportsmanship":

Some three or four years ago during the annual cross-country run between McGill and Toronto Universities, held at Montreal, Wiggins, the McGill long distance star, was running in second place some little distance behind a Toronto runner. Wiggins knew every inch of the course. On arriving at a certain point, he discovered that the 'Varsity man had taken the wrong turn. Wiggins halted, shouted, and brought the 'Varsity runner back, set him on the right road, and allowed him to regain his previous lead before following. And the Toronto man won the race. In other words, although certain victory was offered through his opponent's error, Wiggins refused to take advantage of it—he would win or lose only on a fair test of speed.

Here is another example of the same kind. Some fifteen years ago the tennis team representing England against the United States in the world championship Davis Cup tournament included the famous Doherty brothers. In one of the singles matches one of the brothers was given a point for a ball which he saw cut the back line, instead of clearing it. On the next play he deliberately allowed his opponent to score a point. He would not accept an advantage which he did not think he was entitled to, even when the point had been given him by the judge of play.

After these stories let us read this paragraph from a newspaper account of one of the world series baseball games of this year between Washington and Pittsburgh:

"Stanley Harris showed a nifty piece of baseball strategy when he ordered Johnson to pass Meadows (the Pittsburgh pitcher) in the third. The be-spectacled tosser was paraded to first with one down and was forced to run the paths when Moore hit into a double play. This effort evidently had its effect on Meadows, for he cracked in the fifth, and four singles, three of them in a row, netted the world's champions a pair of counters."

Washington won that game as a result, not of the ability of the Washington players, in a straight test of skill, to hit Meadows, but as a result of tiring him by "chasing him around the bases."

Last year Queen's and 'Varsity were playing the deciding game of the Rugby championship at Toronto. Queen's was two points in the lead. 'Varsity apparently had a chance of scoring. Batstone of Queen's, one of the most brilliant Rugby players of recent years, had the sole torn from his shoe. According to the rules this did not stop the game; Batstone would go off, and a substitute be sent in. Immediately, however, Captain Snider of 'Varsity ordered the game halted, and waited until Batstone could replace the torn shoe and return to the line-up. And Queen's won the game and the championship.

The test of sportsmanship at games is not always confined to those out on the field. Some eight years ago during the Maritime Intercollegiate Rugby final between the University of New Brunswick and Mount Allison, the deciding moment and apparent victory for N. B. came with a run and touchdown during the last few minutes of play. There was a question, however, whether the runner had not stepped over the side line. The linesman, Greg Feeney, of N.B., was appealed to—and declared that the runner had stepped over. This meant the nullifying of the score, and "down" opposite the point of running out. In the tension of the moment the N. B. team and its supporters gathered excitedly about the linesman. "He stepped over. What else could I say?" Feeney insisted. The ball was brought back, and N.B. lost the match and championship. But that fact, and the score of the game, will be forgotten long before Greg Feeney's example of courageous god sportsmanship in a trying situation.

That is the kind of good sportsmanship that is expected of Scouts. Let us make sure that we always play the game that way—and even if the fellows we are up against don't "play the game." Mount Allison University has earned a fine name for good sportsmanship among the Canadian Maritime colleges. A few years back their Rugby team was playing against another team not always noted in this respect. As the game began going against them, the other team began using unsportsmanlike methods. At once from the Mount Allison supporters came the cry, "Play Mount A. ball, boys! Mount A. ball!" That is, "Play square and clean, no matter what the other fellow play."

Let us in our sports make a point of always playing "Scout ball." And let us set that kind of example of good sportsmanship when we are among the onlookers. Of course you will want to see your school or home team win — that is perfectly natural—but never allow yourself to wish to see it win except on its merits, and when playing the game fair and square. That is Scouting in sport. Let's always play "Scout ball."

CALIFORNIA THIS WINTER.

When winter comes let the cold blasts of winter blow you south to California, where the weather is mild, the air invigorating and the breezes balmy, you can enjoy every kind of recreation, careless of time and carefree of weather.

Happy weeks may be spent in great resort hotels, either along the coast or inland. To these alluring winter resorts the Canadian Pacific Railway offers most excellent service, the most convenient and comfortable route.

Let our representative plan your trip and arrange attractive itinerary to California, across Canada, through Vancouver and Victoria, B.C., Canada's gateway to the Orient. Canadian Rocky Mountain scenery is superb in winter.

Mrs. (Dr.) Hess, Mrs. Beavis and Everett Hess called at "Floral Hill Farm" on Tuesday morning.

Mr. Eli Terrill is in Toronto this week.

Mrs. Clarinda Terrill spent the week with Mr. and Mrs. Coombes of Hilton.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Rowe spent Monday in Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Dorland spent Tuesday in Belleville.

Mrs. L. N. Easterly is improving after her illness.

On Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Bert Vansicklin entertained forty guests. The evening was spent in contests, followed with an elaborate lunch, and the social part of the evening was much enjoyed, it being the first party of the season.

Mrs. Clarence McMasters spent ten days in Prince Edward County visiting her uncle, who is very ill.

Mrs. S. Downs of Brighton spent a week with her brother, Mr. R. McMasters.

Miss Pearl Cole fell and cut her knee, which has proven to be serious and she has to go to the doctor daily.

On Tuesday evening the Christian Endeavor of the Friends' Church held a social evening. A programme was provided and the presentation made of an Eversharp pencil to Harry Brown, who, with his parents, are leaving this community in a few weeks. Harry being a favorite, will be greatly missed by his pals. The proceeds of the evening were over $9.00.

LOCAL PLAYERS MAKE GOOD IN MISS BOB WHITE

Show Under Auspices of Kiwanis Club Draws Loud Applause.

WELL STAGED.

Cast Does Excellent Work Under Capable Direction of H. J. Perkins.

(By Jeannette)

"Miss Bob White," the three-act comic opera success which is this year's dramatic presentation by the local Kiwanis Club, had its premier performance in the Grand Opera House last evening. The building was packed for the occasion, every available seat, ncluding boxes, being filled, with a number of people in the upper gallery.

Produced under the personal direction of Howard J. ("Cy") Perkins, to whose vim and enthusiasm much of the success of the production is due, with splendid co-operation from every member of the cast, "Miss Bob White" is a worthy successor of the play given under Kiwanis auspices last spring. It is filled with life and color and the costuming is a very attractive adjunct to the general bright atmosphere that pervades the three acts.

The story of "Miss Bob White" centers about the adventures of two young millionaires who have made and lost a freak election bet, and, as a consequence, are compelled to masquerade as tramps for two months and to incidentally suffer the hardships usua'ly attributed to genuine "Knights of the Road." They take refuge on the farm of an old Quaker, who compels them to work for their keep. The fiancee of one of the unfortunates, hearing of their predicament, herself seeks employment as a milkmaid at the same farm, and in disguise forces from her future husband a true declaration of his love. The first act is a rural scene, Friend Rodd's farm, and is set with rustic bower and a trio of beehives. The kitchen of the same house serves as a setting for the second act and The Billion's country seat, with a pretty garden arrangement, acts as background for the final act.

The cast is excellent and fully lives up to the reputation given Peterboro by Mr. Perkins as a place "where I wouldn't be afraid to ask them to do anything in the dramatic line, because I know they could handle it." Every person appears to be eminently suited to the part portrayed, and they enact their various roles admirably. The applause from the audience last night was sufficient guarantee of the satisfactory manner in which the whole performance was presented, barring one or two small waits which are incidental to most first night productions.

The trio, or perhaps, the quartette, of ladies who have leading roles gave splendid demonstrations of their ability in the dramatic line. Mrs. Walter Byers, who has the title role of "Miss Bob White," a pseudonym taken by Miss Claire Livingston when she dons the garb of a milkmaid, gives a distinctly professional touch to her role. Her presentation of a dual part is splendid and her vivacious personality makes the stellar role exceptionally interesting. Mrs. Byers appears first as the stunning equestrienne, habited and booted in riding garb, and later dons the garb of an equally stunning milkmaid, with rose-colored panniers to a white gown, emerging finally as the society girl, in a very pretty frock.

Miss Mathilde Masson is particularly appealing as a demure Quaker maid and gives a dainty presentation of the pretty young damsel in trim frock of Quaker grey and white, who captures the attention of the philandering Englishman of title, but gives her heart to the farmer lad who becomes a jolly Jack Tar. As Phyllis, daughter of Friend Rodd, Miss Masson adds immensely to the attracion of the production.

Miss Ernestine McManus is Miss Autumn, a one-only-al dame, with a dignified stage presence and a clear, pretty speaking voice that makes her brief speeches very interesting. Miss Autumn is very fond of "Ancestors."

And the fourth lady is Mrs. E. V. Morphet, appearing as Maggie, the maid, and giving a snappy presentation to the role that lifts t out of the minor class and makes it one of those entertaining small parts that require a deft touch. In the trig black and white costume of her part, Mrs. Morphet is an effective foil to the bright-colored dresses around her.

The comedy honors of the piece go to the two tramps, Artie Tre Billion and Billy Van Million, enacted respectively by E. Vernon Morphet and Norman Laing. These two are as good as usual in their roles and evoke plenty of laughter from the audience which listens to their speeches and watches their antics. Injected suddenly into the peaceful atmosphere of a Quaker farm, the pair suffer intensely from the pangs of unrelieved hunger and even the "floating island" presented by a sympathetic milkmaid fails to given them much relief. They are forced to labor for their sustenance and get into a good deal of trouble in their efforts to capture a real live hen that made an evidently unexpected debuit as a stage performer last evening and to iron clothes and knead the dough for a bread-rising. Their listeners and themselves, however, get a good deal of fun out of their predicament. When Artie hides in a flour bin and listens to his lady love receiving a proposal from another man, his mingled emotions have a sensational outlet. Then the wooer is forced to hide in a barrel and a third visitor takes refuge in the wood box, all coming to grief when Billy appears to replenish the various receptacles. The costuming of the pair is decidedly eye-filling. Billy has a vest and neckerchief that speak for themselves in loud accents, and the patches on both suits are placed at decidedly strategic points.

Mr. A. J. Reynolds as Lord Bashful gives the two comedians a run for dramatic honors. His presentation is far above that of the ordinary amateur and his accent and general get-up are absolutely in keeping with his role as an Englishman of title. Lord Bashful falls passionately but inarticulately in love with the demure Quaker girl, who spurns his suit and turns to Jack Harty, the farmer lad who later becomes a tailor, a role played by Hugh Niven in his usual very capable style. Mr. Niven does not appear often in the performance, but he give a snappy presentation of his part. Another excellent presentation is that of Frank G. Stinson, who is Friend Rodd, a Quaker farmer who works tramps. Mr. Stinson has an irreproachable Quaker outfit, with the characteristic Quaker hat and shoes and white collar and cuffs.

Mr. George Henderson has a striking morning suit and does good work in his role of the Duke of High Tit-le-s; Art Blade is a notable figure in bulging white coat, "billy" hat and boatee, as O'Yankemin, the village police force who persists in making life miserable for the two tramps; and Harry C. Huffman is the negro servitor, Devere.

One of the most attractive portions of the entertainment is the musical section. Among the solos and choruses are some of the prettiest specimens of both that have been seen here in any amateur dramatic production of the part, and songs and dances both are done in an outstanding manner.

The first act opens with the brisk Hunting Chorus by a dozen gentlemen in hunting "pink," and these choristers form a colorful background for a number of the ensuing songs and dances. The "Swing Song" is a dainty duet by Miss Masson and Mr. Niven, and the Colonial Dames are a bevy of girls in lovely yellow panniered frocks, with large black picture hats and tall shepherdess' staves. Singing the song of the Famous One-only-al Dames, they are led by Miss McManus' pretty high soprano, with fine effect. The same chorus, augmented by Messrs. Reynolds and Henderson, sing "An English Sparrow Told Me So."

The two tramps, Messrs. Morphet and Laing, have a trio of songs that bring down the house. Their general care-free air and the manner in which they do a number of fantastic steps as an accompaniment to their vocal efforts pleased their audience immensely last evening. They sing "By Chance We're Both Willies," the very funny 'Hunger Song," and "A Tramp Has Ups and Downs in Life."

'Bob White," the quail song, is an odd and effective number with a bird whistle interval, in which Mrs. Byers' splendid voice is heard to excellent advantage with her chorus in sport outfits. Much applause followed this pretty number.

"There Once Was a King," is a tuneful chorus by Miss McManus and her attendant dames, Mr. Reynolds and Mr. Henderson, and the "Churning Song," with the quintette of singers churning vigorously the while, also gets a hearty encore. This is sung in unison by Mrs. Byers, Miss Masson, Messrs. Morphet, Laing and Reynolds.

The opening chorus of the second act by the Milkmaids and Farmerettes received probably the most enthusiastic encore of the evening. This was a catchy affair, with a group of young ladies doing a little dance and song in farmerette costumes of blue and pink. The persistent applause brought them back for a repetition of the fetching number.

The loveliest solo number of the evening is the "Mystery of Love," rendered beautifully by Mrs. Byers, with ensemble chorus as finale to the second act.

A particularly attractive solo and chorus that serves as an opening for the finale act is "Meet Me Tonight in Bubble Land," with Miss Masson's lovely voice in the solo part and the chorus taken by fifty small girls in white frocks. The soft stage lighting and the colored balloons used in this selection make it exceptionally pretty and received much appreciation from the audience last night.

"I Can't Help Loving Every Girl I See," is one of those choruses that have a professional touch to it. Mr. Hugh Niven sings the solo in his characteristic snappy fashion and is accompanied very happily by a bevy of pretty girls in pretty frocks. And the "Flirtation Chorus" is another interesting chorus by a mixed group of young ladies and men, who sing, "I Just Came In to Say Hello," to much applause.

"If You Would Be a Jackie," by Mr. Niven and his attendant jolly Jack Tars, girls in sailor suits doing a catchy sailor dance, is another jolly chorus, and the finale is a repetition of the haunting "Mystery of Love" music. The applause that followed the final curtain was sufficient guarantee of the interest that held the audience from start to finish of "Miss Bob White" and of the entertainment that may be expected by those attending the second performance this evening.

The Grand Opera House Orchestra rendered several fine numbers before the rise of the curtain last evening, and, between acts, the Rotarians, who attended in a body, sitting in the balcony, sang several old favorite songs, led by Mr. Douglas Carlisle, with Mrs. Foster playing violin accompaniment, and Miss Isabel Donnelly at the piano. A word regarding Miss Donnelly is distinctly in order. The work of accompanist to such a production as "Miss Bob White," with the many types of songs contained therein, is an arduous task, but Miss Donnelly completed it with skilful ease, her careful piano accompaniments adding much to the general excellence of the production.

Mr. Perkin sappeared for a few minutes between acts to express his appreciation of the co-operation afforded him in his task by the Kiwanians and the general public. "This is the most professional looking show, from my standpoint, of "Miss Bob White," that I have had anything to do wit," he said, and characteristically finished with a wish to the audience for a "Merry Christmas and Happy New Year."

Colonial Dames: The Misses Effie Dick, Melbt Doughty, Jessie French, Ruth McLeish, Adelle Robinson, Gertrude Gimblett, Irene Buchanan, Violet McKeown, Daisy Davidson, Eva Fife, and Olive Bacon.

TRUTH VERSUS ERROR.

The "fear" of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom, Prov. 9.10. The word fear used in this connection does not mean an apprehension of danger or evil; but it does mean reverence and obedience. Those who fear the Lord, should not dishonor the name of God, by associating that Holy Name, with doctrine, which represent our Heavenly Father as purposing the endless torment of nearly all our race. We should be zealous in putting down error, that blasphemes the name of God. The writer has been accused of speaking harshly in his efforts, from time to time, to state the truth. Please note, I do not wish to speak harshly of any individual, and kindly excuse my crude way of expressing what is in my heart and mind. It is quite a few years ago, when I was led to vow, "to accept truth wherever I found it, or whatever it may be." What I have lost by keeping that vow has been real gain.

Around The City.

A chimney fire at 236 Rubidge street gave the firemen a trip at 7.18 last night. The slippery condition of the roof, due to the accumulation of snow and ice, was responsible for an accident to one of the firemen, Lieutenant McBride, who had the misfortune to slip off the roof and fall to the ground, luckily without serious injury to himself.

Chimney fires resulted in two trips for the firemen this morning, the first call being received at 7.48 a.m. and the second at 9.27 a.m. No damage was caused by either.

CONVENT PUPILS GIVE PROGRAMME

St. Alphonsus' Lyceum is the Scene of Pleasant Gathering.

Last evening the parents and friends of the music pupils of St. Mary's Convent gathered at St. Alphonsus' Lyceum to enjoy a very carefully prepared and well rendered programme of music and song.

The stage, tastefully decorated for the occasion, presented a picture of rare beauty as the pupils sang their "Chorus of Welcome."

The violin and piano numbers, which followed were brilliant, and were characterized by a skillful interpretation and remarkable precision on the part of the youthful performers. "The Angel's Prayer" and "Prince Charming," by St. Peter's School Orchestra deserves special commendation, the personnel of the orchestra being: 1st violin, Joseph Nolan, Frank Grant, John Burke; 2nd violin, Miss Noreen MacPherson, Miss Mildred Kennedy; 1st mandolin, George Reynolds; 2nd Mandolin, Miss Eleanor Grisdale; piano, Miss Hilda Sullivan. In fact, each number, whether solo, duo, concerto or orchestra, reflected no small amount of credit on both pupils and teachers.

The Rainbow Drill was especially interesting and evinced careful training, while the "wee tots" were well deserving of the hearty applause received. One could easily forget the winter snows as the dainty "flowers" executed the various figures of the drill.

The Prologue read by Miss Aileen Reynolds told the story of violet's triumph and of her being given first place in the rainbow. Her modesty and humility, while the other flowers disputed as to who should be placed first, won that honour for her. The following girls represented the rainbow: Kathleen Furlong, violet; Marcelle Minicolo, clematis; Rita Young, forget-me-not; Monica Reynolds, asparagus; Margaret Lucano, buttercup; Catherine Corkery, marigold; Isobel Duffus, rose. Little Miss Kathleen Furlong delighted the appreciative audience, also, when in her simple baby way, she recited the poem, "Little Jesus."

The closng number, the "Ave Maris Stella" by Rosewig and also the part song, were sung with great purity of tone and expression and gave evidence of the vocal training which the children have received.

At the conclusion of the programme, His Lordship, Bishop O'Brien, who presided, after presenting the diplomas to the pupils who were successful in the recent music examinations expressed his appreciation of the evening's entertainment.

His Lordship also congratulated the parents on the effort they were making to develop the artistic in their children, for having just come from Rome, where one sees so much of art, he appreciated even more than before, its refining influence. He said he was glad that the children here had such splendid opportunities to advance in music and that so many were availing themselves of these opportunities.

The followng is the programme:
Greeting Chorus; Concerto, G. minor, by Mendelssohn, the Misses Alma Archambault and Lucille Nolan; Piano solo, "Ecossaises," Miss Margaret Carroll; Rainbow drill by the little ones; piano solo, "Rondo Capriciosso," by Mendelssohn, Miss Martha Baumer; Part Song, "The Skylark's Song," with the Misses Veronica Scollard, Helen Archambault, Isabel Flint, Lucille Nolan, Mary Buchanan, Noreen MacPherson, Marion Fitzpatrick, Hilda Sullivan, Mary Reynolds, and Eleanor Grisdale; violin solo, "Romance," Mr. Joseph Nolan, piano quartette "The Camp of Glory," the Misses Hilda Sullivan, Mary Reynolds, Helen Archambault, Veronica Scollard; piano solo, "On the Highway," Miss Eleanor Grisdale; piano duo, "Charge of the Hussars," the Misses Martha Baumer and Olive O'Connell; numbers by St. Peter's School Orchestra, "The Angel's Prayer" and "Prnce Charming"; closing chorus, "Ave Maris Stella."

BRIAND ANNOUNCES HIS LIST OF CABINET MINISTERS AND WILL PRESENT THEM TO PRESIDENT

Falls Short of Great Concentration of Parties That Was Expected.

EXTREMISTS OUT.

Neither Communists or Nationalists Are Represented in New Ministry.

PARIS, Nov. 28 (Canadian Press) — France's seven-day ministerial crisis is ended. Leaving the Elysee Palace after conference with President Doumergue today, Aristide Briand, Premier-designate, announced that his cabinet list was complete. Members of the new cabinet will be presented to the President this afternoon.

Briand's new cabinet, while falling short of the great concentration of all parties hoped for in many quarters to face the precarious financial situation, is composed of the safest element in Parliament, and is the most moderate body of ministers assembled since the elections of May, 1924.

The complete elimination of the extremists both of the Communists and Socialists of the Left and the Nationalists of the Right, is one of its features.

The groups represented in the Cabinet by the various ministers command 269 votes in the Chambers of Deputies, out of a total membership of 597. It is expected that the more moderate elements of the Right and Centre will vote with the Government on the ministerial declaration of policy next Thursday.

Family Won't Bury Man Fear He May Be Alive

ENID, Okla., Nov. 28 (United News).—G. W. Cupp, 73, a wealthy land owner, has been pronounced dead by two physicians but his family refuses to allow him to be buried.

Several weeks ago, according to relatives, Cupp passed into a state of coma following an attack of epilepsy and later recovered. The family refuses to take a chance of burying Cupp alive, so will keep a vigil over his body for several days to make sure that he is dead, they announced last night.

OBITUARY

GORDON LAWRENCE LANE.

The death occurred yesterday at the family residence, 255 George Street, of Gordon Lawrence Lane, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel J. Lane. The funeral took place this afternoon to the Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. A. J. Langford of Trinity United Church officiated.

THE WEATHER

Bad weather has been associated with Sunday so regularly and persistently this year, that many will, by force of habit seek an umbrella when they saunter forth to church to-morrow morning. However it is doubtful if it will be needed, though it may prove useful as an improvised walking stick. Temperature this morning 20 degrees. At noon about the same figures. Temperatures all through the west range low, and run from zero to 30 below. This cold wave is passing north of us, but we will probably feel some of its effects. —W. P.

BRIAND ANXIOUS TO ESTABLISH PEACE IN EUROPE AND ARRANGE FOR SETTLING DEBT TO AMERICA

Premier Will Have Majority of French Chamber--Loucheur Finance Minister.

NEGOTIATE WITH U. S.

Restoration of French Finances Major Problem Confronting New Ministry.

PARIS, Nov. 30. — (Canadian Press). — Immediate ratification of the Locarno pact, reform of the electoral law, one year military service and a plan for the restoration of French finances, of which prompt settlement of the United States debt is one of the most important features, are the four main points in the Ministerial declaration of the new Briand Cabinet discussed at the first Council of Ministers held under the presidency of M. Doumergue last evening.

M. Loucheur, the Finance Minister, will require about ten days to prepare his financial restoration plan but the Under-Secretary of Finance, Paul Morel, is already at work study ing what proposition can be made to the United States for a settlement.

The question of sending Senator Berenger to Washington to resume the debt negotiations is understood to have been raised again, and M. Berenger had a long conference on Sunday with Premier Briand and M. Loucheur.

One Year Military Service.

The one year military service is the logical outcome of a plan for reforms in the French army, which M. Painleve, as Minister of War, was elaborating when his first Cabinet was defeated last October. The insistence of M. Painleve that he would retain the war portfolio and his refusal to accept any other Ministry was due to his desire to put the measure through.

The electoral law reform bill as contemplated means the return to district or arrondisement polling, instead of having one list alone for each department. Should dissolution of the Chamber come the effect of the new electoral law would probably strengthen both extreme Lefts and Rights, with virtual elimination of the Centre.

Majority For Briand.

The French press is unanimously enthusiastic concerning M. Briand personally, but his selection of the members of his Cabinet is received with mingled expressions of approval and criticism. M. Briand will have no difficulty in putting the Locarno accords through Parliament and is also certain to obtain a good majority on his Ministerial declaration, political experts of all shades agree. A canvass of the Chamber shows that the Premier probably will receive between 300 and 320 votes against 100 to 130, with about 80 abstentions.

As a prelude to the policy of economy, Leon Perrier, Minister of the Colonies, has caused M. Doumergue to sign a decree postponing the colonial exposition, which was to have been held in Paris in 1927 until [illegible].

A Reluctant Premier.

M. Briand, who now heads the Government of his country for the eighth time, would have much preferred to remain simply Minister of Foreign Affairs under another Premier than to become Chief of the Cabinet he finally formed and presented to the President of the Republic Saturday after vexatious difficulties that beset him up to the last moment.

What are the reasons for this attitude, which seems so strange on the part of a politician? The chief reason is that the veteran statesman would like to give his whole time to the task of bringing peace to Europe, which task, so far as France is concerned, is the job of the Quai d'Orsay. Then again he feels that the financial problem, which is the central problem of any French Government now, had better be handled by others. Furthermore, M. Briand's health is poor—he is suffering from arterio-sclerosis—and he dreads the strain of conducting the fierce Chamber debates sure to come in connection with fiscal reform.

When called to the Elysee Friday for the second time in one week, M. Briand repeated these reasons to President Doumergue and insisted that the task be given to another.

Persuaded By the President.

The President of the Republic explained that M. Briand seemed to be the only man able to form a Government in Centre which had a chance of a majority, and that if he refused conditions might force a Socialist Government. M. Doumergue is said to have added that if M. Briand refused he would resign the next day.

In face of this appeal M. Briand agreed to form a Government and thus sacrifice his two days' weekly fishing trip prescribed by his doctor and his wish to give his whole time to the Foreign Office task of bringing a new international regime to Europe.

With M. Briand the spirit of Locarno has become a religion. He believes firmly that the time is ripe to wipe out the aftermaths of the war and, further, he believes that with the co-operation of Austen Chamberlain Britain and France can bring about that result. Every one wants him at the Quai d'Orsay. Among all the Premiership possibilities mentioned in the last week each accepted M. Briand as Foreign Minister. He was sure of his job. Now he faces the danger of being thrown out of office on some angle of the financial situation, about which he knows and cares little beyond his academic interest as a patriotic Frenchman.

His Finance Minister may any day make a mistake which will cost the whole Government its tenure of office, and while his successor might keep M. Briand as Foreign Minister he might not. And certainly any interruption or change at the Quai d'Orsay might dampen the Locarno spirit. That is what M. Briand fears. That is why it is possible that if once he gets his new Government established with a solid majority he may turn over the Premiership to some once else, so that he can concentrate on the Quai d'Orsay.

An English sea captain and three companions are about to start on a voyage around the world in a 40-foot converted lifeboat. The trip will occupy between two and three years, and will cover roughly 38,000 miles.

Bank Radiator Ideal Place For Keeping Warm Sunday

NEW YORK, Nov. 30. (United Press).—To keep warm on a cold Sunday, the best procedure is to enter a bank and sit on the radiator. This, on the authority of Maurice Sweeney, of Syracuse, and Wilson Tyle, of Chicago, both 18, who were found by a watchman, patrolmen and detectives in a midtown savings bank yesterday. They said they had seen an open door, had walked in, spent a few minutes riding up and down in an elevator, and finally sat down on a radiator to keep warm. Taken to the night court, they were held in $500 bail each on a disorderly conduct charge for sentence on Wednesday.

Hebrides Drop Oatmeal For Tea, Bread and Jam

LONDON, Nov. 30. — The Scots of the Isle of Skye and the Outer Hebrides have abandoned their traditional oatmeal for a more luxurious diet of tea, white bread and jam. This fact has been brought out by the Chief Medical Officer for Inverness-shire, which includes Skye, who declares the change is "dietetic folly" and is the result of indolence.

The medical officer says that radio, crossword puzzles and other modern ideas are threatening to spoil the islanders and to remove all the picturesqueness of the country of the crofters, as the small Highland farmers are called.

The authorities of the region are making attempts to introduce easier methods of preparing porridge so that the islanders will not stick to their new tea-and-bread diet simply because it is easier to make ready for the table.

STATESMEN ARE GATHERING FOR SIGNING PACTS

Rumor Says Chamberlain Will Be Honored By the King.

BRIAND ON WAY.

Many Leaders and Members of Cabinet Will Attend Ceremony.

LONDON, Nov. 30 (Canadian Press) — Preparations for signing the treaties of Locarno tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock are virtually complete.

The gathering is not to be limited to the actual signatories and will include Premier Baldwin and several of the members of his cabinet and Baron D'Abernon, the British Ambassador to Germany, who is considered as having aided materially in obtaining Germany's adhesion to the security pact.

There is an unconfirmed report that King George will confer a high honor on Right Hon. Austen Chamberlain, secretary for foreign affairs, prior to the signing of the treaties, in the presence of visiting plenipotentiaries.

Briand On Way

PARIS, Nov. 30 (Canadian Press)—Premier Briand left today for London to participate in the signing of the Locarno security pact tomorrow. Foregn minister Benes of Czecho-Slovakia, and Herr Von Soesch, German ambassador in Paris, saw him off at the station.

Husband Suffered Flesh Wounds—Car Was Demolished.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Nov. 30.—(Canadian Press).—Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Herron, 76 Westmount Avenue, Toronto, escaped death ouly by inches when the coupe in which they were riding was struck by the locomotive of a westbound Canadian National Railroad passenger train on Wilson Street crossing on Saturday, the occupants being thrown from the wreckage, later being removed to the General Hospital, where the condition of Mrs. Herron was reported as critical late yesterday afternoon. She is suffering from severe scalp and flesh wound, three fractured ribs, two fractures of the left leg and severe shock.

Mr. Herron, who was driving the car, and who failed to observe the approaching train, is less seriously injured and sustained a number of flesh wounds in addition to severe lacerations of the scalp. The auto was reduced to a flattened mass of junk.

FINDS BODY OF BOY UNDER BED

Bronx Girl Returns to Home and Makes Gruesome Find.

New York, Nov. 30. Canadian Press —Margaret Pirie, aged 16, returned to her Bronx home, where she lived with her brother, from a visit to New Jersey, and found that she had forgotten her keys. She climbed in a window, stepped into a bedroom and screamed.

Beneath the bed was the dead body of a youth. His head badly crushed, was wrapped in two cement bags and a pair of trousers. A rope was around his neck. The body was later identified as that of George Nye, aged 19, the son of a city fireman.

According to Nye's friends, he was a companion of Gordon Pirie, Margaret's brother. Detectives are now searching for the brother.

ADAM SANDS ELECTED MEMBER OF BOYS' PARLIAMENT IN CITY

Majority Over Ted Outram in Saturday's Polling Was 37.

EXPRESSES THANKS.

Session Starts in Toronto on December 28—Gallery Open.

Adam Sands, a member of the Delta Group of St. Paul's church, was elected to the Boys' Parliament by a majority of 37 over his opponent, Ted Outram, on Saturday night.

The Parliament will meet on Monday, December 28th, and the inaugural session will be held in the Legislative Assembly Chambers, Queen's Park, and will continue in session until Thursday, the 31st.

The Visitors' Gallery will be open to the public and it is hoped that as in other years, many people will avail themselves of this opportunity of learning what is in the heart and mind of youth. The ages of the members run from 16 to 21 years, and most of the boys are experienced speakers. Their platform ability, as well as their grasp of the subjects which they discussed, was a great surprise to those who attended the sessions of parliament last year.

While in the city the boys will be entertained by the Ontario Boys' Work Board, the Toronto Rotary Club and other organizations interested in boy life.

The total membership in the House will most likely run around 108.

Victor's Thanks.

To the Bay Electors of Peterboro:

I wish to take this opportunity of expressing my gratitude to all boys of the city who turned out to work and vote on my behalf.

I will go to Toronto to work for the problems that mostly concern us all and come back equipped to explain the parliament to you in all the Sunday schools of the city. Yours sincerely,

ADAM SANDS.

MINERS ACCEPT PINCHOT'S PLAN TO END STRIKE

Decision Sunday in Response to Prospals by Pennsylvania Governor.

SETTLEMENT BASIS

No Reply Received From Anthracite Operators — Award Board Suggested.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 30 (Canadian Press).—Representatives of the United Mine Workers yesterday accepted "as a basis of settlement" the plan submitted to them Saturday by Governor Pinchot for ending the present suspension of hard coal mining.

They agreed to meet the operators' representatives in joint conference at any time to negotiate an agreement covering the proposals submitted by Mr. Pinchot and announced that promptly after such an agreement on the part of the operators, they will arrange to resume mining at the earliest possible date.

The action of the miners was taken at a meeting here Sunday afternoon of union officials and members of the tri-district scale committee, which gathered here Saturday to receive the Governor's proposition.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, who with other union officials attended the meeting immediately afterward sent a letter to Governor Pinchot announcing the action taken.

Operators Absent.

Although the operators' negotiating committee had been invited to attend the conference, at which the Governor presented his plan, only the miners were present. Major W. W. Inglis, chairman of the operators, wired Mr. Pinchot that it was impossible to get his committee together in time.

The Governor, however, held that the suggestions must be made public and went ahead. His proposals contained 11 points, covering the main issues which caused a deadlock in the negotiations last August. The principal features of his plan are:

Creation of a "Board of Investigation and Award" to be chosen by the operators and miners, with authority to determine whether costs justify increased wages, and to make an award within six months if an increase is warranted; a five year agreement with NO increase in coal prices beyond those scheduled for 1923, a modified form of "check-off" under which operators would honor voluntary assignments of wages for union dues up to $14, without full recognition of the union; equalization of wages by the existing anthracite conciliation board and termination of the present suspension and immediate resumption of mining.

Emphasizes No Price Increase.

In Governor Pinchot's mind the outstanding feature of any settlement is that the price of coal to the consumer shall not be increased. He thought this clause so important that he repeated it.

The suggestion that the Board of Investigation and Award, really an arbitration board, determine and "recommend" the best plan to avoid future suspensions apparently would not bind either side to accept the board's findings. To that extent the arbitration board would not have compulsory powers. Such powers would be limited to a wage increase.

The clauses concerning the duties of the Board of Award gave rise to the inquiry whether the Governor did not mean that during the five-year contract the board should have power to recommend a "sliding scale" of wages. Such a proposal, if the yardstick of wages were the cost of living, is similar to a proposal made last Summer by the operators and which met with a prompt rejection by the miners.

The Governor's suggestion concerning equalization of wages, a long-standng grievance, may result, if carried out, in a wage reduction for a small number of men, but in the main would mean higher wages for a larger number.

The check-off of union dues and assessments and a wage increase of 10 per cent. where the chief demands of the miners when they met the operators last Summer in Atlantic City to negotiate a new wage scale. The Pinchot plan gives to the miners a voluntary check-off by those who wish to make such an assignment, but refuses the increase demanded.

Bicyclist Succumbs To Injuries In Auto Crash

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Nov. 30. — (Canadian Press.) — George McGugan, Simcoe street, died in the General Hospital Saturday night as the result of injuries received when he was hurled to the pavement from his bicycle after a collision with an automobile driven by Lloyd McMurray, at the corner of Winnett and Dundas streets on Friday night. McGugan was rendered unconscious by the accident and was removed to the hospital, where it was found that he had suffered a broken collarbone and a fractured skull, the latter injury apparently proving the cause of death.

Dr. Andrew McKay, coroner, has ordered an inquest, which will be opened this afternoon.

MAN RAN AMUCK TWO MEN DEAD ANOTHER HURT

Crazed By Moonshine, D. Barit Shot Man in Quarrel and Fired Into Crowd.

CONFESSED KILLINGS.

Said There Were Two More Bodies in Woods Near Scene of Shooting.

PORT ARTHUR, Nov. 30.—(Canadian Press).—With two men dead, and a third in a serious condition in Port Arthur Hospital, following a shooting affray at Graham, Ont., on Saturday night, Provincial Police to-day were working on a new angle of the affair. D. Barit, 21, also known as St. Germain, formerly of Three Rivers, Quabec, is held in Port Arthur Jail, pending a court inquiry this afternoon. He is alleged to have fired the fatal shots and, according to the police, has confessed to the killing of two other men. He is said to have said that their bodies are in the bush near Graham. The Provincial Police are checking up his story.

Crazed With Moonshine.

Crazed with moonshine, Barit and a companion arrived at Graham late Saturday night. They got into an altercation with Mike Lazocachka, a section foreman, and Barit is alleged to have killed him with a bullet from a repeating rifle. The section man was shot through the heart.

Thirty people attending a dance ran to the station when they heard the shot and Barit commenced firing into the crowd.

The answer was another shot, and Lefebvre dropped dead, a bullet in his heart.

The crowd closed in on Barit, and he fired again, wounding Kost Syrbid, a section foreman. The gun was knocked from his hands, and he was trussed up until the arrival of the police.

PEKING DISPLAY BY MOB SERIOUS

DEMAND ARMS.

LONDON, Nov. 30 (Canadian Press)—The Peking correspondent of the Daily Mail describes the demonstrations there on Saturday as the most serious display, in extent and determination, of militant communist propaganda in Peking for many months. After being worked into a frenzy by speeches against the powers, a mob of 3,000 youths, young men and girls, wearing red armlets and carrying clubs, marched to the residences of eleven governmental officials, including two ministers, and wrecked the interiors. This was done as a protest against the officials' opposition to the Extremist faction. The mob then went to the presidential mansion and, with menacing gestures, presented a demand for "a people's government and the arming of the proletariat."

TIDAL WAVE SWEEPS TWO ITALIAN TOWNS AND SNOW BURIES PARTS OF ENGLAND, FRANCE AND SPAIN

EUROPE SHIVERS

Sharp Invasion of Winter in Regions Unused to Cold.

PARIS, Nov. 30. — (Canadian Press Cable, via Reuter's).—Stormy weather continues along the whole coast of France, while the cold is tense in the eastern, central and southern sections of the country. Winter weather at this time of the year in the south of France is particularly remarkable. The district most severely affected, however, is the Vosges region where the passes are blocked with snow and where the frost registered 29 degrees on Sunday. The town of Remiremont is snowed up and all vehicular traffic is impossible.

Schooner Missing.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 30.—(Canadian Press).—The Dutch naval pilot schooner with a crew of 13 left Terschelling Island early Tuesday and has not since been reported. It is feared that the vessel was lost in the gale Thursday night.

Italian Towns Inundated.

NAPLES, Nov. 30.—A tidal wave sweeping in during a terrific storm, has devastated the Town of Bagnara, in Calabria, near the Strait of Messina. The nearby Port of Monteleone di Calabria also suffered heavily. No estimate of casualties is available.

The populations of both these towns fled in terror from their homes. Houses were torn down from their foundations by a deluge caused by rain and incoming sea water. Waves of great height are reported. A few tugs are known to have been sunk.

Bagnara has a population of about 7,500 and Monteleone about 10,000.

The storm was general along the south-western Italian coast and Northern Sicily. Many parts of the country-side suffered heavy damage.

The greatest force of the storm was felt in Sicily and the Province of Calabria. Many persons are known to have been injured and scores of homes damaged. Communications were disrunted, railway tracks being washed out, and telegraph and telephone lines broken.

The storm was also heavy at sea, where disasters are feared, although none have been reported. Three steamships were damaged, but succeeded in reaching port safely.

Three men are reported to have been drowned near Salerno, thirty miles south-east of Naples.

England Deep in Snow.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—England on Saturday was the England as Mr. Pickwick and Sam Weller knew it. There was more snow on the ground and ice on the rivers and lakes than the present inhabitants of this isle have been accustomed to connect with anything more English than the picture postcards or tales of their grandfathers.

Golf and racing fixtures had to be cancelled. On the other hand, winter sports, for which Londoners are wont to go to Switzerland, were in full progress at Hampstead Heights and there was skating in the London parks.

It is true that there was also bathing in the Serpentine, where half a dozen men in scanty costume broke the ice and immersed themselves in water of lower than cocktail temperature and then danced around a bonfire of newspapers. But these were hardy veterans, celebrating the birthday of Robert Ledger, a 75-year-old Londoner, who has bathed daily in the city's manufactured lake for the past forty years.

Where London has inches of snow the country has feet. The severest snowstorm was in the East Yorkshire wolds which was accompanied, strangely enough, by thunder and lightning. A motor 'bus full of passengers had to be dug out, and if John Ridd were still living he could repeat one deed recorded of his, since sheep are buried in snow on the higher wolds, just as they were in the great snowstorms of his time.

Grave Diggers On Strike Ask More Money, Less Work

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 30 (United Press)—Approximately 250 union grave diggers and caretakers in five Chicago cemeteries went on strike today for higher wages and a shorter day. If the strike is successful officials will strike in all local cemetries, it is said.

The workers want a minimum of $6 a day, an eight hour day and recognition of their organization. The present wage is from $4 to $5 a day with a nine hour working day.

The Cemetery Employees' Union has 3,000 members, Frank T. Murphy, secretary, said.

caught in a furious gale outside Brittany's "graveyard," Raz de Sein. Three fishing smacks, warned by land signals, managed to reach shelter with the assistance of lifeboats; the others were swept away.

Heavy snowstorms prevail through out France, with a severe fall in the temperature, as much as fourteen degrees below freezing, Fahrenheit, has been registered in various towns in Central France, while furs are at a premium at Cannes, Nice and Monte Carlo, where the thermometer stands at the lowest in the past decade.

Lisbon Damaged By Floods.

LISBON, Portugal, Nov. 30. — Scores of persons have been injured and large property damage has been done in Lisbon and the surrounding country by heavy storms. Torrents flooded hundreds of houses in the city, streets have been torn up and railway lines washed out.

Many residences have collapsed, and rescue contingents are at work endeavoring to save those known to be buried in the wreckage.

An airplane which was to convey General Primo de Rivera and the Duke of Vittoria from Seville to Madrid, is swamped in an airdrome and unable to depart.

Spain Shivers in Snow.

MADRID, Nov. 30. — Storms in South-Eastern Spain have caused much damage to the beaches, ports and shipping. There has been a steady rise of the rivers, with the temperature sinking perceptibly.

The Castilla plateau in Aragon is covered with snow. The temperature at Valladolid, one of Spain's tropical regions, has gone as low as 40 degrees, Fahrenheit.

Snow covers the streets of Madrid to a sufficient depth to interfere seriously with street car service. From various ports comes word of shipwrecks and damage to lighthouses, but details of the losses have not been received.

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Nov. 30.—Three inches of snow fell Friday night. This is the heaviest fall experienced here since 1900.

MODEL PUBLIC MARKET

MOSCOW, Nov. 30 — A model public market, to cost $5,000,000, is planned by the Moscow municipality to replace the row of shops which for a century has made Hunters Row, in the center of Moscow, a welter of vegetables, fish, fruit, meat and flowers.

The building will be a "skyscraper" six stories high, with the market in the basement. All the institutions of the Moscow municipality will be housed in it.

Cold Winter In Canada Says Prophet In France

CAEN, France, November 30. —Canadian Press. — It is going to be a cold winter in Canada, as well as all around the 41st parallel of latitude, as cold as the winter of 1740, in England, when the Thames froze over.

This prediction is made by Abbe Gabriel, France's most distinguished meteorologist and professor, in the University of Caen.

All of Canada and the whole of the Northern part of the United States, will have a bitterly cold winter, which ought to set in about the middle of December or early in January," the priest meteorologist said. Abbe Gabriel's prediction is based on the supposed existence of astronomic cycles.

BULLET WOUND PROVED FATAL

Man Died Following Wound From .22 Rifle Bullet.

SHOT BY BOY.

PORT ARTHUR, Nov. 30 (Canadian Press).—William C. Munro, 43, who was shot in the abdomen with a 22 bullet from a rifle in the hands of W. Roberts, 10 years old, a week ago, died Saturday.

After the two had returned from a hunting trip the boy was firing at targets in the yard. When Mr. Munro went to the kitchen door to call him for supper, the boy suddenly turned and at the same time the rifle discharged, the bullet hitting the man standing in the doorway.

Volume Of Trade Increased With Mixed Price Trend

TORONTO, November 30. Canadian Press. — Trend was mixed on Toronto exchange this morning. The trading after opening was light but increased in volume and a wide list was dealt in with Canadian Bakeries and Davis "A" stocks the active leaders. Bakeries common sold up to 40, easing a point at the morning close for a net advance of 3 points, while the preferred lost a point at 95. Davies "A" common was in like manner sold up 1 5-8 points at 35 7-8. Twin City advanced 3-4.

British Columbia Fishing, Brazilian, Canners preferred, Canada Bread, and Consolidated Smelters fare all slightly lower.

Trading On Reduced Sale With Lower Price Trend

TORONTO, Nov. 30. (Canadian Press).—With trading fairly heavy, the market was generally firm on the Standard Mining Exchange this morning. Goldale, the active leader, was sold up a point and a quarter to 34 3-4, and the active Vipond advanced seven at 129. Keora and Tough Oakes were fractionally easier, and Teck Hughes, in fairly heavy dealings, lost a point at 224. In the Silvers, Coniagas was marked up to 5.00, then down a dollar at the morning close, which at 4.00 was 75 above Saturday's mark. Nipissing gained 20, Castle Tretheway five, Capitol two, and Canadian Lorrain one.

Argentine and Liverpool News Affects Wheat Price

CHICAGO, Nov. 30 (Canadian Press) — With reports of better weather conditions in Argentina and with a decided fall in Liverpool prices, the wheat market here underwent an early set back today. On the set back, however, business expanded and material recoveries took place. The recovery was helped by advces that exports of wheat from Russia had been embargoed and that no export wheat would be available from Northern Argentina, where the crop was said to be virtually a failure. Chicago opening prices, 1 1-2 to 2 1-2c lower, new style, December 162 to 162 1-4 and May 157 to 157 5-8, were followed by upturns which lifted December to 163 1-8 and May to 158 1-4.

Corn and Oats were easy, sympathizing with wheat weakness. After open 1-4 to 3-4c off, May 78 to 78 3-8, the corn market reacted to about the same as Saturday's finish. Oats started unchanged to 1-2c lower, May 42 3-4 to 43 and held near to the initial figures.

Trading Heavy, Price Firm, On Standard Mine Market

NEW YORK, November 30. — Canadian Press. — Reactionary tendencies again predominated in today's stock market. While the rise in the call money rate to 5½ per cent. was generally regarded as temporary and due to a decrease in excess reserve shown in last Saturday's clearing house statement, and the usual withdrawal of interior funds in connection with month end requirements, it served to accentuate the selling movement. An early effort to rally the general list by bidding up rails failed to make much headway, although Kansas City, Southern and the Gimbel Brothers issues were lifted to new peak prices for the year. Trading was on a reduced scale.

No one charges, however, that the printing of wreck news encourages wreckless driving.

DISARMAMENT IS ONLY SOLUTION EUROPE'S PEACE

What Comes After Locarno is Question Asked in England.

ONLY A BEGINNING.

Other Countries Besides France and Germany Need Peace Guarantees.

LONDON, November 30. Canadian Press. — "What is to come after Locarno"

This is the question the British press and the public are asking. Ramsay MacDonald, former Premier Lloyd George, Viscount Cecil and Austen Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary, have repeatedly stated that the Locarno pact, which will be signed in Tuesday next, merely marks the beginning of Europe's peace. It settles the differences between France and Germany, but other European states, and Great Britain, now need guarantees against war.

Disarmament is conceded to be the only solution but how this can be affected with safety and justice to all is the burning question.

Viscount Cecil indicated recently in the House of Lords that Great Britain was seriously considering a new disarmament conference and will very shortly bring out disarmament plans of its own.

CALEDONIANS KEEP ST. ANDREW'S NIGHT

Address By Rev. William Allan Was Main Item of Good Programme.

The Peterboro Caledonian Club met in the S.O.E. Hall on Friday evening, November 27th, to celebrate St. Andrew's night. A large number of members and friends were present to listen to a most enjoyable concert, and an address by Rev. Wm. Allan of St. Paul's church. Hon. G. N. Gordon, Hon. President of the Club, was chairman, and opened the programme with a few well chosen words regarding the Club, at the same time welcoming Mr. Allan, who was making his first appearance at the Club.

The programme:

Song, "My Ain Folk," Miss J. Pattison; two selections, "Juanita" and "Aunt Margery," by the Harmony Quartette, composed of Messrs. Lee, Turner, Worrell and Baldry; two songs, "Bird of Heaven," and "Mary of Argyle," by Mrs. E. Kitney; banjo solo, "Bonnie Doon," by Mr. F. Clarke; address by Rev. Wm. Allan; two songs, "Robin Adair," and "Ye Banks and Braes," by Miss Pattison; two selections, "The Tack," and "Motherland," by the Harmony Quartette; two songs, "In the Garden of To-morrow," and "The Lilac Tree," by Mrs. Kitney; two banjo selections "Mary, my Scotch Blue Bell," and "All Coons Look Alike to Me," by Mr. Clarke; humorous reading "The Gas Account," by Mr. J. Grierson, "God Save the King."

The accompanists were Miss M. Wood and Mr. S. Roe.

Mr. Allan opened his address with a few remarks about St. Andrew, saying that his connection with Scotland was mythical, and nobody knew exactly how he came to be chosen as Scotlands patron saint. He went on to say that Scotland had produced some of the world's greatest men and had undoubtedly produced the greatest preachers of the present age.

Passing from this subject Mr. Allan then proceeded to entertain the company with a story, which he said might be called "The Reminiscences and Recollections of a Rolling Stone."

Scotsmen were naturally of a roving disposition, and he had been born with more than the usual share of restlessness, which moved him to set sail for Australia in the summer of 1913, visiting Cape Town on the way. He spoke of the beautiful scenery and charcteristics of the different places which he visited in Australia and elsewhere, and told how he eventually landed in New York, via Fiji, Hawaii, Vancouver and Toronto. New York, he said, had a most irresistible attraction for him, and in order to keep in touch with it he had purchased one of the best radio sets on the market.

Mr Allan is possessed of a very keen sense of humour and delighted his audience with many good stories relating to the different places he had visited.

At the close of the address, Mr. Gordon said he was more than ever convinced that Mr. Allan was a distinct acquisition to the city.

At the conclusion of the programme refreshments were served by the committee. The Club wishes to thank all artists who helped to make the concert such a success. It would be futile to try to give anyone special mention as all excelled in their own particular departments.

BODIES FOUND IN DITCH UNDER CAR

Two Men Apparently Died Instantly When Car Turned Turtle.

DEAD SEVERAL HOURS.

CHATHAM, Nov. 30.— (Canadian Press.)—The frozen bodies of Timothy Boudiner, 45, a Russian, and Frank Barbier, 55, a Belgian, residents of the Ridgetown district, were found this morning underneath a light touring car at the bottom of a ten foot ditch near Ridgetown, by a party of children on their way to school.

Coroner Dr. Marr, of Ridgetown, believes that they were instantly killed when their car turned turtle into the ditch. The condition of the bodies indicates they had been under the car for several hours. Inquiries as to where the men had spent Sunday evening have been unsuccessful, but it is believed they had been attending a party, as a violin owned by Barbier was found in the car.

SEVEN KILLED AT A CROSSING

CARRIED 1,000 FEET.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Nov. 30. —(Canadian Press.)—Seven members of an automobile party were instantly killed when their machine was struck last night on the Barton street crossing of the Michigan Central Railway Company.

The auto, a light sedan, was apparently struck in the middle and was carried nearly 1,000 feet down the track, being strewn at intervals of a few feet.

JACK HAIG WON BOYS' ELECTION

CAMPBELLFORD BOY.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 30—Jack Haig, son of Dr. and Mrs. A. Haig, was elected a member of the Boys' Parliament for Ontario, as the representative from East Northumberland in the election held Saturday. This is the first time that this honor has come to Campbellford since the organization of the Parliament. There were three candidates in the field, the other two being Clarke Lawson of Smithfield and Will Brown of Brighton.

Jack Had A Majority

In a three-cornered contest as a rule, the successful candidate is obliged to content himself with a plurality but on Saturday Jack Haig scored a majority, polling four more than the combined vote of his two opponents, the total for the riding being as follows: Haig, 174; Brown, 120; Lawson, 50.

In the Campbellford subdivision, in which Rev. C. D. Daniel presided as deputy-returning officer, Jack Haig polled 61, every vote cast. Out in the Township of Seymour he led with a majority of 13.

A Popular Choice

This choice of a representative is a popular one among old and young alike and Jack's friends hope that his talents will receive further recognition and that when the Parliament is organized he will be appointed a member of the Cabinet.

At the morning service in St. John's United Church, Rec. Wesley Elliot announced the result of the election and added that the outcome was an honor alike to the successful candidate's parents, the community in which he lives and the church with which he is connected.

Deer Seek Safety

A large deer was seen Saturday close to the residence of Harold Rowe at Healey Falls. A number of these animals have appeared recently in that vicinity, the explanation of their presence being that during the hunting season they were chased by dogs from their native haunts in the northern woods and have sought sanctuary in the pastoral peace of a civilized community.

Speaking of deer, one of the trophies of the chase brought home by Charles S. Gillespie, the dean of the local Nimrods and who has not missed a season in the woods in 46 years, was a moose that weighed 700 pounds.

The Municipal Election

The member of the Water and Light Commission whose term expires this year is A. E. Caddy and as he has moved to Peterborough he will not be a candidate for re-election. The name of P. C. Denyes is being mentioned in connection with the position. Mr. Denyes is a practical electrician and was in the employ of the Hydro Commission before going into business for himself. His services would be of especial value to the public in the position referred to and if he consents to stand it is not likely that he will be opposed.

So far no candidates have announced themselves for any of the other municipal offices.

BOY WAS KILLED BY PASSING CAR

Leaped Out of Father's Car in Front of Another One.

WINDSOR, Nov. 30 (Canadian Press).—Orville, five-year-old son of Wm. R. Hendra, yesterday was almost instantly killed when, leaping from his father's auto, parked in front of his home, the lad was struck by a car driven by Raymond Lauzon. He was hurried to the Hotel Dieu, but died on the way.

MISSING MAN IS THOUGHT DROWNED

John Broughton's Boat Was Found Below Landing on Thames.

CHATHAM, Nov. 30.—(Canadian Press).—John Broughton, aged 35, employed by Raymond Arnold, River Road, Harwich Township, is believed to have been drowned Saturday in crossing the Thames River in the vicinity of Louiseville. A small boat was found several rods down the river from the landing.

BAZAAR HELD AT CHRIST CHURCH

MANY PRESENT

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 30.—The Willing Workers of Christ Church—and that includes about every lady in the parish—held a "Mother Goose" bazaar in the Parish Hall, the function opening on Thursday and closing Friday evening. Every form of innocent entertainment was provided and the affair was well patronized not only by the members of Christ Church, but by representatives from every denomination in town. A church function in Campbellford many be held in a denominational building, and under denominational auspices, but it really resolves itself into a community affair. The ministers present Friday night, besides Rev. G. C. Clarke, rector of the parish, were Rev. Wesley Elliott of St. John's United Church; Rev. James Grier of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and Rev. J. A. MacKenzie of Burnbrae.

The bazaar was formally opened Thursday evening, when Rev. T. Stannage Boyle of Cobourg, delivered an interesting address. Friday night an old-flashioned supper was served in the basement and was well patronized.

The 10 booths, each one illustrative of the Mother Goose rhymes, made a pretty display; each booth being looked after by a staff of ladies wearing the costume of the main character in the nursery jingle represented. The booths were: "Mary, Mary, Quite Contrary"; "Little Bo-Peep"; "Peter, Peter Pumpkin Eater," 'Mary Had a Little Lamb," "Old Mother Hubbard," whose cupboard was bare of what she sought but was filled with fancy articles"; "Little Jack Horner," "Queen of Hearts"; "Simple Simon" on his way to the fair; "Little Red Riding Hood" and "Patty Cake."

Those of the guests anxious to know what the future had in store for them were accommodated, there being no less than three fortune-tellers on duty, each one skilled in a different branch of the magic art. Miss Hilda Bonnycastle, in fantastic gypsy costume, cast the horoscope for her patrons from the bottom of a tea cup. Mrs. Ed. Runnions, manipulated the cards, and George E. Morrison's lore found expression by the study of the human palm. Mr. Morrison, early in the evening, exercised his artistic talent by painting a large sign, showing a gypsy encampment, with a fortune teller in action. He also invented a title for Miss Bonnycastle, the term chosen being from syllables hastily thrown together and made to read, "Highrijoses."

The receipts were all that the promoters could hope or wish for, but the full amount will not be known until all the sales of tickets are reported.

LITERARY SOCIETY MEETS IN SCHOOL

CAMPBELLFORD, November 30.—The regular meeting of the Literary Society of the Campbellford High School, was held on Friday afternoon, with D. McComb, the president, in the chair. The programme was provided by the students of form three. Jack McAvoy was elected critic for the session.

In interesting debate was held, the subject being: "Resolved, — That moving from the country to the city is detrimental to the interests of Canada."

The speakers on the affirmative side were Rosina Clarke and Carl Irwin while Mary McGregor and Fred Sergeant supported the negative.

Their report, given by Helen MacDonald, stated that the affirmative had won, the score being 8-10.

The following programme was given:

Piano solo: Bernice Farrell.
Reading: Rosina Clarke.
Current events: Roy Barnum.
Piano solo: Jean Anderson.
Dance, "Waves of the Danube," by Mildred Cowell.
Piano solo: Irene Stephens.
Speech: "British Canada and Home Rule," by Rosina Clarke.

The critics report was then given by Jack McAvoy, who stated that the meeting had been well conducted although it would have been better if more of the third form students had participated in the programme.

Real Estate Changes.

T. L. Diamond reports the following sales of real estate:

Thomas Cook of Stirling has traded his residence in that village for S. Chappell's farm, near Campbellford, and has already taken possession.

David Robertson has sold his residence on the River Road, and has purchased and moved to the farm formerly owned by Ben Pickering near Havelock.

MURDERER MADE ARMY CONFESSION

William Lewis Went to Mercy Seat and Admitted Shooting Girl.

OLDS, Alberta, Nov. 30 (Canadian Press).—William Lewis, a former farm hand, faces preliminary trial here next Thursday on a charge of having murdered Hilda Craddock, eight years of age, at Bowden, Alberta, a year ago. A coroner's jury had previously returned a verdict of accidental death in the case. Lewis, according to the police, recently walked to the mercy seat during a Salvation Army rally in Edmonton and confessed that he shot the little girl.

$5,900 ROBBERY IN ROCHESTER

Four Masked Men Stole Contracting Firm's Payroll.

FLED IN AUTO.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Nov. 30.—Four masked bandits, using a stolen taxi and at the point of revolvers obtained $5,900 in cash from Conrad P. Ward, head of C. P. Ward, Inc., general contractor, in the biggest payroll robbery in this city in several years. The hold-up occurred in Requa Street just before 8 o'clock Saturday.

Within a few moments afterward the bandits dashed away in their machine, the engine of which they had left running, but they abandoned it in Norton Street after jamming on the brakes and getting out so quickly that they did not even stop to close the doors.

Mr. Ward, who has an office at 303 National Bank of Rochester building, was taking the money to pay off men who are employed at his plant at Hollenbeck Street and Ridge Road. Following his usual custom he went alone with the money.

He drove through St. Paul Street and then turned into Requa Street for a short cut to the warehouse. As he reached the front of 33 Requa Street a limousine drove directly into his path and stopped.

It was necessary for him to bring his machine to a standstill to avoid striking the other, and as he did so three of its occupants leaped from it and took positions on either side of his machine.

"Stick 'em up!" one of them commanded, as they placed revolvers close to his face. He promptly obeyed the order. The three men had white handkerchiefs over their faces and all wore gray caps.

ANOTHER MAIZE SHIP GOES DOWN

Steamer Competitor Went Down in Gale Off African Coast.

LIFEBOAT IS MISSING.

LONDON, Nov. 30 (Canadian Press).—A Lloyd's despatch from Port Elizabeth, South Africa, reports that the steamer Competitor from Port Natal to Las Palmas, was abandoned in a sinking condition.

Another dispatch from Cape Town says the Competitor, with a cargo of maize, was sunk in a gale in the vicinity of Algoa Bay. A lifeboat with six of a crew, three Europeans, two Arabs and a Malay, has landed. Another lifeboat with the remainder of the crew, approximately 30, is missing.

This is the second vessel loaded with maize lost within two months off the same coast.

SHOE STRIKE IN QUEBEC IS OVER

TO BE ARBITRATED.

QUEBEC, Nov. 30 (Canadian Press).—The strike of three national unions in the shoe factories of Quebec ended yesterday. The manufacturers have agreed to the proposition of Mgr. Langlois, administrator of the Diocese of Quebec, that the men return to work and that the question of salaries be settled by arbitration. There are 1,500 men and 1,500 women affected by the strike in 14 factories, where work ceased November 16.

SHOWER FOR BRIDE.

Over 100 People Gathered With Gifts For Miss Christie Staples.

WELCOME, Nov. 30.—On Tuesday night, friends to the number of over 100, surprised Miss Christie Staples at her home.

An address was read by Miss Elva Pearce, in behalf of the church and community, wishing her much joy and happiness and asking her to accept the accompanying gifts. These were two large clothes baskets and comprised many very valuable and useful articles.

Some time was spent in opening the parcels and reading the accompanying verses. Afterwards, lunch was served.

A congregational tea was held in Wesleyville church on Thursday night.

The Wesleyville orchestra was in attendance.

The campaign for the maintenance and extension fund was organized and launched.

THE BOW CORSAGE.

(Written for the United Press)

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(United Press).—Bows are back and the flower corsage is becoming just a bit passe. No longer do we see smart women with gowns decorated with artificial flowers on shoulder or waistline for bows of velvet are deemed far more fashionable this Winter.

This season's bow may be worn on the hip, the shoulder, the rear about over one's anatomy just as the spray of flowers did last seaneckline and in fact, it may jump ing. large or small, according to one's desires. Many smart afternoon or evening gowns use sashes of velvet with bows placed at the front, side or rear, the sash matching the shade of the gown. Velvet frocks are particularly attractive with the bow trim. In some cases huge velvet bows act as a bustle effect at the rear of the frock. Again the bow is double looped affair placed at the side front of the low waistline. When the bow is placed at the rear it droops a bit to accentuate the lowered waistline at the rear. Very few velvet bows have single ends extending below the loops since the double loop without ends is the smart thing. Numbers of lace dinner frocks use velvet sashes and bows in preference to floral corsages.

Even lace bows are popular, the lace being dyed to match the color of the frock upon which they are worn.

CROWN PRINCE IN AGREEMENTS FOR NEW EMPIRE

Rupprecht, of Bavaria, Consents to Wilhelm Being Emperor.

GETS TERRITORY.

PARIS, Nov. 30 (Canadian Press)—The German ex-Crown Prince, says the Vienna correspondent of Le Temps, has made two formal agreements; one with Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, and the other with Archduke Albrecht for a future German Empire, which is to include Austria.

The accord with Rupprecht is declared to have been made at the castle of Count Almeida in Salzburg. Rupprecht consented to have the Imperial dignity remain in the House of Hohenzollern. Bavaria is to be enlarged at the expense of the Austrian Tyrol. The remainder of Austria is to be a Reichstand, without ousting the family. To get the consent of the Hapsburgs to this, Albrecht was promised the Hungarian throne. This agreement is said to have been made recently at the castle of Count Salm at Anhold.

FOLD PROTECTION

For You and Yours

There are four emergencies against which you must provide if the future of yourself and your family is to be secure.

These emergencies—one or more of which is bound to be a factor in every man's life, are:

1. Death from natural causes.
2. Death from accident.
3. Total disability and loss of earning power.
4. Old age.

The wise man, both for his protection and his peace of mind, provides against all four.

You can do this to-day with one complete North American Life Policy—a policy that pays four ways.

A "four-way" contract for $10,000

At your death, $10,000

Should death be accidental, $20,000

pays you:

In case of total disability, an income of $100 a month. No further premiums are necessary, and at your death your estate receives $10,000.

In old age an income to secure your comfort.

INDISCRIMINATE SHOOTING.

A North Monaghan farmer called on the Examiner on Saturday with a grievance, and a serious one.

While intimating that he was not a kill-joy and that he had no objection to hunting when carried on with reasonable care and respect for the safety of others, he drew the line at indiscriminate shooting by individuals utterly regardless of possible danger to their fellow-beings.

It seems that each week-end sees many parties armed with rifles—the majority of them youths with .22 calibre weapons—rambling through the countryside and indulging in considerable target practice.

The complainant declares that a few days ago several bullets fired by some of these wandering sportsmen passed close by his head, and similar narrow escapes are reported by others.

Many of those who go out with rifles act as if they were the only human beings within ten miles, and they blaze away without the least thought apparently that other people may be within range of their weapons.

The Examiner calls attention of sportsmen generally to this complaint, which deserves the attention of every man who is fond of going out with a gun.

If this indiscriminate shooting is to continue sooner or later there will be a tragedy, and the offending marksman will find himself facing a charge of manslaughter.

COUNTY MAY ACT.

The Peterboro County Council will doubtless consider at its session this week the question of whether or not a bylaw should be passed compelling all vehicles travelling on the roads at night to be illuminated.

Similar legislation has been passed by a number of County Councils, while others have rejected the proposal on the ground that the Legislature was passing on to the municipalities a responsibility that should be assumed by itself.

The wisdom of eliminating the menace of unilluminated vehicles from the road is, the Examiner believes, recognized by every motorist, and when so many farmers own cars the old-time antagonism in the rural sections to this legislation surely cannot be as strong as it formerly was.

If the county legislators decide to pass a bylaw covering Peterboro County their action will be applauded by every automobilist in the city and county, but if they do not consider that they should take advantage of the power given them by the Legislature to pass the measure, it is to be hoped that they will at least signify to the powers-that-be at Queen's Park their belief that Provincial-wide legislation along this line should be adopted at the next session of the Legislature.

There has been too much pussyfooting about this matter on the part of the Government in particular and the Legislature in general.

ARE WE EXCLUSIVE?

A thoughtful Peterboro citizen asks why it seems necessary that this city should act independently of other communities in matters in which there is common interest.

He wonders if it is merely from a desire to be exclusive, or if there is some other reason for this condition of affairs.

For example, he says we in Peterboro have our mid-summer half-holiday on Thursday when practically every other centre in Eastern Ontario picks Wednesday.

We celebrate Civic Holiday on the second Monday in August, while other district towns and cities choose the first Monday.

Armistice Day is always observed here on the Sunday before the 11th of November, instead of having the celebration take place on the actual anniversary.

When it was realized that a memorial service in respect to the memory of Queen Alexandra was desirable Peterboro selected the night before the funeral of the Queen-Mother, instead of doing as other centres and holding the service on Friday.

When practically all the leading communities in the Province launched the Beck Memorial Fund campaign last week as planned, Peterboro postponed its campaign until February.

The question brought forward by this inquiring citizen is new to the Examiner, and the answer is, it cannot be supplied by us.

A WONDERFUL OPPORTUNITY.

The local election for the Peterboro seat in the Ontario Older Boys' Parliament, in which Adam Sands was victorious over Ted Outram, was interesting, not only on its own account, but because of the evidence it offered of the fact that the boy of 1925 has much greater advantages in many respects than the youth of a decade or two ago.

The opportunities that are available at the present time for development in the art of public speaking, what with debating leagues, oratorical competitions in the schools, Boys' Parliaments, Junior Chambers of Commerce and similar activities give the youths of today a chance that their fathers never had.

It is a most useful accomplishment to be able to address a public gathering in a lucid and unflurried manner, and, unfortunately, but few people are masters of the art.

The majority are victims of self-consciousness, largely because as youngsters they never had an opportunity to gain experience in public speaking.

The present generation can offer no such excuse.

Facilities are offered on every hand, and if the boy of today does not acquire poise and confidence in the ability to put his thoughts into words when speaking to a gathering the fault is in themselves.

The Boys' Parliament is a particularly effective agency that not only develops the oratorical powers of its members, but brings before them a conception of the duty of every citizen to play some part in the government of his country.

Boys who are honoured by the confidence of their fellows in being selected to attend the Boys' Parliament cannot fail to come home from the session better citizens and better Canadians.

UNLIGHTED VEHICLES.

There are many reasons why it should be compulsory to light a vehicle which travels at night; but the first real objection to the law was voiced by a farmer in Sidney Township recently. Said he: "I don't carry a light at night because there is no law to force me to do so. I don't do it until I am forced to by law because such a law is useless." Asked why this attitude toward a law tending to protect him against the invasion of automobiles, he replied: "The lights from the automobiles themselves are enough protection. They carry stronger lights than I can and can see me just as well as though I were carrying a light."

For the benefit of those who subscribe to this theory (no one who has ever driven at night could hold such ideas) let it be said that there are at least three conditions under which the lights of an automobile are useless in rendering visible an unlighted vehicle.

It is highly important that the beams at least be directed in the general direction of the object which is to be detected. First, therefore, at a curve, no automobile light can "pick up" a wagon or buggy which lies in the dark around the curve. By the time the beams do fall on the buggy it is often too late to try to stop.

Second, when a driver is blinded by other headlights coming from the opposite direction, he cannot see an unlighted vehicle which lies directly before him.

Third, when a buggy or wagon is dusty, it harmonizes so well with the color of the road that there is difficulty in seeing it no matter what kind of lights the automobile carries.

The fact remains that if it is legal for a horse-drawn vehicle to carry no lights, it is equally legal for an automobile to charge along at express speed without lights.

No effort is being made to coerce anybody to do anything useless; the safety of all is at stake. An unlighted vehicle is more dangerous to the general public than a pile of bricks in the middle of the road without a light to warn the drivers of cars. In the case of the bricks, only the car driver would be killed or injured; only the car would be wrecked. In the case of an unlighted vehicle, the occupants of that would be added to the death list, and there would be increased property damage.

The war is over; there is no danger of an air raid.

NE SUTOR ULTRA CREPIDAM.

The academic solution of political problems and difficulties is sometimes interesting, but more often amusing. Dr. Ira Allan MacKay, of McGill, has recently lifted up his voice in denunciation of the party system in politics, and he is followed in full chorus by the editor of the Ottawa Citizen, to whom any faddish proposal seems to appeal in proportion to its absurdity.

Dr. MacKay gives what he terms a scientific analysis of the attributes of an ideal statesman. Certainly these attributes are sufficiently numerous and impressive, but Dr. MacKay has left us in complete ignorance as to where the ideal statesman can be found—unless Dr. MacKay believed that his audience after listening to him could have no doubt on the subject.

Consider his remedy for our political ailments—"A council of carefully trained scientists and economists, educated in our universities and elected by the people, may provide the solution to our most pressing problems of government."

Who would supervise or guarantee the training of the scientists and economists? How their election by the people could be ensured is a matter which the learned professor, in accordance with the usual method of academic approach to such a question, leaves entirely untouched. He easily takes it for granted (but without the slightest warrant) that such a solution would eliminate the party system. How does he expect to secure unanimity? Does not experience teach us to anticipate such fierce dissensions as would cause the learned professor to exclaim—"Tantaene animis coelestibus trae?"

Every one realizes that the party system is attended with serious, and even dangerous imperfections, but no one, least of all Dr. MacKay, has invented any practical substitute. An attempt to substitute his proposals would certainly result in a political "Dies Irae."

James Bryce was perhaps the most capable and observant political student during the past hundred years. Not only was he a student, but he had a long experience in public life as Member of Parliament, and he served a term as British Ambassador at Washington. Let us place his opinion against that of Dr. MacKay:

> "Parties are inevitable. No free large country has been without them. No one has shown how representative government can be worked without them."

It is difficult to comprehend the spirit which leads a university professor to the conclusion that, without any practical experience in governance, he can devise off hand a system to supersede one which has been the slow growth of centuries. To the omniscience of the Citizen no advice could be of service, but perhaps Dr. MacKay might accept this respectful suggestion—"Let the cobbler stick to his last."—Ottawa Journal.

NATIVE SWANS AT KINGSVILLE

Kingsville, Ontario, is the only known place in North America where native swans assemble. For years they were considered by ornithologists to be practically extinct, until they followed the wild geese to Jack Miner's bird sanctuary, where they found a safe resting place. An unusually large group of the beautiful birds is shown above.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

Peterboro—Toronto—Montreal
Winnipeg

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Nov. 28 (Canadian Press).—Unlooked for breaks in the value of wheat at Buenos Aires turned a rising market here suddenly downward today. In consequence, Chicago prices for wheat closed unsettled, 1 1-8 to 2 3-4c net lower, new style, December 1.63 3-4 to 1.61 7-8 and May 1.59 1-8 to 1.59 1-4; with corn 1-8 to 3-4 down; oats 1-8 to 1-2c off, and provisions varying from unchanged figures to a set-back of 52 cents.

Free selling, largely on a profit-taking characted set in here as soon as word came that wheat prices at Buenos Aires showed something in the nature of a collapse. The immediate result was a fall of nearly 4 cents a bushel in Chicago as compared with earlier top figures. Surprise over the action of the Buenos Aires market was intensified on account of reports today from there telling of black rust over the entire West section of Argentina and part of the south. These reports said the crop situation was critical, and suggested that the Argentine exportable surplus would not amount to 100,000,00 bushels.

STERLING RATES

MONTREAL, Nov. 29 (Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here Saturday as follows:

Sterling demand $4.83 5-8.
Sterling cables $4.84.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Nov. 29 (Canadian Press).—The export business transacted in Canadian grain on the Montreal market Saturday was very small owing to the fact that there was little demand from foreign buyers for supplies, but there was a good steady demand from domestic buyers for American corn. The trade in oats was quiet, but there was no change in prices. Car lots of Ontario and Quebec No. 2 white selling at 53 cents, No. 3 white at 51 1-2 cents, and No. 4 white at 49 1-2 cents, while Ontario malting barley sold at 85 1-2 cents per bushel, ex-track.

There were no further developments in the local flour situation on Saturday, but the undertone to the market for spring wheat grades was firm at the recent advances noted. The tone of the market for winter wheat flour was also firm, but the trade was quiet owing to the continued light offerings.

The demand for all lines of mill feed for local and country account continues exceedingly good and an active trade was reported in mixed car order lots owing to the fact that straight car lots are difficult to secure at present, as the mills generally are closely sold up of their output. The market for standard grades of rolled oats was very firm under a good steady demand and small offerings. Sales were made at $3.50 per bbag of 90 lbs., delivered to the trade.

Egg Production Low.

The receipts of eggs in Montreal on Saturday were 704 cases, as against 1,180 cases for the same day last week, and 96 cases for the corresponding day a year ago, while the arrivals for the week ending November, 1925, were 9,958 cases, as compared with 12,826 cases for the same week last year. The total receipts from May 1 to date were 347,028 cases, as against 384,282 cases for the same period of 1924. The receipts last week showed a decrease of 2,863 cases as compared with the previous one, and an increase of 4,158 cases with the same week a year ago, while the total for the season to date have been 36,654 cases smaller than last year.

The egg production is now down to low ebb throughout the Dominion, with the exception of British Columbia, where they are now receiving a surplus over local requirements. Some of this surplus have come as far East as Montreal with two cars to arrive in the near future of which one is for local consumption. The tone of the market for strictly fresh eggs remains very firm and theretore it will be very interesting to see what effect the arrivals of British Columbia fresh eggs will have on the market at consuming centres. The demand here for this class of stock during the week has been good and offerings have met with ready buyers, but prices show no change.

Sales of straight car lots of May storage stock were made at 40 1-2c per dozen, and 100 case lots of extras at 41c per dozen delivered. The consumptive demand for eggs here has been good and the market was fairly active throughout the week with a firm undertone; and final sales al extras were made at 460, firsts at 41c, and seconds at 36c per dozen.

The receipts of butter in Montreal for the week ending November 28, 1925, were 2,139 packages which show an increase of 134 packages as compared with the previous week, and a decrease of 1,602 packages with the same week last year, while the total arrivals from May 1 to date have been 46,519 packages smaller than the same period of 1924.

Butter Market Firm.

There was no important change in the condition of the local butter situation last week, prices throughout being firmly maintained under a steady demand for domestic consumption and for shipment to outside points, but as stocks on spot were small with supplies of No. 1 creamery scarce and receipts away below the weekly requirements, the purchases were confined to actual wants and in consequence the volume of business was not large. The lot of 1,500 packages of Canadian creamery butter which was brought back from England some ten days ago has since been shipped to Toronto.

The receipts of cheese in Montreal for the week ending November 28, 1925, were 21,162 boxes, which show a decrease of 2,754 boxes as compared with the previous week, and an increase of 2,365 boxes with the same week last year, and the total receipts for the season to date have been 89,503 boxes in excess of a year ago.

The export trade in cheese the past week was small owing to the fact that what demand came forward from English houses was chiefly for broken lots of late made fodder goods, and in consequence the market was quiet, but the feeling was fairly steady with purchases in the country at 19 1-4c per lb. fo.b. point of shipment, and on spot early makes of Western No. 1 white and colored were nominally quoted at 22 3-4 to 23c per lb., and current receipts at 21 1-4 to 21 1-2c per lb.

Egg Prices.

OTTAWA, Nov. 29 (Canadian Press).—A higher tendency is noted on the Toronto market today. No change has been reported from other centres. Toronto—Jobbing fresh specials, 80, extras 75, firsts 60, storage extras 46, firsts 43, seconds 37. A car of Prairie Province turkeys is reported sold at 34, delivered for shipment next week. Poultry market generally firmer.

Edmonton—Jobbing, storage extras 46, firsts 40, seconds 35.

MEN IN—CROPS OUT.

"Get men into Canada and the crops out, that's all that matters," declared the Winnipeg divine when asked to discuss the political situation. He believes that the political bodies should regard Canada first.

CURE IS SOUGHT BY DOG LOVERS FOR DISTEMPER

Support Research Laboratory Farm in England to Make Tests.

VERY CONTAGIOUS

No Absolute Cure Has Ever Been Found for Scourge of Canines.

No scourge in the dog-world so terrifies dog lovers as distemper. As humans despair at the threat of tuberculosis, so do dogs cringe before an impending distemper. The causes are similar in that there is yet no absolute cure for either disease. Man has been working for years to circumvent the "white plague," and now he has shouldered the burden of protecting his canine friends from distemper.

It is said that considerable headway has been made in the search for a serum which will relieve the disease. In England they have been at work two years in the laboratories of the Medical Research Council, at Rhodes Farm, Hill Hill, Middlesex County, to discover a defense against distemper in dogs. As yet Major G. W. Dunkin and Dr. P. P. Laidlaw have no definite conclusion to offer. But they have made more progress toward prevention and cure than other research workers hitherto.

They have a remarkable establishment at Rhodes Farm. The cure for dog distemper forms but one of their quests, but it is by far the most interesting in results. The work was started in 1923 through the efforts of Sir Theodore Cook, editor of The Field. At that time there was organized The Field Distemper Council. Contribution from dog-lovers in nearly every country have been supporting the project. The original cost of the establishment was £4,000 and the yearly cost of upkeep is £3,000.

Forty-Eight Acre Station.

Rhodes Farm, consisting of forty-eight acres enclosed by a high fence, is situated on rolling ground picturesquely studded with low-branching trees. All the members of the staff live on the grounds. Each is held responsible for his particular work and for the building under his charge. Thus the chance of disease entering from outside sources is guarded against.

The farm has pathological and bacteriological laboratories; a cold-storage room where viruses are kept in an atmosphere of 2 degrees below freezing, and a room where autopsies are performed on every animal that dies. In special books are kept a full history of each dog bred and used for experimental purposes, and the result of each experiment.

First Virus Obtained.

When the work was commenced a dog suffering from distemper was obtained from a London veterinary hospital. Thus the first virus was secured. From that day a record has been kept of all the virus used and its effect as introduced into different subjects. To avoid the faults of investigations attempted in Germany, France and Japan, where the work had failed by reason of a break down in control, a special compound was constructed, far removed from other buildings on thef arm, to isolate the dogs to be used for experimental purposes. This compound or enclosure, perhaps 250 or 300 feet each way, is surrounded by a fence of corrugated iron, six feet in height and sunk three feet in the ground to keep out rats.

In this compound is a small bungalow containing two bedrooms, a living room and small kitchen for the use of the two kennel maids who have entire charge of the dogs. There is no entrance except from the compound to the hospital or to the kennels where the dogs are bred and kept. There is only one entrance to the compound, and the only two keys are in possession of the kennel maids, who permit no one to enter except under orders from the Superintendent.

The entrance to the compound is by way of what is known as the cleaning house. The visitor first enters an outside room, in which he disrobes, then into a bathroom, and after bathing he enters a third and last room where he dons sterilized clothing. Then he can step forth into the compound. Each time one of the maids leaves the compound and returns, this routine must be followed.

Another house connects with the compound only by means of a small hatch or window. In this house are located the sterilizing plants, for the sterilizing of all foods for the dogs, and for the clothing of persons permitted to enter the compound. All food is sterilized and then poured into the feeding dishes held outside the hatch by the kennel maids so that no hand touches it after sterilization. Even the coal for the bungalow is passed through an opening just large enough to admit a shovel, and so small that no human being could squeeze through it.

These precautions are necessary because distemper is most contagious. Frequently it is caught by healthy dogs who come in contact with people who have been exposed to the germs. That is why spectators at shows are strictly admonished not to fondle the dogs in bench cages. And personal contact is sometimes not the only means of transmitting this scourge, for the germs may permeate the air.

Serving our Industries
-great and small-

CREDIT is the basis of modern business. Credit it is that supplies funds or goods for immediate business needs, against a future promise to pay. Credit—confidence—faith—they are largely one.

Credit is an intangible enough thing, yet some firms value the credit they enjoy as being one of their best assets. In the vast credit structure, with its many negotiable instruments, this Bank fills an indispensable place. Cheques are sent everywhere for collection, foreign or domestic drafts are discounted or held for collection, loans are made and information upon the credit standing of buyers is secured. All the many financial transactions incident upon foreign trade are conducted. More than that, the Bank makes continual surveys of business conditions, markets, transportation facilities, production and consumption figures both at home and abroad, for the use of its customers.

The Bank of Nova Scotia has been serving Canadian industry for nearly 100 years. Its experience, records and resources, the assistance of 320 branches and sub-branches—supplemented by a courteous personnel—are all gladly placed at our customers commands.

ESTIMATES SAY $130,00,000 MAY FINISH RAILWAY

Director of Farmers' Union Would Complete Line in Working Order.

PREPARED NELSON.

WINNIPEG, Manitoba, November 28. — An expenditure of $13,000,000, would not only complete the Hudson Bay Railway, but would also place the port of Nelson in working order and equip the bay and straits with every aid to navigation necessary to the development of the new route, in the opinion of H. W. A. Johnson, a director of the Farmers' Union, who recently visited Port Nelson.

Expenditure in the scheme up to the present amounts to $21,000,000, made up of $15,000,000 for work on the line itself and $6,000,000 on the port. In addition to this certain sums have been spent on maintenance.

Mr. Johnson summarizes the expenditure still required as follows:

"In order to put the road bed all the way to Nelson into running order, $4,000,000 is needed. This would include 70 miles of steel, 800,000 ties and ballast, together with the necessary water tanks, section houses, etc.

"This would suffice to bring loaded trains in Port Nelson. Here however the port is not finished and in order to do so, excavation of a 600-foot channel 2½ miles long and varying in depth from 8 to 20 feet, will be required. This calls for the dredging of 6,000,000 cubic yards at an estimated cost of $6,000,000."

Additional expenditures are estimated by Mr. Johnson as follows: Beacons $300,000; light houses in the Straits, $1,000,000; wireless stations, about $100,000; lighthouse tenders, $500,000; buoys, etc., $200,000; aeroplanes and facilities, $500,000; floating dry docks, $200,000.

"I have not attempted to underestimate the cost and am fully convinced that the project can be fully completed within that amount," Mr. Johnson concluded.

BOY IN WINDSOR KILLED BY CAR

DRIVER IS HELD

WINDSOR, Ont., Nov. 30.—(Canadian Press).—Orville Hendra, four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hendra, 960 Howard Avenue, Windsor, was instantly killed Sunday afternoon when he was knocked down and run over by an automobile driven by Raymond Lauson, 439 Pelissier Street. The boy had been for a ride with his father. He jumped from the car, and ran directly in the path of Lauson's machine, which was going west on Howard Avenue between Erie and Broadhead Streets. Dr. Crassweller, coroner, ordered an inquest to open this morning. Lauson is held on a charge of criminal negligence.

TWENTY KILLED PLAYING RUGBY

43 BADLY INJURED.

NEW YORK, November 30. — Twenty football players died of injuries received on the gridiron this year, and forty three suffered injuries of a varying degree of seriousness. The present casualty list is longer than that of any other season but the conclusion cannot be drawn that football has become a hazardous game, for many more persons are playing the game than ever before, and in a great many communities proper supervision is not exercised over the physical condition of each contestant.

Insurance companies ever alert to classify every activity of mortal man have not included football playing under the heading of hazardous occupations, but they admit that with the growth of the professional game statistics will have to be kept and in a few years they will know whether such a classification will be justifiable.

It is the consensus among close followers of football that while the casualty list this year has increased it actually is shorter than previous years when compared with the number of players now taking part in the game. While none could quote figures on the number engaged it is obvious that the injuries are comparatively low, that the open game has had a slight nullifying effect on the chances of serious injury and that no great alarm need be felt over the sudden statement that 20 persons were killed playing football this season.

Most significant is the fact that the average age of those who met death is 19 years. The youngest was 14, and the oldest, a professional player, 27. Thus it is seen that the younger players were in the majority. Only two college men were killed, which makes the inference even plainer that systematic football, with trainers coaches and medical advisers, makes for a dimunition of injuries.

The New York City public schools with thousands of boys playing the gridiron game, did not have one serious injury this year nor did it have a single death that in any way could be attributed to gridiron activities. Of course accidents will happen. In spite of the best supervision in the world, mishaps occur, and the football field cannot be an exception, all of which makes the New York city record all the more noteworthy.

Is Your Back The Weak Point

Then get your kidneys right by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Very few people are in perfect health. There is a weak spot somewhere. When you get tired or your system gets a little run down you feel the effects at your weak spot.

If your weak spot is your back, then you may suspect that your kidneys are not in perfect order. The backaches or is weak and sore; you may have headaches; there will be dryness of the skin, pains in the limbs and disorders of the bladder.

The quickest way to regulate the kidneys is by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They are bound to be effective because they arouse the action of the kidneys, liver and bowels and thereby ensure the elimination of poisons from the system.

JAIL DELIVERY.

BELFAST, Ireland, Nov. 30. — (Canadian Press.) — As a precautionary measure in connection with the border situation the British army authorities have countermanded all leave for the troops of the Ulster command. Ordinarily the "leave" season wold now be in full force.

Southern advices say that the Sixth Battalion of the Free State Army, stationed at Athlone, is being sent hurriedly to the camp near the Donegal-Fermanagh border.

DUBLIN, Nov. 30.— The police Saturday night were trying to find nineteen fugitives released from Mountjoy Prison Friday by friends whose audacity has not been equaled in the long period of political agitation in Ireland. An automobile containing three men disguised as civic guards and three "prisoners" arrived at the gate of the prison and the men uniformed as guards thrust committal orders for the "prisoners" into the hands of the ed by the civic guard being taken to Mount Joy to await trial, the gatekeepers suspected nothing and called the chief warder to receive the supposed prisoners. When he appeared and began to read the papers, the guards and prisoners drew revolvers, bound and gagged him and the gatemen, took their keys, cut the telephone wires and went along the jail corridors opening the cells. The raiders covered the warders who attempted interference, firing one shot at them.

Confederates outside then dashed into the jail yard in a truck, picked up the free prisoners and raced away. The raiders were evidently former prisoners, knowing the interior of Mount Joy thoroughly.

After the raid the police searched the city, but failed to find the fugitives.

Among nineteen prisoners released were several men charged with raiding a movie theatre in Dublin recently where a war film was being shown. Michael Carodan, who was intelligence director of the Republican army when the army was active, was the most prominent of the prisoners released by the raiders.

BATHING HANDS TO SAVE HEALTH

With Common Towel Banished Danger of Disease is Reduced.

MORE WASH BOWLS

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—(Special).—Advocating a more general practice of washing the face and hands at noon, before eating and at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, to relieve the brain fag among all classes of workers, the City Health Department is pursuing a campaign to lessen communicable disease.

Health inspectors frequently come upon instances where modern improvements in living conditions, introduced to assure personal cleanliness, are put to other uses. There are tenement houses where the bathroom is used as a pantry or a storage room for coal, and in one case at least it has been found to serve the purpose of a chicken-coop.

The efforts of the health authorities have to do particularly with urging people to take care of their hands, which are important means of spreading disease. The Sanitary Code prohibits the use of the common towel in public places.

"Many diseases are contracted by contact with persons or objects carrying germs," said Dr. S. Dana Hubbard of the Department of Health. "The menace is particularly great in a city like New York, with its 6,000,000 residents, its 2,000,000 transients and its 1,000,000 entering by ship.

Danger to Factory Workers.

"Water, soap and a clean towel are the three simple weapons with which disease can be conquered if people are alive to the dangers threatening them in their daily life and work. The campaign for cleanliness is of special need in offices, shops and factories. More and more employers are being won over by the department to enforce simple rules of health and sanitation.

"Mechanics and workers handling oils and greases are encouraged to use clean towels more frequently. It is known that such workers hesitate to use a clean towel to wipe their soiled hands. To them it seems that the purpose is accomplished by wiping their hands with a soiled rag and leaving the washing of the hands until after the completion of the job. This frequently results in boils and other forms of skin disease. The infection passes from person to person, especially in places where towels, overalls, etc., are used interchangeably or in common."

In the opinion of Dr. Hubbard, promiscuous contact needs to be guarded against, not only in places frequented by large numbers of people, but also in the home. The education work of the department stresses the importance of frequently washed and sterilized individual towels. The washing of face and hands before lunch and at 3 p.m. is recommended for its invigorating effect upon the skin and the body in general.

Forty years ago the force of this idea was recognized by a man who, with a horse and buggy started the first towel-supply business in this city. The venture was looked upon as curious, and failure was predicted for it. But the idea gained ground. Individual sanitation appealed to many. The supply industry grew. The attention of the health authorities was attracted to this industry. They saw in it a new ally in the work of promoting public health, and took it under their sanitary supervision.

Hundreds of vehicles now deliver daily millions of towels. The towels are not bought. They are merely used and returned to the supplier. Only one man uses the towel provided, and when it is washed the same towel is given back to the user. Behind the wagon that brings the towels there is a vast organization of trained workers cooperating with the Department of Health. About thirty firms supply New York City with rented towels. The industry arranges yearly exhibits and issues pamphlets illustrating methods of health in industrial and commercial buildings.

The Department of Health has long advocated public drinking fountains. Fresh drinking water within easy access of pedestrians, health authorities believe, is one of the greatest benefits the city can confer.

New York City is making steady progress toward elimination of contagious disease due to promiscuous contact, congestion and overcrowding, Dr. Hubbard pointed out. In 1898 there were in New York from 600 to 700 cases of typhoid fever, or twenty-one for every 100,000 of population. In 1923 the number was reduced to 140, or two for every 100,000. These results were due chiefly to the voluntary enforcing of sanitation rules by the industries, and to the co-operation of the public.

"The Love that Never Dies"

CONCENTRATED FOOD TAKES THE ATTENTION OF MODERN CHEMISTS

Humorous Prophecy of Anatole France Now Becoming Possibility.

CHEMIST AS COOK

Can Produce Artificially Now All Elements Except Vitamins.

Then people will feed on extracts of metal and mineral conveniently treated by physicians. Cookery will be done in retorts and stills and alchemists will be our cooks. So Anatole France amused his readers in "La Reine Pedauque." But in a generation it will not seem funny: the humor of yesterday becomes the prophecy of to-day. The synthesis of food from the elements is an accomplished fact of the laboratory.

Professor Edward M. East of Harvard makes the continued increase of population dependent on the development of synthetic foods. There is sound reason to suppose that he will see his condition met and the limits to population indefinitely extended. So far the irresistible impetus of economic pressure has been lacking to force man to manufacture his food from the elements. He has found it adequate to increase the quantity nature freely offers him by improving his farming methods and by preserving to prevent waste

But there are now evidences that he is reaching the limits of what can be done by these means. In consequence, his faithful and wonder-working servant, the chemist, is beginning to turn to the making of foods from the elements. The Bureau of Chemistry of the Federal Department of Agriculture is actively interested; chemists in universities and in private laboratories throughout the world are experimenting on the problem; but probably the most thorough and systematic effort being made anywhere is that of the Food Research Institute at Stanford University.

Protein Synthesis Difficult.

What has been accomplished so far are purely laboratory achievements. The advance to the commercial production of synthetic foods is still in the future. In a paper which Dr Carl L. Alsberg of the Food Research Institute read to the American Chemical Society he sums up present-day knowledge of the production by artificial means of the three principal groups of foodstuffs —carbohydrates, proteins and fats. Man obtains most of his carbohydrates from sugar, and proteins chiefly from meat, milk and eggs.

"The synthesis of simple sugars and of fats," says Dr. Alsberg, "presents no insuperable difficulties to the organic chemists of the present. The synthesis of proteins is not so simple, for they possess certain biological characteristics not yet reproduced in the laboratory. It is now well established, however, that large quantities of protein are not essential to the nutrition of animals, for protein is really amino acid nutrition. Nearly all the amino acids from which proteins are constructed have already been synthesized.

"The mineral salts, however necessary, need give us no concern. They are present in abundance in nature, as is, of course, that other vitally important food, water. Whether or not vitamins will ever be productible artificially, we have at present no means of surmising."

Professor Baly's Process.

Some time after Dr. Alsberg read his paper, the first carbohydrate ever synthesized was produced by Professor E. C. C. Baly of the University of Liverpool. His process has been described: "By the use of ultra-violet light, Professor Baly succeeded in producing, first, a highly active kind of formaldehyde (such as is obtained from the burning of coal) and water, and, later, by starting with ordinary formaldehyde he was able to make a material which was found to contain a sugar closely related to, if not identical with, ordinary glucose. He made only a fraction of an ounce, just enough to make sure it was sugar, so that there is no commercial development of the process yet possible and there seem to be grounds for the belief that there never will be."

Mr. Killeffer states that chemists have already made synthetic fats from petroleum and that "intarvin" is such a product made at Columbia University and Beth Israel Hospital for the cure of diabetics. As for the vitamins, of the production of which Dr. Alsberg speaks so dubiously, Mr. Killeffer announces two recent developments which indicate that they may not prove an insurmountable barrier to the synthetic food chemist. In 1924 Dr. Alfred Hess of New York University and Dr. Harry Steenbock of the University of Wisconsin, working independently, announced that they had found it possible to cure rickets by merely exposing the food of the subjects to ultra-violet radiation. Oils, (other than cod liver oil) which ordinarily possessed no curative properties became remarkably efficient in curing rickets after they had been exposed to ultra-violet radiation. One theory to explain this result is that a vitamin has been created by the radiation. If so, the problem of the production of vitamins for artificial food is solved.

Question of Food Supply.

The other development is the work of Dr. W. G. Eddy of Teachers College, Columbia, who has succeeded in isolating a chemical compound in crystalline form which has all the properties of the vitamin D or bios. He has not yet found out just what it is, but he believes that when he does he will be able to make it.

From these various achievements it is evident that Dr. Alsberg did not overstate the case in declaring that the main groups of foodstuffs are producible in the laboratory. However, he is careful to point out that this cannot be taken to mean that the chemist will have it in his power to increase theu food supply at will. There is a powerful deterrent. Foodstuffs have a high fuel value. The energy represented by this fuel value must come from somewhere. The chemist cannot create it.

To indicate what quantities of energy are required for the artificial production of foods, Mr. Killeffer instances the Daly experiment. The energy consumed by the reaction of carbon dioxide and water to form the active formaldehyde was 150,000 calories per gram, which is to be compared with the few hundred calories per gram required or given off in the reactions with which the chemist ordinarily deals. It is in the cost of such staggering amounts of energy that the present, and possibly the future, impracticability of such a process lies.

But even if this is materially cut down, our ordinary sources of energy—coal, oil and water power—will not bear the additional demands of the production of synthetic food for the nation. Dr. Alsberg finds that in the light of present knowledge, solar radiation is the only source that seems adequate to furnish important additions through the aid of synthetic food, and he believes that its utilization will wait on economic necessity

One Synthetic Product.

Though no foods are yet produced artificially on a commercial scale, there is one synthetic product on the market. That is wood alcohol, which the Germans have been manufacturing for some years. They were able to make this so cheaply that thy put it on the market in America at a price of 18 cents a gallon below the cost of production in this country. In frantic self-defense American manufacturers secured the establishment of a tariff wall to protect themselves while their chemists applied themselves to discovering the secret which the Germans had found so profitable. Earl B. Putt, a consulting chemist of New York, is authority for the statement that the laboratory production of synthetic wood alcohol is possible in America, but that we lack the experience of the Germans in developing machinery for the commercial application of laboratory processes and are therefore temporarily handicapped. Mr. Putt says that American ingenuity has been applied rather to perfecting labor saving devices and to increasing sanitary efficiency. He prophesies, however, the early appearance of American-made synthetic wood alcohol on the market.

The production of artificial food so far is scarcely more than a vision of the seers. The great achievements of the food chemists have consisted in making the most of the natural food supply of the world. Thanks to the achievements of the canners and preservers, the waste of spoilage has been partly eliminated and the diet of the human race has been enormously broadened. The Alaskan miner enjoys the seasonal fruits of Hawaii in midwinter and the Indiana farmer may have Alaska salmon at every meal. The preservation and concentration of foods has been carried to such an extent as to enable four English seamen to set out in a ship's lifeboat for a three-year tour of the world, confident that they can carry enough canned and condensed foods to maintain life during passage of 4,600 miles of unbroken sea.

Value of Dehydration.

Practically all vegetables and many fruits are susceptible of concentration by various processes of dehydration. The double advantage of this lies in the decrease in space required for transportation, storage, &c., and in the prevention of decay. Bacteria cannot grow in dried products. As to the economizing of space, its extent may be judged when it is realized that all vegetables contain at least 50 per cent. of water, while the proportion in tomatoes runs up to 98 per cent.

The problem in concentration by drying or by any other method is to preserve the taste as well as the nutritive value of the food. Dehydration does not affect the latter so long as too much heat is not applied. Mechanical appliances have tended to preserve the taste by making the drying an even process. According to Mr. Putt, however, some fine foods have so far been found impossible of concentration without injury to their food value or flavor. In such cases the present practice is to effect concentration and then add a flavoring.

For some foods a change of method in treatment has proved adequate to protect their flavor. Mr. Killeffer mentions fruit juices in this category. The old method for their concentration was by boiling down, a process which regularly resulted in loss of flavor to a certain extent. As a substitute for boiling; freezing was developed. This process is based on the fact that the water content in any liquid freezes, leaving as residue the other elements. By this method all the qualities of the original fruit juices except their water content are preserved in concentration. It was applied commercially for a long time in Florida in the concentration of grapefruit juice.

SHE WAS WEAK, THIN AND NERVOUS

One of the greatest strength givers and producers of good healthy flesh in the world is Cod Liver Extract—it's full of vitamines.

Thank goodness! that now, when a woman is weak and haggard and don't weigh what she ought to, she knows where to go for help as all druggists are now selling McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablets, sugar coated, and as easy to take as candy.

And it's a mighty good thing for skinny, rundown men and women to know that they can get the real Cod Liver vitamines in condensed form, that they can easily carry with them wherever they travel.

Men and women, weak, thin and nervous, are urged to put on weight and get back their health and strength with these wonderful tablets.

One woman gained 15 pounds in five weeks and that's going fast enough for anyone.

Only 60 cents for 60 tablets, and if they don't put five pounds of flesh on any thin person in 30 days—why, money back and no quibbling about it, either.

But be sure and get McCoy's, the original and genuine. Harris Drug Store, McDermid & Jury, Ias. Lynch and Bond's Drug Store and druggists everywhere are selling lots of them.

LACK OF PROTECTION WAS CAUSE OF AUSTRALIAN FIRM GIVING UP PLANS FOR MAKING NEWSPRINT

Request for Duty of Six Pounds Per Ton Was Denied.

BOUNTY OFFERED

Treaty With Canada Cut Off Duty of Three Pounds Formerly Existing.

(Special Correspondence of The Canadian Press)

SYDNEY, N.S.W., Nov. 30—(By Canadian Press).—The subject of newsprint has suddenly come to the fore in Australia and is now being made a live political question in view of the elections for the Commonwealth Parliament which took place on November 14.

It is therefore, interesting to Canadians to know something of the history of the matter, for the Canadian newsprint industry is vitally affected.

About a year ago a huge concern The Amalgamated Zinc Proprietary Ltd., having a considerable amount of money at its disposal, set out to find profitable avenues for its investment. It hit upon the idea of manufacturing newsprint and approached the directors and managers of several Australian newspapers with the object of getting them to join in the project.

The newspaper interests held a meeting and turned down the proposition.

Thereupon, the Amalgamated Zinc Proprietary applied to the Tariff Board for a duty of £6 a ton on all imported newsprint, in order to protect their industry. It is the Tariff Board's duty to inquire into all such applications, to hear evidence for and against, and to make its recommendations to the Government through the Minister for Customs.

Two or three months ago this application was heard and, it is presumed, a recommendation was made. The nature of it has not been disclosed. However, no reference to newsprint was made in the new tariff schedule brought before the Federal Parliament last month.

The public heard of the subject again when it was announced that the Government was prepared to give Amalgamated Zinc a bounty of £4 a ton on all newsprint produced in Australia, but had definitely decided against the proposed duty of £6 a ton.

This action very definitely showed the Government's attitude in regard to the proposed treaty with Canada for a preferential tariff and is an evidence of its good faith. Had the duty been allowed there is no doubt that the position would have had to be reviewed and Canada would have been justified in asking some very pertinent questions.

However, the next move was with Amalgamated Zinc and a Sydney morning daily announced last week that, in view of the Government's refusal to grant the duty and, believing the suggested bonus to be inadequate, Amalagamated Zinc had decided to abandon its effort to establish the newsprint industry.

It was at this point that the question became actively political.

Labor Takes Matter Up.

The leader of the Labor Party in the Federal Parliament, Matthew Charlton, in delivering his political speech in Sydney, used the position to attack Mr. Bruce and the Nationalist Government.

He said there was a 40 per cent. tariff protection for the internal production of all paper except newsprint. The annual consumption of newsprint is 100,000 tons, and the money sent abroad for its purchase is more than £2,000,000.

An Australian company (Amalgamated Zinc), he said, offered to manufacture newsprint in Australia and had been granted cutting rights over 600,000 acres of forests in Tasmania by the Government of that State. In September last the Company's options over the forests expired, but were renewed at a cost of £14,000.

But, said Mr. Charlton, the Government had, for two years persistently refused to grant any support to the proposed industry. Recently it had announced that it would grant a bounty of £4 a ton, the bounty to be reduced if profits exceeded 10 per cent.

"The very day this bounty was announced," said the Labor Leader, "Mr. Bruce's treaty with Canada came into operation. Under it the £3 a ton duty on Canadian newsprint disappears. This £1 a ton advantage to Australian industry is equal to about five per cent. on the value of production and to designate it protection or encouragement to local industry, is a sham, a delusion and a fraud.

"In view of this, the Premier of Tasmania has informed me that the company has definitely decided not to proceed further with the establishment of the industry."

The next phase in the controversy came with the statement of the Prime Minister, Mr. Bruce, published yesterday. "Mr. Charlton has grossly misrepresented the situation," he said. "The first proposals were submitted by Amalgamated Zinc in May of this year and, ever since then, alterations have been made in the request for assistance.

"The matter is one for closest investigation, in view of the fact that paper has never previously been made from hardwood timber. The Tariff Board and the Minister for Trade and Customs inquired into the matter and concluded that the assistance necessary to ensure establishment of the industry would be provided by a bounty of £4 a ton, with a deferred duty of the same amount to come into operation when the industry was established.

"When I announced this decision the directors of the company interviewed me and indicated that the amount of assistance was not adequate. They stated that they could submit further information which would convince the Government that a further measure of assistance was necessary and warranted."

Minister's Reply.

"I asked them to let me have that information," said the Prime Minister, "so that the matter might be reviewed before the expiration of the option on the Tasmanian property on December 3.

"The position, therefore is that the matter is still under negotiation. The Government has examined this matter exhaustively and, upon the information available states definitely that no Government would be justified in extending a great measure of assistance than that which is embodied in the Ministry's proposals."

Then the Minister of Customs, Mr. Pratten, took a hand in the controversy with some interesting figures. "There is no duty on newsprint under the British preferential tariff, which benefits Canada also," he said.

"The duty on Scandinavian newsprint is £3 a ton. No proved information was available to the Government regarding costs, quantities or qualities of paper it was proposed to make. Therefore, I made inquiries as to costs, processes and wages.

"I found that the costs of making newsprint in Canada and Scandinavia, from tree to wharf could reasonably be stated at a maximum of £5 per ton or, say, five men per ton of paper per day on the basis of the Australian rate of wages.

"Owing to the more expensive process necessary to convert hardwood into paper—(Our Australian timber of the Tasmanian forests is harwood)—more men would be necessary than in the Canadian or Scandinavian processes The estimate was eight men per day per ton of paper, apart from reforestation.

"The average production of paper over the period of five years necessary to establish the industry was estimated at 30,000 tons a year for five years from January 1, 1927 This production is 100 tons a day and would mean the employment of 800 men at a wage sheet of, say, £200,000 a year.

"The Government then determined that a bounty of £4 a ton, with a deferred duty, would be sufficient assistance to establish this new industry.

"This would amount to the payment of £120,000 a year and over the five years would mean an offer to pay £600,000 by the Commonwealth for the establishment of the newsprint industry.

"The capital expenditure necessary for the production of 30,000 tons of paper a year would be under £1,000,000 so that the offer of the Government was equal to a bounty of £120,000 a year for five years."

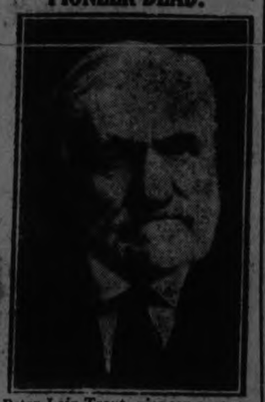
PIONEER DEAD.



Peter Lair Trout, pioneer prospector in the Yukon, Alaska and British Columbia, who succumbed to pneumonia in Toronto in his eighty-fifth year. For the past four years Mr. Trout had been devoting his time to magazine articles on geology and the writing of a book of memories, which he never completed.

WELCOME PERSONALS.

WELCOME, Nov. 30.—Mr. W. Lewis and Mr. C. Lewis of Morish visited Bowmanville and Orono on Thursday.

Rev. D. R. Clare was in Oshawa on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Martyn were in Bowmanville on Monday.

Miss Mary Foley of Fraserville and Miss Florence Clare of Welcome were the guests of Miss Jean Burnham of Millbrook on Wednesday night.

Mr. Ed. Martin and Mr. Winsett motored to Peterboro on Thursday.

Misses Helen Lewis and Edna Pearce attended the fourth year class party of the Port Hope High School on Tuesday night

Mrs. Williams of Port Hope visited Miss Christie Staples on Thursday.

Some of the Welcome young people attended the concert at Morish Church on Thursday night. An excellent musical programme was rendered by Port Hope talent composed of Mr. Skitch soloist, his son, pianist and Miss Dickenson, soloist, volinist and pianist. Refreshments were served and a social hour spent.

Day after Tomorrow

Be sure you hear this astonishing demonstration

The most important contribution to music since the invention of the first "His Master's Voice" Instrument

You will doubt your own ears! You will be amazed almost beyond comprehension! You will say: "I didn't think it could be done."

Don't miss this miraculous exposition of music on Wednesday next, December 2nd. Go to the "His Master's Voice" dealer at any time after nine o'clock in the morning of that day. Go prepared to listen to an enthralling and inspiring demonstration. The more critical your attitude toward music, the more astounded you will be.

You will hear choruses and band music, vocal and instrumental solos, symphonies and jazz. You will hear Victor's incomparable artists in incomparable music. You will return home utterly amazed.

Fritz Kreisler, Madam Schumann-Heink, Sousa, Paul Whiteman and other great musicians hail this incredible instrument with ringing praise. The most noted critics are completely won by its masterful playing.

Whatever you plan to do, hear this remarkable demonstration next Wednesday. It is one of those things you will never forget.

December 2nd is the day. The demonstration will continue all day. The "His Master's Voice" dealer is the place. The instrument itself is the surprise of a lifetime! Something marvelously fine!

BRITAIN'S POSITION MERITS NONE OF DOLEFUL SYMPATHY THAT HAS BEEN GIVEN HER

St. Loe Strachy, Famous British Editor, Voices His Observations.

Dominions To Decide on Foreign Policy For Selves, He Says.

COMING THROUGH.

St. Loe Strachey, editor of the London Spectator, and one of the foremost British Journalists, declares Britain's position is not one for sympathy. Her irresistible optimism is carrying her through, he said, and there is no "blue ruin" in her internal conditions.

Mr. Strachey said: "I am amazed, and, in a sense, perturbed, because people seem to think that the condition of England is very bad, that our national morale has been shaken and that we are in a bad and perilous way. I regret that such a mistaken view should have got hold of the people of Canada and should be widely entertained because in my belief it is entirely contrary to the facts.

"John Bull has always been inclined to talk differently from his thoughts, and acts, and from the real circumstances. You remember the old story of the Frenchman who said to the Englishman, 'Splendide, magnifique—or, what would you say, "pretty good",' When the Englishman says things are as bad as possible, or that the condition of the country is terrible and that we are going to the dogs, if he spoke in accordance to his thoughts he would say the condition of the country is at heart sound and normal.

"Therefore people must not be misled by the Englishman's talk or, when he uses language which, to the ordinary man, sounds like that of a defeated person. When the Englishman employs words of that kind he merely means that he does not think things are as right as they should be, but is determined to put them right. He has, he knows, the inclination and the power to put them right.

"I have watched English public opinion because it is my business to watch it, for the last 45 or 50 years, and I feel sure that our people were never more in earnest than now in their determination to make good. They see the difficulties before them without being in the least depressed or terrified. They are now thinking hard how to get out of them and are laying their plans, not in any boastful spirit—they would think that a most unlucky thing to do because the Englishman is always frightened by anything that approaches boasting.

Reaction Favorable.

"He is very much like the Greeks in this respect. They held that nothing is more sure to bring to a man or to a community more ill fortune than hubris," cheek or boastfulness. While he is talking and in a depressed tone he is only using that temper of mind to show his determination to go ahead and overcome.

Our high taxation, our unemployment, our perplexities, of many kinds, are not bending the nation in the very least. The reaction from these unfavorable conditions is all the other way. John Bull used to be accused of wanting to take things easy. He now sees that as an impossible attitude.

What he is determined to do now is not to take anything sitting down, but stand up and fight it out. When he is told that something or other is impossible and cannot be done, he reminds me of the story of the old major in the Indian Army and the very young lieutenant. The lieutenant was ordered to lead a storming party to take a hill fort. He reconnoitred the position and came back to his superior officer and told him that the thing was impossible.

The major looked at him in horror, and then exploded. Impossible sir, impossible, why I have the order for it in my pocket.' John Bull feels like that when people tell him it is impossible for him to pay his way and pay his debts. He is telling the world and will continue to tell it: impossible, why, sir I have got a copy of the obligation signed in my pocket and I shall carry out whatever I am pledged to carry out to the last penny.'

To anyone who knows the facts and looks closely you see this resolve to make good running throughout the country in every class and in every village and city, men are thinking of what is their duty on the economic side of citizenship, how to fight waste, how to get rid of the burdens of the war by making our shillings and our sixpences do double the work they used to do.

There are, of course, against this determination a good many cross currents and antagonistic forces, but we may be sure that the determination to make good will prevail. What makes a nation prosperous and keeps it so is not in its land resources or its natural wealth—I mean good soil or minerals or good climate or any other material or geographical conditions—the wealth of a nation consists in the energy of the people who inhabit it.

Canada is a rich country with a great future, not because of its good material condition but because of the energy, the good heart and virility of its population. No doubt the people of Canada have heard like the people of the rest of the Empire have heard, a good deal about our unemployed and about the dole, and about the unwillingness of a large part of our working population to give as full measure as they might, for many people in the old country have talked in a way which has given the impression that we are all malingerers or votaries of Ca' Canny.' As a matter of fact the English hand worker, taken as a whole, is doing as good work as he has ever done. His methods may often be old fashioned, or seem old fashioned, but all the same he is still one of the best and one of the most trustworthy workers in the world. It is true that his talk encourages the idea that he is refusing to work hard, and that he is not willing to be paid by results, and so on. But in fact his grumblings are not to be trusted.

"I had in my house, which was a war hospital during the war, a patient grousing in fine style and saying how badly he and his regiment had been treated by the Government. They in the trenches had been paid lower than some navvy battalion, though as a matter of fact, as he said, 'I was a real navvy and getting infantry pay, and the men in the navvy battalion were Manchester clerks.'

"You would have thought from the man's talk that he had been on the edge of mutiny. I asked him how it all ended and what he and his pals did? This was his answer: "What did we do? Why, we got together and said we would obey the good old English rule. 'Grumble and carry on'." You must always remember, to discount the talk of an Englishman, whether he is a miner or a navvy in a public house, or a colonel in some military club, or a big landowner in the House of Lords. He is sure to be grumbling like a bear, but he is also sure to be carrying on.

"Here, indeed, is a national characteristic. I remember very well not long ago meeting an able and sympathetic American in London who had just got back from a tour of the continent, and in the course of conversation he said to me: "What interests and surprises me most when I compare the situation here with the situation on the Continent is this: The French, Germans and Italians act as they talk—English people appear to me, not out of any guile, and indeed not consciously, to do exactly the opposite. They talk in one sense and act in the other. That is why you have a reputation for being faithless, but as a matter of fact, you are only like the son in the parable who said to his father: 'I go not,' but went."

Tax Burden.

"Very possibly many people reading this statement will say: 'This optimism is all very fine, but look at the terrible burden of English taxation. It must weigh the nation down in the end and exhaust it. It may be and is very splendid of John Bull to attempt to carry the burden that he is carrying, but it is too heavy for him. He has taken on the last straw and it is going to break the camel's back.' Gibbon in one of his sardonic notes describes a statement which was made by one of the early Christian Fathers in these terms: 'This statement is probable, but certainly false.' Our high taxation, though it is unpleasant, means no luxuries for many people who used to indulge in luxuries and hard work for many who used to live in idleness, is not going to break our backs or our spirits. Instead, it is going to prove a stimulus.

"There was a shrewd saying in the West of England when I was a young man which exactly applies. It used to be said that the best manure for a farm was a high rent. It worked out in this way,—if a man took a farm at a high rent he was obliged to work it well. If he did not he would go under. But in finding out ways to work the land to the best possible advantage he made himself a master of his craft. The knowledge and experience thus gained was more than sufficient to give him a good profit, as well as the landlord a good rent.

"In the same way high taxation will, I believe, prove a good manure of industry. It will stimulate men to an extra output of energy. It will prove, like other necessities, the mother of invention and adaptation.

The Dole Situation.

"Now as to the dole, which, of course, worries us and our friends throughout the Empire. The dole per se is a bad thing. But I am delighted to be able to say that all recent investigations into the working of the dole seem to show that it is not having the demoralizing effect which we feared it might have. Men who have investigated it carefully find that there is a very small percentage of the unemployed who are in the position of the men in the old story who were walking the streets looking for work and praying to God that they wouldn't find it. On the contrary the number of work-shy people is very small. Making allowances for maladministration in a few cases, the redly work-shy man is drastically removed from the dole. If work has been offered to him on two or three occasions and he has failed to take it or failed to remain at his work when it was found, there is no more dole for him. One of the great troubles in connection with the dole, and one which it is very hard to alter, is the shortage of houses. There are many towns and districts in England where there are a large number unemployed and at the same time there are other districts in which there is a considerable dearth of labor; yet owing to the difficulties of housing the population cannot be removed from the districts full of unemployed to the districts where employment is good. I will give a specific example. In spite of the blight on the coal trade, we are actually at this moment opening up new coalfields in South Yorkshire and Kent. The proper thing would be to take the people from Wales and other districts where there are unemployed miners and put them in the new pits. But this cannot be done because there are no houses in which to put the miners. Therefore men from Kent and South Yorkshire are being drawn from the agricultural work and turned into miners. This is bad for the farmers and the tilling of the soil, and naturally is not good for the mines where men experienced in getting coal are wanted.

"So much for the internal condition of the Mother Country. As regards our prestige in European countries and indeed throughout the world I am sure I am not exaggerating when I say that our prestige has never stood higher. The British Empire was never more trusted and looked upon with less suspicion less accused of selfishness and arrogance than it is now. Several of our critics may still say that we have been too indulgent to our late enemies and our late allies but at the same time most of them I think are willing to admit that our refusal to look at matters from the point of view of self interest has raised us in the estimation of the world.

Conditions Better.

"You will find very few men of sincerity or knowledge who would now talk about "Perfide Albion.'

"Again our difficulties, whether in Asia or Africa are not greater but less than they were. The condition of things in India certainly shows improvement. Though there may be anxiety and troubles in Mesopotamia and in Egypt, those who have studied these questions most closely are full of hope of a just and beneficent solution.

"As to our relations with the other free communities in the Commonwealth of Nations which make up the Empire it is happily not necessary for me to say anything in Canada, you know and we know and the world at larg, knows, that nothing will be donee or can be done by Britain to commit the other parts of the Empire against their will. "Freedom and union" are the two principles upon which our Commonwealth of Nations has been built up, that remains our guiding star. It is in that sign that we shall lead the world. Pitt said that England had saved herself by her own exertions and would save the world by her example. It is my firm belief that the British Empire has saved itself by its efforts and will now help to save the world by the example which it is offering mankind, of how a Commonwealth of Nations can be run and ought to be run."

In Peterborough Churches

ALL SAINTS' ANGLICAN.

Yesterday was observed as A. Y. P. A. Sunday at All Saints' Church, and the services were specially prepared for the members of the Association. The members attended a corporate Communion at 8.30, while special sermons were preached by the Rector, the Rev. J. D. Paterson, for the young people. At the 11.00 and 7.00 services the lessons were read by J. H. Price, president of the Association, while other members acted as ushers.

The text at the morning service was, "I have written unto you, young men, because ye are strong." The Rector spoke of the great work which had been done by the founders of All Saints' Church and others who had labored there, and said that those people are now feeling the weight of years and are looking for their successors. They did a great work and had great visions of what should be. The speaker said that he was confident that the young people of the Church had caught the vision and would work for the Church, and he mentioned the work already being done by the Association.

At the evening service the text was, "What wilt Thou have me to do?" The rector said that the only clear distinction made by the Lord was when He said the people were of two classes, profitable and unprofitable. He said that the only one on earth who could judge whether a person was profitable or not was that person. Many people say that they cannot work, he said, because they haven't enough education, or because they are too young, or because they are not born for such work. Every person is a cog in the machinery and has some task for which he or she is intended, and is profitable in that place, continued the speaker. He said that genius was not born in people and that work was a good way of obtaining training.

KNOX

The morning sermon was an interesting study on stewardship or work and wages in the Kingdom of God, based upon Jesus' parables relating to the same. All our talents and possessions of every kind are ours only in trust, and we are accountable for their use unto the Lord. There is disparity in our wealth, endowments and opportunities, but there is no unjust disparity in our wages or reward providing we are faithful. Our Lord teaches that ultimate justice prevails. The great question is not how much we have, but how faithful are we with what we have. The important thing is not our wealth, but what our earning, saving, spending and giving make us to become. Stewardship is not a scheme for raising money, but rather a school for raising men. The big thing about money and work is their character-value. A recent writer says: "Every occupation holds the possibilities of a full college course. Incidentally, God gives a faithful business man a competence, but it also gives what is better than great riches—the opportunity for personal culture," that is, for character-building. The greatest and happiest men have very often been very poor, as witness Lincoln, Livingstone, Milton, Gordon and a host of others. The supreme example was the Divine man, whose influence on history is far beyond comparison with that of other men. He had no money to give away. When He wanted to illustrate His teaching with a penny He had to borrow it. He spoke of the "deceitfulness of riches," not necessarily the riches men possess, perhaps equally the riches they would like to have. In His own little group the one who finaly sold his Lord for money was the one who handled the money bag and who cried "waste!" when a loving disciple used precious ointment plentifully to annoint Jesus. Our giving of money or substance is an index to our personal destiny. In the judgment our Lord says—Depart, ye gave me not; some, ye gave. Unfaithfully we lose all and go into darkness. Faithful, we become rulers and enter into joy.

The "Preamble to Salvation" was the evening study. "He came to himself," the text. In Jesus' judgment the wayward one in his riotous living was not himself. It was always thus Jesus judged humanity and His judgment was justified in the later history of such as Peter, Matthew, Mary. When is a man a man ? When at his worst? or his best? Jesus says when at his best the man is himself. And he believed the best when the best was lost in the worst. When the best in a man is dead He had faith that the dead could become alive again. Jesus' aim was to make men and women, not into angels but into men and women, to help us realize our true selves. "Ye are the light of the world," He said to a group of very ordinary folk, and they became the light of the world. "Ye are the salt of the earth," and they became the salt of the earth!

GOSPEL HALL

That a man never has a day off and that every moment of life was a moment of destiny, was the statement made by G. W. Mulligan during the course of his interesting discourse last night in the Gospel Hall. He took as his text two verses from Matthew and one from Revelation, dealing with the reward which would be given believers and the terrible fate which would be meted out to evil doers. Mr. Mulligan said he would rather reiterate a nasty truth than a polished lie. Life is no game of chance, he declared. Every word is going on through the ages, for passing through the air are myriads of sounds which never lose their identity. In the judgment day every word will be there to confront the speaker.

Hell is in the lower region of the spiritual universe, stated Mr. Mulligan. It was never made for humanity, but as a kingdom for the devil and his angels; it is the soul's eternal consciousness of a fixed limitation, the consciousness of having missed the great opportunity. The punishment is a spiritual fire which can never be quenched. One soul saved from that fate is worth all the worlds in the universe, for Jesus bore the guilt on every conscience in order that those precious souls might be redeemed. Jesus knows the poignance of separation, the consciousness of despair; he came into the world to save the sinful and delivered people from the leadership of the devil. Salvation is the free gift of God, and the time when it is offered is a time which could mark the turn of destiny.

The Bible lesson was taken from Psalm 37, and was read and explained by A. Hayward.

A duet by Misses E. Wells and A. Lloyd and a solo by Miss Wells were special musical features which were highly appreciated.

GEORGE STREET.

Yesterday was anniversary Sunday at George Street. It is just fifty-one years ago since this important church was opened. Reverend J. A. Mackenzie, a man well-known and well-respected in this city because of a former pastorage at Knox, and who is now pastor of one of the largest churches in Western Ontario, was the speaker at both services.

The church was thronged at both morning and evening service, the large congregation of George Street being augmented considerably by Rev. Mackenzie's old friends of Knox Church.

At the morning service Rev. J. E. Todd welcomed Rev. Mackenzie heartily as an old friend. In reply, and before beginning his sermon, Rev. Mackenzie, speaking on Union, said, "We are all in the same trench and let us man it splendidly."

The reading lesson was from First Corinthians, first to the nineteenth verse, and the speaker took his text from the same chapter, the eighth verse. "For if the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself for the battle?"

Paul found at Corinth confusion and strife among the people, because they could not translate and voice God's will truly. Therefore Paul told them, in the simile of the text, that they must give a clear, trumpet note or the people could not understand or heed their call.

The speaker said that the same "confusion of utterances" exist today, and Paul's warning should be remembered. If the Church does not give forth a clear message on sin, who borne down with transgression shall hear and heed? "Let the Church give a clear ringing," said Rev. Mackenzie.

One note, above all others, must sound forth clear and unmuffled so that all may understand it. "Jesus Christ, as Saviour and as friend." Christians must not only establish respectable habits but, more important, they must carry the Christian religion into personal relationship and let Christ shine out through us.

The other note that must be sounded was stewardship. A man of the Church must give up his time, energy and money for the work of Christ. Christians must live true Christian lives so that they will give a clear trumpet call to the man coming in contact with them.

Evening Service.

At the evening service Reverend Mackenzie read the twenty-second chapter of St. Matthew as the lesson and he chose the first part of the thirty-second verse from the same chapter as his text, "I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob."

This is spoken by Jesus when He conversed with the Sadduccees to prove that there is immortality. However, the speaker said he was not going to take it from this side but rather what was meant by invocing the God of Abraham, and God of Isaac, and of Jacob.

At first it looks like a mere repetition of names. However, the speaker did not believe this hasty conclusion true, "each name means something."

Abraham was the God of great ability of genius. He was able to command the finest talents that human nature can devise. Contrasting Abraham to the modern man of outstanding ability and genius, the speaker said the modern man often uses his same great ability to give excuses for his sins. "No financial, artistic, political or scientific talent is too great for God to direct," said the speaker. At the name of Abraham "a mountainous personality is conjured," who would have been just as great if he had not been religious and devout.

"God never commercializes righteousness or honour or integrity. If there was a price on these virtues, men would strive for them for that price," said Rev. Mackenzie.

"God Who commanded the genius of Abraham is able to command the genius of Peterborough," continued the speaker. Following are the names of outstanding men of ability who kept their faith and religion: John Franklin, explorer of the North-West Passage, whose favorite verse was, "When thou partest the waters I will be with thee"; "Chinese" Gordon, a military man who gave his life to duty; Michael Faraday, scientist, was a devout man, and such poets as Tennyson, Browning and Dante were filled with religious fervor. "Abraham the God of distinctive ability."

The God of Isaac, representative of ordinary folk. The great mass of ordinary through which God wants to do great things. "The God of the man of ordinary ability who wonders if God has any use for him," said the speaker.

In considering the God of Jacob we are face to face with different character, said the speaker, who used to wonder why Jacob got such a place in the Bible. Jacob, the man who seized every opportunity for a crooked deal. Jacob, the man who stole his brother's birthright and then saw the angels. Jacob, the man who battled with Laban and then with an angel. "Jacob is the kind who know acute soul struggles," said the speaker. A great many know this same struggle pulled first upward by the light and then downward by nature. "Paul knew these soul struggles," said the speaker.

"Let us give God His chance. Let us not free from God and let us never surrender to our dogmatic chains, pleaded the speaker.

The music was especially good for both services. Miss Daisy Murray sang spendidly at each service. At the evening service a special number was the duet, "Come Unto Me," sung by Mr. A. V. Lillow and Mr. S. Jones.

ST. ANDREW'S UNITED.

Rev. J. W. Gordon took for his morning subject: "God's age-long struggle to be understood." He stated that there were many people in the church to-day who thought that God was a complacent person while in reality he was a struggling and a suffering God. There is a kindergarten age in man's knowledge of God just as in everything else and throughout the ages man has always looked up and God has always looked down. He stated that the Bible was a miniature photograph of man's struggle through the ages. Referring to the story of Abraham the minister stated that Abraham was a pioneer saint and a man of vision and in his own soul was the thought, 'Does God want me to kill my son?'' He stated that the story proved that God was not very well understood in the days in which Abraham lived, and said that the glory of the story lies in the fact that God by his spirit prevented Abraham from committing the sacrifice. The universal character of God's love embracing every man had not yet reached these people and the minister counselled the people to think of the long struggle that had taken place since the days when the law was an eye for an eye and in Christ's time when the law was "love your enemies." When Paul was preaching the people said that he was not a steady man—that he would destroy the Hebrew religion. "Is it surprising," asked Mr. Gordon, "that God's ambassadors to-day are misunderstood when Paul, Jesus, and even God himself, were in the same position years ago?" He stated that the feeling in China was that science and religion can never agree and that the Chinese were of the belief that religion was an ancient superstition and found in Confucius a strong supporter of this theory. He also showed how many uneducated Chinese feel that money contributed towards missions is a plot to denationalize their country, and was of the opinion that the religion of Jesus Christ never got such an overhauling in China as it was getting to-day and stated that it was the business of the church to look after the men and women who are laboring in that country to-day. "If there is not something big wrong with our faith and our creed it will be the first time in the history of man and of the church. Even in the best of us you can find holes in our faith."

When You Catch Cold Rub on Musterole

Musterole is easy to apply with the fingers and works right away. Often it prevents a cold from turning into "flu" or pneumonia. It does all the good work of grandmother's mustard plaster without the blister.

Musterole is a clean, white ointment, made of oil of mustard and other home simples. It is recommended by many doctors and nurses Try Musterole for sore throat, cold on the chest, rheumatism, lumbago, pleurisy, stiff neck, bronchitis, asthma, neuralgia, congestion, pains and aches of the back and joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet — colds of all sorts.

There's One Man A Manufacturer Cannot Ignore

THAT man is the dealer.

Many claim HE is the most important factor in the world of business.

To try to force him or to coerce him to handle your goods is to court disaster.

But to win his "good will" and his "co-operation" is a big factor in achieving success.

And it can be won—if your business policy to the trade is right, if your goods are O.K., and if your plan of merchandising appeals to the dealer as beneficial to him as well as to you.

Our organization has helped a number of manufacturers formulate merchandising plans that have won the good will and co-operation of the dealer—that have made HIM an active force in marketing the goods.

Of course, these merchandising plans included national advertising as an outstanding feature. They could not have been successfully carried into effect without it.

The modern way of advertising is to make it part and parcel of the merchandising and selling end of a business; to use it to secure wider distribution and dealer co-operation as well as to sell the consumer.

If you would like to talk with us about a modern merchandising and advertising plan for your business, we would be glad to arrange a meeting.

PROPER MEASUREMENT HELPS IN SELECTING PROPER PATTERNS

Ideal Pattern Service Includes Directions for Taking Measure.

TAKEN OVER DRESS.

All Sizes Are Figured in Proportion to Size Over Dress.

The service in Ideal fashions and patterns which commences in The Examiner this week should prove popular with women who are interested in making clothes for themselves and their families. Care exercised in procuring the right measurements means a great deal in the use of these patterns. Styles that fitted you once, may not be the right size now. Your measurements should be taken over a well-fitting dress, never over a coat or a loose-fitting garment. Ideal Pattern sizes are scientifically determined, so that fit and style may be had by following the directions.

All sizes, whether for coats, dresses, or undergarments, are designed on the basis of measurements taken over a dress. Proper allowance is made for coat and underwear pattern sizes.

If the bust measures 38 inches, select a 38-inch bust pattern for waists, blouses, dresses, coats, bodice-top skirts, nightgowns, chemises, kimonas, etc.

For skirt, petticoat and drawer patterns be governed by the hip size, but select the waist size that corresponds to the hip size. Do not select by the waist measurement. For example, if the hip measures 43 inches and waist only 30 inches, select a 32-inch waist size. It is more satisfactory to alter a skirt at the waist-line than a the hips.

Patterns for loose-fitting, full garments, such as nightgowns, kimonas, capes, combinations, chemises, etc., are not made in every size; one pattern covers two sizes. For example a loose-fitting nightgown is made in sizes 36, 40 and 44 inch bust, and these cover all sizes from 34 to 46.

Skirt and dress patterns are long enough to be adapted to any length that suits the individual tastte or style of the wearer.

In the present-day styles there is little difference in coats, blouses, waists, skirts, underwear, etc., for ladies and misses; therefore, many of these patterns in these designs are for both ladies and misses.

Misses patterns are marked according to age. In selecting a misses pattern, however, be governed by the size as shown in the Table of Proportionate Measurement which follows. For example, a 16-year miss may measure 36 inches about the bust, in which case select an 18-year size.

To take the bust measurement, place the tapeline around the body, close up under the arms, over the fullest part of the bust, and across the lower edges of the shoulder-blades.

Patterns for Girls are marked according to age. In selecting a pattern for a girl, however, be governed by the size as shown in the table. For example, an 8-year size pattern for girls measurs 28 inches breast; if the girl measures 30 inches breast, select a 10-year size.

The same rule holds good for patterns for boys, which are marked according to age, but an 8-year pattern for boys measures 27 inches breast; if the boy measures 29 inchest breast, select a 10-year size.

For breast measurement, place the tapeline snugly around the body close up under the arms. For hats measure around the head across the forehead. The circumference in inches is the size to select. For dolls the size to select.

Shirts for men and boys should be selected by the corresponding neck size, as shown in the Proportionate Table. All other patterns for men should be selected by the breast measurement.

In marking sizes for Ideal Patterns, the usual trade custom of giving the age size for misses' and children's patterns has been followed. But in selecting a pattern be sure to choose the age size that corresponds to the correct measurement as shown in the table. Never be governed by the age.

Bust.	Waist.	Hips.
34	26	37
36	28	29
38	30	41
40	32	43

WESTERN FARMERS SELL HORSE STEAKS

Say Six Cents Per Pound for Dressed Horse Not Enough.

CALGARY, Alta., Nov. 30 (Canadian Press) — Investigation has shown that an abundant supply of horse meat is available for shipment to Holland, in this province alone. According to interests who are in the market for this kind of meat, Holland can obtain an unlimited supply if buyers are willing to pay six cents a pound for horse meat on the hoof.

A group of farmers who are interested in this new market declare that six cents for "dressed" meat is a different proposition. Unless the provincial government provides packing plants, they contend, no farmer is going to slaughter a horse, cut out the choice pieces, weigh and pack them, then ship them to Holland.

Local horsemen favor the erection of small slaughter houses at different points in the province and the round-up of all scrub animals running the range throughout the province. These animals, it is pointed out, could be destroyed, and the desirable meat shipped to the European markets. In addition, sponsors of the scheme maintain that by this method employment would be provided for a number of men, while the range would be divested of pests which at present are reported to be causing much damage annually, by breaking into pastures and crop lands and enticing domestic animals from the fold. It is estimated that thousands of horses are running wild throughout the province.

Many modern business girls in London will have cause to remember with gratitude the vestry of the church of St. George the Martyr, Southwark, which is famous for its associations with Dickens' "Little Dorrit." The rector of the church has invited all business girls working in the vicinity to use the vestry as a club-room, where they can eat their lunch and rest.

Advise Women

to discard old hygienic methods and retain freshness every day

LARGELY on medical advice, women are abandoning the old-time "sanitary-pad" for a new way that supplants uncertainty with positive protection.

Sheer frocks and ill-timed social engagements no longer remain as worries. Lost days are fewer, and health better.

It is called "KOTEX." Ends the insecurity of the old time sanitary pad. Five times as absorbent! And deodorizes—ends ALL fear of offending.

As easily disposed of as a piece of tissue. No laundry. No embarrassment.

You get it at any drug or department store simply by saying "KOTEX." You ask for it without hesitancy.

Costs only a few cents. 8 in 10 better class women employ it. Proves the folly of old ways.

The Secrets Of Charm

—By Lucrezia Bori—

Do you ever become confused by the very number of the beauty precautions you see recommended? Have you often counted up, in one day, beauty recipes in the morning papers, beauty recipes in the evening paper, and beauty recipes in between, where your eye happened to fall upon advertisements and recommended lotions and formulas?

Perhaps you even happened to lunch with your most particular beauty-seeking friend, who told you of no less than three new treatments she was trying out, with varying degrees of success, but always with a hopeful heart.

If you find yourself in this quandary, you will do well to read carefully my ples for discrimination.

My dear, we can use the utmost discrimination in our selection of beauty aids which will help us, just as we can in every other way. Knowing what beauty treatments you need for yourself is just as important as knowing what kind of clothes you should wear.

The very necessary thing is to be able to select the beauty aids which are best for you, and to forget the others. You must know your good points. Be willing to keep these at their best, and concentrate upon the points that need improvement.

I want to cite, as most important in well-ordered life, the routine of going to bed. Simplify your beauty treatments, and get them into as small a space of time as possible. If you have the simplest and most indispensable beauty aids at your finger-tips, you can run through them almost without thinking of them, then you will have time for the specialized aids as the need for them comes up.

For the usual routine of going to bed at night, I would suggest a routine somewhat as follows:

1. Brush your teeth thoroughly. Much could be said here, but really learn the thorough way to brush them, and never slight them. You will store up beauty and save trouble thereby.

2. Take a warm bath, which is restful and relaxing, and which will enable you to make your morning dip or shower a very quick one.

3. Cleanse your face thoroughly. If you have applied the cold cream before you get into the tub, you can remove it after you get out. The interval and the moisture from your warm bath will have helped the cream to work into your pores and thus to do its work more thoroughly.

4. Glance at your finger-nails, and give them whatever attention they need. A moment or two spent on them nightly will keep them in condition, provided you give them a good going-over once a week.

5. Your nightly hairbrushing is most important. Brush it briskly away from your scalp, brushing small strands at a time, so the bristles will search out all the day's dust.

You should now be ready for any extra beauty treatment you plan for yourself. If this routine is all you find necessary, raise your windows and get into a comfortable bed. You should be able to fall into the sweet sound sleep which is nature's best beauty-maker.

TODAY'S FASHION

—By Vera Winston—

Knitted frocks and coats for outdoors continue to be featured in wardrobes of the smartest women. The smartest children, also, usually play about in diminutive knitted garments.

This little boy has an ideal knitted play suit, of wool in cocoa brown, with bright colors arranged in border design. The colors feature yellow, brick and brown.

For less rigorous weather, or for indoors, mohair suits are both practical and good-looking.

PRINCE OF WALES AND THE MOVIE MAID.

Betty Balfour, the great English screen actress, known across "the pond" as Britain's Queen of Happiness," had the honor of being presented tl H. R. H. the Prince of Wales on the occasion of the gala performance of her latest photoplay, "Reveille," at the Palace theatre in London. Here are Betty's impressions of the great event.

"My first impression on my meeting with the Prince of Wales when I was presented to him at the special performance of 'Reveille' was the sound of a hoarse voice borne up to the anteroom where we were all waiting, saying, 'Ere he comes, boys; let's giv him a cheer.'

"And then a few more seconds and in came the Prince himself like a breeze. I can find no other word which will suggest more nearly my sensations of the moment. I felt immediately an impression of his magnetic freshness and enthusiasm, and (when I heard that curiously attractive voice of his) an impression of his delightful and utterly unassuming candor.

"And before he spoke came my third impression. What a wonderful handshake he has.

"His first actual words to me were, 'You're featuring in this picture aren't you, Miss Balfour?' to which I replied that I was at any rate a bit of the film.

"The Prince laughed and said, 'Splendid.' and then asked whether it was a first night.

"Then he sat down to see the film, which quite evidently interested and amused him, for before he went he turned and said, 'A jolly good film.'"

WEDDING BELLS.

MORTIMER—BRADBURN

A quiet but very pretty wedding took place on Saturday, Nov. 28th, at three o'clock at the George St. Methodist parsonage, by the Rev. J. E. Todd, B.A., when Cora Irene, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry F. Bradburn, 704 George St., was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Wilbert Russell Mortimer, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Mortimer of Otonabee.

The bride looked charming in a gown of whirlpool blue chiffon velvet and a very becoming hat of gold lace with coral shade trimmings.

The happy couple left on the 3.40 train for points west on a short honeymoon, the bride wearing a Hudson seal coat with gray trimmings, gray shoes and stockings and gray gloves. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer will reside at 704 George St.

Samuel Cummings, Clearwater, Fla., Lewis Mitchell, Buffalo, N. Y., Dr. Burton D. Myers, Bloomington, Ind., Douglas J. Scott, Winnipeg, Canada, and George E. Snell, Billings, Montana.

Lewis Mitchell, William C. Green and Dr. Burton D. Myers are members of the Council's program committee, and are working with International Secretary, Fred. C. W. Parker, of Chicago, for the completion of all the details for the successful occasion.

The sessions will be opened on Thursday morning, December 3, at 10 o'clock with a general assembly, when Lewis Mitchell will make the opening address. The key-note speech will be made by International President, John H. Moss, and will be followed with an address, "The Ideals and Objects of Kiwanis," by George H. Ross, of Toronto, a past president of the International organization.

Other topics of interest to district officials which are scheduled for Thursday are: "The Functions and Inter-Relations of the International District and Club Units of our Organization," Douglas J. Scott; "The Organization and Administration of the District," O. Samuel Cummings; "District Committees in their Relation to International and Club Committees," Victor M. Johnson; "District Conventions," Geo. E. Snell.

Friday's sessions will be devoted to a forum and breakfast at 7:45 o'clock and talks by chairmen of International committees on agriculture, business standards, Kiwanis education, music Public Affairs in the United States, Canada, and International, under-privileged child, publicity, and other Kiwanis topics. On Friday afternoon there will be special conferences for district governors, recently elected at the district conventions, and also International committee chairmen. William C. Alexander, of New York City, and J. Walter C. Taylor, of Montreal, will speak on arrangements being made for the International convention to be held in that Canadian city in June 7-10, 1926. Special meetings will also be called on Friday afternoon for the committee on International Public Affairs of which Harry E. Karr, of Baltimore, a past president, is chairman, and also the International Board of Trustees.

The closing sessions on Saturday will include a message on "Leadership," by Edmund P. Arras, fo Columbus, Ohio, and brief messages from all past International presidents. Ralph A. Amerman, of Scranton, Pa., a member of the International fincne committee, will speak on "Our Financial Policy."

In the afternoon there will be a visit to Kiwanis headquarters, located in the Federal Reserve Bank Building.

Could love but be measured some friends would stretch round the world.

"Wedded To Their Work" End Honeymoon Era

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Honey moons are going out of fashion in these unromantic days of business men and women who are "wedded to their work," according to competent observers.

Ten years ago a honeymoon was as necessary as the wedding ring or the orange-blossom, but to-day people are geting married and continuing their everyday work immediately after as if getting married was an every-day occurrence, say the observers. It seems as if honeymoons will shortly join many other pre-war customs which have lately been put on the shelf.

Bing would have died rather than let his eyes follow Miss Celimena's to the slow-moving hands of the old clock, but all the same he knew at the precise instant she did when they pointed, after centuries had passed, to five minutes of twelve.

Whether the entire, queerly garbed assemblage had been watching the clock also, there are, of course, no means of knowing, but the fact remains that there was a sudden, concerted halt of the dancers, and—after a straggling diminuendo wail from the blaring saxophone, and an uncertain thump or two from the drums—the orchestra followed their example and fell into abrupt and motionless silence.

A hundred pairs of eyes were turned expectedly from one entrance of the ballroom to the other, in search of a slim, straight little figure in the white robes of a Dominican Sister, minus the veil and head covering, coming to end the evening's play with the all-important announcement.

Poppy Glenn in particular, seemed unusually nervous, twisting her pretty neck to crane inquisitively over first one plump bare shoulder and then the other in her efforts to keep both doors in sight at the same time.

A full minute ticked itself away laboriously, and the strain grew. There were stifled giggles here and there in the room, and an impatient tapping of high heels that had the restless, staccato tempo of castanets.

Then, suddenly, as if in response to his cue, in the right-hand doorway appeared the stately figure of Judson, Miss Celimena's white-headed butler, carrying a small tissue-paper package in his hands.

And with the eyes of the room upon him, straight up to Saltonstall Cabot Adams went Judson, as unhurried and matter-of-course as though about to announce that dinner was served, and laid the package in Salt's astonished hand.

"Miss Connemara told me early this evening I was to deliver it at midnight, sir," quoth Judson, and his part played, departed discreetly.

Bing with his face as white as Saltonstall's, was scarlet, held his chin high by sheer instinct of pride, for, like the other man, he was past conscious analysis of his actions.

Poppy, who happened to be beside Salt, leaned forward with impertinent assurance and read aloud the clear handwriting of the package's superscription:

"Salt Saltstall Cabot Adams, Esq.
According to Agreement,
Constance Mary Moore,
June 30th, 12 p.m.

"My gracious, but she's being legal and exact. Congratulations, Salt, old top! Now hurry and open it up!"

It is probable, so great was Miss Glenn's curiosity and eagerness, that if her suggestion had not been promptly acted upon by the successful suitor, she would have snatched the little package out of his hand and opened it then and there herself.

But, recovering somewhat from his astonishment at the girl's energetic command, Salt ripped off the silver ribbon tied about the small, limp white bundle, and rather cautiously began to unroll the paper covering.

A little gasp of released breaths went up about him as a long, silky something, sinuous as if actually alive, warmly red—no, auburn, excuse us, Connemara—with surface sheen of gold where the light touched it, lay across his open palm, the discarded tissue-paper wrapping slipping to the floor at his feet. A thick, deliciously curling lock of Connemara's famous hair, clipped off by vandal shears, and then romantically and daintily tied up in tissue paper and silver ribbons and sent to her lover, for all the world like the heroines of picturesque but out-of-date days when Knighthood was in Flower.

And Connemara the most up-to-the-minute and rebellious of moderns too! Still, it undoubtedly was a dramatic touch and went rather well with the fantastic costumes of the audience.

They broke into a storm of applause that was almost hysterical in its relief at the ending of the strain. And Salt, carried out of his usual grave pomposity of manner by this proof of his triumph, forgot that he hated the limelight, and actually had made a stiff little speech before he could stop himself.

"Ladies and Gentlemen," he said seriously—"Ladies and Gentlemen, it has been, very fittingly, left to me by Miss Connemara Moore to make the evening's anticipated and happy announcement."

After which he went on and made it, formally, correctly, as one who was at once a Saltonstall, a Cabot, and an Adams might be expected to do, and it was neither a bad enough nor good enough speech to be remembered ten minutes after he made it by anyone present, if it had not been for the unforeseen denouement just before the next to the last sentence as he had it outlined in his mind.

Somebody's very muscular hand closed unexpectedly on Salt's arm, and spun him right about face with a suddenness that jarred his teeth together violently.

The voice of Bing Carrington, entirely shorn of its lazy Virginian drawl, fell in furious accents upon the close and startled air of the packed ballroom.

"How in thunder," it inquired with ominous restraint, "do you get that way? Didn't you take in the very plainly expressed agreement that if Connemara bobbed her hair it meant she was engaged to me?"

With a quick gesture he snatched the auburn lock from the other's hand, and held it aloft before all the eyes.

"Well?" demanded young Mr. Bingham Carrington, his chin up at least an inch and a half as he faced the room with his challenge.

"Why—why—" It was Poppy Glenn, on the verge of hysterics from sheer excitement. "That was the agreement. Of course it was, Bing!"

Stunned silence—broken giggles—a circle of staring eyes——

"I," said Bing, in his most magnificent manner, which could be very magnificent indeed when he had an occasion to rise to, "have the honor of announcing, for Miss Moore and myself, our engagement." His eyes gleamed with reckless laughter that picked up answering smiles, warm and friendly, from those nearest him. "I'm waiting for congratulations, everybody, and it'll take a darn lot of them to make up for what I went through when old Judson marched over and handed Salt that package," he wound up in an ingeniously youthful outburst.

"Perhaps you can explain why, in that remarkable eventuality," Salt asked icily, "Connemara sent the package to me?"

"To let you know you were out of it, of course," Bing Carrington said, with easy assurance, still holding on to Connemara's disputed curl. "And possibly, too, because she's a generous, warm-hearted child who's sorry to hurt anyone, she sent it to you for a little keepsake to remember her by. Perfectly natural and simple thing to reason out for any one who understands Connie Moore." He shrugged, as if finished with the subject forever.

HIGHLY TRAINED HAREM WOMEN SEEK HUSBANDS

Abandonment of Felicity Courts Instituted By President Mustapha Kemal.

MANY COST MUCH.

Foreign Trespasser Would Pay For Invasion With His Life.

ANGORA, Nov. 27—Hundreds of beautiful women, highly trained in the social graces, arts of the toilette, dancing, music and religion, who have been freed from harems, now have the Turkish government seeking husbands for them. Most of them are wholly unfitted for the practical work of life.

Abandonment of the harem also placed on the hands of the government many eunuchs, but their disposition has not been so difficult. In the absence of regular employment in the cities, they have been sent to the provincial districts for work on the farms.

When President Mutapha Kemal assumed power in Angora, one of his first official acts was to banish the harems and slave households of Sultan Mohammed VI, the princes and members of the Royal Court.

In order to set an example, most of the Nationalist government officials have one, or at most only two wives. Indeed, Mustapha Kemal Pasha has no wife at all, having recently been granted a divorce. Economic conditions also serve to make it almost impossible for one to indulge in the old luxury of plurality of wives.

Prior to the present social revolution in Turkey, every woman was obliged to veil herself from all except her father, brother and husband. If a man, either Turk or foreigner, entered the sacred precincts of the harem, he usually paid with his life, while the master also had the right to kill his unfaithful wife or concubine.

Only three foreigners, an American, a Britisher and a Frenchman, are known to have entered a real harem when it was occupied, and they were disguised as Turks and spoke the Turkish language. By posing as government representatives, they escaped the usual penalty.

Any departure from the rules of conduct in the harems was severely punished by eunuchs, who maintained security of the places and who were euphemistically called "Masters of the Maidens," or "Chiefs of the Abodes of Felicity."

While Sultan Mohammed VI had only four legal wives, he had at his disposal several hundred "ikbals," or favorites. Sultan Abdul Hamid was said to have had 1,000 wives in his harem.

Madame Edibe Halliday Hanoum Bey, a Turkish woman trained in the American Girls' College at Constantinople, was one of the first to agitate a change in the status of Moslem women, insisting that the system was wholly inconsistent with any high ideal of womanhood.

Abandonment of the harem has been noted as Turkey's most radical step in its transition from an Oriental state to a modern Western country.

CANADIAN NOVELS LESS SEX PROBLEM

Baroness Orczy Will Write of Canadian Life in Usual Style.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 30 (Canadian Press).—The two novels with Canadian settings which Baroness Orczy intends to write (of historic Quebec, and life on the Prairies) when she returns to her villa at Monte Carlo, will be written in the same romantic style which has characterized her other work; there will be none of the sex problems, which she declares seems inevitable in much of the modern literature.

According to the Baroness, when she was in Winnipeg, it is the duty of a novelist to bring beauty into the life of the reader, and take him out of everyday surroundings, 'so often filled with monotony and sordidness."

"It is not refreshing to read about the sorrows of others, but only intensifies one's own," she said, "Modern people," she added, "have a very bad habit of introspection. They analyze their reactions too much and demand the same thing in their reading. Why not forget themselves in delightful romance?"

When asked if she thought it possible for a woman to combine marriage and a career, the Baroness replied with a very expressive shrug of the shoulder: 'I have done it. Why not others?"

The Baroness feels that many of the books which have an uncomplimentary angle to married women in professions, are written by men who still have the old-fashioned idea of marriage.

Baroness Orczy gives definite hours to the supervision of her household either in London or at her charming home on the shores of the Mediterranean. It is only during her hours in the "studio" that she draws herself apart. This is a large room commanding a superb view of the sea, which she shares with her artist husband, Mr. Montague Barstow, who does a great deal of work in water color.

Victoria and Vancouver, in the belief of the Baroness, are more like parts of England than any other spot in Canada. "In the Eastern provinces I feel miles away, but there it seems to me that a few hours of riding will bring me into London."

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silvar

BETTY PAYS A VISIT TO HER LITTLE BROWN NEIGHBOR

"Oh dear!" Betty cried when her Mama called her to come in from her play to make her bed, "I jus: wish I didn't have any bed to make! I just hate to make beds!" And she threw down her doll and scuffed her way back to the porch.

"Gracious me," chuckled a tiny voice and Gocomeback, the wee Travel elfin poked his head around the post of the porch rail, "what a heavy cloud for a sunny day. What's the trouble, Betty dear?"

"I'm sorry you found me cross again, Gocomeback," Betty tried to smile. "But, if there is one thing I do despise to do, it's to make beds, I just wish——"

"Tut! Tut! Tut!" warned the elfin putting his finger to his lips. "Don't finish that sentence. If it should come true, maybe you wouldn't like to live where folks don't have beds. Why not try it out?", and before Betty knew what was happening, she found herself standing in a strange land beside a queer looking hut. It was built round with a haystack for a reef, its walls of poles stuck into the ground with strips of cane woven in and out, plastered over with mud.

Gocomeback knocked and out came a wee little brown girl whom the elfin introduced as Isbe.

clothing at all. The dress she did wear was made of bark cloth which reached from under her arms to her knees. Her neck, arms and ankles were decked with bracelets of wire and beads of all colors. Around her ankles were rings of ivory, which Gocomeback told Betty were cut from the tusks of an elephant. Her hair was almost jet black, curled in the tightest of tight curls that bobbed up and down when she laughed.

"Come on in while I make up the bed," she said as she led Gocomeback and Betty into the hut. At first it was so dark Betty could hardly see, but when her eyes cleared, she smiled. There was no furniture at all in the place. In the center of the room was a deep fire hole that Isbe told Betty, they used as a stove. Two little wooden stools which Isbe said belonged to her Mother and Daddy were pulled out for Betty and Gocomeback to sit on. Isbe moved over to one side of the funny little house and rolled up a queer looking mat that was spread out on the floor.

"What's that?" inquired Betty, whose curiosity got the better of her.

"My bed," replied Isbe. "Here in Central Africa where my people live, we have no beds. Each one in the family has his or her own mat, each night and morning these mats are pulled out on the floor. We don't even have to bother about folding up covers like you do in America. Now tonight," and she pulled out a somber-colored mat, "this will be your bed, Betty."

Betty closed her eyes and shivered. When she opened them again she was glad to find herself sitting on the steps of her own porch in good old America.

Betty let out a happy shriek and bounded up the steps three at a time, and that was the last time anyone ever heard her complaining about making the beds.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

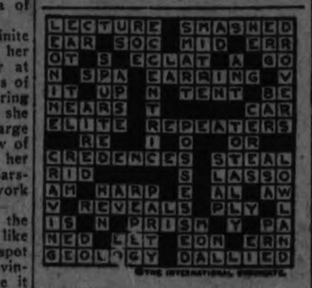
By Genevieve Kemble

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 1.

Troublesome conditions are forecast from the prevailing lunar transits on this day. Change, removal or travel may not bring the expected benefits and hasty acts, quarrels and litigation might prove disastrous. There is also a figure portentous of accident. Letters, publishings or contracts may cause anxieties or complications, although new propositions may be taken under advisement.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for anxieties and difficulties during the year, which may be best met by refraining from changes or travel and by keeping the tongue and temper under control so that they may not invite trouble. Be careful with all papers and avoid the possibility of accident. A child born on this day may be disposed to be tempestuous and impulsive, although it may be quick-witted and careless with its speech, unless given the most rigorous early training.

Umbrella handles are now being made to hold cigarettes, thus serving also as a smoker's companion.



SOLUTION OF SATURDAY'S CROSSWORD PUZZLE.

THE FAMILY ORCHESTRA

UNCLE HARRY EXPLAINS THE INSTRUMENTS OF THE ORCHESTRA TO THE CHILDREN.

"I vote that Uncle Harry acts as conductor," said Betty.

"All in favor of this, signify in the usual way," said Jack, in his solemn style, and immediately up went all hands, and shouts of "Uncle Harry" rang through the house, and were heard even at the bottom of the garden, where the younger children were playing "Leap Frog."

Uncle Harry was in popular favor, as he had just come home from an extensive trip on the seas, and was full of enthusiasm concerning music for the children. He was even ambitious enough to suggest forming an orchestra in which John and Betty and Mildred and Phil Harris, with their smaller brother, Tim, were to play. Uncle Harry had also a number of musical friends who were just as keen as he was, and had promised to come and help him.

The wonderful first practice had arrived and you never saw anything like it. The front hall was a buzz of activity; there seemed to be people all over the place, and they all carried instruments of various sizes and shapes. Everybody was there excepting Phil, but as Jack said, he couldn't be early if he tried.

At the last minute in rushed Phil, breathless and excited, and then found he had left his kettle drums behind, so back he had to go, but, fortunately, as he only lived next door, he didn't take long.

Uncle Harry led the way to the large music room where, the musicians felt quite at home, and very happy, if smiling faces and happy laughter were anything to go by. As Uncle Harry had previously been selected for the honored position of conductor, he took the lead in all the arrangements, so he gave a short opening speech of welcome, and suggested that perhaps a little sketch about orchestral matters might be a help to the younger members, and, needless to say, they heartily agreed.

"You no doubt have a very good idea of an orchestra," began Uncle Harry, "for it was only last Saturday I took you hear that fine orchestral concert, and it was a specially interesting programme for young people. What did you think of it, Jack?"

"Not much," said Jack, quickly, for he was caught at an awkward moment, as Phil had given him a tempting chocolate to eat; "it seemed a dreadful noise to me; everybody played at once, and the fiddles squeaked, and the drums nearly deafened me! I don't want to go again."

"Not a very encouraging student," said Uncle Harry. "Let's see what Betty and Tim think about it."

"We liked it very much," they both cried excitedly, "but, really, we didn't understand it; so we will be thrilled to hear your story."

Even Uncle Harry liked appreciation, and he drew himself up to his full height, and as Betty whispered to Mildred, really looked quite handsome.

"Well," said Uncle Harry, "imagine yourselves for the first time being in a brilliantly lighted concert hall, with a platform on which are arranged numerous chairs and as many music stands, all in semi-circular fashion. In front of these is the conductor's stand and desk, on which is placed the 'full score'."

The children were rather puzzled about the latter, but Uncle Harry soon simplified matters and explained that the full score contained the parts that every orchestral member had to play, even to the beat of the kettledrum.

"The orchestra," he continued, "is divided into different families; first come the string family, and if you watch carefully you will find that the family is not all the same size, and notice also that they are played with a bow. The violins are the smallest, but not the least important members. They are divided into first and second violins, and are somewhat like soprano and contralto voices. The best players in this section usually play first violin."

"Not with you, anyway," said Tim, "for you make horrible, squeaky noises."

"The leader of the orchestra," said Uncle Harry, "is also found among the first violins, and he has a very responsible position, for sometimes he has to conduct as well. Behind the violins you will find the viola players. The viola or tenor violin is slightly larger than the violin. Quite near, but on the outer circle, come the violoncellos, and, last of all, the big double bass. Now, Tim, tell me what you know about the 'cellos, as they are called for short."

"I'm not sure," said Tim, with a worried look on his face. "I mix them up with the big chaps at the back."

"Oh, no," said Uncle Harry; "the double bass people stand up and play."

"A hideous row they make," said Betty. "They sound to me like 'Tony when he's cross, and then gets red in the face. I'm sure they never make a note with any tune in it.'

"You are not quite fair to the poor old double bass, Betty. It certainly isn't a pretty instrument, but how wonderfully useful. It provides the harmonic foundation for the orchestra, and if they played as badly as you think, well I'm afraid they would sound like your piano duets with Jack, when you generally wander a good deal in your reading."

This brought a smile to Jack's face, as he rather prided himself on his own reading powers.

"But to get back to the 'cello," said Uncle Harry. "It is much bigger than the violin and viola, and its tone is very much bigger, and you can easily pick it out, as it stands on the ground, supported on the knee of the performer. It often gets tuney parts to play, more so than the viola, which sometimes sounds very weird and queer."

"Many of the instruments have the same number of strings?" asked Tim. Oh, yes," replied Harry, "but they are not all tuned in the same way. let us take the violin first. Here you the four strings—G, D, A and E—tuned in fifths. The viola also has four strings tuned in fifths, but they are a perfect fifth lower than the violin. The 'cello strings are much lower and thicker than the other two, and they are tuned an octave lower than the viola. The double bass, is, as you know, the lowest of the lot, and it sometimes has three strings, but more often four, and these are tuned in fourths. Remember, also, that the 'cello and violin are generally the solo instruments in the string family and get all the nice, melodic parts."

"Doesn't seem fair," mumbled Betty. "But I suppose old John Bach and that funny old chap, Beethoven, had something to do with that. I wonder," said Betty, "if they had violins in those days. I'd better ask Uncle Harry; he is sure to know."

Uncle Harry was pleased at Betty's inquisitive turn of mind and said, "that the early Egyptians and other ancient people used to pluck their stringed instruments with the finger, but the Arabians had some stringed instruments which they played with a bow. This bowed instrument came later to Europe, and developed into the viol.

"These viols were the ancestors of the violin family, and were made in different sizes, to play alto, tenor, bass and double bass, and a complete set of them was called a chest of viols. From them we get our quartette of strings, which you already know."

"Where did they use them?" asked Betty.

"Well, the Troubadors used to accompany their songs with them, and make them sound very jolly and merry, and then they were used in churches to help the singers, and here they were much more solemn. On the whole, they were rather clumsy instruments, but when the Italians begin to play, about the 16th century, they were improved tremendously, and when such men as Amati, Stradivarius and Guarnerius, who lived at Cremona, began to make violins, they were simply wonderful. No one has ever been able to make them so perfectly since. The violin family is not more than 350 years old, so you see what a lot has been done with it since the days of Monteverde, who used two French violins in his opera, 'Orfeo," in 1607. With the growth of the sonata came the use of more strings and a bigger orchestra, and much advancement was made with Bach, Handel, Gluck, Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven. Now," said Uncle Harry, "I am sure you know quite a lot about the string family and the orchestra. Next time we will talk about the wood-wind family, and later about the brass and percussion (drum) families.

"It's all very nice," said Jack to Phil, "but hurry up and let's get to supper before Tim, for he's simply dreadful when he sees a cream puff, and I know they're there, for I saw Betty take them in."

So they rushed along, dragging poor Betty (who was really trying her best to be quite grown up) along with them.

YOUR HEALTH

By Royal S. Copeland, M. D.,

Fortunately for the human family there are few physical ailments transmitted from father to son. With few exceptions the end of a life wipes out the debt of suffering, and the succeeding generation has upon its shoulders no physical mortgage which must be paid at some inconvenient time.

But there are a few diseases which have no better explanation for their presence than the influence of heridity. Of these is the conductor's stand and desk, on which is placed the 'full score'."

One such disease is called "Muscular Dystrophy," or "Progressive Muscular Dystrophy."

It is a wasting of the muscles—the usual fullness and roundness of the involved muscles disappear and they become flat and powerless.

The child, originally normal in its movements and actions, becomes clumsy and stumbling. Its attitude in standing is quite changed. The legs are widely separated. The shoulders are thrown back so far that the spinal column appears to be badly bent. This position causes the abdomen to protrude prominently.

Walking is difficult. It becomes a waddle like a duck's. The muscular action becomes awkward.

Before the wasting begins the muscles seem unusually big. They appear to be swollen and inflated. But pretty soon the withering process begins and the body wastes away.

There are special forms of the disease. In one type the face is involved. The lips appear prominent and the eyes cannot be closed.

This trying trouble attacks males more often than it does females. In a family it may appear generation after generation. As many as five generations have been involved, the records show. The unafflicted daughter of an afflicted father may transmit the trouble to her son.

Unusually the disease is observed in childhood. It may not show itself until the age of twenty or twenty-five. It may come at an older age.

The presence of this trouble in a family is a matter of great concern. I have no doubt that research will find its cause and I hope it may be a removable cause. At present, however, we must depend on general measures for its prevention and treatment. Everything which builds up the body and vigor is to be advised.

Massage and electricity are the classical remedial measures. Intelligently and persistently applied, they do good.

WISE SHOPPERS DO IT

(by Wallace Havelock Robb)

"I know where there is a Devil-Devil Bird's nest," said little five year old Tommy Parker, one day in the early summer.

Now, I have heard many different names for many different birds, from the Oofuss-goofuss bird to the Cazoozoo bird. In fact I have invented names for some birds myself, especially when I am asked to name the bird for some outlandish description of some floating fancy which some enthusiastic nature lover with bad eyesight has seen. I just name it the Pink-eyed-waddler, or maybe I scratch my head and call it the Worm eating Hobgobbler.

However, all joking aside, I do get letters and questions asking me, "What bird is this which I saw last week?" Then the bird is described Mostly I never say any such bird myself. If the birds could only hear how people describe them, somebody would get hurt, and it would not be the bird.

But this Devil-Devil Bird? That was a new one. It was also a fascinating one. It gave me a saucy poke in the curiosity ribs. Funny, isn't it, how curious we always seem to be over anything devilish. I couldn't miss this, not for anything.

"Well, Tom," said I (thinking to cater to his dignity and win favor)

"My name isn't Tom, it's Tommy" said Thomas Parker.

"All right Tommy, old top," said I, "Where's that friend of the devil? Let's go and see him."

Tommy was at first afraid to go, but I got my gun and made a big show of bravery, and away we went to the wood lot, where he pointed out a nest in a white pine. I was surprised to find a big hawk's nest in such a more or less tame wood lot.

Tommy's Devil-devil Bird was nothing more than a magnificent red-shouldered hawk. But I couldn't shake his story.

"No," said he, "it is a devil-devil bird. My brother saw it throwing snakes around."

I climbed up the tree. In the nest were two young ones, mith the parts of two snakes, some frogs feet and a freshly killed mouse.

Tommy's brother must have seen the bird flying with the snake. And that is how birds get blamed. This hawk is a fine, good bird.

WEDDING BELLS.

DOWNS—RYAN.

MARMORA, Nov. 30.—A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the Church of the Sacred Heart, Marmora, on Thursday morning, November 26, when Loretta Catherine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Ryan of Marmora township became the bride of Mr. John Downs of Stirling. The bride who was daintily attired in a rust ensemble coat trimmed with fur and hat to match was attended by her sister, Miss Mary Ryan, who looked very becoming in brown marvella trimmed with fur, and hat to match. Each carried very pretty bouquets of carnations. The duties of best man were discharged by Mr. Leo Ryan of Stirling The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father O'Reilly in the presence of a good congregation, after which the happy couple left for Belleville where the wedding breakfast was held. They will take up residence in Stirling.

OBITUARY.

MRS. FRANK YOUNG.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Frank Young of Ennismore took place on Thursday morning at St. Martin's church, Ennismore. The very sad circumstances surrounding her death helped to create the widespread sympathy that brought an unusualy large crowd together for the funeral and caused so many expressions of sympathy from every side. Besides the floral offerings there were over fifty mass cards placed on her coffin, testifying to her popularity, and expressing in a tangible way the grief so generally felt throughout the community.

The funeral arrived at the church at 10 o'clock a.m. and the body was met at the door by the celebrant of the mass, Rev. J. F. McGuire, her uncle, Very Rev. Dean Whibbs of Lindsay, Rev. Father Galvin of Downeyville, and the pastor, Rev. J. V. McAuley. The church was filled to the doors by the parishioners and the many friends and relatives who came from Douro, Downeyville and Lindsay and other places.

The pallbearers were the four brothers of the deceased, Mr Young's three brothers and his nephew.

She leaves to mourn her loss her husband, Mr. Frank Young, and three small children; her father, five brothers, George of Saskatchewan, Michael, Leo, Joseph and Thomas at home, and two sisters, Mrs. Hogan and Mrs. Byan, of Douro, her native township.

MRS. W. J. NORTHEY.

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 30. — Jane Preston, wife of W. J. Northey, died suddenly at her home on Reid street on Sunday morning. Her death was a great shock to her family and friends. The deceased was born in Smith township 69 years ago, spending her life there until they moved into Lakefield about thirteen years ago. Her sterling virtues won her many warm friends in the community. She is survived by her husband, one daughter, Mrs. McConkey of Lakefield, one son, C. O. Northey of Smith.

She was a member of Regent street church, where she was an interested and active worker of the various ladies' organizations.

The funeral will be held from the family residence on Tuesday afternoon at 2.00 o'clock, leaving at 2.30 for the Lakefield cemetery, where interment will take place, Rev. S. A. Kemp officiating.

Rough Riders 11, Queen's 2 - Varsity Juniors Win Title from Queen's - St. Mike's Are Champions

OTTAWA HUMBLES QUEEN'S BRILLIANT RUGBY SQUAD AFTER 26 CONSECUTIVE VICTORIES IN FOUR YEARS AND AT THE VERY CLIMAX OF THEIR GREAT CAREER

Intercollegiate Senior Champions Seeking Record of Four Straight Dominion Titles Were Decisively Beaten by Rough Riders.

ONLY TOUCH MADE OFF BATSTONE'S MUFF

Big Four Champions Smothered Queen's Line Assaults, and Tubman and Miller Outplayed Batstone and Leadley.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 30 (Canadian Press)—Thwarted at every turn in their offensive efforts, and smashed back by a relentless attack that was at times almost savage in its ferocity, the great Queen's rugby machine that for nearly four years has held sway on Canadian gridirons, it which time they rolled up an impressive record of twenty-six consecutive victories, faltered and finally crumped here Saturday afternoon and the Ottawa Senaors marched over the red, yellow and blue to an impressive and decisive victory of 11 to 2. In defeating the Queen's team, the Ottawas tumbled the Tricolor from their lofty perch as Dominion champions and annexed for themselves the title of 1925 Eastern Canada titleholders. There is still one obstacle in their path on the way to Dominion honors and this will be encountered here next Saturday when Winnipeg Tammany Tigers, Western Canada champions, invade the capital in quest of the Canadian Rugby crown.

There was no doubt which was the superior team Saturday. The most ardent Queen's fans, football strategists and men who are author ities in the sport, were unanimous in declaring that the Senators outplayed the Tricolor at every turn and for the greater part of the sixty minutes. The two teams served up almost faultless football, and the carefulness with which the plays were exercised made the game an exciting one from start to finish.

Queen's Buck Thrown Back

The tale of the down fall of the Dominion titleholders is told in the statistics compiled on the line plays during the afternoon, and in recounting the exploits of Captain Joe Tubman and his highly educated foot. Not once during the entire game could the Queen's plungers force their way through the local front rank for yards, while the Ottawa stalwarts rammed their way along for yards on five occasions, two of which were from first downs. Tubman booted twenty-five times against Leadley's twenty-four, and while Leadley could only return one Ottawa punt all afternoon, six of his own offerings were hurled back at the Queen's backfield before the tacklers had thrown the Ottawa booters. Time after time, Tubman booted into touch after propelling the oval upwards of forty yards, and in this manner the famous and daring tricolor running halves were held in pockets by the outside wings from which they could not escape and in the face of whom they were able to record only very slight gains when they did leave their tracks after making the catch. The burning question of whether or not the Ottawa outside wings were in a class with the Tricolor flankers was answered emphatically, when Starr and Young turned in tackling exhibitions that were a treat to see.. In addition they held their covers to the King's taste.

Trick Plays Smothered

Playing as they did Saturday the Senators were well nigh unbeatable. Queen's were only able to garner one point in the first period even with a strong wind behind them, and after five minutes of the second period had elapsed it was apparent that barring a break or one of those unexpected and spectacular Queen's coups, Ottawas were masters of the situation. From the time the Senators got their first brace of points until the last period was nearly over the winners were all over their opponents. Queen's plays through the line, fake bucks, plays from huddle formations, fake kicks, end runs and all the tricks in their repertoire met a like fate. They were simply smashed down, and it was a most unusual sight to Queen's ball carriers thrown repeatedly behind their own line of scrimmage on plays that were taken for granted as ground gainers.

Fewer Ottawa Errors

On the other hand, the Senator backs ran with a courage that netted them twelve yards at a clip only ten ordinarily have been obtained; the line held and plunged as if possessed and the tackling was clean cut but of the very hardest and most severe type. Ottawas made no mistakes. They had two backfield fumbles registered against them, one of which was turned into a Queen's point, but the line was letter perfect. Queen's had two halfline fumbles and five slips on the line.

The game was played under winter weather conditions. The thermometer must have been around the zero mark while the playing area resembled an open air rink. Horse-drawn scrapers were employed to take the snow off and there was a two-foot snow bank on each side of the field. The footing was hard as concrete, but did not appear to be slippery and the players were able to travel at their best with apparently no trouble.

Queen's Scored First

After their aerial attack had been successfuly met for half the first period, Leadley made the opening point possible. Tubman had kicked to Batstone, but the red head snapped the pass away to Leadley who skirted the Ottawa right end for fifty yards before Miller nailed him. On the third down Leadley kicked to the deadline. Queen's 1; Ottawas, 0.

More than half the second period had passed when Ottawa opened their scoring, Leadley being thrown for a forced rouge on Tubman's kick. Ottawa, 2; Queen's 1. It was a clever play, the Ottawa captain botting on the run after taking a pass from Miller who had caught Leadley's kick.

Forcing Queen's back at a kicking game, Tubman booted another point when he sent a bounding ball over the deadline from Queen's 50. Ottawa, 3; Queen's 1. Lynch added another point before the period ended when his drop kick from the 25 yard mark went wide of the target but to the deadline. Ottawas 4; Queen's 1.

Queen's could not improve their total with the wind in the third period, until just before time was up when Miller fumbled Leadley's kick and Walker recovered the oval on the Ottawa 40. Leadley promptly kicked and Lynch was held for a point. Ottawa 4; Queen's 2.

Tubman kicked to Batstone for a rouge shortly after the last period opened. Ottawa, 5; Queen's 2. Then came the big break in the game. Ottawa came into possession on the Queen's 35 when Chantler's pass to Leadley was forward. Lynch tried another drop but it went wide. Batstone grabbed the ball and started out, but Starr smashed him down and shook the ball loose with a terrific tackle. Jimmy Wirght, substitute inside wing, dropped on the ball for a touch down which Connell failed to convert. Ottawa 10; Queen's 2. Tubman rang down the curtain when he kicked to the deads line for another, and the final point with less than one minute to play. Ottawa, 11; Queen's 2.

Batstone's Final Slip

Without Wright's touch the Senators had a winning margin, and it was too bad, from a sentimental viewpoint, that Batstone, the man who has carried Queen's to their greatest achievements should have been the victim of circumstance. Batstone, Leadley, Thomas and Norrie were the stars of the losing team, while Mundell and Howard also shone. Chantler was a disappointment and repeatedly spoiled plays by fumbles and bad passing.

Joe Tubman, Charlie Connell, Harold Starr, Charlie Lynch and Don Young stood out for the winners, with Wright's touch writing that player's name in the rugby hall of fame.

HARRY CHEU GAINS GREAT RUGBY FAME

Former P.C.I. Player Given Great Credit For Work at Woodstock.

The following extracts from the account of a rugby game between Woodstock College and McMaster University show the success attained by Harry Cheu, formerly of P.C.I., who is captain and quarterback of the college team:

The crowd which watched the game was a large one and the fans were given a nice exhibition of kicking, running and plunging by Broadway, while Vickert, Galloway and Oylke of McMaster also did some splendid running. For the college John Smith and McGregor played sensational rugby on the backfield their runs being responsible for many long gains, Cheu at quarter, and Fisher and Linton, as plungers were much in the limelight, while Thomson, at flying wing, did some beautiful tackling ran well with the ball, and scored a sensational touchdown when he grabbed the ball from Broadway after the latter had fumbled a catch behind his own goal line.

The teams seemed to be fairly evenly matched, the college starring on team play and on the line, and McMaster excelling on individual efforts.

The game opened sensationally. It had been expected that the visitors would run away with the local boys, but right at the start Cheu sent his halves around the end for gains which brought play to the McMaster twenty-five yard line. From this point, Linton kicked a beautiful field goal, putting the college ahead by three to nothing in the first few minutes.

The third quarter was a see saw affair, with play ranging fairly well in midfield. McMaster were penalized frequently for illegal interference, the second half of the game being played, at their requeat, under intercollegiate rules, while the first half was played under Canadian Ruby Union rules On the running interference permitted under the intercollegiate code, however, the McMaster players frequently got in advance of the three yard limit, and lost ground repeatedly on this account. Cheu handled his team nicely, and uncorked two nice fake buck plays which enabled Smith and McGregor to make long gains. There was no scoring, however, in this quarter.

The fourth quarter started with play twenty-five yards from the college line and McMaster in possession. A fumble, however gave the college the ball, and Thomson, Smith and McGregor had nice gains which took play to the other end. Linton plunged for yards, and Cheu did likewise in rapid succession. From ten yards out, Smith fought his way over a touchdown, making the score 14 to 10 for the college. Linton failed to convert. The last five minutes of play brought the McMaster team into scoring position, but illegal interference robbed them of a sure touchdown, the offence being committed right on the college goal line. On the next down, Cheu broke through and intercepted Boadway's onside kick, and grabbed the ball. He started off towards the McMaster goal, with Boadway, Galloway and Vickert in hot pursuit, but he had passed the halfway line when Boadway tackled him and brought him down. The whistle blew before another play, with the college winners by 14 points to 10.

The game was a splendid one, and the college team was highly complimented by the crowd for the splendid showing made.

At the banquet which followed, Harry Cheu, captain of the college rugby team, spoke briefly, and congratulated the McMaster teams on their splendid showing and on the sportsmanship they had exhibited. The series of games, he said, had been a great one to win and a hard one to lose.

The giving of the McMaster and College yells brought the proceedings to ac close.

U. S. ARMY VICTORY.

Defeated Navy 10-3 Before 70,000.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30,—(Canadian Press.)—Battered by land and bombed from the sky, Navy struck its colors to Army Saturday in a farewell Eastern gridiron classic by running strictly to form, 10 to 3.

The best team won, but not decisively enough to indicate the full power of a versatile and deliberate West Point offensive which left little doubt of the result after the opening of the second period. Bent by the savage plunges of two human catapults, Wilson and Hewitt, and baffled by opportune overhead thrusts which fell from a cloudless sky, the stout-hearted midshipmen were almost constantly fighting desperately to stay Army advances deep into Navy territotry.

SOCCER MEETING THIS EVENING

All Soccer Enthusiasts Are Invited to the Presentation.

A special meeting of the Peterboro and district Football Association will be held to-night (Monday) in the Chamber of Commerce Rooms, at 7.30 prompt. All executive members and representatives are requested to be present.

A special feature of the evening will be the presentation of a handsome silver soccer cup to the Juvenile League (under the auspices of the senior board) by Hon. G. N. Gordon, who has donated the trophy for competition each year. The De Laval juveniles are this year's winners. All other juveniles are invited.

All players—Senior, Junior, Juvenile and School boys, are invited to this meeting, when the Thistle players will be presented with the 1924 medals donated by Hon. G. N. Gordon and the 1925 medals presented by the Association.

The soccer fans are included in this invitaiton.

FINAL RUSH WON FROM ST. PATS

Boston Bruins Came From Behind to Win By 3-2.

HEAVY BODYING.

TORONTO, Nov. 30 (Canadian Press).—Unleashing a store of reserve power in the third period, in which htey came from behind, to score two goals, Art Ross' Boston Bruins defeated St. Patrick's in the opening game of the N.H.L. season locally by 3 goals to 2, thereby throwing advance predictions and the hopes of the supporters of the local team into the discard. For two periods, the locals had the edge, but the strenuous body checking handed out by the visiting defence exacted its toll in the final session.

GRANGE IN FORM.

Helped Chicago Bears To Victory Sunday.

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—(Canadian Press.) — Harold "Red" Grange, making his second appearance as a professional football player Sunday, "did his stuff" on a snow-covered gridiron, helping the Chicago Bears defeat the Columbus Tigers 14 to 13 while 29,000 fans shouted their approval.

Aside from experiencing his first professional football victory, Grange was also able to win almost twice as much yardage as he did in the tie game on Thanksgiving Day with the Chicago Cardinals.

Last week he won a total of 109 yards, and yesterday he carried the ball 16 times for a gain of 138 yards and from scrimmage advanced the ball 78 yards.

McGRAW'S SUBURB

Name Streets After Baseball Stars.

SARASOTA, Fla., Nov. 30.—The probable expenditure of $3,750,000 in developing a sub-division to be known as Pennant Park, near this city, was announced by John J. McGraw, manager of the New York National League baseball team, who has been here ten days getting his plans in shape.

Pennant Park, a 1,056-acre tract, is to be subdivided into 5,000 lots, the plans calling for wide streets and driveways, and a club house. Driveways and streets will be named to commemorate baseball stars who have passed to the great beyond. The first driveway is named for Christy Mathewson.

SPORT GOSSIP

The Petes will begin their defence of the S.P.A. Trophy, which they won last year, on Wednesday night in Toronto, when they meet the Toronto Canoe Club, a new entry in the senior series and containing a number of the best graduates from last year's junior teams. There will be plenty of speed and cleverness in the Paddlers' line-up, and the S.P.A. holders will have to be stepping along all the way to get the decision. Fortunately, the Petes squad will be complete for the first time this season with Bert McLeod and Shorty Burgess added, and as the S.P.A. rules allow as many as twelve players to complete in a game, the whole crew will get plenty of work.

* * * * * * *

Friday's game in Niagara Falls meant nothing. Gene Fraser's gang used six subs., as against two by the Petes, and were enabled to keep a fresh gang working all the way, and when the Big Roar bunch showed a disposition to mix things the Petes made no great effort to bring home the bacon, regarding the S.P.A. series as of more importance than an exhibition event.

* * * * * * *

The victory of the Ottawa team over Queen's in the Canadian senior rugby championship series will be popular generally outside of Kingston. The tri-colour team has been monopolizing the honours in recent years, and that fact, coupled with Ottawa's fine comeback after a number of very lean seasons, caused most of the support to swing toward the Senators. Evidently Ottawa made a clean job of their win over the collegians.

SENATORS BEAT MAROONS 3 TO 2 IN OPENING GAME

25 PENALTIES

All Goals Scored in Second Period—Lou Marsh's Busy Session.

OTTAWA, Nov. 30 (Canadian Press).—The local National Hockey League schedule was opened here Saturday night when the Senators defeated Montreal Maroons in a hectic struggle by a score of 3 to 2. Two periods of Scoreless hockey, five goals in a single period and 25 penalties were all high lights in a contest that was an even bet from the opening whistle until the final bell.

The Maroons appeared with a stronger team that that which wore the metropolitan colors last season and their showing warrants that they will be given consideration in figuring out the final standing of the schedule which was opened in Boston on Thursday night. The Montrealers have many rough spots to polish off before they are a really great hockey team, but they have acquired a wealth of very promising material and when it is moulded together breakers are ahead for some of their opponents.

Unable to get away from the persistent worrying and backchecking of the visitors, the Senators failed to hit the stride they showed against Victoria except in flashes. The Maroon checks stuck like leeches, and gave the Senator attack little or no leeway throughout the contest. These harrying tactics, however, took a good deal out of Gerard's men and they were visibly tiring under the pace in the closing session.

Lou Marsh Was Busy.

The first period went scoreless although there were thrills galore and both goalers showed to advantage. The players started in to exchange bumps; one thing led to another and before the end of the period Lou Marsh had chased eleven of them to the cooler, Neighbor drawing a major for talking back when given a minor.

In the middle period, there was more action. Eight addition penalties were recorded, but the main kick in this period came from the scoring bee that took place. The play had progressed only one minute and ten seconds, when Seibert stopped Kilrea's rush and plugged away for the Ottawa net. Coming into the defence he drove a hard, low shot between Boucher and Clancy and through Connell's guard into the lower left hand corner of the net. Fifty-five seconds later Seibert got his second, putting the Maroons two up. From the face-off Broadbent wound his way in on Connell's cage and was steered behind the net. His pass out was right in the exact spot however, and Seibert hurtled it back into the net before the crowd had settled down again.

Ottawas worked hard, but could not head off the plugging Montrealers. Finally Kitchen got away on a dangerous attack, and Boucher came back with the puck. Going into the defence from the right wing, he whipped the pass over to Nighbor who was uncovered, and the latter picked an opening and rifled it past Benedict. The time was 4.20.

Senators Take Lead.

Slightly over six minutes later Denny went in alone and missed the cage by the narrowest margin. Hooley Smith tearing in on the right wing, chased the puck behind and whipped it out in front to Denneny. The sniper took his time and beat Benedict with a knee-high drive from ten feet out, tieing the score and sending the big crowd into a frenzy.

In 15 seconds Ottawas were leading. Hooley Smith went in from the face-off and slipped a pass across to Denneny at the defence. Denneny then crossed the Montreal defence men by whipping the puck right back to Smith, who took it on the fly and made it sure.

Immediately afterwards a double pass, Boucher to Clancy to Boucher, found the latter on the scoring end but Marsh called it back, offside. Six more penalties were inflicted in the closing frame, but no goals were secured. Finding the Montreal team wearing out a bit, the Senators were content to play a waiting game and make the Maroons work. The system worked to perfection and full time found the score unchanged and Ottawas winners of their first league engagement of the season.

Maroons a Surprise.

Among the surprises handed out was the splendid showing of the revamped Montreal team. Seibert, Stewart and Kitchen are three men who should develop into first class hockey players. Stewart in particular looked good and turned in a very effective game. Opposed to the great Nighbor he made a splendid showing. Dunc Munro is a vastly improved player over last season, while Reg. Noble appears to have found his proper position on the defence. He was one of the stars of the game. Benedict and Broadbent are as good as ever, while Gerard has splendid reserve strength in Dinsmore, Rothschild, Lowry and Kitchen. Horne was not used.

Nighbor and Hooley Smith turned in sparkling games for the winners. Clancy was also much in the limelight, while Boucher was effective both ways. Denneny and Gorman alternated at left wing, both doing splendid work. Kilrea and Finnegan were used and both continued to show improvement. Connell had a very busy evening, but again handled himself like a first class goaler. Lou Marsh handled the game and ruled with an iron hand. There was much criticism from the spectators on some of his rulings and the players generally showed displeasure with his free-for-all issue of penalties. There was also comment made on his non-enfofcement of the anti-defence rule in a couple of instances.

The game drew a good crowd for an early season fixture, among which were members of Queen's and Ottawa rugby teams, who attended in a body as guests of the Ottawa Hockey Association.

The teams:

Montreal—Benedict, goal; Munro and Noble, defence; Stewart, centre; Seibert, left wing; Boardbent, right wing; Kitchen, Lowrey, Dinsmore, Rothchild, Horne, subs.

Referee—Lou Marsh, Toronto.

Summary.

First period:
No Score.
Second period:
1 Montreal—Seibert 1.10
2 Montreal—Seibert 55
3 Ottawa—Nighbor 4.20
4 Ottawa—Denneny 6.15

PITTSBURGH WON FROM CANADIENS

Beat N.H.L. Champions 1-0 To Dismay of Montreal Crowd.

TEAM TO BE FEARED.

MONTREAL, Nov. 30 (Canadian Press).—Pittsburgh continues to wage surprising war in the National Hockey League. Not content with suddenly jumping from the amateur ranks and heralding their first pro appearance with a victory over Boston, the bold young Pirates swept into the Mount Royal Arena on Saturday night and while a packed house looked on aghast, took a 1 to 0 victory from the National Hockey League champion Canadiens. Thus the team which was regarded as a probably weak link in the circuit is established as one to be feared.

OBERLANDER OF DARTMOUTH WAS FOOTBALL HERO

Exceeded Red Grange in Consistent Brilliancy on Gridiron This Season.

CROWDS LARGER

12,000,000 Spectators Attended U. S. College Games in Two Months.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—(Canadian Press.)— The 1925 football season, chiefly notable for the unprecedented number and character of its upsets in the ranks of major colleges throughout the country, has come to a spectacular close.

The Army's triumph over the Navy in their "air controversy" at the Polo Grounds Saturday not only supplied a brilliant closing spectacle but furnished a fittingly sensational climax to a gridiron campaign, which, besides witnessing the downfall of champions and contenders alike in a startling parade of form reversals, also saw the establishment of new attendance records, viewed the revolutionary development of the forward pass by such great elevens as Dartmouth, Princeton and Michigan, and glimpsed the "Galloping Ghost" of Illinois, Red Range, as he passed from the Intercollegiate pictures with as remarkable a record as any individual has ever known.

12,000,000 Spectators.

Fully 12,000,000 spectators, reliable estimates indicate, watched the ebb and flow of college gridiron fortunes during the two months' season. To take care of this astonishing outpouring, which represents an increase of 2,000,000 over the attendance figures of 1924, new and gigantic stadia have sprung up in all parts of the country.

Grange was the leading "gate" attraction of the Fall and Red's drawing powers were responsible for the season's high single game attendance of 84,295 in Ohio State's Stadium at Columbus. All told it was figured that Grange played before an aggregate throng of 371,000 during his final season and approximately three-quarters of a million during his three year course.

Dartmouth Supreme.

Grange's exploits were the most keenly watched of any throughout the season, but the big majority of critics agree that the Illinois star did not measure up to the brilliant individual consistency of Andy (Swede) Oberlander, blonde Dartmouth half-back whose work was chiefly responsible for lifting the Big Green eleven to a premier position in the East and general recognition as the country's outstanding team.

Dartmouth not only established Eastern supremacy by conquering Harvard, Cornell and Brown by decisive margins, but wound up a sensational season by swamping Chicago in one of the season's outstanding inter-sectional frays.

Michigan in the Middle West, Alabama in the South, and the University of Washington in the Far West shared recognition with Dartmouth as the foremost combinations developed during the Fall, but the Green outfit generally is selected as the successor to Notre Dame in possessing claims for national honors.

IRISH WOMEN WIN.

Defeat All Americans at Field Hockey.

WELLESLEY, Mass., November 30. — The Irish women's team defeated the All-American team on Saturday 2 to 1 at the close of the women's field hockey inter city championship tournament held under the auspices of the United States Field Hockey Association.

The All-American team was picked from stars on the various teams which participated in the tournament which was won Friday by Philadelphia.

COUP IS SPRUNG BY WIFE OF KIP

Proves By Witness He Knew That She Was a Negress.

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y., Nov. 30 —Mrs. Leonard Kip Rhinelander is expected to testify Monday when trial of her husband's suit for annulment of his marriage to a quadroom servant girl is resumed.

Meanwhile, presumably, the stuttering millionaire's attorneys will give careful attention to testimony by a surprise witness Wednesday that Rhinelander had been informed before his marriage that the girl was a Negress.

Ross Chidester, formerly chauffeur for the plaintiff's father, testified that he drove the couple to a hotel in New York in 1921, before their marriage.

Advised of Her Color.

Once, in Stamford, Conn., he said, Rhinelander showed him a watch he expected to give Alice Beatrice Jones, daughter of a cab driver, for Christmas.

"I said, 'Don't you know her father is a colored man?' " Chidester testified. "He said, 'I don't give a damn if he is.' "

On cross-examination Chidester acknowledged that he had previously offered his services as a witness to the plaintiff. He said he left the Rhinelander service voluntarily and had no ill-feeling against the family.

Justice Morschauser granted a request for amendment of the complaint in the suit to declare Alice Beatrice Jones deceived Rhinelander by failing to inform him she had negro blood. The complaint originally said she had deceived him by stating she was waite.

Mrs. George Jones, the defendant's white mother, testified she knew nothing of her daughter's premarital adventures with young Rhinelander. Mrs. Jones admitted in cross-examination that her oldest daughter, Ethel, was born in England before she married her mulatto husband. Questions along this line were sharply criticized by defence counsel, but defended by Rhinelander's trial lawyer as justified to show the credibility of the witness.

Robert Brooks, Rhinelander's faultlessly dressed negro brother-in-law, was absent Thursday for the first time since the trial began. It could not be learned whether he had gone back to his work as a butler, or whether he was sleeping at home

INSIDE Ggolf.

Maker of 51 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans

By CHESTER HORTON

The golf ball can be made to spin after it is hit in any one of four ways. These spins can be imparted to the ball at will. They are the slice spin, the hook spin, the overspin and the underspin. These have about equal value to the player, but perhaps the underspin is used oftenest, since its use is usually to stop the ball on the green. However, the underspin has an additional use, of great value, from the tee. These spins are best applied to the ball without changing the stance position at all. Players frequently shift about in all manner of contortions when they wish to slice or hook a ball, when such changes should be avoided. You can think a hook or slice, then let the hands do it. How to think a hook I will describe in to-morrow's article.

DIAMOND SEEKERS RUSH FOR CLAIMS

New Towns Are Always Springing Up Near Kimberly.

KIMBERLEY, Nov. 30. — Scenes similar to those enacted in Oklahoma when the "strip" was thrown open for settlement, have been witnessed repeatedly in different parts of the South African diamond districts within the last few months on grounds which heretofore have been considered barren.

There are thousands of persons who have become nomads, wandering about the country and engaging in every rush possible to stake out claims at the opening of diamond diggings such as took place some weeks ago at Oersonskraal Bloemhof, is made on foot, by men and women on horseback while others follow up in the rear with their "covered wagons," ground permitting, to furnish the diamond seekers with supplies.

The area to be staked out is proclaimed by the government, usually after some lucky prospector makes a discovery of some traces of the precious stones. Then the race of the diggesr begins. Claims are staked and a new town appears.

The disappointment of the diamond diggers has been great. At most but two per cent. of the men make a stake, and in most cases a fortune slips through the miners' fingers through drink, gambling and sor did living. Only 25 per cent. make a decent living; 10 per cent. some kind of a livlure, and quite 63 per cent. sink into increasing distress, said an investigating committee.

MANY KILLED IN STREET FIGHTING

Rival Factions Fight Over Barracks in Chefoo, China.

CHEFOO, China, November 30. — Canadian Press. — It is estimated that 35 men have been killed and 50 wounded in fighting in the streets of Chefoo, between armed factions.

The battle begun yesterday when marines coming from Tsingtao endeavored to occupy the barracks over the opposition of Chefoo troops.

The banks have been closed.

IN POLICE COURT.

Abraham Cherney was acquitted by Magistrate O. A. Langley this morning of the charge which had been preferred against him. His exultation, however, petered out rapidly when Police Chief Newhall submitted another charge, that of keeping liquor for sale. Mr. Cherney's counsel, J. A. O'Brien, entered a plea of not guilty, and that matter will be threshed out on Wednesday, December 9.

Mother and Daughter Rob Sioux Falls Bank

SIOUX FALLS, S.D., Nov. 30 (Canadian Press) — The jail cells here house South Dakota's first woman bank robbers a mother of 40 years and her 19 year old daughter.

Both Mrs. Catherine Rogers and her daughter, Zera, confessed that need of money prompted them to rob the Renner State Bank on Friday and take $390.

Officers took them in custody at their home just east of town, where they live with their husband and father, a disabled world war veteran.

AT THE CAPITOL

RUDOLPH VALENTINO AND NITA NALDI IN "COBRA," AT THE CAPITOL TO-DAY.

Rudolph Valentino heads a fine cast in the scvreen version of "Cobra," Martin Brown's successful Broad way play, which comes to the Capitol Theatre, commencing to-day."Cobra" is an ideal vehicle for the star. It gives him abundant opportunities to make love to fascinating women in his own inimitable way. The plot deals with a young Italian aristocrat, who in need of money, comes to America to accept a position in a New York art shop. Trying to fight down his weakness for women, he is faced with a situation wherein the wife of his best friend falls in love ith him. Then ensues a series of interest compelling complications which end in an unusual way.

AT THE REGENT

"THE MYSTIC" IS FINEST BROWNING PICTURE TO DATE.

Romance and Adventures of Seer and Gentleman Crook Absorbing Film Fare.

Tod Browning, the most famous director of film crook plays, has again hit the nail on the head in "The Mystic," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, now being shown at the Regent Theatre.

Years ago Browning gave to the screen a great crook drama in "Outside the Law," which he wrote and diretced. The picture was a popular hit and Browning has since written and directed the most thrilling plays of that type that have ever appeared on the screen.

His recent Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "The Unholy Three," featuring Lon Chaney, has been considered the best underworld picture of recent years, but it is doubtful if it can be compared to "The Mystic."

Browning is said to have been prompted to write the story of "The Mystic" by recent police raids against fake mediums and clairvoyants of Los Angeles. Some of the most startling bits of business in the story originated from the sensational testimony given before the Los Angeles County grand jury probing the connection between fake mediums and organized gangs of swindlers.

No matter where Browning receivhis inspiration for this picture he has given to millions of picturegoers a melodrama that is both a warning and entertainment.

The story opens in Hungary, where an American crook discovers a gypsy mystic and brings her to America where he begins to prey on wealthy people desirous of communicating with dead friends and relatives. The story is a first-class melodrama replete with thrills and following a romance which develops between the American crook and the gypsy mystic, who, by the way, is a fake medium.

The story is interpreted by a notable all-star cast, with Aileen Pringle and Conway Tearle in the featured roles. The cast also includes Mitchell Lewis, Robert Ober, Stanton Heck, Gladys Hulette, David Torrence and DeWitt Jennings.

"The Mystic" was scenarized by Waldemar Young, photographed by Ira Morgan, and titled by Joseph Farnham. Cedric Gibbons and Hervey Libbert were the art directors.

AT THE ROYAL.

WOMEN ALL LIKE "REVEILLE" AT ROYAL TO-NIGHT.

Women Are Best Picture Boosters.

"If women like a picture, then it's sure to be a success."

This is the view of Miss Betty Balfour, the famous English beauty, who has frequently been referred to as the "English Mary Pickford" and "Britain's Queen of Happiness." She is playing the leading role in the great human interest drama, "Reveille," which is booked for showing in this city at the Royal theatre for three days, starting Monday.

"I always consult my girl friends before I make up my mind whether a picture is going to be liked by the public," says Miss Balfour.

"Few people go to the theatre by themselves. For the most part, audiences are made up of men and their sweethearts or wives, mothers and their daughters, a group of young people of both sexes, or perhaps two or three girl friends. If one watch people going into a theatre, it is seldom that two men will be seen going in together.

"Most men consult their feminine friends as to what picture they would like to see. The fair sex really passes the final verdict on screen productions. What men like or dislike is usually of secondary consideration.

"A picture like 'Reveille,' however, will be enjoyed by both sexes. It is a big romance with strong love interest, and it also has lots of mystery, adventure and suspense, and very fast action, which will make it popular with the male section of the audience."

SONGS THAT HELPED WIN THE WAR AT ROYAL TO-NIGHT.

Preceding the big feature, "Revelle," at the Royal to-night, the audience will have a chance to sing all the songs that became popular during the war. Once again the familiar strains of "Katy," "Tipperary," "Pack Your Troubles," "Long, Long Trail," etc., will be used as a prologue. The words will be flashed on the screen, and the Royal orchestra will put the necessary pep into the familiar melodies.

The musical score written for the feature includes all the numbers known to every returned man, even to the Colonel Bogy march.

"Reveille" is the production that won the approval of H. R. H. the Prince of Wales. "A jolly good film," was the way he summed it up. We'll see tonight what kind of a judge of movies our popular Prince is!

AT THE GRAND

BRINGING UP FATHER IN GAY NEW YORK

To those patrons of the theatre who have been led to believe that the well of real fun, screams, hilarity, mirth and general all around entertainment has run dry, the latest of the "Bringing up Father" series, "Bringing Up Father in Gay New York," should quickly refute such a delusion. In fact, if anything, it is bound to prove a source of infinite joy to those who are always in search of genuine laughter, the kind that means renewed hope and lease on life. The brand new comedy, of course, is based on the well-known George McManus cartoons published in the leading dailies throughout the country. Not to be acquainted with the beloved Jiggs, Maggie, his better, or we might say, worst half; Dinty Moore and others of the Mahoney clan is like being lost to what's going on in the world. "Bringing up Father," as an unusual comic creation is already an established institution. It disseminates a brand of humor easily understood and appreciated all over the world. "Father" for that matter would be just as irresistibly funny if played in Chinese Volapuck or any other language. Maggie, Dinty Moore and the rest of the beloved characters would be their own jolly selves anywhere. If you want to see them all, in the flesh you will have your chance by hieing to the Grand Opera House, Saturday Matinee and night of Dec. 5th. Naturally, a "Father" show would not be complete without pretty girls, lilting music, novelties, scenic embellishment and all those unique ingredients that go in the making of an up-to-the-second entertainment. Divided into two acts and six scenes, each revealing something sure to tickle the risibilities of the staid old Sphinx herself, it is easily conceivable that the patrons of the Grand Opera House are sure to spend a highly enjoyable time. At least fifteen song hits, jazzy interludes, ensembles and other infectious melodies will be disclosed during the development of the merry proceedings. The original cast and production, direct from the Lyric Theatre, New York, will be offered. This is a typical, high-class Broadway presentation and one destined to have a popular appeal during its stay in town. Matinee on Saturday, Dec. 5th.

SEAT SALE FOR THE DUMBELLS IN "LUCKY 7" OPENS

The advance sale of seats for The Dumbells' new revue, "Lucky 7," will open at the box office of the Grand Opera House on Monday, Dec. 7th.

The engagement of this popular company is for a return of one night only, Wednesday, Dec. 9th.

For this, the seventh season of The Dumbells in Canada, Captain Plunkett has provided a production that for sheer beauty and gorgeousness, has never been approached by a stage director in this country.

To enhance the brilliance and sparkle of these settings he has retained all the favorite stars of other years and added some new ones, and supplied them all with a wealth of material, songs, sketches, dances and ensemble numbers that offer the fullest scope for their versatile abilities.

Among the outstanding hits of "Lucky 7" may be mentioned the songs of Al. Plunkett, "Whiter Than Snow," and "As Long As She Loves Me," the songs and gowns of Ross Hamilton, the songs and acting in the various sketches of "Red Newman, the songs of Stan. Bennett and the great comedy song "I'm Not all There," sung by Pat. Rafferty.

The orchestra provides the fastest and most enjoyable twenty minutes imaginable, while Capt. Plunkett's song, "Yawning," introduced in the orchestra act stops the show.

The annual engagement of the Dumbells has become an institution here, and there is every reason to believe that they will break all previous records with "Lucky 7."

NEW LIGHTS FOR WHOLE CITY ARE BEING DISCUSSED

East City is Selected For First Installation of New System.

TURN OFF DAILY.

Old Practice of Having Them Burn All Day is Being Discontinued.

The Peterborough Utilites Commission has had the street lighting problem before it for some time, and has submitted a report to the Fire, Water and Light Committee of the City Council.

A general scheme of street lighting for the whole city has been discussed, and East City has been selected for the first installation of the new system, because the electric light and power lines in this section have been reconstructed.

On Hunter Street East, this being a business street, 300-watt lamps suspended in the centre of the street will be used. On the balance of the streets 100-watt lamps will be installed on iron brackets, similar to those in the northern section of the city. These lamps will be controlled by an electric time switch, which will turn them on and off, so that they will not burn in the daytime.

The magnetite arc lamps in this district will be removed, and also the 60-watt lamps in present use and the Commission expects considerably less trouble from lamps being out when the new system is installed.

On account of a failure of a coil in one of the magnetite machines in the sub-station, the Commission has had to install temporary lighting on George Street North, and at several other locations. This will remain until a new part can be secured and installed. In the meantime the machine was temporarily repaired, and the load on it reduced by cutting out a number of the magnetite arc lamps.

The magnetite arc lamps, which have been in use since 1914, give a very fine light, but are very expensive to maintain. The Commission is investigating the advisability of changing them to incandescent lamps of approximately the same candle power. This was done in Kingston recently with good results, both from the operating and financial standpoints.

WEDDING BELLS

SHEEHAN—BURNS

A very quiet wedding took place on Saturday, November 21st, at St. Michael's Cathedral, Toronto, when Pauline Cecela, youngest daughter of Mrs. Julia Burns of Lindsay and the late Simon Burns of Warkworth, became the bride of Joseph Emmet Sheehan, son of the late Thomas Sheehan, of Detroit, formerly of Peerboro, and Mrs. John Hayes of Otonabee. RECITAL AT KNOX.

Mr. Peaker and Mrs. Park Were Heard With Pleasure By Good Audience.

Last night's recital at Knox Church, the third in the series of historical programmes being given, left everyone much warmed and cheered by the geniality and grandeur of Handel's inimitable music. Mr. Peaker opened the proceedings with a very rapid toccata from "Alcina," and achieved a splendid contrast with a dainty minuet from "Joseph," which followed it immediately. A 17th Century Folk-song, "The Soul at Heaven's Gate," was then sung by Mrs. Park, whose rendering of it brought out to the full its pathos and beauty. It was succeeded by "Rejoice Ye," so dear to all familiar with the great Oratorio, The Messiah, from which it comes.

The Adagio and Allegro for solo organ prove Handel's work for this instrument to be as fresh as when they were written two hundred years ago; the organist took the Allegro at its proper speed and the spectacular pedal cadenza rolled along very merrily. Mrs. Park closed with a lovely old carol in the form of a lullaby, written in the 16th Century by Corner, and Handel's "Oh, Had I Jubal's Lyre." The singer sang both these contrasted songs in fine style and in the last one especially endured the difficult runs, which prove an obstacle to so many, with a splendor and joy which would have gladdened Handel's heart if he could have heard it.

A most notable recital and a good crowd to hear it.

ST. PETER'S CATHEDRAL.

Rev. Father Finn spoke at the late Mass yesterday morning at St. Peter's Cathedral, taking his text from the Epistle to the Romans, xiii., 11-14, "Knowing the time, that it is now the hour for us to arouse from sleep. . . . Let us therefore cast off the works of darkness and put on the armor of light."

The reverend speaker reminded his hearers that the four weeks of Advent, just commencing, were designed to recall to the mind the four thousand years during which the world lived in darkness before the coming of Christ, and should be used to prepare for the anniversary of the birth of the Saviour. In saying, "Now is the hour for us to arouse from sleep," St. Paul referred to the spiritual sleep in which so many people exist, and in saying, "It is time to cast off the works of darkness," he alluded to the temptations which surround us on every side and which are the more easily resisted if combatted in their early assaults on the soul. "Clothed in the armor of light," like the saintly martyrs of old, the soul becomes pleasing to God, "and if we are sons of God we are heirs also to His kingdom and our reward shall be the crown of eternal life with Him in heaven."

At the Cathedral last evening, when the big building was filled with the large congregation in attendance, His Lordship Bishop O'Brien gave an interesting review of the life and virtues of two of the younger saints of God, Bernadette of Lourdes and Teresa of the Child Jesus, of Lisieux, in France. Lourdes and Lisieux were visited by the Bishop during his recent trip abroad. Bernadette was the illiterate young peasant girl of Lourdes to whom the vision of the Immaculate Conception appeared on so many occasions, and whose hand released the spring of water which has been instrumental in producing so many miraculous cures at this shrine. Bernadette later entered a convent and died in 1879. Her body remains incorrupt in its coffin to the present day.

The Little Flower, as she is affectionately called, was Terese Martin, daughter of the pious Martins of Lisieux. Her life, most of it spent in the Carmelite Convent near her home, was a very short one, and is extraordinary on account of the absence of anything spectacular in its round. Saint Teresa was content to love God and to ask Him that, on her death, she should be enabled to go on helping those who asked for her assistance. Numberless miracles have been recorded through her intercession since her death, and she was canonized after twenty-eight years, a remarkably short period. The Holy Father has a special devotion to the Little Flower, and recommends prayer to her as being especially valuable.

"Catholic doctrine," explained His Lordship, "says that it is a good and useful thing to ask the intercession of the saints of God when we wish to approach Him in any way. No Catholic needs to ask the help of the Blessed Virgin or of the saints, but they are recommended to do so when seeking help or favors. Christ died that every one of us, Jew or Gentile, white or black, bond or free, should save his soul, and it is for that reason that we ask for the help and intercession of His saints and His Blessed Mother."

The Bishop prefaced his address with a short reference to the late Queen Alexandra, and the outstanding virtues which characterized her life.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH.

The increased attendance at the services of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, which has been so marked during the past few months, is only one of a number of indications of growth in the activities of the congregation. Yesterday, for instance, the attendance at the Sunday School was almost 50 per cent greater than a year ago on the same date, and considerably larger than on Rally Day Sunday held last winter, although no special effort has been made to increase the attendance yesterday. The attendance of men at the evening service last night was so large that the Pastor, Rev. Wm. Allan, called attention to the fact that there appeared to be more men present than women.

Rev. Mr. Allan has chosen some unusual subjects for his evening addresses, but they are all based on Scripture, and the messages relating to them are deeply Scriptural in character. Last evening's subject was "The Woman Who Stood at a Window and The Man Who Never Came Back." The text was chosen from Judges 5-28, which reads, "The mother of Sisera looked out at a window, and cried through the lattice, 'Why is his chariot so long in coming? Why tarry the wheels of his chariot?'" The Scripture reading recorded the story of Sisera and his death and showed the hopelessness of the wait of his mother at the window. Proceeding with this as the basis for his remarks, Rev. Mr. Allan went on to show that there are a number of things which Christians know can never happen.

The first of these is That the word of God shall never pass away. We have Christ's assurance for this. The Saviour stated that Heaven and earth may pass away, but that His Word shall never pass away. These are days when we hear much about the accomplishments of science. Yet a scientific text book ten years' old is out of date today. The marvel of the Scriptures is that they are always up to date. Most people who criticize the Scriptures lack first-hand personal acquaintance with them. Their criticisms have been obtained second-hand.

While the promises of Scripture are full of comfort to the believer, they are full of warning to the sinner. Men all the world over have taken chances with God's Word and have suffered the penalty. It was so at the time of the flood, it has been so at intervals ever since, and disaster lies ahead for those who continue to take such chances.

The second promise in Scripture is that the Church of the living God will will never be overthrown. The Church of God was not established on the Apostle Peter, as some suppose, but on his declaration as to the Deity of Christ. It is no more possible for the world to destroy the Church of Christ than it has been for the world to destroy his chosen people, the Jews. Pharaoh attempted it, Herod tried it; Russia, France and Spain have all sought to destroy the Jews, and all without success. Just so we are assured the gates of Hell can never prevail against the Church. The Church may be attacked from the outside and betrayed from within. It may have teachers for a time who are wolves in sheep's clothing, but their efforts cannot prevail. A professor in a Baptist College in the United States stated recently, "that he did not know of more than two colleges to which he could send his son for a course in theology without running the risk thath is son might lose his faith. Unless the Continuing Presbyterian guards the teachings in its theological colleges it will meet with disaster, but the Church of God will continue just the same.

Mr. Allan's concluding points were that sinners may be sure that their sins will find them out and that they may know that God will always hear and answer the cry of a contrite heart. He is offering salvation to sinners today just as Christ granted salvation to the thief on the Cross and sinners may accept that salvation and receive pardon, just as did the repentant thief.

Next Sunday evening's service will be the second in the series for young people that Rev. Mr. Allan intends delivering this winter. The choir loft will be occupied by a choir of men. The lady members of the choir will sit in another portion of the church.

NEW INDUSTRY SAVING COAL

Coking Plant Would Go Long Way Toward Solving Fuel Problem.

WORKING HERE.

Huddled beside the boiler house of the Peterborough Milk Products Plant is a potential new industry for Peterborough which is carefully attended by an engineer named Frank Truesdell. The miniature plant is capable of carbonizing coal by a strictly new process, in addition to taking out the by-products for use in other lines of endeavor. Mr. Truesdell stated that the Hydro interests were very favorably impressed with the plant but he further declared that the coal dealers failed to show any great enthusiasm about the project.

AIR FILTER IS PROVEN SUCCESS

Dominion Dustless Sweepers Applies New Principle in Cereal Factory.

The Executive of the Dominion Dustless Sweepers, after considerable research work, have succeeded in developing an air filter for use in mills and elevators and are now in a position to standardize their lines and place them on the market. The object of the filter is to eliminate the danger of explosion in factories where operations of a dusty nature are carried on as well as reducing the risk of fire, also creating a healthier atmosphere for the workmen. Due to the kindness of the officials of the Quaker Oats Company a number of the leading citizens of the city were enabled to see a filter in actual operation at their plant. Every man who was there was enthused with the idea and it was in their opinion the solution to the dust nuisance which is prevalent in many factories. The filter is applicable to cement plants and can be installed in any factory engaged in dustry industrial activities. It is a new utility, one that has a wide field, and the fact that it being developed and manufactured in the city is something that should give the citizens considerable pride.

PARENTS' DUTY IS STRESSED BY MR. W. J. DUNLOP

Should Co-operate Much More Closely With Teachers Says Educationalist.

ADDRESS ROTARIANS.

Whole Responsibility Nowadays Is Thrown Upon the School System.

That so much of the training was being left to the schools that it would not be long before there would be one set of officials visiting the pupils at home at night to see that the light was right for their studies and that they got to bed at the right time, and another set calling around in the morning to see that the children got up on time, had the proper food for breakfast and reached school on time, was one of the many interesting statements made by Mr. W. J. Dunlop, in charge of the extension work of the University of Toronto during a splendid address to the Peterborough Rotary Club at the weekly luncheon at the Empress today.

Mr. Dunlop, who was introduced by Rotarian Alex Mowat as a former principal of the King Edward and Queen Alexandra schools in Peterborough made an eloquent plea to parents to work in closer co-operation with the teacher and to take more interest in their children's education. There had been three stages of education in this country, he said, first when the parents had everything to do with the education of their families, the second in which the school took care of half and the parents of the other fifty per cent. of the children's education, and the third to-day's stages in which parents have nothing to do with the education of their children. Enumerating the many things that were now being taught in the school, Mr. Dunlop declared that the situation had got to the point where the average parent thought that when he paid his tax bill he was discharging his full responsibility toward his family.

Mr. Dunlop urged parents to work much more closely with the teacher of their boys in those crises which came up in the life of every boy. When the time came that the boy felt that he wanted to leave school there was a crisis that required the co-operation of teachers and parent. This co-operation too was needed when the question arrived of what the boy was going to make of himself, and Mr. Dunlop stressed the necessity of impressing upon every boy the fact that whatever occupation he followed work would be necessary to succeed and that no matter what line of endeavor might be adopted there was every chance for reasonable success in this country. Particularly, Mr. Dunlop warned his hearers of the damage done by speaking disparagingly of a teacher in the hearing of the children.

What was needed in Canada was to teach the children to think for themselves, whereas in England the science of leadership was taught to the few and in the United States the many were taught to follow.

President Seels who occupied the chair today read a letter from Rotarian Walter Blackwell who said that in order to obtain his attendance last week and thus give the Peterboro club a record of 100 per cent for the week he had travelled from New York to Mount Vernon to attend a meeting of the latter club.

IN MEMORIAM.

BALL.—In loving memory of our dear son James, who died Nov. 30th, 1916.

November brings sad memories
Of a loved one laid to rest,
Who will always be remembered
By these who loved him best.

Memories drift to scenes long past,
Time rolls on but memories last,
Sunshine passes, shadows fall,
Love's remembrance outlasts all.

The flowers we placed upon his grave
May wither and decay,
But the love that lies within our hearts
Will never fade away.

IN MEMORIAM.

BALL.—In fond and loving memory of our dear brother, who passed away November 30th, 1916.

His loving face we'll never forget
Though years may pass away,
The loss of him we sadly feel
As keen as that first day.

Worthy of everlasting love
In those he left behind,
A better brother never lived
Nor one so pure and kind.

Aldermen Will Not Recommend Buying Of Street Railway

City Fathers Prefer That Hydro Commission Should Demonstrate Practicability of Combination of Buses and Street Cars Before City Acts.

BELIEVE THAT SYSTEM WILL NOT PAY.

The City Council will not recommend the purchase of the Peterborough Radial Railway to the ratepayers. The matter was considered at a meeting of the committee of the whole council last night. It was the general opinion of the Aldermen present that the H.E.P.C. should be permitted to establish the the combined bus and street car system and to put it on a paying basis, and that until the system was paying, it would be useless to submit a by-law to the people.

At a meeting some months ago, the Hydro proposed that the City should purchase the system for $150,000, spend about $70,000 more in fixing it up, and either run it or let the Hydro run it. At that time the Aldermen asked for more information about the system, and, after a long delay, the information was in their hands last night. The report from the Hydro was read by Mayor Turner, who said that the quesion seemed to be whether the City should buy the system now, perhaps after negotiations for a better price, or whether the Hydro should be permitted to fix up the system before the City considered buying it.

When the Mayor said, "We'll have it buy it sometime," Alderman Hancock took exception. His Worship explained his statement to mean that the Hydro had to get rid of the system, as the Commission was not constituted to handle anything but power development, and that the Commission would sell, either to the City or to a private company when the system was paying. Alderman Hancock expressed the opinion that it might be better in the hands of a private company, as public ownership did not seem to be a very paying proposition anyway. In reply to which statement, the Mayor offered the Peterborough Utilities as an example of a paying public ownership system.

Alderman Turner asked how the sum of $150,000 was arrived at, and was informed that it was the value of the tracks, cars, barns and other property of the railway. He suggested that the City should take an option on the system and let the Hydro try out its combination of bus and street car.

Alderman McIntyre preferred that the Commission should run the system until the people could see whether it would pay, and that the citizens should then decide whether or not they wanted it.

Tracks Only Asset.

Alderman Greene expressed the opinion that the only valuable part of the system was the newer part of the tracks, and that these were not worth more than $100,000. He favored, if the City entered the deal, taking $75,000 of the $150,000 asked to pave the streets on which the busses would run.

Hohenzollern Skeleton Rattles In Reichstag

BERLIN, Dec. 1. (United Press).—While the German Republic was to-day signing the Locarno peace pacts in London the skeleton of Hohenzollern Germany rattled in the Reichstag. This was when the announcement was made that the Prussian State had reached an agreement to pay the former war lord, Kaiser Wilhelm, a cash settlement of more than $7,000,000 and vast acres of farm and wood land.

The agreement still requires approval of the Prussian Landtag.

MINE OWNERS REJECT PLAN FOR ENDING THE ANTHRACITE STRIKE SAY THEIR TERMS WERE REFUSED

Proposals Offered To Miners Two Weeks Ago For Settlement Refused.

CONTRACT OFFERED.

Miners' President Declares Owners Make No Concession to Public.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 1. —(Canadian Press).—The anthracite operators in letter to State Governor Pinchot late Monday wrote that "it is impossible for us to find in your proposals the basis of a sound and lasting settlement and for the same reasons they cannot be considered as a basis for conference and negotiation."

The letter to the Governor revealed that the miners two weeks ago rejected a proposal for an immediate settlement offered by the operators. It provided for an immediate return to work at wages paid prior to the suspension. It also provided for resumption of negotiations for a five year contract and arbitration of differences not settled with 30 days after resumption of negotiations.

The check-off the letter said "which was condemned in principle by the Roosevelt Commission in 1903 and refused by the Wilson commission in 1920, you now suggest that we accept by another name. By any name it is repugnant to reason and justice and a barrier rather than an aid to sound industrial relations."

NO CONCESSION TO PUBLIC.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press).—John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers upon learning last night of the refusal of the anthracite operators to accept Governor Pinchot's suggestions for settlement of the mining suspension declared the operators' attitude "does no represent one whit of concession in the public interest to dispose of a situation that has become alarmingly acute."

PINCHOT DEFERS COMMENT.

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Penn., Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press). —Governor Pinchot, when informed last evening that the anthracite operators, meeting in Philadelphia has declined to accept his plan for settlement of the miners' strike, said he would NOT comment on this latest turn of events until he had received notice of he action from the operators themselves.

G.W.V.A. TALKS CIVIC MATTERS

Members Are Favorable To Daylight Saving and Sunday Bathing.

PLAN CONCERT.

The regular monthly meeting of the G.W.V.A. was held last night with a good attendance, Commander J. G. Winterbottom presiding.

After discussion of Association business, and a renewal of the expression of confidence in the aims and ideals of the Association, a great amount of general business was disposed of. The members present spoke generally in favor of supporting daylight saving when the question is put to the people on January 1, and the suggfiestion that they also support Sunday bathing met with unanimous affirmation. Some suggestions were made as to cleaning up the beaches, and it was the general opinion that capable young men should be employed as guards. The bathing beaches, the speakers said, should be places where young people could be taught

BAGOT BATTLES OVER MEIGHEN'S SPEECH ON WAR

Federal By-election in Quebec Riding Opens With Nominations.

T. CHURCH'S DENIAL.

Contradiction of Conservative Leader by Toronto Follower is Emphasized.

ST. LIBOIRE, Que., Dec. 1 (Canadian Press)—Campaigning in the Bagot by-election opened in earnest Monday with both candidates speaking from the same platform and with Mr. Meighen's Hamilton speech on Canadian participation in war much to the forefront. It yas one of the old stye joint meetings of Queebc. Nominations were formally presented on behalf of G. D. Morin, notary of St. Pie Bagot county, Liberal, and of Hon. Andre Fauteux, Montreal Conservative, Mr. Fauteux being the Conservative in Bagot also in the recent general elections. Then following nominations the two candidates presented their views. The meeting opened in a small hall above the room where nominations were received but Mr. Morin had ony opened with a few minutes' speech, and Mr. Fauteux was just beginning when there were cries that larger crowds were waiting outside. In a few minutes the hall was squabbling whether the meeting should be inside or out. In vain both Mr. Fauteux a nd Mr. Morin pleaded that the meeting should be permitted to continue inside.

Shivered Out Doors

Mr. Fautuex tried to speak but his voice was lost in the hubbub. Mr Morin had no better success. The crowd trooped out of the hall backwards and forwards from one spot to another heatedly discussing all the time whether the meeting should be held. The candidates repaired to a larger building at the exhibition grounds but that again was rejected. For over an hour groups wandered around from place to place until as a last resort it was decided to speak outside from the steps of the country building. There muffled to the ears, shivering in the glacial air, the speakers continued but with a much abbreviated program. It was Mr. Morin who first raised the Hamilton speech of Mr. Meighen Mr. Meighen, Mr. Morin declared, had said that if another war came he would consult the people in a general election before sending troops overseas. What, asked Mr. Morin, was the purpose of this declaration. It had surprised many people.

Was it not intended to win the by-election of Bagot. "We are flattered to think," said Mr. Morin, "that Mr. Meighen thinks Bagot so important as to necessitate a declaration of that kind, and we feel entitled to ask why it was made."

Mr. Fauteux returned to the Hamilton speech later when the crowd had re-assembled outside. He first referred to Mr. Meighen's statement on the night of the general election that if called upon to form a govern he would give representation to Quebec. He then spoke of the Hamilton speech as having been made on English grounds.

Assurance to Quebec

"Was this declaration of principle by Mr. Meighen," went on Mr. Fauteux, referring to the Hamilton

MEIGHEN DECLARES PEOPLE WILL BE CONSULTED BEFORE CANADIAN TROOPS ARE SENT FROM COUNTRY

Speaks in French to People of Bagot Opening By-election Campaign.

UPHOLDS TARIFF.

Says He Will Protect Canada's Farmers and Industries When He Gains Power.

ACTONVALE, Que., Dec. 1 (Canadian Press)—Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, the Conservative leader, came to Bagot today. He repeated in French what he had previously said in English at Hamilton in regard to Canadian participation in the war.

"The Conservative party," he said, "wants nothing but peace and security. The Conservative party has no expectation of another war. I do not think that, after the treaty of Locarno, a war in the near future is possible. However, if a crisis should rise in this country in which our liberty might be menaced, I declare that so long as I shall be in power in this country no troops will be sent out of the country without the people being consulted."

(There was an outburst of applause at the words).

Mr. Meighen went on, that at the outbreak of the last war no party had been of this view. Both parties were unanimous in parliament that aid should be given without delay. But it was the opinion of the Conservative party that, in the future, the people should be consulted as well as parliament. "That," added Mr. Meighen, "is our position. We have confidence in the British Empire. You also have confidence in the British Empire. But we want the British Empire to be a great force for peace and not an agent for war."

Soon in Power

He obsereved that the Conservative party would soon be in power, and he declared, "we shall put a tariff against the farm products of other countries. We shall put a tariff on the farm products of the United States as high as they put on ours. We shall give aid to the Canadian farmer and to the Canadian market and we shall assist in the extension of the Canadian market."

It had been said, Mr. Meighen continued that he was afraid to come to Quebec during general elections. Nothing could be more absurd. In no part of the Dominion had he ever been received with greater courtesy or with greater cordiality. In the general elections, the Liberal chiefs in Quebec showed no desire to discuss the questions of the day.

They knew too well that the people of Quebec were against them on harsh questions. They knew too well that the people of Quebec were in favor of protection for Canadian industries. They knew too well that the people of Quebec were alarmed at the drift of their population south. Therefore the Liberals raised all old animosities. "But I prefer not to follow them," Mr. Meighen added. "I prefer not to repeat what they said against me. I prefer to forgive and forget."

Seeks United Canada

Mr. Meighen continued with his reference to war participation and went on that the Conservative party, following the traditions of MacDonald and Cartier, stood for the recognition of the rights of the two great races in Canada, for civil and religious liberty. The Conservatives believed that Canada should remain united. "We want good will between the two great races," he said, "Good will in act as in word."

The Conservative party stood for a policy of Canada first and development of home industries.

In a brief speech in English, Mr. Meighen denied that the Conservative party had any intention of amalgamating the Canadian Pacific Railway and Canadian National Railway and thus throwing many people out of employment.

Eye, Ear and Nose Specialists Contributed Articles on Hay Fever.

LONDON, Dec. 1 (Canadian Press).—The enormous power possessed by the General Medical Council, which often has awakened unfavorable criticism, is again being widely commented upon in connection with two recent decisions of this body.

The Council has struck off its register some nose and throat specialists, who have written newspaper articles with regard to treatment for hay fever.

One of the recent victims of the Medical Council is a noted writer of medical works, who has been struck off for an "offence" similar to that of the nose and throat specialists; his offence being in connection with a new treatment for consumption and inducing other practitioners to use the treatment without disclosing the formulas to the Medical Council.

TWO BANDITS ARE IDENTIFIED

Harris and Sperruzzi Recognized By Clerks Who Were Held Up.

MUCH WANTED MEN.

HAMILTON, Dec. 1. (Canadian Press).—Wanted for his alleged implication in five daring holdups in which a paymaster and two bank employees were slain and approximately $125,000 in cash was stolen, Harry Harris, alias "Curly" Brown, of Toronto, was yesterday positively identified as the ringleader of the trio that robbed the Pure Milk Company of $1,600 last Friday afternoon.

Police photographs from Buffalo were shown the employees of the Pure Milk Company yesterday, and the dozen or more clerks who were covered by the bandits' guns readily identified Harris and Mike Sperruzzi as the two men who held up the office in their quest for the payroll of $7,000.

COLLAPSED IN GARAGE.

Driver Let Engine Run To "Warm It Up."

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press)—George Kenny, 509 English street is in a critical condition from the effects of carbon-monoxide gas. Kenny, a salesman, permitted the engine of his automobile to run after he had entered his private garage. He was trying to warm up the motor in order that he could drive downtown. He collapsed at the door of the garage and was saved from death by his wife, who saw him from a back window of the Kenny residece.

Florida Doesn't Live Up To All Press Notices

MIAMI, Flo., Dec. 1. (United Press).—Swept by a terrific rainfall and gales, the Florida seaboard was literally drenched to its foundations to-day and struggling to get business under way again. While workers worked in bathing suits to clean up the debris which the storm left in its wake, here, reports over damaged communication lines from numerous other cities on the Peninsula showed the widespread effects of the storm.

Street car, wire and other utilities services were paralyzed here for hours, while business was at a standstill as water rushed into basements and over the third floor of buildings and lobbies of the hotels. Contractors erecting new buildings here and elsewhere in the stricken areas were the heaviest losers, through interrupted and damaged work.

POSTPONEMENT OF THE OPENING OF PARLIAMENT UNTIL JANUARY 7 ANNOUNCED BY PREMIER KING

Return of All Election Writs Not Expected Until Near Christmas.

OTHER CONDITIONS.

Several Recounts and the Bagot By-election Considered.

OTTAWA, Dec 1.—(By Canadian Press).—Parliament will meet on January 7, Premier King announced last night at the conclusion of a meeting of the Cabinet. The Prime Minister stated that it had been the hope of the Government to meet Parliament on December 10 which was the first tentative date announced, but the report of the chief electoral officer which was placed before Cabinet Monday afternoon showed that it was clearly impractical to summon Parliament at the early date.

The Premier issued the following statement:

"The Government has received today the following memorandum from the chief electoral officer with respect to the possibility of Parliament meeting on December 10."

"It now appears extremely improbable that by December 10th all the members elected on October 29th last will have been returned.

"The returns of 215 out of the 241 writs have been gazetted, and since the special issue of the Canada Gazette on November 28th, regular returns have been received through 11 additional electoral districts, making a total of 226, leaving 15 outstanding.

Writs in Transit.

"For all but two of these, the writs are in the mails, some having been sent back on account of irregularity. The writ for Yukon, mailed at Dawson on November 21, cannot reach here before December 11th, and may quite possibly not arrive until December 21st.

"Moreover, the arrival in time of the two writs not yet mailed (Bruce North and Peace River is problematical. In the former the final addition of the votes takes place only today, and in the latter a recount commences tomorrow at Edmonton. If this recount were prolonged, as if a recount were required in Bruce North, neither of these electoral districts would be represented on December 10th.

"Finally, a contest in the by-election in Bagot appears probable, and if there is a contest the return from

THREE RESCUED FROM DROWNING IN TOURING CAR

Automobile Plunged Off Kingsville Dock Into 18 Feet of Water.

THREE MEN FREED.

Heroic Act in Icy Lake Erie Wins Public's Praise.

KINGSVILLE, Ont., Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press).—Diving through half an inch of ice into the freezing aters of Lake Erie here Sunday, William T. Fox, 30, rescued three men from drowning after their car had plunged off a dock into 18 feet of water.

Burt Burton, Leslie Ringrose and Charles Hicks were driving in a small touring car along the wharf about 11.40 a.m. Sunday when the front wheel of the car struck a projecting pile. The driver lost control, the car veered to the side of the wharf and plunged over the side into 18 feet of water turning "turtle" as it did so.

Fox, who saw the accident, lost no time. Stripping off his coat, he dived and began searching for the occupants of the car. Burton and Ringrose proved easy to rescue and were brought to the surface immediately, but it was several minutes before Hicks was extricated from the overturned car and he was unconscious when finally rescued.

Artificial respiration was used and proved successful, so that all three are none the worse for their misadventure except for the wetting they received.

Fox's heroic conduct has stirred the people here and there is a strong feeing that it should be suitably recognized. Fox is the son of Mrs. William Derrick, of this place.

An English sea captain and three companions are about to start on a voyage around the world in a 40-foot converted lifeboat. The trip will occupy between two and three years, and will cover roughly 38,000 miles.

Hunter Sank Through Roof Of Bear's Den and Emerged With Legs and Hands Lacerated But With Bruin's Hide

LINDSAY, Dec. 1.—Wesley Belch, of North Verulam, had quite a thrilling experience with a bear a few days ago, and the fact that he escaped with a few bad scratches is due to his good marksmanship.

Belch, in company with his dog, while on a hunting expedition, came to the edge of the lake, where every bit of moss as well as the leaves had been gathered up clean. His dog sniffed at a hole nearby and became very restless. Belch proceeded to investigate, but could see nothing. He stepped on top of the little mound which gave way under him, and his legs dropped into the hole. Bruin grabbed his leg, but Belch punched him on the nose with such force that he relinquished his hold. Belch, although bleeding from the lacerations on his hands kept cool, and when Bruin emerged from the hole, he brought his trusty rifle into play and laid him low. The bear was an unusually large one.

Nations of Europe Affix Signatures to Treaty of Locarno

Governments Are Pledged To Maintain Frontiers Established at Versailles—Arbitration For Frontier Disputes Is Also Agreed On—Many Attended.

TREATIES SIGNED BY NEGOTIATORS.

LONDON, Dec. 1 (Canadian Press).—The Treaty of Locarno, made between the leading Powers of Europe and binding their Governments to maintain the territorial frontiers established by the Treaty of Versailles even to the extent of war, was signed here today. Plenipotentiaries of Great Britain, France, Germany, Belgium, and Italy affixed their signatures to the document.

Four subsidiary pacts, pledging the use of arbitration in the event of boundary disputes between Germany and each of her neighbors — France, Belgium, Poland and Czecho-Slovakia,— were signed at the same time.

Several copies of the treaties were signed and sealed for their Governments by the men who created them at Locarno in October — Right Hon. Austen Chamberlain for Great Britain; M. Briand for France; Dr. Stresemann and Chancellor Luther for the German Republic; Emile Vandervelde for Belgium, and Count Scialcia for Italy. The arbitration treaties were signed on behalf of Poland by M. Skrzynski, the premier, and of Czecho-Slovakia it its Prime Minister, Edward Benes.

Streets Crowded.

Long before 11 o'clock, when the doors were open, the narrow sidewalks of Downing Street leading to the entrance of the Government building and adjacent streets were crowded with onlookers anxious to see the statesmen as they drove up in closed cars. The small space allotted to the Government ministers and diplomats in the room itself was filled when the plenipotentiaries took their places flanking Mr. Chamberlain, who sat at the centre of a long table. After a short opening address by Mr. Chamberlain, the signing began. The signatures were in alphabetical order of the names of the countries in French, so that Chancellor Luther and Foreign Minister Stresemann representing Germany ('Allemagne') were the first to sign the several copies. Others followed at intervals of a few minutes. After signing, the German plenipotentiaries proceeded to Buckingham Palace to sign the register. Afterwards they attended an informal private luncheon with Mr. Chamberlain.

COUNTY COUNCIL AWAITS QUORUM

Last Session of Year is Booked To Open Here Today.

ROADS BAD.

The December session of the Peterborough County Council, billed to open to-day, was still in the air at 3 o'clock awaiting the arrival of enough councillors to form a quorum. The roads are in a bad condition, and it is expected that some of the members experienced dimculty in making the trip to the city.

There are several important matters to come before the council at this session, the last of the year, and it is anticipated that the remainder of the week will be fully occupied in deliberating these. It is altogether likely that the question of compelling all vehicles to carry lights at night will be brought up for discussion in line with action taken in many other counties.

THE WEATHER

The rainfall during November gave a total of 3.30, not so much as October, but still more than average. The highest the temperature reached was 55 degrees; the lowest 7 degrees. December is again with us. The old Roman year began with March, and December takes its name from the Latin "decem," signifying ten, and is usually considered the first of our winter months. When the reader peruses accounts of a coming very severe winter, whether the prophet is a scientist in a clerical robe, or an untutored backwoodsman, take his prophecy with a generous amount of salt. Early this year a drought was predicted for the northern half of this continent. We had more rainfall than usual. Whether this winter will be a severe one or not, nobody knows, but it will doubtless be severe enough to satisfy everybody—with perhaps the exception of the coal dealer.—W. P.

NATIONS OF EUROPE SIGN LOCARNO PACT

Shows Goodwill.

"The peace of the world could not have been effected without some great demonstration of international goodwill such as this ceremony today," said M. Briand, French Premier, after the security pact had been signed.

"This has been done," he added. "It is the most important step in the history of the modern world, and the future should be one of arbitration and collaboration between nations, where war and armament have no places."

In a brief statement to press correspondents, Right Hon. Austen Chamberlain said the conclusion of the Locarno pact had settled the problem of security, while the peace of Europe had been consolidated by the adhesion of Great Britain and Italy.

Treaties were the outcome of sincere desire on the part of nations concerned for peace and reconciliation.

Germany's Comment.

Chancellor Luther of Germany issued the following statement: "This day of the signing of the Locarno pact is a milestone in the history of European nations. It shows the will of all of the partners to the treaty to restore peace. Readjustment to normal economic and political relations will be the ultimate outcome of our endeavors.

"I consider that this pact is the first step, but a decisive one, in that direction. The pacification of the world, and in its wake the prosperity of the nations is the final aim. There are still obstacles to overcome, but we are at last so far advanced that I can say with assurance the goal is attainable."

DAUDET CASE STIRS PARIS ANEW AS ROYALIST LEADER IS JAILED

Father of Youthful Suicide or Murder Victim is Sentenced.

A LIBEL ACTION.

Daudet Accused Taxi Driver of Lying in Giving Evidence.

The latest phase in the internationally famous Daudet case was brought to conclusion a week ago with the sentence delivered by Judge Flory which sends Leon Daudet, leader of the French Royalists, to prison for a term of five months. The charge against him was libel, brought by Charles Bagot, a Paris taxicab driver. The libel consisted in M. Daudet's having charged the taxicab driver with lying when he stated that Philippe Daudet, the 14-year-old son of Leon Daudet, had hailed his cab and committed suicide in it, now nearly two years ago.

The present trial served to revive a case almost unparalleled for sensation and passion in the history of French courts, and which in many respects has been said to rival in public interest the Dreyfus Affair. Philippe Daudet, grandson of the illustrious Alphonse Daudet, was found shot two years ago in the cab driven by Charles Bagot. The boy, whose father represents, politically, the antithesis of anarchism, had been associating with Anarchists for some time, and, it is claimed, was involved in a plot against men high in the Government.

The case became well known on both sides of the Atlantic. There were two contentions: One that the boy committed suicide, the other that he was murdered and then placed in the cab. The father, Leon Daudet, declared the latter to be true, and has exerted himself vigorously, in part through the columns of L'Action Francaise, of which he is editor, to prove the allegation. French opinion divides in the matter. According to recent dispatches from Paris, the evidence given by 100 witnesses in the present libel case failed to prove that Philippe was murdered.

Touches on Family History.

Some rioting occurred outside the courthouse at midnight after the decision was announced. Bagot's lawyer, as one of his strongest points in attempting to prove that Philippe committed suicide, urged that in heredity might be found significant clues. He mentioned the last illness and tragic death of the poet Alphonse, Philippe's grandfather, and the fact that Leon Daudet married his first cousin.

More sensational still were certain earlier aspects of the libel suit trial, which involved the premises of Le Flaoutter's tiny bookshop in a shoddy street running out of the Place de la Bastille. Le Flaoutter, to whose shop Philippe went on the day of the tragedy, has been a star witness for the police. His part in the affair, however, is described as having cost him his business, the respect of the community, and his wife—she left him nearly two years ago. He is called an "agent provocateur," a "mouchard"—one who runs to the police with tales, after having wormed his way into the confidence of those with tales worth repeating. Young Philippe is said to have confided to him the anarchist plot above mentioned.

At one stage the Court conducted some experiments on the spot, in an effort to ascertain whether a shot could be fired in Le Flaoutter's establishment without being heard in the concierge's lodge.

Court Meets in Bookshop.

At 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when the ray was just beginning to dip into that twilight which the French so expressively call "entre chien et loup," twenty-five old, rusty, black coaches drawn by horses drew up at one of the side doors of the Palais de Justice. These vehicles were entered by the Judge of the Assize Court and his assessors in scarlet robes, counsel for the prosecution, counsel for the defence, the jury (under guard) and all the star witnesses. Then the carriages moved through crowded streets, with traffic held up and people hanging out of their windows, to the bookshop near the Place de la Bastille. Squadrons of mounted police guarded the procession. It had been rumored that an attempt on the life of Leon Daudet would be made, and there was an anarchist angle. The Paris police take no chances where anarchists are concerned.

Judge, assessors, counsel, witnesses, jury crowded into the cramped little shop and down the stairs to the basement, where Leon Daudet has persistently alleged that his son was slain on that fatal evening by the police (ignorant of his identity and assuming that they were dealing with some obscure little anarchist). In this basement conflicting witnesses were heard, and afterward the Grand Assize Court adjourned to continue its strange session in the concierge's box.

It had been arranged that, wedged into this box of a room, the Court was to listen while a revolver was fired in every room, successively, of the former LeFlaoutter domain—this having been deemed the best way to establish whether or not the crime alleged by the dead boy's father could have taken place unheard by the concierge, who claimed that she had been aware of "nothing out of the way" that day, and who also testified that she had not left her lodge.

From three of the rooms on the basement floor no sound reached the ears of the listeners. There were but the faintest reverberations from the back of the shop, where an especially staged "violent quarrel" took place during this investigation. This evidence favored Leon Daudet's allegation. And finally it was established that no one crossing the area courtyard toward the quiet back entrance, by which route the Royalists' claim that the boy's body was carried out to the waiting taxi, would be visible from the lodge or, in the November dusk, from the corridor windows, either.

"A triumph for Daudet!" cried the Royalist partisans, who are many.

"It proves nothing," said the police, as they have been saying for two years.

Ultimately the Court gave a verdict in favor of the taxi driver, Bajot, whom Daudet had called not only a liar but a "creature" of the police, and, if not an actual accomplice in murder, at least an accessory after the fact. This most recent act in the Daudet drama has shown Leon Daudet and the Paris police at grips again, and the libel action is considered nothing more nor less than a retrial of the case of Phillippe Daudet's death.

It is said that the police, the authorities, every one concerned except the Daudet coterie, sought by all available means to dissuade the chauffeur from bringing suit. It was hoped that the issue, so fraught with danger and so devious in its political ramifications, had sunk to rest.

There are few persons in France to-day who do not know every detail of the Daudet case by heart. And it would be difficult to encounter a Frenchman who is not ready to express his own, usually violent, opinion as to what took place on Nov. 24, 1923.

ANNUAL BAZAAR IS WELL PATRONIZED

Sale Held By Presbyterian Ladies Was Very Successful.

The Armouries presented a most attractive appearance on Saturday afternoon with its many gaily decorated booths, the counters filled with a variety of merchandise, useful, ornamental, or a combination of both, from which the numerous buyers might make selection of Christmas gifts, the occasion being the annual bazaar held under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of Grace Presbyterian church.

Evidently the men found something of interest in "Vanity Fair," for many of the sterner sex mingled with the crowd of prospective purchasers, though naturally the feminine element predominated.

The size of the Armouries, and the bare white walls make it a difficult place to decorate to advantage but on Saturday numerous flags brightened the white background, and the various colors which twined the standards and made the streamers at the different booths, gave to the interior an effect which was most pleasing.

The area set apart for the "Fish Pond" was seldom without its quota of little folk, and the supply of "fish" had to be replenished again and again. Mrs. H. R. Armstrong and Miss May Hales "baited" the hook for the eager anglers.

The pink and white standards and streamers proclaimed the candy booth, with Misses Eileen Hunter and Florence Larmer dispensing the home-made sweets in their attractive containers.

The "Country Store" was distinguished by its decorative scheme of purple and gold, and catered to a variety of needs, the "salesladies" being Mrs. A. Miller, Mrs. Kennedy, Mrs. David Armstrong, Mrs. Miller Jr., and Miss Ethel McKnight. Home-made baking, fancy biscuits, groceries and butter direct from the farm, could be procured at this counter. Miss Irene Francey was cashier.

Mrs. C. Thornkyke and Mrs. J. Armstrong presided in the booth with the red and white streamers, and had disposed of their wares (handkerchiefs) before the tea hour arrived.

Green and white was used for the children's wear department, dressed dolls, knitted woollen suits, dainty hand-embroidered dresses, etc., being included among the goods displayed. Mrs. S. E. Eakins, and Mrs. W. T. A. Boyell gave ready attention to prospective purchasers, and Miss Jean Syer was cashier.

There was a very dainty array of beautifully made articles in the fancy work booth, the decorations of mauve and silver being most appropriate. Mrs. Milton Fallis, Mrs. Harry Ball, and Mrs. W. E. Russell were in charge, and the cashier was Miss Kathleen Lancashire.

In the apron square, with its trimmings of peach and white, Mrs. T. Ingram and Mrs. R. McMahon presided, its goods evitiently finding ready sale.

The flower-centred tables for afternoon tea were filled again and again, Mrs. R. J. Doak, Mrs. Seton, and Mrs. S. Carveth being in charge, while the young ladies who waited on the guests included Misses Marguerite Russell, I. Syer, and Violet Bothwell, Mrs. R. J. McKnight was cashier.

Hot supper served at the regular tea hour proved a good drawing card, many of the business men and their wives coming in for this important item, the long tables, with floral decorations and baskets of rosy-cheeked apples, presenting a most attractive appearance. The ladies who looked after this part of the day's proceedings were: Mrs. W. J. E. Gillott, Mrs. J. D. Armstrong, Mrs. H. Hutchison, Mrs. Harry Russell, Mrs. R. J. Armstrong, Mrs. J. R. Eakins, and Mrs. L. C. Russell.

The concert in the evening, for which talent was secured from St. Paul's church choir, Peterborough, was well attended, the artists including Mrs. J. McClelland, Messrs. Rush, Chenhall, and Dutton. Hearty encores greeted every number and the entire entertainment was much enjoyed.

Financially the receipts from sale and concert, including over sixty dollars from the hot supper, were quite satisfactory.

Mrs. R. J. McKnight is President of the Ladies' Aid Society, and Mrs. A. Miller secretary.

THE DUTY OF PARENTS.

Mr. W. J. Dunlop's address to the local Rotary Club yesterday in which he stressed the necessity of parents taking more interest in the education of their children and of closer co-operation between parent and teacher, should cause many parents to do a little quiet thinking.

It is undoubtedly true, as Mr. Dunlop pointed out, that the average parent is content to leave the whole responsibility upon the school, and seems to think that if he has paid his tax bill he has discharged his full duty toward his family.

Mr. Dunlop does a useful public purpose in seeking to arouse fathers and mothers to a realization of the fact that they too have a responsibility in the matter of their children's education, and that there is much that can be done by the joint efforts of parent and teacher that would be impossible for either to do working alone.

Too many boys are carried away nowadays by the idea that it is easy to locate an occupation in which the work is light and the financial rewards heavy, and in order that that condition may be dealt with intelligently there is absolute necessity of close co-operation between teacher and parent, co-operation that will save boys possibly from unfortunate decisions that may mean disaster.

PROTECTING TOURISTS.

Mr. J. J. Duffus of Peterboro fathered a resolution passed by the Ontario Tourist Association at its session last week recommending to the Ontario Government that it should license and regulate all tourist camps which are open for a period of more than sixty days in a year.

The purpose of his policy is, of course, to ensure the protection of tourists and to make sure that the camps are properly conducted, especially in regard to sanitation.

The Provincial Medical Officers of Health have already done considerable spade work in the inspection of tourist camps, and their investigations have determined the fact that in some particulars, especially in regard to the water supply, the conditions are not all they should be.

The licensing of all camps would make it easier for the Government to regulate these places of accommodation, and those in which a supply of safe drinking water could not be guaranteed could be taken care of in the interest of the travelling public.

Mr. Duffus' suggestion was approved by the Tourist Association, and no doubt will be favourably received by the Government when the matter comes up for consideration.

Ontario is inviting thousands of visitors who leave a large sum of money here every season; it is imperative that so far as is possible these visitors should be protected.

THE TOURIST ASSOCIATION.

While the financial assistance offered by the Ontario Government to the Tourist Association may not be as generous as some of the officers of that organization anticipated, the public generally will agree with the wisdom of Hon. Geo. S. Henry's suggestion that it is better to go slowly at first than to launch an ambitious programme that might afterward have to be curtailed.

The Ontario Government is ready to contribute 20 per cent. toward the annual expenditure of the Tourist Association up to the limit of a $5,000 contribution.

It is possible that the association expected a larger grant than has been offered, and as the work develops a more substantial measure of assistance may be provided.

In the interim, it is up to the Tourist Association to make good, to demonstrate to the Government and the people of the Province that it is capable of substantial results in bringing into Ontario that increased tourist traffic that everybody recognizes as desirable.

Once that fact has been demonstrated satisfactorily—and the Examiner has no doubt of the ability of the organization to bring about such a demonstration—there seems little doubt that Provincial assistance on a much larger scale will be forthcoming.

Leon Frazer, former Secretary of the Peterboro Chamber of Commerce, is Secretary of the organization, and can be depended upon to put energy and vision into his carrying out of the duties of his responsible position.

A FORWARD STEP.

If the returned soldiers of Canada are ever to get together in one organization that will include the vast majority of the men from this country who fought in the Great War, the opportunity seems to be offered now by the Canadian Legion of the British Service League which has just emerged from the Unity Conference of Canadian war veterans at Winnipeg, with Lieut.-Gen. Sir Percy Lake, V.C., of Victoria, B. C., as its first President.

The Examiner holds no brief for the new organization, but cannot help expressing its opinion that should the present effort to bring all war veterans into one camp fail, it is certain that unity among ex-service men in this country will never be brought about.

There are many problems that will have to be solved, many obstacles that will have to be overcome, many sacrifices that will have to be made by existing organizations before the Canadian Legion can hope to succeed, but there is reason to hope that the problems will be solved, the obstacles overcome and the sacrifices made.

Headed by such distinguished soldiers as Sir Percy Lake and Brigadier-General F. S. Meighen of Montreal, the League represents a great step forward toward that unity that is essential, if the veterans' movement is to get anywhere.

Lieut.-Col. A. P. Miller of Peterboro is to be congratulated upon having been elected as one of the two Ontario representatives on the Dominion Executive, the other being Major W. D. Sharpe of Brampton, former head of the G.W.V.A., who was the principal speaker at the Armistice Day meeting here this year.

A BURLESQUE ON JUSTICE.

The courts of the United States and the professional legal talent of the country which specializes in defense of crime before the judicial tribunals are playing a game in which the life of Gerald Chapman, the notorious gunman and murderer, is the stake. The case of this arch-offender against law, who has been guilty of every act of enormity of which the outlawed desperado can boast, is not in any respect an unusual one, except for certain features which have risen since the prisoner was condemned to forfeit his life as a penalty for a recent murder he committed. But it is the one which is engaging public attention at the moment, is occupying columns of newspaper space and imparting thrills of lovers of sensational reading.

Chapman, who was convicted of an extensive mail robbery, was sentenced to twenty-five years in penitentiary by a Federal court, but made his escape after serving two years of his term. He was tracked to New Britain, in Connecticut, and finally re-arrested. In his effort to elude his captors he shot and killed a policeman, thereby adding to his reputation as a criminal who was restrained by no scruples. Fortunately for the public the crime of murder is punishable by death in Connecticut, and on conviction the gunman was sentenced to be executed.

But the legal experts who were employed to save Chapman from the extreme penalty of the law were not to be beaten by the dispensers of justice in a mere State of the Union. They took the position that the murderer was under Federal sentence for robbery and that his full term, of which twenty-three years were still to be served, must be worked out at Atlanta Penitentiary before the Connecticut verdict could be enforced. A judgment asked for before a competent United States tribunal sustained the contention of Chapman's lawyers, and the desperado rejoiced in the prospect of returning to prison and in the possibility of another escape.

The State's Attorney of Connecticut, however, is a man fertile in resource, and he made a move in the game which was not foreseen. He persuaded President Coolidge, in the interests of justice, to grant Chapman a pardon for the unexpired portion of his sentence in Atlanta Penitentiary. Such a pardon becoming effective would enable the Connecticut authorities to deal with the murderer as the court directed. But on the advice of his counsel Chapman has refused the pardon.

That is where the case now stands. A professional bandit, a man convicted of murder and innumerable other crimes, refuses the clemency of the Government in order to evade execution for a misdeed of graver magnitude than the one for which he was sentenced to prison for twenty-five years.

What greater burlesque of justice could be enacted for the contemplation of a patient people or to the disgrace of a Government?—The Globe.

CANADA AT THE RACES.

The London Advertiser, commenting on the report from Ottawa that approximately fifty million dollars was wagered at the Canadian race track in 1928, finds occasion to read a great moral lesson from the figures. The Advertiser says:

"That amount is greater than the bank clearings at a city the size of Kitchener or Fort William or Brantford. It is almost equal to the value of the whole Canadian barley crop for 1924. It is the equivalent of the selling price of our combined crops of mixed grains, buckwheat, beans, peas and rye. In terms of potatoes it was enough to buy up the whole Canadian crop, which sold in 1924 for $47,956,000.

"The money bet on horse racing would come within six millions of paying for all the horses in the Province of Ontario; it falls short by a similiar amount of equaling the value of creamery butter in all Canada for 1924. It exceeds by a good margin the value of all the minerals taken out of British Columbia in a year."

In dealing with a moral or any other question it is just as well to be fair, if any good purpose is to be served and if evils complained of are to be corrected. All horse race betting in Canada now, which is permitted by law, is done by the pari-mutuel system. The amount of money reported as bet during the year is the aggregate at all the tracks. Now, take for instance a man on pleasure bent for a day at the track, who calmly makes his budget what he can afford and what he cannot afford for the afternoon. He stakes himself to ten dollars. The first race comes along and he bets two. He may lose that or may get it back a couple of times over or only half of it back. However, the process is repeated in the second race. In the third he may, having won a couple of dollars, increase his bet. And this process goes on with 10,444 or more people at the track on the same day. In other words, a man's original stake may be bet over several times in the course of the same afternoon. It is the aggregate of these bets which forms the fifty million bet all over Canada, as given out by the Ottawa statisticians.

The Standard is certainly not an upholder of an orgy in betting, legal or otherwise, and its advice to young men and old ones, too, is to stay away from the race track lure. There are men and women, however, not injured by the contact, who have a thorough understanding of the risks they are up against, and to whom the sport of kings appeals. But to say that Canadians spent $50,000,000 on the race tracks this year, just because that is the aggregate of the pari-mutuel betting machines is misleading, to say the least. If an attendant at a Canadian race track can make two dollars last for seven races, and still have carfare home, then this must be a most alluring and exciting day. As long as human nature is just what it is, men and women will enjoy this sort of pleasure.—St. Catharines Standard.

The new French Finance Minister declares that new taxes are inevitable. He'll not last long.

Daylight saving doesn't seem to be as live an issue at the beginning of winter as in the spring. Interest in the question will grow warmer as municipal election day draws near.

Communists are to be barred from the Toronto Labour Temple. The Reds are not finding Canada a very fruitful grounds for their propaganda.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Nov. 30.—Top shipping steers in small bunches sold at $8.60 and full loads at $8 to $8.50 a cwt. Feeding steers were $7.35 to $7.50 a cwt. Cook Bros. sold a load of 32 to go to the country at $7.50 a cwt. Three loads of 800 stockers sold at $4.75 to $5.25 a cwt. A lot of good baby beeves brought $9 to $10.50 a cwt. Good handyweight butchers' heifers brought $6.75 a cwt., and mediums $5.50 up. Shipping steers were a little higher today and all the butchers' cattle were firm. The market was active.

All the good calves are being rapidly taken at steady prices. Some top calves sold at 13 cents a pound and prices generally are firm with last week.

There was little done in lambs during the morning owing to the higher prices asked. A few light ewes sold at 14 cents and 110-lb. lambs brought 13 cents. Good butchers' sheep brought 6 3-4 cents.

Hog sellers did not pay a great deal of attention to the packers over the week-end quotations of $11.50 a cwt. f.o.b. for Saturday's loading and $11.25 for today's. The market is unsettled, but the impression is that last week's closing prices of $11.75 a cwt. f.o.b. will stick today.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Nov. 30 (Canadian Press).—Official announcement that wheat exports from Russia are banned until next March did a good deal today to bring about a material upturn in wheat values here. Wheat closed strong, 1 1-8 to 2 7-8c net higher, new style, December 1.66 to 1.66 1-4 and May 1.61 7-8 to 1.62; with corn at 5-8 to 7-8c advance; oats 1-4 to 1-2c down, and provisions varying from 10c decline to a rise of 22c.

At first, the wheat market showed a downward trend owing to reports of better weather conditions in Argentina and because of a set-back in quotations at Liverpool. Sentiment here changed quickly, though when word came that Russia had embargoed wheat exports and that the Russian crop had been over-estimated 140,000,000 bushels. In addition, trade comment from Europe today was generally taken here as implying pessimism as to world supplies of wheat in comparison with needs. Aggressive buying developed, and after a rapid ascent the market finished at the day's top level.

EGG MARKETS

OTTAWA, Nov. 30 (Canadian Press).—The usual month end quietness prevails on the egg market today. Reports from Saskatchewan report a freer movement of turkeys in that province.

Toronto — Firm and unchanged. Some dealers are getting short on storage stocks. Country shippers are paying extras 60, firsts 46, seconds 34, and making sales, extras 70, firsts 60, seconds 38, f.o.b.

Montreal—Egg market is quiet. Jobbing, storage extras 48, firsts 42, seconds 35.

Winnipeg — Egg market steady. Fresh receipts light, jobbing, fresh extras 70 to 72, firsts 56, seconds 35, storage extras 46, firsts 42, seconds 34. Poultry receipts show increase of week.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Nov. 30 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market today was quiet, but prices were unchanged. Sales of car lots of Ontario and Quebec No. 2 white were made at 53 cents, No. 3 white at 51 1-2 cents, nd No. 4 white at 49 1-2 cents per bushel, ex-track, and Ontario malting barley sold at 85 1-2 cents per bushel, ex-track. The condition of the market for spring wheat grades of flour was unchanged. There was some business done for export account over the week-end, but the volume was not large, while the domestic demand was confined chiefly to small lots in mixed car orders.

The trade in winter wheat flour showed some improvement, there being an improved demand for supplies on spot and sales of odd cars were made for immediate delivery. The movement of broken lots was also larger and on the whole the market was rather more active. White corn flour was firm at $6.80 to $7 per barrel in jute bags, delivered to the trade.

Some of the millers late on Saturday, advanced prices for all lines one dollar per ton. There continues to be a good demand from country buyers for supplies and a fairly active trade was done in mixed car orders, and a sale of one straight car of Ontario shorts was reported at $33 per ton, ex-track.

There were no new developments in the market for rolled oats, but the undertone was strong and the prospects are that prices may possibly go still higher in the near future. The demand was good.

The tone of the market for baled hay was steady, but the volume of business was smaller on account of the recent weakness that has prevailed in the United States situation of latet.

The exports of eggs from the Port of Montreal last week were 10,675 cases which show a decrease of 4,449 cases, as compared with the previous week, and an increase of 266 cases with the same week last year, while the total shipments for the season 1925 were 2,509 cases in excess of 1924.

Owing to the colder weather prevailing, there has been an improved demand from local and outside buyers for potatoes, and a more active trade was done, with the result that the undertone to the market was very firm.

There were no exports of butter from the Port of Montreal last week, but the total for the season 1925 have been 320,404 packages, as against 259,174 packages for 1924, showing an increase of 61,250 packages.

The receipts of butter were 247 packages, as compared with 427 for the same day last week, and 258 for the corresponding day a year ago. A firm feeling prevailed in the market, but the demand for supplies from all sources was somewhat limited and business was quiet.

The exports of cheese from the Port of Montreal last week amounted to 44,433 boxes, which showed a decrease of 31,323 boxes, as compared with the previous week, and an increase of 10,096 boxes with the same week last year, and the total shipments for the season 1925 have been 167,292 boxes larger than 1924.

The receipts of cheese in Montreal were 2,328 boxes, as against 3,731 for the same day last week, and 997 for the corresponding day a year ago. There was no improvement in the condition of the market, business being still very quiet in all directions and prices were nominally unchanged.

Beans were unchanged at $2.40 per bushel.

MINISTERS WHO SMOKE WARNED

Methodist Bishop Issues a Warning to Clergy About "Smoking on Sly."

A SERIOUS MATTER.

MACEN, Ga., Dec. 1.—(United Press).—A warning to ministers "who smoke on the sly", was issued Sunday to delegates attending the North Gergia conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Methodist ministers are required to take a pledge that they will abstain from tobacco.

"If the preacher does not abstain from the use of tobacco, he violates his pledge, his solemn pact with God. It is a serious matter," Bishop W. H. Ainsworth said.

"If there is a preacher who is violating this pledge he ought to be arraigned for court trial after being counselled about it."

QUEBEC ENCOURAGES HOME MANUFACTURE

Policy To Have All Raw Products Made Up in Province.

QUEBEC, Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press)—Questioned if the Provincial Government intended to introduce legislation providing for an embargo on asbestos, Premier Taschereau said it would be natural for this province, producing eighty-five percent of the total production of asbestos in the world to encourage manufacturing of that raw material. "This is in accordance with the policy of the Government for all products of this part of Canada," stated Prime Minister.

Don't Just Ask for 'Bulbs'

Two gas-filled lamps may look identical, yet one can contain a rare and costly gas known as argon, which is used exclusively in Edison Mazda Lamps, while the other may be filled with the cheaper and much less efficient nitrogen.

One lamp may have a thin film of moisture on the inside, while the other is perfectly dry. The first lamp will have a much shorter life than the dry one.

Edison Mazda Lamps are tipless. This feature increases their ruggedness by over 25%. By always specifying Edison Mazda Lamps, you are assured of receiving the latest scientific development in incandescent lighting.

speech, "not in accord with the wishes of Quebec and of the whole country. Is it not something which will bring harmony and unity into to the country. Do not the people of Quebec feel re-assured Is there anything now to prevent French Canadians of Quebec from accepting the economic views of the Conservative party?" Mr. Fauteux thought that Mr. Meighen's declaration would dissipate all fears from the minds of the people of Quebec.

Closing the debate, Hon. P. J. A. Cardin, minister of Marine, referred to the Hamilton declaration as embodying the policy of the Liberal party. He said that when Liberals had urged a referendum on conscription, Conservatives, including Mr. Meighen, had bitterly opposed it. Now, Mr. Meighen was coming to the Liberal point of view. "There is no need to ask Liberals to become Conservative," said Mr. Gardin. "Mr. Meighen has been converted to Liberal ideas."

Tommy Church's Denial

"I notice," Mr. Cardin went on, "That Mr. Meighen is to speak in Bagot tomorrow and I suppose he will refer to the declaratio he made at Hamilton. If he does, he might tell us what he thinks in that regard of the statement of T. L. Church that the Hamilton declaration does not represent Conservative policy; and also what Mr. Meighen thinks of the editorial in the Toronto Teelgram asking the people of Ontario not to make any comment on the Hamilton declaration until the country has got rid of the government."

ALDERMEN WILL NOT

Alderman Phelan called to mind a statement of Mr. Robertson, that a street car system would not pay in a city of less than 50,000 people, while Alderman Fife said that the people wouldn't [illegible] the system at any price. The latter said that he had faith in the future of Peterborough, and believed that the system could [illegible]y, but favored no action by the City at present.

Alderman Greene said that it was the last line of trade in which he would put any of his own money, as there were not enough people to make it pay. The City, he said, was too compact, and a man who missed one car could get home quicker by walking than by waiting for the next. He said that, of course, in a city of this size, nothing better than a ten minutes service could be expected, and that the [illegible] matter was one of population.

Alderman Jones said that he didn't feel like taking any action in the matter at present.

Nothing to Lose.

Alderman Hancock said that the City had nothing to lose by leaving the matter in abeyance for a while, as, if the Hydro made the system pay, the City could then consider the purchase of the system.

Alderman Phelan said that the time was not opportune for the City to enter such a deal. He hoped that the Hydro would make the system pay, but expressed doubt.

Anderman Crowe said that the Hydro should be permitted to handle the system.

Alderman Turner said that it would not be good policy to recommend the purchase, as there was nothing on which the Alderman could base such a recommendation. He called attention to the fact that the system had been showing deficits for several years.

Alderman McIntyre said that the Hydro should go ahead and that the City should consider the purchase when the system was paying.

Mayor Turner summed up the opinion of the Aldermen, saying, however, that the district should not be expected to pay the deficits incurred on the Peterborough Street Railway.

The question of purchasing the gas plant was discussed, but nothing was done as no price or other data was available.

Another matter was the question of an exclusive franchise for the Hydro for the passenger buses in the city limits, but as doubt was expressed as to the power of the council to grant such a franchise, the matter was left over.

Voting in Schools.

All polling places for the municipal elections this year will be in the public and separate schools of the City or in the City Hall, and the Committee of the Whole Council last night passed the list of polls and officials.

Market Clerk Walter Stocker appeared before the committee and arrangements were made for holding a market on Wednesday, December 23, as well as on Saturday, December 26, so that there will be two markets in Christmas week.

COSGRAVE WILL MEET BALDWIN

Discussion in London of the Irish Boundary Award and Publication.

HOPE FOR SOLUTION.

DUBLIN, Dec. 1 (Canadian Press).—President Cosgrave of the Free State cabinet is on his way to London to confer with Premier Baldwin on the Irish boundary. The Dail Eireann stands adjourned until Wednesday to give the ministers time to determine their policy, which, when adjournment was taken it was expected Mr. Cosgrave would be able to announce on that date. But it is hardly likely that he will be in a position to return for several days.

The Free State ministers are observing the utmost reticence over the London negotiations from which hardly more is expected than maintenance of the existing boundary. Even that is uncertain. The next best thing is believed to be postponement of the award, because its publication might make it impossible for the Free State Government to carry on. The Dublin and provincial newspapers are unanimous in urging the ministry to retain office. Eamon de Valera's speech at Ennis, in which he denounced the British Government and any compromise on the boundary question, it was thought might have some effect in London, as it is was an attempt to unit all the old Sinn Feiners in opposing the Ulster change. Such a reunion might seem undesirable to both Great Britain and Ulster and make them the readier for action with the Free State.

Baldwin is Busy.

LONDON, Dec. 1 (Canadian Press).—The Irish boundary negotiations which have been going on between Premier Baldwin, Sir James Craig, the Ulster Premier, and representatives of South Ireland, did not make much progress Monday, and as Premier Baldwin and his colleagues are busy with the formalities of the Locarno signatures, the discussions are likely to occupy several more days.

President Cosgrave of the Free State Cabinet left Dublin last night to take part in the conferences. The Prime Minister informed the Commons yesterday that he was not yet in a position to make a statement regarding the boundary problem. At a Cabinet meeting he communicated the progress of the negotiations, but the closest secrecy is being maintained. The feeling is growing, however, that it may be found possible to avoid publication of the commission's award and retain the existing boundary.

Birkenhead's Regrets.

LONDON, Dec. 1 (Canadian Press).—Lord Birkenhead, who was one of the principals in the negotiation of the Irish Treaty, speaking at Bury St. Edmunds last night, alluded to the boundary imbroglio. He said: "It is indeed a tragedy that The Morning Post should have published a forecast of the boundary commission's award. A man, whom I believe to be both sincere and honest, Commissioner MacNeill, felt impelled to resign his position. A communication, which was published in The Morning Post and refused, I believe on patriotic grounds, by The Daily Telegraph, has deprived Ulster of the unanimous decision of the three arbitrators, with all that would have meant for stability, certainty and strength.

I still believe, despite that calamitous publication, that we shall succeed in reaching a solution of the Irish difficulties, and in that event the statesmanship which produced the Irish settlement will have been justified by events.

Relieved of pain in time to go to party

BACKACHE GIVEN QUICK RELIEF

Tried simple home treatment and pain stops

An aching back is often the result of tired, over-strained muscles, and can be given quick and complete relief with a very simple home treatment.

"I had such a backache I didn't know what to do," writes a New York woman. "I looked through my medicine cabinet to see if I could find something to help me—and there was a bottle of Sloan's Liniment. I used it, and in half an hour I was better. The next day I went to a big engagement party. Now, when anyone has a pain, I say 'use Sloan's.'"

The marvelous effectiveness of Sloan's is due to the stimulating effect that it has upon the circulation. Straight to the sick, aching tissues, it sends a healing tide of fresh new blood—clears out the trouble—kills the pain.

So pleasant and clean to use, too. You don't even have to rub. Just pat it on gently and you will get immediate results. All druggists—35 cents

BRITISH TROOPS LEAVE COLOGNE

Evacuation of Occupied Zone—8,000 Move Out To-day.

WED 800 GERMAN GIRLS

COLOGNE, Dec. 1. (Canadian Press).—As a gesture of good-will on the eve of the signing of the Locarno pacts, British evacuation of the occupied zone began twenty-four hours before the ceremonies in London to-day, which will re-establish Germany on an equal footing and prestige among the nations of the world. Thirty lorries of troops left for Wiesbaden Monday morning. The remainder of the force of 8,000 will move out of the zone by train to-day.

The troops themselves are doing their share of putting the Locarno spirit into practice, for they are taking with them 800 German girls whom they have made their wives, and this in spite of the fact that fraternizing between the British Tommies and German civilians was officially discouraged.

The Cologne shopkeepers are the chief mourners, as their harvest has been £10,000 weekly from the troops.

OBITUARY.

MR. DAVID MATTHEWS

Mr. David Matthews, one of Norwood's highly respected citizens, passed suddenly into the great beyond on Monday afternoon at the home of his brother-in-law, Mr. Wm. Montgomery. The deceased had not enjoyed the best of health for some time but was able to be around. His wife, whose maiden name was Ellen Montgomery, predeceased him about three years ago

Before coming to Norwood six years ago to live the late Mr. Mathews owned and operated the cheese factory at Roseneath and by his honest and upright dealings made many friends who will mourn his loss. The deceased, who was sixty-four years of age, was a member of the Norwood United Church and a staunch Orangeman. The funeral will be held on Wednesday afternoon from the residence of Mr. Montgomery, Hastings Road, and interment will be made in the Norwood Cemetery.

GREEKS CLAIM THAT MEETING COERCED

Say Men Who Renounced Rights in Turkey Were Under Governor's Orders.

ATHENS, Nov. 30 (Canadian Press).—A message from a Greek source in Constantinople is to the effect that the meeting of Greeks living in Turkey, which decided to renounce the rights given to them under the Treaty of Lausanne as a minority population, was held under Turkish coercion. Only 60 representatives attended the meeting, the message adds, and of these 20 belonged to the commission instituted by the orders of Fevzi Gey, Governor of Constantinople.

SECOND PERFORMANCE.

Kiwanis Show Went Over Well on Saturday Night.

The second performance of "Miss Bob White," given under the auspices of the Kiwanis Club on Saturday night at the Grand Opera House, was greeted with a snap and vim that brought the performers repeated applause. Between acts, Director Perkins made a short curtain speech, and Mr. Joseph Wearing also appeared to thank the patrons and all who had helped in any way to make the show a success. Pretty bouquets of roses were presented to the leading ladies in the cast: Mrs. Walter Byers, Mrs. E. V. Morphet, Miss Mathilde Masson and Miss Ernestine McManus.

Soviet Dinner To Briand Cost Over $200 Per Plate

PARIS, Nov. 30.— The recent dinner at the Soviet Embassy given by the new Ambassador Rakowsky to Premier Aristide Briand, is estimated to have cost more than $200 a plate. The rarest of old wines, caviar from the Danube and pheasant that had been brought by airplane from Scottish moors and was served flanked with baby squabs, were some of the details of the menu. It looked as if the Czar's Ambassador and not the representative of the Russian people was entertaining at the Embassy mansion on the rue de Grenelle.

Police lines were formed to keep the entrance clear so that the limousines of the guests could enter and leave without difficulty.

DAIREN, Manchuria.—(United Press.)—Japanese schoolboy English is by no means limited to the humorists of California.

Following is a verbatim quotation from the Manchuria Daily News, which prints an advertisement of a new cabaret, the "Pompeia."

After announcing that this cabaret has a first class bar and restaurant with a "new programme, to-night-to-night," a "Ladies' String Orchestra," and a "Japanese Song" by "miss Katty," the advertisement continues:

ARTS AND CRAFTS SHOWN BY WOMEN

Art Association Exhibit at Conservatory Was Much Appreciated.

An exceptionally interesting exhibition of "Arts and Crafts" in work done by members of the society, was held in the studio at the Conservatory of Music on Saturday afternoon, by the Women's Art Association.

There was a good attendance and the showing of work of various types met with much appreciation from those present. This type of exhibit is exceptionally interesting on account of its demonstration of individual progress in the fine arts, which the Women's Art Association is primarily interested in, and should serve as an opening for a series of such showings.

Mrs. J. E. R. Munro gave a brief introductory talk, explaining the idea behind the exhibit as being an encouragement to the members to continue with such demonstrations of their work, and Mrs. A. Palmer spoke about a visit made by her, in company with about seven hundred other nurses, to Marlborough House, in 1890, where they were received by Queen Alexandra. Mrs. Palmer also showed a certificate of the National Pension Fund for Nurses, signed by the late Queen Mother.

During the afternoon tea was served, the table prettily centred with large bronze 'mums and lighted candles. Tea was poured by Mrs. K. S. Wightman and Miss A. Lancaster, assisted by the Misses Linden Hall, M. Harstone, L. McClelland and Mary Comstock. The musical programme included two piano selections, by Miss Kathleen Sutton of Millbrook, who played "La Filieuse" and Schubert's "Impromptu," and vocal numbers by Miss Geraldine Collins, "The Spirit Flower," and "Deep River," with accompaniment by Miss Agnes Logan.

The exhibition of members' work included a variety of pretty things. The loom of the Weaving Club was on one of the tables, surrounded by pretty homespun things done by several of the members, with examples of the handicraft of Mrs. K. S. Wightman. Mrs. J. H. Vernor, the late Mrs. J. B. Mann and Mrs. Pretty, who also had on view two beautifully worked linen pieces and an embroidered tea cosy. An exquisitely done tray cloth and serviettes were shown by Miss A. Lancaster.

The showing of hand-painted china was exceptionally interesting. Arranged in cabinets and in a large glass-covered case, it attracted much favorable comment. Mr. J. E. R. Munro, Mrs. T. Cruikshank and Mrs. P. L. Allison had some very pretty things in lustres and conventional designs, Mrs. Munro showing also a few pieces of soft enamel work in Japanese Satsuma wear. Miss Mayme Montgomery exhibited a quantity of dainty pieces in Dutch blue, with Holland boys and girls on plates and cups.

Miss Mamie McCarthy had some lovely things in delicate china painting, her exhibit including a peacock plate in intricate design, charming small peppers and salts, a couple of tiny miniatures done on china and a pair of exquisite painted scarfs on in palest pinw, the other a green and gold conventional piece in brown silk.

The water-color pictures shown were done by Mrs. Palmer, Mrs. Cruikshank, Mrs. Munro and Miss Cameron Edwards Mrs. Cruikshank also exhibited several interesting hand-painted lamp shades, one pretty example having pink cupids against a black ground, done on silk bolting cloth. Much interest was also taken in Miss Edwards' pretty pieces in metal and her lovely wood carving.

May Contest Speaker.

The effect of the Prime Minister's statement is that on January 7 the Commons will proceed with the election of the speaker and if this is accomplished, the Speech from the Throne will be read at the offical opening on the following day. It is barely possible that the Government might be challenged on the election of the Speaker in which case the official ceremonies would have to be postponed until the debate was ended and a decision reached. To date there has been no indication of any contest with regard to the speakership The Government has made no announcement but it is generally assumed that Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Speaker of the Commons in the last Parliament will again be proposed by the Government. Mr. Lemieux is abroad at the present time but will sail for Canada shortly.

FARM NEWS AND PROBLEMS

SUCCESS IN CHEESE INDUSTRY DEPENDS ON KNOWLEDGE AND SKILL OF THE CHEESEMAKERS

Official Grader Addresses Makers of Central Ontario District on Work.

TECHNICAL WORK

Efforts for Improvement Must Take Maker Into Consideration.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 1.—At the banquet tendered the cheesemakers of Central Ontario at the Queen's Hotel in Belleville recently by the officers of the Dairymen's Co-operative, the men who turn out the finished product from the factories listened to some practical advice on how to raise the standard of their work and at the same time better their own positions, James L. Irwin, official grader, whose home is in Campbellford, spoke directly to the makers whom he regards as the main factor in the cheese industry as success depends upon their work to so large an extent. Mr. Irwin's address which made a deep impression upon his audience, was as follows:

Dairying at present is a more or less specialized industry, especially the manufacturing end of the business. It requires a high order of ability and considerable technical and scientific knowledge to enable the maker to produce the highest quality of finished product at a minimum of cost.

The question of quality and maximum yield from the milk handled may be discussed from various angles but I wish to draw your attention more particularly to the makers' point of view. Without a doubt the maker is at once the weak and the strong link in the chain of successful dairying and any effort to make improvement which does not take into consideration the welfare and interests of the maker is bound to fall short of the objects aimed at.

Conditions Unsatisfactory.

It is doubtful if in the past this aspect of the question has not been given sufficient thought and study. One would naturally expect from the intensity of effort by the way of the large number of dairy instructors employed in the field, the facilities provided at the dairy schools at Kingston and Guelph and the many other features of an educational character employed, such as district dairy meetings, dairymen's conventions, etc., that upwards of 20 years after we should have eliminated every possible defect imaginable and that to-day we should be reaping the benefits of all these years of labor. On the contrary there is evidence in abundance that conditions are far from satisfactory.

Something must be radically wrong somewhere, some vital factor overlooked, otherwise conditions would be very much better than they are. Now, the problem facing the dairyman today is to find that vital factor and the weak part of the machine which prevents it performing its proper function.

If we examine conditions under which cheesemakers work and the schemes offered and suggested for improvement we will find that the protection and welfare of the cheesemaker have been entirely overlooked. The cheesemaker is the man who occupies the most strategic position for bringing about improvement. This is an outstanding fact and the evidence can be readily produced within 20 miles of where we now sit. He knows, or should know, whether conditions in the factory are suitable to enable him to produce a high quality of cheese as he is the man who makes the cheese. He is the one who is directly responsible for its quality. Why is it then that these men have allowed conditions to get into such an unsatisfactory state? Why so many second and third grade cheese? Why so many untidy and ill-kept factories with their unsanitary surroundings?

His Position Isolated.

The cheesemaker occupies a more or less isolated position. He has to work from early Monday morning until late Saturday night and in some cases on Sunday. He cannot very well meet his fellow-makers and, as a matter of fact, there has been a feeling of antagonism that adds to the difficulty. Until recently he has been compelled to sign a cast iron agreement guaranteeing the quality of the cheese or pay the difference. In many cases, owing to the fluctuating of the market, he has had to pay for losses over which he had no control. He has had to meet the competition of inferior qualified men in securing a position with the total result that the better class of men are gradually dropping out.

Cheese making at the present time does not offer inducements to the better type of men to make it their life work. There has been nothing to create a spirit of pride and emulation, no class consciousness of superior ability. "Any dub is good enough to make cheese provided he will work cheap enough," seems to be the idea. Is it not a fact that practically every maker here to-night has very little idea as to where or what factory he will be manager of another season? If some other maker comes along (there are exceptions, of course), he will have to move on.

Some Legislation.

An Act was passed by the Legislature some years ago requiring that no one should be permitted to take charge of a factory unless he held a dairy school diploma. This Act came into effect in 1910. To all intents and purposes it has been a dead letter. Of the 690 cheese factories in Eastern Ontario less than 200 are managed by men having dairy school training. Of these 137 hold permits for one year, nearly 120 hold no qualifications and the balance have permanent certificates. I would not have you take from this that all cheesemakers who hold diplomas are turning out 100 per number one cheese or better, for I have in mind one or two cases where the direct opposite applies. It is the man, not the system, and the same applies to our doctors, lawyers and [illegible] of whom are not 100 per cent. efficient

Make It a Profession.

For a number of years at nearly every meeting where cheese makers assemble this question has been discussed, various suggestions have been made and abandoned. At the present time a movement is on foot to evolve some plan of procedure which would have for its object the placing of cheese making on a professional basis which would be controlled by the cheese makers themselves and which would give permanency and security to those engaged in the work. There a good many reasons why cheesemakers should be constituted into a legally incorporated body. They are virtually the only class that have no standing in the community and for that reason they are not in a position to demand their just rights. They have been the under dog for years and for that reason have had to stand the brunt and stress of all the storms without having any part as individuals or as a body in impressing even the most elemental conditions necessary for the performance of their task.

The veterinary, the dentist and a large number of other so-called professions are given the right to determine who may become members of their various organizations and to fix a minimum fee for services performed.

A Leading Industry.

Has there ever been any legislature enacted or introduced wherein the cheesemaker has been consulted as an individual or as a body? And yet in the face of this the annual output of Canadian cheese exceeds forty million dollars. It is one of the largest of our Canadian industries and we all admit that the maker is at least 99 per cent. of the success of the business. Why should not the cheesemaker be recognized and placed on a par with the other professions?

The Ideal Home Orchard

Large yields, good shipping quality, and attractiveness in appearance all may be made secondary to high dessert quality or special excellence for cooking purposes

POULTRY FAIR AT KINGSTON

Many Buyers Were Present From Many Points—Good Prices.

TONS OF FOWL SOLD.

KINGSTON, Dec. 1 (Special).—The two-day poultry fair held here under the auspices of the Board of Trade was very largely attended and buyers were present from many points. It is estimated that in all thirty tons of poultry were disposed of. The prevailing prices were as follows: Turkeys, 35 to 40 cents; geese, 20 to 25 cents; ducks, 25 to 30 cents; chickens, 25 to 30 cents.

MANY MOTOR CARS ON DOURO FARMS

Automobiles Have Proved Their Usefulness to the Farmers.

DOURO, Dec. 1.—Is the purchase of motor cars a sign of prosperity? Many people will answer in the affirmative. If the answer is affirmative, Douro is prosperous. To no class of people is a motor car more useful than to a farmer in the saving of time in getting to the city, to the market, to the local store, etc.

The first motor cars in the township were purchased some ten years ago and now some sixty or seventy farmers in the eastern and middle sections of the township and in the adjacent portions of Otonabee, own motors.

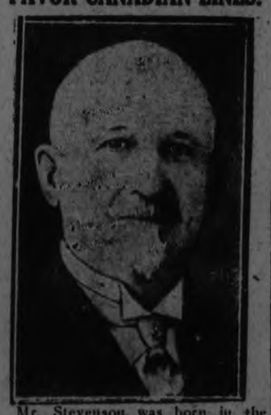
The following persons purchased cars this year: Messrs. Edward Allen (north), John Corkery, Michael Walsh, James Walsh, Michael Garvey, Michael Leahy, Joseph Leahy, Michael J. Leahy, John J. Leahy, Michael Regan, John D. Shea, John P. Condon, James Moher (south), Thomas Forsythe, Ridehar Sheehan (Sr), Richard Sheehan (Jr.), William O'Leary, and Miss Ellen Forsythe. Mr. Bart. Allen purchased a truck.

At least a half dozen have declared their intention of purchasing cars in the coming spring.

GREEN FEED FOR POULTRY.

Now that the poultry are off the range and no longer benefit the picking of fresh green feed at liberty, a substitute should be provided. Mangels, kale, cabbage and sprouted oats do very well to supply in part the very necessary vitamines A and D, so essential to proper nutrition. A little attention to a seemingly unimportant point frequently means the difference between success and failure with breeding stock. At the Ontario Agricultural College Poultry Department a liberal allowance of green feed or roughage containing the vital elements is always available to the stock. —L. Stevenson, Dept. of Extension, O. A. College, Guelph.

FAVOR CANADIAN LINES.



Mr. Stevenson was born in the Hon. H. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture in the dominion government, who has a plea to keep Canadian grain shipments from the west, for Canadian transportation lines, and Canadian ports. He would rush the completion of the Welland canal, and build transfer elevators at Prescott.

GOOD PRICES AT HOLSTEIN SALE

Cobourg District Breeders Received Up To $225 For Cattle.

MANY BUYERS THERE.

COBOURG, Dec. 1.—The sixth annual sale of the Cobourg District Holstein Breeders' Club attracted buyers and sellers from as far west as Guelph and from Campbellford, Madoc, Kingston, Whitby, Brighton, Colborne, Grafton, Castleton, Napanee, Port Hope, Coldsprings, Mountain, Roseneath, Belleville and other places. It was held at the spacious barns at Horse Show Park. Prices were very good and compared very favorably with those of the 1924 sale. Two of the highest priced animals brought $225 each, while $80 was about the lowest figure, excepting for yearlings. The stock was all in good condition, and there were some fine types that were certainly a credit to district breeders. Prices were is follows:

PLOUGHING HELD UP.

Temporary Freeze-up Delayed Work—Cheese Factories Closing.

BURNBRAE, Dec. 1. —Sheep-killing dogs have been at work in the Burnbrae district lately, and severe losses have been suffered by some flock-owners. Messrs. Jas. Nelson, Fred Hay, Wm. Wilson, Wm. Wright and H. C. Bedford have all lost sheep, the last-named farmer being the heaviest loser with three killed and five badly mangled out of a flock of thirty. Another flock containing forty sheep on another farm has so far escaped injury. Mr. Bedford discovered the dogs among his sheep Tuesday at one a.m. and succeeded in shooting one of the marauders. Messrs. Wilson and Wright have together lost six head, three being killed and the others so badly injured that they had to be killed. This district has been free of roving dogs for some time so that this attack was entirely unexpected. This township and the country at large pay out large sums of money every year for sheep killed by dogs. Much of this could be saved if all the stray mongrel dogs could be shot on sight by any farmer.

The temporary freeze-up has almost stopped ploughing, except in grassy sod. Farmers who have still a good deal to plow, are hoping for open weather, but the season is too far advanced to be sure of this.

Most of the cheese factories in the neighborhood will close this week or on Monday, the 30th. The fall has been a good one at the factories with little trouble from frozen pipes, etc., that usually besets the maker at this time of year.

THUMPS IN PIGS CAUSED BY WORM IN AIR PASSAGES

This Lung Disease is Usually Found in Young Pigs.

EGGS SWALLOWED.

The term "Thumps" is used by most farmers to describe a lung disease of pigs. There is a quickened breathing and rapid heart action. Many little pigs become unthrifty and others die as a result of the infestation. It is during the first few weeks of the pigs' life that the round worms do most of their particularly destructive work. Older pigs seem more resistant to the effect of worms.

Infestation.

The pens and yards in which brood sow and her young are kept are frequently well supplied with worm eggs, particularly so if they have been used by pigs for any length of time. The worm eggs lying on the floor or in the yard are picked up by the pigs, either while rooting or nursing. The sow's udder is frequently wet and in contact with the floor, thereby gathering the eggs, if present, on the teats, ready to be passed on to the little pig during the next feeding.

How the Worms Cause "Thumps."

Soon after the eggs are swallowed by the young pig they hatch if ripe, and the young worms are liberated in the stomach and intestines. These very minute young worms burrow into the wall of the bowel and reach the blood stream, eventually reaching the heart and lungs. This takes about twenty-four hours from time of hatching. Once the worms reach the lungs they grow and develop quietly for about a week, then they burrow their way into the large air passages. This causes an irritation, with coughing. The coughing brings up mucous and worms, which are swallowed by the pig. The worms pass on to the intestine, where they become attached and remain until they reach maturity. On maturity the females lay millions of eggs, which are passed from the intestine and eventually infest the yards and pens. The presence of the worms in the heart and lungs is responsible for the disordered breathing and heart action seen in the condition that we call "Thumps."

Prevention.

Cleanliness is the keynote in prevention of ascarid or round worm infestation. Get the sow and her family out on the green grass away from old buildings and pens if possible. If necessary to use pens scrub the floors with hot lye solution and clean up generally. See that the sow is clean outside and in. Arrange for the cleaning of the pen and a supply of clean straw every day. Sunshine and clean ground to range over are great aids to the prevention of "thumps."—L. Stevenson, O. A. College, Guelph.

MUCH PLOUGHING AND THRESHING YET UNFINISHED

Difficult to Secure a Machine in Some Parts of Cavan.

FEW POTATOES.

Some Farmers Will Have to Buy Some For Their Own Use.

CAVAN, Dec. 1.—The frost this week has again stopped ploughing. There still remains a lot to be ploughed.

Many farmers are not yet threshed out. It seems difficult in some districts to secure a machine without waiting a long time. Some farmers are drawing out wheat.

There does not seem to be much moving of potatoes. Many Cavan farmers have only enough for themselves, while others will have to buy for their own use.

Mr. S. S.Staples and Mr. Harold Cathcart, Springville, had an auction sale of stock last Friday afternoon. Everything sold at pretty good prices. There were about forty head of cattle. A grade Holstein brought the highest price, going at $102.

The hogs, about twenty-five in number, sold at average prices. The sheep, over twenty, sold well.

Four horses were also offered for sale and a flock of Wyandotte hens.

Mr. S. S. Staples auctioned the stuff

ENGLISH FARMS SUPPORT MANY MORE WORKERS

Forty People Living on 500 Acre Farm Is Not a Record.

ALL LAND IS USED.

Intensive Cultivation Is Necessary in Rural Sections.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—What Canadian farm of 500 acres is supporting 40 persons? Many English farms have a better record. The fact indicates something of the enormous population which might find employment upon the soil in Canada if ever intensive cultivation becomes necessary.

A report recently issued concerning agricultural production, has been given widespread attention on account of the success of one English farmer who undertook the reclamation of a piece of land supposed to be worthless because it was poorly drained. Like most of the land of England, it was the possession of a landlord, but he made little account of it save as a place for hunting. No crops were raised upon the land. Its sole productive use was pasturage for a herd of deer which once a year furnished sport for the owner and his friends. It gave employment to one or two gamekeepers.

The present cultivator took over the farm in 1907 on a lease. The first three years were regarded as no assurance that the farmer would make good or that the land could be cultivated profitably, since a large part of it consisted of marsh and moor.

Farm Reclaimed.

The difficulties seemed insuperable. The land lay in one great tract with no roads through it, and only one public road touching it at one point. The tenant has made his own means of approach. There was also a lack of suitable buildings, and these in part have been supplied.

Eighteen years have elapsed and this farm no longer is an experimental project. More than 300 acres have been reclaimed, and of these more than 150 are arable and the rest afford pasture.

The deer are gone, but in their place are about 115 head of young cattle and cattle fattening for market; 36 dairy cows of good type; 200 pigs, and 150 head of poultry. A good deal of use is made of the pigs as "cultivators." That is, root crops are sown upon the moist ground and the pigs do the cultivating with their noses.

The crops produced include oats, barley, turnips, mangolds and cabbages, but the main crop is potatoes. The land has been found to be particularly suited for the growth of potatoes and yields an average of 200 bushels to the acre, though as many as 400 bushels to the acre have been raised in especially favorable seasons.

Seed Potatoes.

Because of his advantages for raising this crop, the farmer has rather specialized in the raising of seed potatoes and finds a ready sale for all that he can produce. This year experiments were made with carrots with gratifying results. The dairy is producing quantities of Cheshire cheese of the Cheddar variety. The farmer estimates that the annual value of his produce is about $30,000.

This business has been built up from an initial investment of $5,000 which the farmer borrowed at a bank on security furnished by members of his amily. He believes that he could have succeeded more quickly and coud have accomplished more if he had been more adequately financed.

The system of farming in England is entirely different from that in Canada, and Canadian farmers who habitualy complain of lack of farm labor would hardly know how to undertake the management of a 500 acre farm on such a scale as that maintained by this English farmer. This reclaimed English farm employs 14 permanent farm hands, besides a dairy maid whose work is in the cheese factory. Five of the farm laborers are married. Three of these are provided with cottages. The married men, in addition to their regular wages, are furnished with potatoes for the use of themselves and families, and each cottage has a good garden attached. The regular rate of wages for farm laborers on this farm is 15 cents an hour, although this is a little higher than the regular wage in that community. The annual wage bill for the farm is nearly $5,000.

WINTER RATION FOR YOUNG PIGS

Substitute For Pasture Grass Is Needed to Prevent Rickets.

ALFALFA GOOD.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Considerable effort has been expended in attempts to discover suitable winter rations for young pigs. During the summer when pigs are at pasture, rickets and osteoporesis are quite rare occurrences. Pasture grass yields an abundance of all the recently studied vitamines, and so as part of the ration supplies the needs in metabolism and prevents the condition known as rickets. Winter pigs need a winter substitute for pasture or a feed that resembles green growing grass and can be fed in a practical way. This is best supplied by a leafy legume as well cured second crop alfalfa hay. If the leaves of the alfalfa are well preserved, and of a green color, then feed a quantity equal to five per cent. by weight of the grain ration. Minerals such as ground limestone, ground phosphate rock, and ground bone-meal should also be fed in total quantity not necessarily exceeding two per cent. of the total ration. The alfalfa and the minerals will be very efficient in preventing lameness, rickets and paralysis in winter pigs. —L. Stevenson, O. A. College, Guelph.

WHEN HORSE IS OVERCOME BY HEAT.

A horse that previously has been overcome with heat may fail to sweat in hot weather and be subject to recurrence of the attack. If sweating can be caused danger may be offset. Brisk massage of the skin helps, and blanketing may be tried. When a chill occurs a strong liniment rubbed in from ear to ear stimulates sweating and circulation of blood. It should not be applied before putting on a blanket. Some have had good results from copious drenches of warm tea containing ginger essence or tincture of the powdered root.

FOR EFFICIENCY'S SAKE.

While the average radio receiving set is more or less foolproof, constant use must necessarily bring about certain changes. First of all, there is the matter of dust and dirt—apparently insignificant, but really a factor that counts in achieving topnotch efficiency. Dust and dirt are apt to accumulate moisture, in which event serious leakage is introduced in the radio set with an accompaniment of troublesome noises. Especially is this true in the case of dust or dirt accumulating between the plates of the variable condenser. For dusting the radio receiver, a soft brush, preferably camel's hair, should be used, of such size as to permit of getting into the right places and corners. A pipe cleaner will do very nicely for cleaning in between the variable condenser plates.

MINERAL MIXTURE.

The following mineral mixture is used in the swine feeding at the Ontario Agricultural College. It is giving good satisfaction:—

4 bushels Charcoal or Hardwood Ashes.
8 pounds Salt.
2 quarts Air Slaked Lime.
1 pound Sulphur.
10 pounds of Bone Meal.

This preparation is kept in a suitable box in each pen where it may be taken by the swien at will.

Says Dr. McCollum, the great specialist on human nutrition: "Milk is the great factor of safety in making good the deficiencies of the grains which form and must continue to form the principal source of energy in our diet. Without the continued use of milk not only for feeding our children but in liberal amounts in our cookery we cannot as a nation maintain the position as a world power to which we have arisen."

Buttermilk For Chicks

Chicks fed buttermilk until they are 48 to 72 hours old will give them a better send-off than water alone. When the chicks are first placed in the brooder they should be given all the fresh buttermilk they care for. It is better than water because it gives the chicks more strength and allows the digestive system to get in better working order.

THE LAYING HEN IS HEALTHY HEN

Hen Will Not Lay Unless in Good Condition and Full of Vigor.

TELL BY PLUMAGE.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

A hen will not lay if not in good condition. She should be healthy, free from any disease, and show plenty of vigor and activity. The first pullet to lay in the fall is the early maturing one. The hen which is a slow grower, is slow in feathering out, is also a slow layer.

The Moult is Important.

As soon as a hen goes into a moult she uses her feed to manufacture feathers, and her egg production falls generally to a minimum of nothing. It is easily noticed that some hens go into a moult much earlier than others. If a hen starts to moult in July her laying for the summer is about over. So we say that late moulting and heavy egg production go together, because it gives the hen a longer summer period and still she is back in form in time for winter production. So says Prof. W. R. Graham, Ontario Agricultural College.

Laying Hen and Her Plumage.

If a hen is laying heavily the plumage will become dry, hard and brittle. The lustre will disappear and the feathers become broken. The hen certainly loses much of her natural beauty but she cannot retain that bright lustre and also keep up heavy production. Watch for the old lady with the full array of feathers, all in good form, and see if she is not one of the boarders in your flock.

How to Know a Laying Hen.

The question is often asked, "Can you tell whether or not a hen is laying?" This is very easy, and requires but a few observations. When a hen commences laying the conditions set up in the reproductive organs are very similar to conditions in any pregnant animal. Preparation is made for laying, much as for parturition in a cow.

When the ovary is dormant and no eggs are being produced the distance between the pelvic bones is very small. The vent is dry, small, puckered, and in yellow-fleshed chickens has a decided band of yellow pigment around the inside. When laying commences the pelvic bones become pliable and spread apart. The distance may increase from one to three fingers in a short time. The vent becomes large and moist, and after two or three eggs have been laid the ring of yellow pigment has disappeared and the vent is bleached.

How to Obtain High Egg Production.

The requirements for high egg production, says Prof. W. R. Graham, of the Ontario Agricultural College, are clean, dry, comfortable houses, that re free from direct draughts over the birds, and that are well-lighted. The feeding consists of a variety of grains, green feed, animal feed, grit and shell which is clean, sweet and wholesome, and is given to the birds regularly and in such quantities that they have all they want to eat before going to roost at night; that the supply of drinking material is clean and abundant; that the attendant is regular in his or her work and is interested in the same; that the birds are bred from good laying ancestors, and that they are hatched at the proper season and well reared, and are free from disease.

When Eggs Are Worth Most.

A study of the distribution of the egg production is interesting and important from the point of the annual returns from the birds. Egg prices rise and fall with the seasons and usually the greatest profit is made where eggs are produced at a season or seasons of the year when prices are high. Pullets are the chief source of egg supply. They require usually from six to seven months in which to mature. It is, therefore, possible to regulate their production in the fall months at least to some extent by regulating the time they will hatch in the spring. The main source of eggs produced during October and November is the March-hatched pullet. By December the May hatched pullets are out for a reputation.

VARIETIES OF FALL TURNIPS

There is a limited acreage of fall turnips grown in Ontario each year. Roots of this class usually yield more per acre than the Swede turnips, but they do not keep so late into the winter. Other named for fall turnips are Soft turnips and White Flesh turnips.

Two varieties of fall turnips have been grown under test at the College in each of the past seventeen years, and the following gives the average annual results in tons per acre of tops and of roots for each of the varieties: Red Top White Globe, 4.0 and 26.3, and Cow Horn, 5.7 and 19.7. In 1913, the Red Top White Globe gave 21.2 and the Cow Horn 16.5 tons of roots per acre. In comparison with these in the test of the past year the Sutton's Purple Top Mammoth gave 20.8, the Sutton's Imperial Green Globe, 18.8, and Kelway's Green Globe, 16 tons per acre.

GARNET WHEAT, NEW DISCOVERY, PROMISES TO REVOLUTIONIZE WEST WHEAT GROWING INDUSTRY

New Wheat Has Been Evolved From "Saunders' Crosses."

RIPENS EARLY

Only Present Objection is Slight Yellowness of Flour.

REGINA, Sask., Dec. 1 (Canadian Press).—Garnet wheat, the new discovery announced by L. H. Newman dominion cerealist at Ottawa, which promises to revolutionize the wheat growing industry of Western Canada, has been evolved from "Saunders" crosses. Dr. Charles F. Saunders, former dominion cerealist, had thousands of wheat crosses when he left his work to Mr. Newman, and from these, the new cerealist has announced that he has evolved a wheat which ripens from seven to twelve days earlier than Marquis. Dr. Saunders was the discoverer of the latter variety.

Mr. Newman is also experimenting with another new wheat called "Reward" but it is not yet ready for distribution. If final tests prove successful a limited quantity of Garnet will be distributed to Western farmers next spring.

The parents of Garnet wheat were a high quality taken from the Riga district in Russia and Preston wheat, one of the Saunders wheats. Preston was at one time grown rather extensively in Western Canada as it is a very early wheat of high milling quality, but it is bearded and shatters easily, and while still grown in a few districts, the yield is generally light. In the new wheat the good qualities of both parents appear to predominate. Red Fife, one of the parents of Marquis wheat, is now known to have come from the Riga district, so that Garnet comes from a select family tree.

The only blemish on Garnet's record so far as has been revealed is the color of its flour, which is slightly yellowish, and the wheat consuming countries have constantly demanded flour that will make the whitest bread possible. It is probable, however, that some strain of Garnet may be discovered which does not have the objectionable shade of color.

Mr. Newman in an official report says:

"Like its Preston parent, Garnet appears to be able to thrive under relatively dry conditions better than do most other varieties of common wheat. It matures from a week to eleven or twelve days ahead of Marquis, depending on the locality and the nature of the season. In production Garnet ranks among the good yielders. Where early-maturing sorts are an advantage or where a certain type of drought prevails, this variety may excel even Marquis in yield. It is not expected, however, that Garnet will take the place of the latter variety, where this is well suited to prevailing conditions. Rather is Garnet likely to take the place of such early-maturing sorts as Ruby, which variety it usually out-yields by a fair margin. It may also prove a special value in some of the drier areas. Observations recorded to date indicate that Garnet is quite susceptible to stem rust. It may often escape a late epidemic of this pest by reason of its early-maturing qualities.

"In quality for bread making, this variety appears to rank among the better varieties. The question of quality will be investigated further during the winter months.

"Reward, is the result of a cross between Marquis and the very early-maturing variety of 'Prelude.' It matures as a rule from two to four days later than Garnet, although in some places the two varieties have matured practically on the same date. This variety is noted for its very strong straw and its fine appearing grain. It produces an excellent quality and color of flour. The grain is also remarkably uniform in size, a point of considerable importance to the seed grower.

"While by no means rust resistant, it nevertheless seems less susceptible to rust than Marquis."

Farm Notes

A BIG CROP.

MADOC, Dec. 1.—That Mr. John Smith of Madoc is one of the most successful farmers of the district is readily shown by his achievements this year. From a farm of 93 acres he had a yield of 2,360 bushels of wheat and oats, a large crop of hay, 2,400 bushels of turnips and summered 25 head of cattle.

LONG THRESHING SEASON.

DOURO, Dec. 1.—Mr. M. Coughlin reports twenty threshing jobs yet to do. He has been running steadily since August and so will have had a very long season.

Most grain has threshed well, buckwheat being rather light in many cases.

Most people report a light potato crop; a few had a good crop and some almost a complete failure. Most farmers have enough for their own use, but no surplus.

Milk production is decreasing rapidly; egg production is at a low ebb.

Many local people have been annoyed with water in their cellars.

The farmer who keeps plenty of stock is the man whose crops will stand a drought the best. It takes a dry year to show the benefits derived from liberal applications of stable manure.

Mining Shares Weaker Kirkland Lake's Big Drop

TORONTO, Dec. 1.— (Canadian Press.) — The majority of issues were weak on the Standard Mining Exchange this morning, but about the largest decline on the board was the two and a half point drop of Kirkland Lake, in light dealings. The volume of trading was moderately heavy, with Goldale continuing the leader and some activity developing in Atlas, which sold down a quarter at two. Goldale eased to 34, a half point lower, and Consolidated West Dome, Beaver, Castle Tretheway, and Canadian Lorrain were all slightly easier. Larose advanced two at 37 1-2.

Wheat Prices Soared Fast On Reports From Abroad

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press.)—Wheat prices scored a lively fresh advance to-day, jumping upward as soon as the trading began. Hot, muggy weather in Argentina, likely to increase crop damage, tended to stimulate buying and so, too, did soaring values at Liverpool, where the May delivery showed an overnight rise of 5 1-8 pence. With a majority of the commission houses purchasing, the market here quickly developed into a big broad affair, but encountered heavy profit taking sales on the bulge in values. Initial quotations, 1-2 to 1 7-8c. higher, new style, December 166 7-8 to 167 1-4 and May 163 to 163 3-4, were followed by an ascent to 168 3-4 for December and $1.64 3-4 for May.

Corn and oats derived firmness from wheat. After opening unchanged to 1-2c. higher, May 79 3-4 to 79 7-8c., the corn market underwent a moderate sag and then rallied.

Oats started at a shade to 1-4 and 3-8c. up, May 42 7-8, and later hardened a little more.

Despite the decline in hog values, provisions were responsive to the upward trend of grain.

Stock Prices Go Higher On New York Exchange

NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (Canadian Press). — Stock prices gathered strength as trading progressed in today's market. Early irregularity disappeared when pool operations were resumed in a number of rails and specialties, which gives promise of favorable dividend or merger developments in the near future.

The high call money rates apparently were regarded as temporary, and failed to halt the buying movement. Buying of rails received a stimulus from the unusually favorable showing made by Class One carriers in October, new peak prices for a year or longer being attained by Wheeling and Lake Erie Common and Preferred, Chesapeake and Ohio Preferred, Atlantic Coast Line, New Haven, and Western Pacific. Oils responded to stiffening crude oil and gasoline prices. The buoyancy of high-priced industrial specialties revived discussion of capital split ups. Nash Motors soaded 14 points, American Can extended its gain to 7 1-2, Woolworth, McCroy Stores B, and Sloss Sheffield Steel sold 7 points higher, and Mining and Smelting Preferred 6.

Toronto Market Held Firm Trade Decreased In Volume

TORONTO, Dec. 1. (Canadian Press).—The market held firm on the Stock Exchange to-day, with trading decreasing in volume and Twin City assuming the leadership of the general list. Atlantic Sugar and Smelters in a lesser degree were also active. Atlantic Sugar was marked up a point and a half at 33½; Twin City three-eights at 74 7-8, and Smelters, after opening strong, closed the morning a half point lower at 152. Canadian Bakeries' advance of five-eighths and the one point gain of F. N. Burt were prominent gains. Winnipeg, Mackay Preferred and Canadian Canners Preferred were also strong.

MEETING BRIAND.

LONDON, December 1. Canadian Press. — An important conference was to be held this afternoon between Premier Briand of France and Chancellor Luther, and Foreign Minister Stresemann of Germany, at which it was stated consideration would be given to requests which Germany feels she is entitled to make in view of the signing of the Locarno security treaty.

Much secrecy surrounded the meeting prior to its holding but it is reported that one of the principal German requests is for an extension of German rights in the field of civil aviation which are restricted by the treaty of ersailles.

PETERBORO' RINK COMPANY MEETING

S. J. Sheehy Was Elected President at Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Arena Rink Company was held Monday evening, the Vice-President, Mr. S. J. Sheehy, occupied the chair.

The auditor's report was read, and the election of officers resulted as follows:

President, Mr. S. J. Sheehy.
Vice-President, Mr. A. J. Warne.
Secretary-Treasurer, R. M. Glover.

STRIKE ULTIMATUM.

VIENNA, Dec. 1 (Canadian Press)—The Postal, Telegraph and Telephone Employes Union has handed to the government a strike ultimatum which expires Thursday at midnight. The employes are dissatisfied with the percentage of the profits from the services they receive over and above their salary and demand that the rate be increased.

AT KINGSTON.

KINGSTON, Dec. 1 (Canadian Press). — At nomination yesterday the following were nominated for the mayoralty: Mayor T. B. Angrove, Ald. F. J. O'Connor and Ald. Joseph Nash. Those named for the utilities commissioner were: Commissioners James Harris and H. W. Newman, and James Halliday, reeve of Portsmouth.

Thirty-seven candidates for aldermanic positions were nominated in the seven city wards at noon while in six wards school trustees were returned by acclamation, Messrs. C. Anglin, Allan Lemmon, J. G. Elliott, H. Moore, R. Baldwin, and J. W. Jones being returned to the board of education unopposed.

AT LINDSAY

(Special to The Examiner)

LINDSAY, Dec. 1—Nominations for the municipal council took place here last night. The attendance of citizens was not as large as in past years, while the grist of candidates for the different offices showed quite a falling off when compared to past nominations when as high as eighty names were placed in nomination. Fifty-three candidates were nominated, and it looks as if the election next Monday will be a spirited one. Thos. Wilkinson, who declared himself a candidate for the Mayoralty some weeks ago, following Mayor Graham's announcement that he would not stand in the way of any member of the council who desired to advance, signed his qualification paper at the close of the nomination meeting. He gets the office by acclamation, although a move is under way to try and secure a third term for Mayor Graham. Reeve O'Reilly, the veteran member of the council, will be elected by acclamation, but there promises to be a contest for the deputy-reeevships, some half dozen being nominated for these offices. There are over twenty nominations for aldermen with six only to be elected. Messrs. W. J. Carlisle and Jas. Peel were elected school trustees by acclamation, but in the south ward there are three in the field for the school board, and also two in the field for Water Commissioner

Those nominated have until nine o'clock this evening to declare their intentions.

At the meeting Hydro matters were referred to and a protest entered against the practice of diverting the surplus from the local plant for the purpose of maintaining a street railway in Peterboro.

Viscount Jellicoe Outlines Scheme of Building and Contribution.

FOUR CRUISERS.

LONDON, Dec. 1 (Canadian Press).— Viscount Jellicoe suggests that Canada should contribute £7,200,000 ($36,000,000) a year for the next few years towards the cost of the Imperial navy and should provide a squadron of four cruisers within the next four years at an annual cost of approximately £2,000,000 ($10,000,000) during the four-year period of construction. He also suggests a cruiser in reserve. He estimates the cost of maintenance of the four cruisers at approximately £858,000 ($4,290,000).

FORGER HELD.

CALGARY, Dec. 1 (Canadian Press)—Positively identified by two bank clerks as the man who passed a forged grain cheque in the Imperial Bank of Canada last Saturday morning and received $1,287 in cash Ellsword Green, aged 30 years, a harvest hand from Toronto, is under arrest at city police headquarters and is being held on charges of forgery and fraud.

TO GIVE JUDGMENT ON DECEMBER 15TH

Fontaine Appeal Heard By His Honor Judge McGlade, of Cobourg.

Judgment was deferred until the fifteenth of December on the hearing of the appeal case, Newhall versus Fontaine, wherein the latter was charged with selling liquor, and which took place this morning in the judge's chambers before His Honor Judge McGlade of Cobourg. J. A. O'Brien acted for the appellant and Joseph Wearing, city solicitor, for the prosecution.

Mr. O'Brien, after an exhaustive study and presentation of the evidence, asked that the judgment of the Magistrate be rescinded on the grounds that a doubt existed concerning the guilt of the accused. Mr. Wearing's contention was that the evidence was of a prima facia character, demanding specific proof from the defence.

Mr. O'Brien, in his address to the judge, submitted the evidence and a number of cases which were on the Provincial records, contending that certain decisions made in similar cases should be considered in giving judgment. He pointed out that Fontaine was an employee of Jones in the capacity of groom for a number of race horses; that the stable was sequestered from the rest of the building by a certain type of door which closed automatically, sliding on rollers. Two bottles which had been produced as evidence had not been found on the persons of Clancy or Slattery, and there had been no definite proof that they were actually the bottles which had caused the intoxication of the two youths. Leo Fontaine, when in the witness box, swore that he had never seen the boys on the night when he was alleged to have sold them the liquor. The evidence given by two other men who were in the stable would indicate that Fontaine had never left the stable on that evening until after nine o'clock, when all went home.

Mr. Wearing enumerated a number of cases from the law reports in which judges had taken the evidence of informants as prima facia. He said that the Magistrate had listened carefully to all witnesses, and was so inclined as to make a conviction and impose a heavy fine. Mr. Wearing declared that the evidence of Slattery substantiated that of Clancy. He further stated that three weeks elapsed before the court hearing, and in that time the other stable hands would become slightly hazy in their recollections as to the movements of the accused.

Mr. O'Brien interpolated here the fact that the men had appeared in court within a few days after the arrest and had told substantially the same story as they had related at the trial two weeks later. That was recorded in the evidence, Mr. O'Brien declared.

His Honor the Judge decided that he would pronounce his judgment on his next visit here, December 15.

BANDITS SHELLED BY FRENCH TROOPS

Two Hundred Repulsed From Gates of Damascus—Village Bombarded.

BEIRUT, Dec. 1.—(United Press).—Artillery bombardment of the Druses in Hahbeiya commenced today from the Heights of Merdjeyoun.

Two hundred bandits who attempted to storm the posts southeast of the gates of Damascus were repulsed.

Reports reaching here say that 18 villagers of Ilka and three Druse soldiers were killed when the French bombarded the town in retaliation for Druse capture thereof. Heavy fighting is reported along the Syrian Trans-Jordanian frontier.

ONE MILE AND THREE QUARTERS OF WHITE FLANNELETTE

It sounds too good to be true, but come early Wednesday morning and you will find it a very real fact.

19c The Yard

It's the same quality as the regular 29c cloth and is in the 34-35-inch width.

There are dozen of bolts of this Pure White Flannelette. The cloth is a good firm one. We were able to buy a large quantity from a maker-up who was heavily overstocked. He was anxious to get the money. We bought the goods at such a low price that we can save you 10c on every yard you buy from us on Wednesday.

If you would like to give your friends some useful gifts this Christmas, get some of this to make up into night-gowns, child's sleepers, underwear, etc.

Although we have such a quantity, don't leave your buying until too late. Come early and save disappointment.

On Sale Wednesday Morning at 8.30 o'clock

Only retail customers will be served. We cannot sell any of this to other dealers.

If You Don't See These Sweaters For Men You Won't Believe Us.

when we say we are selling you garments that would usually cost you at least $5.00 at such a low price as $2.00

Men's All Wool Coat Style Sweaters at - - $2.95

Of course, there's always a reason behind such bargains as these. The Coats were all bought at a clearing price straight from the manufacturer. They are all in a good fawn color and have long sleeves, two or four pockets and button fronts. Some are seconds, some are overmakes. Sizes from 34 to 44.

A Man's Heavy All-Wool Sweater at . - - $1.49

This line is here in two styles—both coat styles—but one has a small collar, the other being collarless. All are in a serviceable shade of greyish heather, all have two pockets and are buttoned with smoked pearl buttons to match shade of the garments. Sizes from 34 to 44.

OMEMEE U.F.O. CLUB MEETING

Annual Meeting Was Held, Reports Received and Officers Elected.

U.F.W.O. MEETING.

OMEMEE, Dec. 1.—The annual meeting of the Omemee Farmers' Club was held in the club rooms on Tuesday evening, November 24, with a large attendance of members and visitors present.

A. A. Knight, the agricultural representative from Lindsay, gave a very instructive and entertaining series of moving pictures, lasting from 7.30 until 8.30 o'clock. The president, R. H. Johnston, then took the chair.

Reports of the past year's business was received as follows:

From David Weir, the secretary, showing a business done of $3,696.55, with a net profit to the club of $35.25.

S. D. Vaughan gave a report of the shipping showing the total number of hogs from Omemee, 2,948; Downeyville, 552; Reaboro, 659; making a total of 4,159, the value of which was $98,454.54.

Increase in number of hogs, 134. Number of selects, 1,048. Increase in in value, $31,371.76, or about 25 per cent. Average price per hog in 1923 was $21.68; in 1924, $16.66, and in 1925, $23.40.

Number of cattle shipped—From Omemee, 387; Downeyville, 38; and Reaboro, 59.

Number of Calves—From Omemee, 651; Downeyville, 27; and Reaboro 74.

The total value was $38,261.51, which was an increase over last year.

Harry Deyell reported on behalf of the auditors, that they had audited the books of the secretary, shipper and treasurer, and found them correct.

The president, having declared all the offices vacant, vacated the chair, and C. E. Mitchell was appointed chairman during the election of officers for the ensuing year, which resulted as follows:

President—W. C. Veals.
Vice-President Arthur Rutherford.
Secretary—W. R. Robinson.
Treasurer—W. M. Brown.
Directors—Geo. Henderson, Herman Franks, Hubert Gardiner, C. E. Mitchell, D. H. Dick, and T. A. McConnell.
Auditors—Harry Deyell and David Weir.
Shipping Committee—Charles Rutherford, R. H. Johnston, Vincent Franks, and Joseph Bradley.

The directors were, on motion, instructed to have charge of the scales and select a weighmaster.

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Knight for his entertainment provided through the moving pictures, also to the scales committee for its labors in installing the new Fairbanks-Morse 5-ton stock scale, and one of the best annual meetings in years was brought to a close.

U.F.W.O. Meeting.

The U.F.W.O. met on Tuesday evening, for their annual meeting. Last year's officers were re-elected as follows: President, Mrs. F. G. Sandy; Secretary, Mrs. W. Brown; Treasurer, Mrs. R. H. Johnston; and it was unanimously decided not only to continue as a society, but to put more vim into the meetings, and thereby gain more members.

ONE TENDER FOR TAKING GARBAGE

Anglesey and Withers Quote Price of $8,800 For Doing Work.

NO TOBOGGAN SLIDE.

Only one tender, that of Messrs. Anglesey and Withers, was received for the collection of garbage in the City for 1926, and this, amounting to $8,800, the same as for 1925, was accepted by the Property Committee at a short session last night. Some discussion arose as to the legality of garbage men giving part of the garbage to pig raisers for feed. A tender had been expected from a man who proposed to use table scraps and other such garbage for feeding pigs, but it was not forthcoming.

The Parks Committee also met last night. The main item of business was that connected with the skating rinks and toboggan slides. The Chairman, Alderman Turner, announced that the committee had not enough money left to construct the proposed toboggan slide at Jackson park, and it was decided to erect the slide at James Stevenson park again this year. Seventeen applications for positions as caretakers of the free skating rinks were received and were referred to the Chairman, the Mayor, and Alderman Phelan.

SIGNALS CHOSEN BY COMMISSION

Crouse Hindes Suspended Type For Charlotte Street —Pedestal Signal at Hunter Street.

CAR OUT OF ORDER.

At a meeting of the Police Commission it was decided to recommend to the Council that a signal system be placed in operation on trial at the corners of George and Charlotte and George and Hunter Streets.

At the corner of George and Charlotte it was decided that a suspended four-way type, as made by the Crouse Hindes Co., would be suitable, and that a standard base signal from the Gas Accumulator Company be placed at Hunter and George.

The Chief reported that one of his men, Constable Matthews, was ill with a severe attack of appendicitus, and asked for another man to take his place temporarily. This wish was granted.

The Chief also reported that the Studebaker car which had been purchased from the Brewer Motor Sales had fallen down badly of late. His Worship Mayor Turner and Chief Newhall were appointed as a committee to arrange for another car.

LIBERALS WON THREE RIDINGS

One Quebec By-election Was Won By Conservative Candidate.

NO CHANGE IN HOUSE.

MONTREAL, Dec. 1. (Canadian Press).—Liberal candidates, who are supporters of the Government of Premier Taschereau, were successful in three out of the four Provincial by-elections held yesterday.

This leaves the Taschereau Government in exactly the same position numerically as before the elections, with 64 supporters in the Legislature, against a Conservative opposition of 21. The Liberals won one seat from the Conservatives—Jacquest Cartier.

They lost Argenteuil and held the seats of Champlain and Berthier.

Incomplete results are as follows:

Jacques Cartier—Victor Marchand, Liberal, 350 majority.

Berthier—A. Sylvester, Liberal, 233 majority.

Champlain—W. P. Grant, Liberal, 593 majority.

Argenteuil—J. L. St. Jacques, Conservative, 400 majority.

LOCARNO PACTS SIGNED TO-DAY

Greatest Voluntary Peace Move in the History of the World.

SEVEN NATIONS.

LONDON, Dec. 1. — (United Press).—The Locarno security pacts were signed to-day. Statesmen of seven nations, assembled in a reception room of the Foreign Office, affixed their names to a series of documents binding Western Europe to keep the peace.

The signing ceremony constituted the greatest voluntary peace move in the history of the old world, marked the beginning of a new post war phase in the relations among the former warring nations, and signalized the official re-entry of Germany into the European concert of nations after eleven years' absence.

HOLDING MISSION IN CAMPBELLFORD

Rev. F. H. Hartley, of Toronto, Will Conduct Services in Christ Church.

CAMPBELLFORD, December 1 —Rev. G. C. Clarke, Rector of Christ Church, announced on Sunday that an eight day mission would be held in the parish beginning on Wednesday next, with a service for children in the church at 4.15 p.m.

Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock the first service for adults will be held. The missioner at these services will be the Rev. F. H. Hartley, rector of St. Matthias church, Toronto.

A welcome will be extended to all who would care to attend these services.

A Financial Success.

When the returns are all in it is expected that the receipts from the bazaar and supper given by the Willing Workers of Christ Church last week will total $700.

A Correction.

The Examiner was in error when it stated on Monday that Jack Haig was the first Campbellford boy to be elected to the Boys' Parliament.

Leslie Clegg, one of the boys of Christ Church, was a member of that body in 1922, the second year after its organization.

NO ELECTIONS FOR VACANCIES

Ontario Government Finds Opposition of All Parties to Winter Election.

SEVEN VACANT.

TORONTO, Dec. 1. (Canadian Press).—No by-elections are to be held this winter for the seven seats which are vacant in the Provincial House. This decision upon the part of the Ontario Government was announced yesterday at the Parliament Buildings by Premier Ferguson, who stated that it had been reached as the result of a canvass of the districts concerned which had revealed a general disinclination amongst all parties to engage in winter campaigns.

The Government, in postponing the by-elections, Hon. Mr. Ferguson said, when questioned, was not influenced by the thought that there might be a general appeal to the people in the spring.

When any announcements are to be made they will be made by the head of the Government, and until they are made all these statements are speculations without any foundation, said the Premier in commenting on the speeches of private members of the House who recently predicted an early election. The seats which will be vacant during the coming session of the Legislature are: London, Conservative seat of the late Sir Adam Beck; South Simcoe, Conservative seat of W. E. Rowe; East Kent, Progressive seat of Hon. Manning Doherty; Centre Grey, Progressive seat of Hon. Dougald Carmichael; North Norfolk, Progressive seat of G. D. Sewell; Cochrane, Liberal seat of Mac Lang; Kenora, Labor seat of Peter Heenan.

DIRECTS DEPARTMENT.

Brig.-Gen. G. S. Cartwright, who was formerly of the Royal Engineers and has lately been a special lecturer in military subjects at the University of Toronto, has been selected to succeed the late Col. W. R. Lang as director of the department of military studies at the university.

Much illness still prevails in town, some cases of chicken-pox among the children, and heavy colds among the grown-ups. Miss Margaret Watson of the High school staff is one of those on the sick list this week.

Children's Colds

Are quickly, pleasantly relieved by Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine

If children's colds are got rid of promptly there will be less tendency to pneumonia and consumption in later life. It is the neglected, hanging-on cold that weakens the lungs and develops into serious trouble.

No treatment for coughs and colds was ever so popular with the children as Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. It is so pleasant to the taste, so delightfully soothing and healing and affords relief so quickly that children soon turn to it instinctively when choked up with a cold or annoyed by coughing.

It is mother's favorite treatment for croup and bronchitis, for she knows it will bring relief when the midnight coughing spasms set in. It is wise to always have a bottle at hand for prompt use in emergency.

"BOBBED HAIR" with Marie Prevost is a picturization of this story by Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

"What makes you think all her hair's been cut off?" Salt asked angrily.

Poppy broke into the discussion before the Southerner could answer. "She told me she had planned one last puzzle," she announced, "and that she'd come in and untangle it as soon as you'd given up."

They all looked expectantly at the doors again, but this time nothing happened except the sudden and solemn booming of the grandfather clock in the hall, sounding the first stroke of twelve. And though no one attempted to put it into words, they were all vaguely aware at the same instant of a queer little sense of finality of the definite ending of something, and the beginning of something else. nobody knew just what, as the old clock continued to strike, slowly and matter-of-factly.

"The announcement had to be made before twelve to be binding," he said in his thin, throaty voice. "Two announcements have been made, but both cannot, of course, hold. Miss Connemara had better stop the play now and come forward to tell us which one of them is true. Otherwise—" He held out his hands, and shook a disapproving gray head.

"Oh, she'll be here in a moment," Poppy assured him confidently. "And she's safe, either way, because one of the announcements has to be legal, hasn't it, Mr. Brewster? Let's just go on dancing. She'll get tired of teasing us if she sees we're not waiting for her."

So the orchestra was commanded to resume and everyone began to dance again, though in rather a half-hearted and desultory manner, with one eye on the door and the other uninterestedly on his partner.

An hour passed that was longer than all the rest of the evening before it put together, and still no Connemara with the promised untangling. At the end of that time Miss Celimena, her face very pale, beckoned both Saltonstall and Bing into a corner of the ballroom.

"Something's happened to her," she said, with a little catch in her voice. "She'd never carry a joke as far as this. Won't you—won't you both go out and look for her? Poppy and some of the girls and I will search the house."

Very soberly, their former hostility forgotten, the two went out, and Miss Celimena, her hand in Poppy's strong young arm, walked heavily toward the hall and the staircase at the end.

The grandfather clock which had already ticked off so much anxiety was just preparing to sound two when an anxious group of unsuccessful searchers met at the open front door, and mutely asked and answered the question that was in every eye, but which nobody wanted to put into words.

"Perhaps," suggested the withered little lawyer croakily, since there seemed to be no other offers of advice as to the next step—"perhaps we had better telephone the police at Greenwich."

Miss Celimena found her voice at that, and screamed: "Police! What for?"

"Why—eh—it's the customary thing, Miss Celimena, when a person is missing. Nothing to be alarmed about—quite the contrary, I assure you."

His eagerness to reassure was more alarming than openly expressed doubt. But Miss Celimena's long years of repression stood her in excellent stead now. She was up against something frightening and unpleasant, but after that first terrified outcry, she had herself well in hand.

"The telephone is on that table behind you," she said quite calmly. "Will you call them, please, Mr. Brewster?"

She stood at his shoulder quiet and controlled while he talked over the wire for several minutes. At length he turned to her to ask, "They want to know how she was dressed when you last saw her?"

Then, indeed, for a flash, a quiver passed across the set face. It hurt Miss Celimena, even in the midst of her fears for Connemara's safety, to tell an outsider that a Moore had so completely forgotten family tradition and dignity as to disappear in the unfitting garb of a Dominican Sister at a fancy dress ball.

Brewster did so, describing the costume with painful conscientiousness. They saw him listen intently, while a look of dawning horror and incredulity slowly spread over his face. Then he said jerkily into the mouthpiece, "Thank you—yes, I'll tell her," and hung up the receiver.

"What is it?" Miss Celimena asked, with feverish eagerness. "He had some news; I saw it in your face."

A traffic officer held up a car about eleven in Greenwich for speeding, and let them go when he found there was a nun in it, on her way, she told him, to an emergency case," the lawyer said slowly.

"My description and the officer's tallied exactly. Fortunately—or unfortunately, I'm not sure which—" he put one thin hand confusedly to his head—"the man took the license number. There was no one in the car but the nun and a well-dressed young man who was driving."

"Go on," Miss Celimena said hoarsely. "Can't they look up the number and find out whose car it was?"

Brewster hestitated. "They—did," he said; then, brusquely: "The number was that of a car reported stolen yesterday morning from New Haven."

CHAPTER V.
By Ed. Streeter.

The car stopped just outside the door of the engine room. A sickish, sweet smell of hot oil came billowing forth into the close passageway, driving before it the sharp, salt smell of seaweed and the faint odor of mimosa.

Sister Connemara stared straight ahead at the back of a huge truck which effectually corked out any breeze which might be travelling across the Sound.

"Haven't we" — insisted Lacy — "haven't we met somewhere before?"

"My orders," replied the demure creature beside him, "forbid the discussion of frivolous and trivial topics with men."

There was a warning toot from somewhere above. Engines clanked laboriously. After one or two preparatory shivers the boat moved slowly forward, leaving the ferry slip lights to waste their rays over a half acre of dancing foam.

Connemara released her grip on the blanket. "At least we are out of Connecticut."

"Out of Connecticut into New York," replied her companion gloomily. "What's the difference? We can't spend our lives running out of one state into another without any idea what it's all about. It doesn't make any sense."

LADIES' AID SALE.

Madoc Ladies' Annual Sale and Supper Were Well Attended.

MADOC, Dec. 1.—The Ladies' Aid of St. John's church held its annual sale of needlework and served supper on Saturday evening in the vacant store in the Shaw building. A good crowd attended and financial results were very satisfactory. Many fancy and useful articles were on the sales table, and the sudden drop in temperature made the hot supper dishes particularly savoury and tempting.

MORE DAMAGE DONE BY STORM

Cyclones Penetrated Across Europe as Far as Bulgaria.

DEATHS IN FEZ.

PARIS, Dec. 1. — (Canadian Press).—The storms which swept the Mediterranean and Altantic coasts during the week end penetrated as far south as French Morocco and as far east as Bulgaria, reports show.

At Fez, Morocco cyclonic winds caused the death of three foreign legionaires and injured thirteen. Seventeen airplanes were wrecked. Five mechanics were also injured. The loss is very heavy.

The death toll along the Brittany coast, where a number of fishing boats were caught in the gale, was placed today at eight. The continuance of the storm prevented searches for other missing boats.

Off Bizerte, Tunis, the storm is keeping the French transport Caroline from sailing from Marseilles, with wounded and sick soldiers homeward bound from Syria.

PARENTS COMMITTED.

MacMillan Couple, Whose Daughter Stole Baby, to Stand Trial.

TORONTO, Dec. 1.—Canadian Press).—Ezbenezer and Annie MacMillan, parents of 14-year-old Ann MacMillan, who on November 6, took the baby Robert Muldoon from a department store to her home, were today committed for trial by Magistrate Margaret Patterson on a charge of receiving and harboring Baby Muldoon with intent to deprive its parents of its possession. Bail was renewed at $25,000 each. The girl is held in custody on a charge of abduction.

WEDDING BELLS.

MOORE—MCCOY.

MADOC, Dec. 1.—The marriage took place very quietly in Belleville on Wednesday, November 25th, of Mrs. Elizabeth McCoy of Madoc, to Mr Alexander Moore of Belleville, formerly of Plainfield. The ceremony was performed by Dr. McTavish, a former pastor of St. Peter's Presbyterian church in Madoc. Mr. and Mrs. Moore will reside in Belleville.

McLAUGHLIN—O'NEILL.

DOWNEYVILLE, Dec. 1.—On Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock St. Luke's Church, Downeyville, was the scene of a pretty wedding when Miss Florence, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. J. O'Neill, was united in marriage to John McLaughlin, younger son of Mr. Hugh McLaughlin, both of King's Wharf. The bride entered the church to the strains of the Wedding March, played by Mrs. Walter Herlihey, cousin of the bride, and was given in marriage by her father.

The bride wore her going-away suit of navy blue tricotine with grey hat, fox fur and carried a bouquet of carnations. Her sister, Lavina, was bridesmaid and was attired in a fawn coat with fur trimmings, with purple hat, and carried chrysanthemums. Mr. Albert Herlihey, cousin of the bride, ably assisted the groom. Rev. Father Galvin performed the ceremony and afterwards said the nuptial mass. After the ceremony the bridal party repaired to the home of the bride's parents, "Lakeview Inn," where a sumptuous wedding dinner awaited them. In the evening about eighty of their friends gathered and spent the evening in dancing and card playing. Their many friends join in visiting Mr. and Mrs. McLaughlin many years of happiness.

REVOLUTION SPREADS.

Leaders in Syria Plan To Attack France in Colonies.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press).—Leaders of the Syrian revolution, says a despatch to the Daily Express, plan to attack France in all her Moslem colonies and have sent emissiaries to Algiers. Tunis and Annam, French Indo-China, for the purpose of stirring up revolt. They have also sent an envoy to Mecca to appeal to Sultan Ibn Saud. The discontented element in Palestine, the correspondent adds, only appear to be waiting the sign to join the Syrian revolution.

TEXANS RAISE FUND FOR EXTRA SESSION

AUSTIN, Tex., Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press).—A fund of $300,000 has been pledged by Texans to defray the cost of a special session of the legislature to investigate the acts of Governor Miriam A. Ferguson's administration with a view to possible impeachment proceedings.

Sure Way to Get Rid of Blackheads

There is one simple, safe, and sure way that never fails to get rid of blackheads; that is to dissolve them. To do this, get two ounces of peroxine powder from any drug store—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly—wash the parts and you will be surprised how the blackheads have disappeared. Blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, simply dissolve and disappear. Blackheads are a mixture of dust and dirt, and secretions that form in the pores of the skin. The peroxine powder and the water dissolve the blackheads so they wash right out, leaving the pores free and clean and in their natural condition.

MEIGHEN LEAVES TO-DAY.

BIG BUILDING TOTAL FOR THIS NOVEMBER

Last Year's Totals Have Been Greatly Exceeded.

Canadian construction contracts for the month of November, as compiled by MacLean Building Reports, Ltd., totalled $46,972,800 as compared with $29,647,500 in October and $24,614,200 in November a year ago. For the fourth successive month the totals have exceeded those for last year, culminating in November by an increase of 90.8 per cent. over the same month a year ago.

Residential buildings accounted for 19.9 per cent. of the November total and amounted to $9,328,000. Business buildings totalled $6,317,600, or 13.5 per cent.; industrial buildings $13,499,000 or 28.7 per cent., and public works and utilities $17,828,200 or 37.9 per cent.

The activity was distributed amongst the provinces as follows: Quebec, 53.9 per cent.; Ontario, 39.9 per cent.; Prairie Provinces, 3.7 per cent.; British Columbia, 1.8 per cent.; and the Maritimes, .7 per cent. Contemplated new work reported in November aggregated $37,549,200.

Totals now stand at $285,297,700 for the first eleven months of 1925 and for the same period of last year $247,393,300, showing an increase so far of 15.3 per cent. over 1924. The grand total for twelve months of last year is already exceeded by over nine million dollars.

Not only does the November total exceed that for any previous November; it leads any month since 1913, except June, 1923, when fifty million of new work was awarded. The usual seasonal decline is quite absent.

Unprecedented volume of construction in Quebec, particularly in the pulp and paper industry and in power development contributes the bulk of the increase in the totals for this year. That province records an increase of forty-one millions over the first eleven months of last year. In Ontario, which shows a decrease of five millions from the past year's figure, residential building has increased 22 per cent.; business buildings, 15 per cent., while industrial projects have fallen off 50 per cent. and public works and utilities decreased by 23 per cent. The Western and Maritime divisions are practically on a parity with 1924.

It is quite evident that generally speaking very active building operations will continue throughout the winter with a good market available for building materials and labor. This condition will behold more in some places than in others, of course, depending upon where the actual projects are located.

It is easier to inherit a good name than it is to keep it.

HARD TO RAISE EXILE FAMILY

One Woman Ashamed of Large Family of Four Children.

LIVING COST HIGH.

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press.)— A letter published in a local paper, from a Canadian in Portland, Oregon, describes some of the disadvantages of housekeeping in exile. "For everyone, every week, there is always something to put up with, and dear Canada has least of them all," she maintains. "The cost of eatables is very high, and one must pay to have garbage removed, clothing too, is proportionately expensive as their standard of living is so high you are thought odd if your school child does not dress accordingly. A large number of the high school girls and boys go to school in their own cars. Of course, too, their families are all smaller than ours, and therefore can afford to do more for the one or two they may have. A friend of mine (also a former Winnipegger) told me she felt quite ashamed of her large family, as everyone else on the street had one child and she had four. Soon after coming here we were much amused when our little girl arrived home from school saying one of the children had asked her how she had learned the American language so quickly, and to speak her own for them. Still another day she was asked if the Latin inscription on our coins was the language they spoke in Canada. Please don't think this an exaggeration—as I am trying to be perfectly fair to the U.S.A. too."

COBOURG INTEREST IN NEW YORK FRAY

Man Shot There Was Convicted For Bootlegging in Lakeshore Town.

COBOURG, Dec. 1.—A tragedy that occurred recently in New York holds more than usual local significance, as the man who was killed by a "shot from the gloom," was convicted here in 1924 on a B.O.T.A. charge by Col. W. H. Floyd, police magistrate. Boardon with two companions, said to be Alexander Belisle and Wilfrid Scott, were arrested by Provincial officers when they were driving through Cobourg in a seven-passenger Studebaker car, en route from Montreal to Detroit. A novel incident was that the car had been converted into a five-passenger one, the extra space being utilized to carry a thousand dollars worth of Quebec liquors. Boardon's companions were acquitted, but he was fined $600 and costs, which amount was promptly paid. His car was confiscated.

On appeal later the fine was some what reduced, but the car and the liquors were confiscated by the Province of Ontario. The case attracted considerable interest in the district at the time. Now for the sequel. Ostensibly a real estate dealer, Boardon is stated to have been in the bootlegging business in New York. He and his wife occupied the ground floor of a two storey building. Mrs. Boardon was awakened by some one rattling the knob of the side door. She aroused her husband, who got up, snapped on the light, and went to the window and leaned out. "Who is there?" he called. There was no sound for a second, then the flash of a pistol fired from near the garage. Boardon swayed and sank down. There was the noise of some one running down the street, and that was all. A policeman was called and was soon at the house. He recalled having seen a small commercial automobile speeding swiftly away. A roomer in the house said the late Mr. Boardon had been engaged selling liquor, and this was corroborated by others.

One theory advanced for the murder is that Boardon was shot by a disgruntled customer whom he may have duped in a liquor deal. The apparent attempt to get Boardon to show himself is the ground for this belief.

Another theory is that Boardon was killed by a hi-jacker seeking liquor. There was $1,000 worth of liquor in the cellar at the time, it is stated.

Colonel Eustace Blois announces that he is presenting this season an even more ambitious program than was presented last year, and that Wagner's "Ring" will again be included in the program.

Voluntary Imprisonment Begun in 1870, May End Next Year.

GOING TO ASSISI.

ROME, Dec. 1 (Canadian Press) The voluntary imprisonment of the Popes in the Vatican, begun in 1870 after the overthrow of the temporal power by the establishment of a United Italy, may be ended next year with a personal visit by Pius XII to Assisi to preside at the inauguration of the new Franciscan monastery on the seventh centenary of the death of St. Francis of Assisi.

This possibility is advanced by the tribune as based on authentic information and it is regarded both in Governmental and Church circles as realizable unlike a number of similar predictions made during the last two decades

TURKS READY TO INVADE MOSUL

Are Resolved To Seize Province if League Decides Against Them.

WELL EQUIPPED.

LONDON, December 1. — Canadian Press. — The Westminster Gazette says an exceedingly grave situation has arisen regarding the dispute between Great Britain and Turkey over the Mosul frontier, and that there is serious danger of war.

The Turks, declares the newspaper, are resolved, shoul' the final decision of the League of Nations be against them, and in the absence of any proposals being advanced to meet their demands, that they will invade Irak and seize Mosul.

"The Turkish army, numbering about 300,000 on a p e footing," the Westminster Gazette adds, "Is well prepared, and has ample stores and ammunition. A large equipped Turkish force already is on the Irak frontier."

EMINENT SCIENTIST DISCOVERS NEW RAY OF HIGH POTENTIALITY

Saskatchewan Gold Medallist Associated in Research Work.

ON MOUNTAIN PEAK

Dr. Milliken, Discoverer, Obtained Nobel Prize — Isolated Election.

REGINA, Sask., Dec. 1 (Canadian Press).—Rays more penetrating and powerful than anything heretofore known or imagined on earth, have been discovered, studied and measured by Dr. Robert A. Millikan, of the California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, the foremost scientist in the United States, with whom has been associated in the last and most fruitful years of his research work, G. Harvey Cameron, of Saskatoon and a gold medallist of the University of Saskatchewan.

Announcement of the remarkable discoveries made by the two scientists, was made by Dr. Millikan recently at a meeting of the National Academy of Sciences. He told of invisible messengers from the great cosmic spaces beyond the ken of man; rays approximately 100 times more penetrating than the most powerful X-rays produced in hospitals and laboratories.

Mr. Cameron, whose share in the discoveries brings him into world prominence as a scientist, was graduated with honors from the University of Saskatchewan in 1921. On the recommendation of Dean G. H. Ling and Dr. E. L. Harrington, Mr. Cameron was given a teaching fellowship in the California institute immediately after graduation.

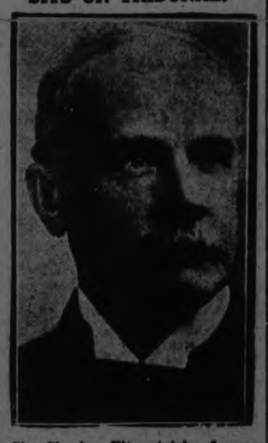
Mute, but mighty tokens of an endless activity in creation's workshop in the immeasurable stellar regions, these rays tell a story of the birth of new worlds and new atoms. They come with the speed of light, bringing with them traces of energies of inconceivable magnitude So penetrating are these rays, according to Dr. Millikan, that they can pierce a wall of lead six feet thick.

The eminent California scientist does not speculate on the practical value of the rays to man, nor on the possibilities opened by them for further research, but facts which he has disclosed indicate that the cosmic crucibles of the universe hold and pour forth tremendous stores of energy which mankind some day may harness here on earth.

The tests carried out by Dr. Millikan and his associate were largely carried out from the very shadows of the peak of Mt. Whitney, the "roof of the United States." It was here that the scientist discovered that the much-mystifying high frequency rays are of cosmic and not terrestrial origin. Dr. Millikan has disclosed that scientific instruments of remarkable precision and ingenuity were used in carrying out the experiments. One of these was the electroscope used in measuring the penetrating power of the rays. Another instrument was sent up in sounding baloons to an altitude of ten miles. It was carried above the clouds and contained a recording barometer, a thermometer, three sets of moving photographic films and the necessary driving machinery to operate them and yet weighed only seven ounces.

The Mt. Whitney experiments were the continuation of research work that has been going on at the California Institute of Technology for several years. He has practically devoted his life to determine definitely the nature and origin of high frequency rays first noticed nearly a quarter century ago. Dr. Millikan was awarded the Nobel Prize for physics as a result of his work in isolating the electron, the basis of all modern advance in physics and atomic studies.

SITS ON TRIBUNAL.



Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, former Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Canada, and former Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Quebec, left this week for Washington, D. C., where he will sit as representative of the British Empire on magistrate never misses any meetings.

The president, Mrs. J. Wesley Bundy, is greatly interested in young women, many of whom are members of the sixty affiliated societies connected with her council and regularly attend its meetings. These, however, are frequently in the minority because they find it difficult to attend in the afternoons, many of them being business girls.

What was to be done? Twice Mrs. Bundy suggested the formation of a "Young Women's Local Council of Women of Toronto."

Her suggestion was not heartily received. There was little discussion amongst the members. Instead a rather uneasy shifting in the seats was observed until the matter was conveniently "laid over" and other business taken up. At the last monthly meeting Mrs. Bundy again came forward with her plan for a young women's council—and then the secret came out.

Dr. Patterson rose to her feet. "Madame president, could you tell the members present just who would be eligible for membership in this proposed young women's council, and who would meet with we old bodies in the afternoons? Would it be safe for we old ladies to be out alone at night to attend a meeting? Are we to appoint a committee on age, take evidence and affidavits and separate the old from the young?"

There was silence for a long moment. A few laughed. The chairlady sought an inspiration from her audience. There was no inspiration. The chairlady sat down. Dr. Patterson sat down. Nobody spoke. The chairlady said something to the secretary, who was eagerly waiting a chance to write something in her minute book. No one else heard what was said. Then Mrs. Bundy rose to her feet again, and, smiling quite happily, turned to the magistrate: "As one who disposes of many, many problems, doctor, you are appointed a committee of one to decide just when a woman is no longer a young woman. We will await your report with interest."

It is not expected there will be any report. Neither is it expected there will be any separate young women's council. Women have not yet come to the point of voluntarily admitting themselves other than young.

WHEN IS A WOMAN OLD?

When is a woman an old woman—or at least when is she not a young woman?

This question must be answered by Ontario's only woman police magistrate, who daily, except Wednesday and Sunday, presides over the women's court of Toronto.

Magistrates are almost hourly called upon to make decisions touching practically every subject in the world, but this is the first time on record any judicial authority has been set the task of establishing when a young woman ceases to be a young woman. Is she still young at forty? At fifty? Or has the horizon of modern times extended to such an extent that she is still youthfully looking forward at sixty?

It all happened this way:

Dr. Patterson is interested in morals both personally and professionally. That is one of the reasons why she is a doctor and why she is a police magistrate. She has been on the bench since January, 1922, but for eight years before that the doctor was—and still is—convenor of the standing committee of equal moral standards of the National Council of Women.

Despite the fact that she is one of the busiest women in Ontario the WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—(United Press).—Here is an interesting "story" on President Coolidge — purely fictitious, of course—which is being told around Washington now:

"One day Mr. Coolidge was out riding with Harvey Firestone, the tire manufacturer, Thomas Edison, the inventor, and Henry Ford, the car manufacturer. They were crossing along in a Lincoln automobile when a tire blew out and they were forced to stop at one of the small repair shops along the country road.

"Firestone got out and asked the repair man if he had Firestone tires and the man started to put one on the machine. While the repair man was working Firestone found he had no bills with him and the man agreed to take a cheque.

"As Firestone stepped inside the shop to write a cheque, Ford got out of the car to watch the man at work.

"'Do you know that the man who makes those tires is inside there now writing you a cheque?' Ford asked.

"The workman looked up and eyed Ford suspiciously without comment.

"'Do you know that the kindly faced man you see sitting there is Thomas Edison, the world's greatest inventor?' Ford continued.

"The man snickered and said nothing.

"'And do you know,' Ford went on, 'that I am the man who makes these cars, Henry Ford?'

"The man burst out laughing and said: 'And I suppose that other guy is President Colidge!'

"'Yes,' said Ford.

"'Well, I cash no cheques for this gang,' the workman said, 'give me cash or off comes that tire'."

GERMAN KAISER WAS COMMANDING FIGURE AT FUNERAL OF VICTORIA

Nine Kings Rode in State — Burial of Alexandra Was Simpler.

DECIDED CONTRAST

Twenty-four years ago, on February 2, 1901, on just such a wintry day as Friday when funeral service for Alexandra, Queen Mother of Great Britain, were held at Westminster Abbey, the body of Queen Victoria was carried through the streets of the British metropolis with all the pomp and pageantry of European regal functions.

In many respects the funeral procession of Queen Alexandra was a decided contrast to that of the last English Queen regnant; it was much simpler and lacked the show of armed might which marked the burial of Victoria as a ruling sovereign.

Four kings marched behind the bier of Queen Alexandra as the cortege wound its way through London's streets from the Chapel Royal at St. James's Palace to Westminster Abbey. There was no service in Westminster Abbey when Queen Victoria died, but instead her body was taken by boat from Osborne House, on the Isle of Wight, where she died, then by train from Portsmouth to Victoria Station in London. Through three miles of London's principal thoroughfares the coffin was borne in state from Victoria to Paddington station. The lying-in-state was in the Albert Memorial Chapel at Windsor, and the Queen was buried later in the Frogmore Mausoleum, beside her beloved Prince Consort.

At Queen Victoria's funeral five kings rode on chargers directly behind the gun carriage that bore the casket. The thrones of three of these kings have since ceased to exist The German Empire was represented by the Kaiser, now in exile in Holland. The Kings of Portugal and Greece were present on that occasion. The kingdoms of these countries have since fallen.

At Victoria's funeral the German Kaiser was the subject of considerable attention. He was attended by a large military and naval staff and a detachment of the Queen's German Dragoon Regiment rode close behind the bier. Germany was represented last Friday by its Ambassador, a figure in civilian clothes, the representative of a republic.

The same gun carriage that carried the coffin of Queen Victoria through London was used at King Edward's funeral, and again for the Queen Mother, but on Friday it was divested of the gorgeous trappings used on the previous occasions.

When Queen Victoria's body was carried through London the gun carriage was drawn by the same eight cream-colored Hanovarian horses which only a few years previously had drawn the State carriage used at the Diamond Jubilee celebration.

The gold harness, scarlet-coated postilions and scarlet and gold covered grooms were also the same. A platform was built over the barrel of the gun, with the coffin resting on the platform. The eight horses which drew the gun carriage were almost concealed beneath their rich harness, and the only symbol of mourning was a large bow of purple attached to the coffin.

The coffin was covered with the royal standard and at the head was placed Queen Victoria's crown of gold, encrusted with jewels, while two smaller crowns with a gold-jeweled sceptre lying between them were at the feet.

Behind the body rode King Edward, with the dead Queen's nephew, the Kaiser Wilhelm II, on his right and his brother, the Duke of Connaught, on his left.

The description of that scene from the pen of an eyewitness follows:

"The commanding figure of the Kaiser could not for a moment be mistaken. His Imperial Majesty glanced right and left as he rode and his hand was frequently raised to the red and white feathers hanging over his chapeau as he responded to salutes. The splendid white charger beneath him pranced up and down, giving his Majesty an opportunity to display fine horsemanship.

"In the second rank behind rode two more sovereigns, the Kings of the Hellenes and Portugal, both glittering with gold lace. There followed a dazzling array of members of royal families, numbering about forty in all and riding three abreast."

On the day of Queen Victoria's funeral procession in London the hospitals cared for 1,300 persons who were hurt in the crowds. Several policemen, soldiers and women suffered broken limbs and one woman dropped dead from excitement.

A tragic incident was narrowly averted as the body of the Queen was being carried from the railway station at Windsor to the chapel of Windsor Castle. The order to start had been given, the muffled drums rolled and the solemn strains of Chopin's Funeral March resounded through the air, when the artillery horses harnessed to the gun carriage on which the coffin rested refused to move.

The story of the scene that ensued was thus told at the time:

"The horses had grown cold from long waiting in the biting wind. Then they became restive and narrowly escaped overturning the gun carriage. The King and the Kaiser hurried up to ascertain the cause of the trouble. At this juncture Lord Roberts asked the permission of the King to take out the horses and substitute for them bluejackets who had come up from Portsmouth as a guard of honor. The suggestion was quickly sanctioned and the last time that Queen Victoria's body was borne before her subjects it was by her royal 'handy men' who, at an opportune moment, saved the situation."

HORSE VEHICLES REQUIRE LIGHTS

Wentworth County Council Adds Name to List of Safety Counties.

DUNDAS, Dec. 1.—The Wentworth county by-law requiring all horse drawn vehicles being equipped with lights when travelling the county roads after dusk comes into effect on December 1, and for ignoring the regulations an offender is liable for a fine up to $50. Reeve Moss and Deputy Reeve Mahony, Dundas, representatives on the County Council, desire to impress on local merchants and other owners of horses that the new law applies just as much inside the town as in any part of the county. Dundas is a part of the county and is governed by all its by-laws. The fact that the by-law mentions highways does not specially mean the main travelled roads of the county, but all thoroughfares within its boundaries.

200,000 BOOKS IN M'GILL LIBRARY

Special Book Will Be Placed To Celebrate the Occasion.

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 1.—(Canadan Press.)— The 200,000th book mark has been reached in McGill University library, and to celebrate the occasion a special book, a literary treasure of rarety and value was put in as the two hundred thousandth book—an old Italian book on Anatomy by Girolamo Boncompagni, Archbishop of Bologna in 1683. It is entitled "Man and His Parts," collected and explained with illustrations, from sacred and secular authors, in two separate books, by Ottavio Scarletini. Canon of the Lateran, Doctor of Theology, preacher. It has still the original white vellum binding and is the gift to the library of Francis McLennan, one of the library's benefactors.

The building which now houses the library was opened on October 31, 1893, by the Governor-General the Earl of Aberdeen. It had been erected and presented to the University by Peter Redpath, the ground having previously been purchased and presented to the University by J. H. R. Molson.

Tomorrow is the Day

THE most astonishing demonstration ever held will be given throughout the country by "His Master's Voice" dealers. It will begin at 9 A.M. and continue throughout the day

It will introduce the most important contribution to music since the invention, 30 years ago, of the "His Master's Voice" instrument

DECEMBER 2ND.....tomorrow.....will be a day of days in the history of music. A new instrument will be played—an incredible instrument! When you have heard it, you will say that here at last is music such as you have never heard anywhere but in the living presence of great artists.

The more critical your attitude toward music, the more astounded and enthusiastic you will be. As the first notes reach your ears, you will understand why great artists, critics and music lovers have said in substance: "This is music!"

Madame Schumann-Heink marveled. "I would not have thought it possible," she said.

John Philip Sousa could hardly believe it. "That is music from the soul!" he exclaimed.

Fritz Kreisler, Paul Whiteman and other Victor artists, are equally enthusiastic. In fact, every man or woman who has listened to this astonishing instrument has been completely won by its matchless performance. It stands triumphant—a musical miracle.

It will take only a few minutes of your time tomorrow to call on the "His Master's Voice" dealer and listen to a demonstration, and in those few minutes you will be surprised beyond belief. As a lover of music, you will be overjoyed at the vision of pleasures in store. You'll find a new thrill in dance music, for the jazziest jazz takes on new color and new interest. Or, if vocal and instrumental solos, symphonies and choruses inspire you—then you, too, have the treat of a lifetime in store.

Beginning tomorrow morning at nine o'clock, and continuing all day....special demonstrations.

WOMAN ORGANIZER ON POLITICAL THEME

Says Child Labor in England is Supplanting That of Adults.

TORONTO, Dec. 1.— (Canadian Press.)—Women in industries and politics formed the theme of an address by Miss Julia Varley, senior woman organizer of the Workers' Union of Great Britain at the Labor Forum. Although Miss Varley is a former suffragette and was a martyr in that cause, or, as she puts it, she was a guest of the King and wore his uniform for six weeks in one of the jails in England she is not one of the fire-brand variety of the British Labor leaders. On the contrary, the lady made a very moderate but earnest appeal to workers, both men and women, to join the trades union movement.

Speaking of conditions in Great Britain, Miss Varley declared child labor was supplanting adult labor, particularly in the metal trades. In Birmingham, which is her headquarters in England, she said that owing to the introduction of labor-saving machinery, girls were able to do much work formerly done by men. This had resulted in an agitation for raising the school age.

SOUP GOING OUT.

Soup is going out of fashion at the most fashionable dinners, according to a prominent London maitre d'hotel.

Men are not the great eaters that they were, according to this authority, and soup is essentially a "filling" dish. The fact that slimness is still the spice of life among women is another reason for the decline of soup, he says.

This authority also declares that savories are to a great extent taking the place of sweets in the menus of both men and women. It is stated that these salty trifles are more to the taste of men than the usual sweets, and that women are also taking to them, although again only because of the ever-prevalent desire for slimness.

In three cities of the United States women now fill the important Federal position of collector of customs.

ENTIRE VILLAGE IS RUN BY FEMALES

"It's Nice to See the Girls Doing a Bit," Says One of Residents.

LONDON (By Mail.—There is one village in England that is entirely run by women. It has a woman rate collector, woman church clerk, woman postmistress, assisted by two postwomen, and a woman school mistress.

They are responsible for the welfare and destinies of the eight hundred inhabitants of Lawford. They are all Essex women. Lawford, in fact, is a hotbed of feminism, but no one seems to mind.

It is nice to see the girls doing a bit, said an old Lawfordian, and ex-railway signalman enjoying his retirement over the fire in his cosy cottage. Only it does wear out their stockings. He sat back in his cushioned chair and chuckled.

One of the girls is his daughter, a comely Essex woman. Another girl is a wonderful old widow of sixty-five who lives in a thatched cottage next door, which she leaves at six o'clock every morning.

Miss Spooner has been rate collector for the past twenty years. She is also clerk to the parish council, and lives in a disused schoolhouse.

Now a woman has been appointed in the new school in place of the master, who has retired after forty years service. Her two young shingled assistants carry on the feminine tradition in this enterprising village.

RECITAL GIVEN IN CAMPBELLFORD

Mrs. J. H. Bell Delighted a Large Audience With Her Readings.

ABLY ASSISTED.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 1.—An elocution recital was given Monday night in St. John's Church by Mrs. J. H. Bell, Campbellford's well-known reader, who has studied the art under some of the best masters in England. The attendance and the appreciation shown by the large audience must have been encouraging to the artist who, since coming to this town about two year ago, has always been willing to devote her talent to aid in the promotion of every worthy cause. The proceeds of Monday night's entertainment go to the Sunday School of the congregation, and at the close of the programme the gratitude of the officials, teachers and scholars was shown when little Helen Hind, a member of the Junior Department, was called to the platform and presented Mrs. Bell with a huge bouquet for which the recipient, in graceful terms, expressed her thanks and also those who had assisted her with the entertainment.

Every number on the programme, the musical selections and those chosen by the reader were of a high order, the readings ranging from the comic to the tragic, and each covering a peculiar phrase of human life. In every one, there was a thread of narrative that held the interest, while the dramatic grace of the performer could not fail to charm the audience.

The two opening numbers were "The Rehearsal," and a musical monologue, "The Whitest Man I Know," both teeming with human interest. Then followed "Miss Peat's Extra Turn," a laughable recital of the predicament of a disciple of Mrs. Pankhurst, who, in the early stage of the suffragette craze in England, mistook a variety theatre for a hall in which she was billed to speak on women's rights, and where from the stage she innocently held forth on her favorite topic, first to the amazement, and then to the huge delight of the mixed and painfully frank and personal audience before her. To hear Mrs. Bell recite the incident, picturing with true dramatic art the mortification of the suffragette when she realized her mistake, was almost as good as being an eye-witness of the original fiasco.

Other numbers that especially pleased the audience were "Five Minutes With the Children," a ditty filled with sympathy for the foibles of childhood, "That Peccadillo," the story of an emotional young bride whose faith in her husband was temporarily weakened when her jealousy was needlessly excited by the tales carried to her by a viperish female friend; and "Fauntleroy," the moral of which was a lesson to fond parents who hesitate to correct their wayward offspring. Besides these selections there was a tragic poem, "The Spanish Mother," and a musical monologue, "Comfort." After each number, Mrs. Bell was recalled and did not once fail to respond.

Those who assisted Mrs. Bell were Miss Helen Wood, who played the piano accompaniments; R. Cecil Searles, violinist, and a quartette composed of Messrs. G. W. Lucy, Walter Henson, Major J. M. Bygott and J. H. Bell, the latter the husband of the star performer of the evening, who is as skilled in vocal music as his wife is in her chosen art. Messrs. Henson and Lucy also rendered vocal solos.

The entertainment was one of the best of the many given by Mrs. Bell, and the proceeds will make a generous addition to the revenue of the Sunday School.

King was present, and gave an interesting review of the O.E.A. convention recently held in Toronto, at which she was a delegate.

At the conclusion of the programme, dainty refreshments were served by Mrs. A. Jones, convenor, and her committee.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorncliffe

SHE CHATS ABOUT A SMART TWO-PIECE COSTUME.

"Where do you think I've been?" Pam asked this question breathlessly, as she dashed into the shop, decidedly late, after the luncheon hour.

"Where?" I queried in wonder.

"To the Aquarium," answered Pam enthusiastically.

"Of all places!" I remarked.

The Aquarium is way down at Battery Place, and Madame's shop is uptown in the smart sixties, so Pam had really travelled quite a distance.

"I'm sure you'll laugh when I tell you my special reason for going today," Pam remarked.

I asked to know what this special reason was, and Pam began explaining:

"Of course you know I love to look at those strange fish anyway," she assured me.

"Yes, but why to-day?" I insisted.

Then Pam confessed that she wanted to make sure exactly what a bluefish looked like.

"And why?" I asked, pursuing the question relentlessly.

"Because," said Pam, "of this."

As she spoke she handed me a finished sketch, and it proved to be the dashing little frock I am showing here.

"Aren't you funny?" I remarked. "That fish does manage to look quite lifelike, with its green ocean background and all."

"A bluefish really is the most divine blue," Pam assured me. "It's a less decided blue toward the center, and around the edges it's almost an electric blue."

"And this one is to be done in those colors?" I asked.

Pam assured me that was exactly the idea, and a very effective one, she assured me, as she was planning to paint the fish on the drops.

"It's delightful!" I assured her. "And it's up to the minute, in this day of embroidering or painting all kinds of animals and fish on frocks."

"The overblouse is to be a sea-green crepe, and the circular skirt a Hunter's green velvet," Pam added.

I was delighted with the idea, and I knew the fish would be effective.

Some important measures are to come before the sessions of the Council, and the work accomplished will have an important bearing on the future plans and aims of the organization.

COURSE IN INSURANCE.

Universities Will Provide Special Training For Older Men.

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 1. — (Canadian Press).—A joint committee of McGill University, the University of Toronto and Western University, London, will study during the coming year the question of providing courses for the older men employed in insurance, according to Col. Wilfrid Bovey, on his return to McGill after attending the recent joint meeting of the Life Underwriters' Association and representatives of the three universities, held in Toronto. The joint committee will endeavor to decide upon a course which will not only offer a certain amount of academic and cultural lectures but will provide through conferences and other means an opportunity for the discussion of definitely utilitarian points.

The Secrets Of Charm

By Lucrezia Bori

Do you give your hair a chance to be really beautiful?

In answering this question to yourself, you may decide that you must surely be able to reply in the affirmative, simply because you have your regular shampoos when your hair seems to need it, and because you arrange your coiffure in the most becoming way you can find.

But, my dears, these two things are not enough. You will not do your hair full justice by simply washing it when it shows the need of a washing. For you cannot keep it clean from one shampoo time to the next, on the average of two weeks or more, unless you brush it.

I cannot be too insistent upon this need for brushing, as I am convinced that the lack of it is what makes some of the unlovely, unglistening coiffures that I see every day.

To insure absolutely clean hair, the kind that will glisten when the flecks of light fall upon it, you must brush it with regularity. This means nightly, just as you brush your teeth nightly.

Part your hair into strands, not too thick for the bristles of your brush to reach entirely through them. Begin brushing down as close to your scalp as you can get, and brush upward and outward with swift strong strokes. Go over all your hair in this way, until you feel your scalp fairly tingling with the increased circulation which the pull upon your hair has caused. The blood which rushes to your scalp, will bring nourishment with it, and your hair cells will be well fed.

Thus you are rewarded in double measure, for your hair grows more healthy, and it is kept clean and glistening while it grows.

STEAMERS TIED UP FOR WINTER SEASON

Five More Entered Kingston Harbor Over the Week End.

KINGSTON, December 1. Canadian Press. — Five more steamers, Elmbay, Oakbay, Oakton, Metcalfe and Key West, arrived in port over the week end to berth for the winter. There are now nine boats docked at the causeway, and the Keybell is at its winter quarters at the Canadian National Railway docks. The steamer Jeska also arrived in port and tied up for the season.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action, it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

"What would be a good name for us to call our hockey team?" asked the leader of a group of boys who had come over to show me a dead nighthawk which they had picked up.

Before I answered this question, I asked them if they knew why the nighthawk died, as it was in fine plumage and not injured in any way.

Nobody could tell. The boys guessed at everything from cats to auto headlights.

"Well, we'll save time," said I. "The nighthawk lives on insects. This one probably remained north too long and a cold spell of weather made all the insects disappear, so that he could not find any food, and he starved to death. Now, what's that you say, about a hockey team?"

"Well, you see, it's this way," said the ringleader. "We just cleaned up on the gang over the other side of town, in football. We nearly got beaten, on account of their colors, but we beat them to a 'Fare-thee-well,' and they say that they are going to trim us in hockey this winter, so we just gotta get colors and a swell name to hold our gang and all that—you know, eh?"

It all amounted to this: the lads were at a disadvantage when up against a brightly colored team. "Why, they have no more men than we have, but they look like a million on the field," said one lad. "They are the Red Stars, with bright red sweaters."

"Sure, I know!" I answered them. "Listen, boys! Did you ever see how an Oriole dazzles and bewilders his sweetheart, when he wants her to think he is the swellest dandy in the world and no other feathered dude is worth looking at? No? Well, I'll tell you.

"You know, the Oriole (that is, th Baltimore Oriole) is colored orange and black in big blotches. Well, he moves in front of her so rapidly that she sees first orange, then black, then orange, then black, until she gets so muddled that she is under a spell."

"That settles it," said the ringleader. "We'll be the Orioles, and our uniforms will be orange and black, to dazzle the Red Stars.

YOUR HEALTH

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D., Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

DAMAGE IS DONE BY CLUMSY REMOVAL.

What do you do for a sore eye?

It all depends on what is wrong with the eye, because if a foreign body of some sort has entered it, there are a number of harmless things to do.

It is a pity that everybody isn't taught how dangerous it is to have the eye poked at by untrained fingers. It hurts so to have something in the eye that in the hope of relief you are ready to submit to anything.

I have seen hundreds of eyes which were wounded and infected by awkward attempts at removal of a cinder. These efforts were made by well-meaning persons and usually in response to the appeal of the victim.

In every mill and factory there is somebody who is believed to possess exceptional skill in extracting cinders. You ought to examine some of these eyes afterward! The magnifying glass shows that the surface tissues have been scraped away and that an area a hundred times the size of the offending object has been denuded by the rough, even though tender-hearted, amateur surgeon.

The direct injury to the eye isn't the worst of it, either. The toothpick, sharpened match, hairpin, or handkerchief corner, may be none too clean. In any event there is frequently carried into the tissues the germs of pus production or other serious infection. Many an eye has been lost, or the sight destroyed, by manipulation of this sort.

If you get a cinder in your eye, fill a perfectly clean glass with perfectly pure water. Bend over the top of the glass so that your eye is submerged in the water. Now wink rapidly for a few minutes.

Nine times out of ten this procedure will cause the foreign body to float out. It is loosened by the winking and the water prevents cutting of the lid or of the eyeball.

If this does not succeed and nobody is present who can turn the lid, you need a real doctor. Cover your eye with a handkerchief and make your way to his office.

If there is much pain, cold water compresses will promote comfort. Covering both eyes helps, because when the vision is cut off the eyes are not moving about. In this way you avoid the scraping and cutting caused by the dragging of the foreign body across the delicate eye or lid covering.

You must keep from rubbing the eye. That practice is sure to be harmful. Let the doctor do all the handling, and in his way you will be given speedy relief without the added danger of infection.

SUGGESTIONS FOR SOLVING CROSS-WORD PUZZLES

Start out by filling in the words of which you feel reasonably sure. These will give you a clue to other words crossing them, and these in turn to still others. A letter belongs in each white space, words starting at the numbered squares and running either horizontally or vertically or both.

Solution will appear in to-morrow's paper.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silvar

BETTY VISITS A QUAINT Little School.

"Oh dear!" Betty pouted, when her mother called her back into the house to put on her rubbers, "I just despise to put on old rubbers."

"I shouldn't think you would despise to wear them," laughed a tiny voice, and Betty turned around to find a dear little elfin standing at her side. "Especially when you know we're going to have a storm."

"I don't really mind wearing them," answered Betty, pulling her rubbers on, "but I just hate to take them off when I get to school. Almost every time I wear them, I forget to put them on when I get ready to come home and the teacher won't let us wear them in the school room."

"Now isn't that funny?" said the Elfin. "But it just makes me think of a queer little school where a friend of mine goes. Suppose we take a flying trip there and then you can see what would happen if they forget." Then before Betty knew what was happening, she found herself sailing over mountains and seas.

"Where are we going Gocomeback?" she asked when she could get her breath. "What place is this?" she added as they settled once more on the ground. Then she gave a merry laugh. "Oh, I know, by the windmills that we're in Holland, as sure as anything. But Gocomeback, surely the children won't wear rubbers to school on a nice day like this, will they?"

"Oh, We're in Holland!"

By this time Gocomeback had led Betty up to a little low school house where several little children were playing out in the yard. At the tap of a bell, they all ran to the door, stood still, did something, which Betty couldn't make out, then one by one filed into the school house.

"Surely they didn't wear rubbers over those clumsy wooden shoes?" cried Betty. "What did they take off at the door, Gocomeback?"

The elfin laughed and led Betty up to the doorway, and there sat the children's little wooden shoes, all piled in a row.

"And they always take their shoes off that way when they go into the school room?" asked Betty, who could hardly believe her own eyes. "My goodness, and I complained when I had to take off my rubbers. Isn't that just too funny for words Gocomeback?"

"Yes, for you it looks funny," he replied, "but the funniest thing would be for you and I to walk into their school house with our shoes on. You see the Hollanders are extremely clean. Why, the floors in their school houses shine, until you can almost see your face in them. Wooden shoes would spoil them.

"Now we had better hurry back to America or you'll be late for school." So when Gocomeback and Betty reached her school Betty thanked Gocomeback for her peek into Holland schools and when she was called on to tell a story that afternoon, she told the one I have just told to you.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 2.

Although some excellent testimonies for good are to be found among this day's stellar activities, yet there are some hints of complications or disappointments. The prominent place of Jupiter, the major benefic vouches for assistance in extremities, probably through the offices of powerful friends. The Saturn aspects to Luna may cause delays or obstacles, but it is advisable to attend to affairs in hand with sagacity and an optimistic spirit.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter some difficulties and delays during the year, but they may also count on the succor and timely assistance of good friends or powerful agencies. They should give their whole-hearted attention to their affairs in order to attract this intervention. A child born on this day may encounter many difficult situations in its career but it may always count upon the time assistance of powerful and well-disposed friends.

An English bronze half-penny is exactly an inch in diameter, and therefore gives us a very convenient measure. Laid on an ordinance map of the inch scale, the half-penny just covers 500 acres.

FAMOUS FORTUNES

PHILIP DANFORTH ARMOUR—THE PACKING KING.

Philip Danforth Armour, or "P. D." as he became known, was born on a farm at Stockbridge, New York, in 1832. When nineteen he walked all the way to the California gold fields to seek his fortune, and failing returned to Milwaukee in 1859, where he went into a produce and commission business.

Followed three prosperous years and he then became a partner of John Plankington, the largest packer in Milwaukee.

Armour built his own refrigerator cars after 1878, which enabled him to market fresh meat where hitherto only pickled meats had been shipped. Then he turned his attention to the science of eliminating waste and soon was manufacturing many lines of by-products—an important part of the packing industry.

Soon the business developed into a great international industrial enterprise. Armour was a practical philanthropist and constantly invested his money in new enterprises just to give more men employment. During his life-time he probably employed more men than any other individual in the world.

Armour gave Dr. Frank W. Gunsaulus $1,000,000 to found the Armour Institute of Technology for boys who could not afford to attend college.

Since the death of Philip D. Armour in 1901, his son, J. Ogden, "J. O." as his colleagues call him, has proved himself a "chip of the old block." Born in 1863 he was called home from school and put through all the hurdles from the killing of live-stock in "Packing Town" to the general offices.

The business, under his administration, handles about 3,000 distinct products. It has permanent offices in 40 foreign cities, 300 branch plants in different countries—the one in Argentina alone costing $3,500,000—and foreign business amounting to $100,000,000 a year. It pays about $300,000,000 annually to American farmers for live stock.

It has the largest refrigerating plant in the world and controls more refrigerator and special cars than any railroad system in the United States.

It has the second largest leather business in the world and ranks among the foremost manufacturers of fertilizers. When the founder died the concern was doing a business of about $180,000,000 a year. To-day, the little packing industry which originated in 1867, employs more than 40,000 people and does $500,000,000 business a year.

ROSENEATH, Dec. 1. — While the threshing machine was in operation on the farm of Mr. Robert Campbell one day recently, Mr. Harold George met with a very painful accident. The table upon which he was standing to feed the machine collapsed, and he fell through the frame work, striking his face in the fall. The result was that he had his nose broken in two places.

What might have been another serious threshing accident occurred at Mr. Herman Blodgett's farm on Thursday afternoon. After one end of the straw shed, which is above the driving shed, had been filled with straw, the sleepers underneath gave way. The complete contents of the straw shed fell below, doing considerable damage to the vehicles stored therein. Easy Lessons in AUCTION BRIDGE

Author of "Ferguson on Auction Bridge"

Copyright 1925 by Hoyle, Jr.

ARTICLE No. 14

The trick bidder seems to be flourishing lately, for a number of hands have been submitted as examples of the value of trick bids. These may be all right for the gambling type of players but the writer prefers the sound, conventional bids, bids that really inform. There is no system of bidding that can hold its own with a system that gives exact information at all times, information that really informs. The bidding, if conventional, should "mirror" one's hand to one's partner. It should give information that will enable partner to act intelligently in his subsequent bidding. The goal of all bidding at auction is to arrive at the best bid of the combined hands, that is the best bid of twenty-six cards, not of thirteen. A player who uses trick bids may confuse his opponents occasionally but in the long run, he loses more by loss of faith of his partner in the soundness of his bids, than he can possibly gain by his trick bidding. A partnership to be successful, either in business or auction, must be founded on mutual trust and confidence. For that reason, be reliable at all times. Let your bids mean what you say. "Every advertised feature a sacred pledge," is not only a good motto for business men but also for auction players. Learn the conventional bids and stick to them. Be reliable, first, last and all the time.

In the following hand, the tricky bidder won out but his gain on that hand has more than been offset by loss of confidence of his partner. There's nothing in these trick bids in the long run so keep away from them. The example is given more as a warning than as a model to follow.

	Hearts — K, 7, 5 Clubs — 8, 5 Diamonds — K, Q, J, 7 Spades — J, 10, 9, 8
Hearts — 9, 6, 3 Clubs — A, K, Q, J, 10, 3, 2 Diamonds — 8, 6 Spades — 5	: Y : : A B : : Z :	Hearts — 10, 8, 4, 2 Clubs — 6 Diamonds — 10, 5, 4, 3 Spades — K, 7, 6
	Hearts — A, Q, J Clubs — 9, 7, 4 Diamonds — A, 9, 2 Spades — A, Q, 4, 2

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and bid one no-trump, A bid two hearts, Y and B passed. Z now bid two no-trump A bid three diamonds, Y doubled and B passed. Z now bid three no-trump, A doubled, Y redoubled and B passed. If you were holding Z's cards, how would you size up the bidding and what would you do?

	: Y :
Hearts — A, Q, J Clubs — 10, 9, 4, 3 Diamonds — 8, 3 Spades — Q, 7, 4, 3	: A B : : Z :	Hearts — A, J, 10, 7, 2 Clubs — A Diamonds — K, Q, 4 Spades — A, 10, 8, 2

In the actual play Z passed and A laid down seven set up club tricks and so set the contract by three tricks or 600 points. A's trick bidding was successful in this instance but Y and Z should have been on the start. Z's mistake occurred when he failed to allow the three diamond double to stay in. If he had, A would have bid four clubs and if doubled would have lost three tricks or 300 points. Y made a serious error by redoubling A's double of three no-trump. He should have realized by then that A could not be doubling on diamonds or hearts. As he held four spades, A's double must be based on the club suit. His redouble is very bad. With Z's hand, the writer would have bid four spades. It should have been apparent that A was doubling on the club suit and nothing more. At spades, YZ could make four odd without trouble. The hands of all four players are as follows:

	Hearts — K, 7, 5 Clubs — 8, 5 Diamonds — K, Q, J, 7 Spades — J, 10, 9, 8
Hearts — 9, 6, 3 Clubs — A, K, Q, J, 10, 3, 2 Diamonds — 8, 6 Spades — 5	: Y : : A B : : Z :	Hearts — 10, 8, 4, 2 Clubs — 6 Diamonds — 10, 5, 4, 3 Spades — K, 7, 6
	Hearts — A, Q, J Clubs — 9, 7, 4 Diamonds — A, 9, 2 Spades — A, Q, 4, 2

Problem No. 8

The following hand involves a principle of play that comes up very frequently. Think out a plan of play that you believe is sound and compare it with the writer's analysis that will be given in the next article.

	: Y :
Hearts — Q, 9, 3 Clubs — 10, 9, 4, 3 Diamonds — 8, 3 Spades — Q, 7, 4, 3	: A B : : Z :	Hearts — A, J, 10, 7, 2 Clubs — A Diamonds — K, Q, 4 Spades — A, 10, 8, 2

Score, YZ 16, AB 10, rubber game. Z dealt and bid one no-trump, A and Y passed and B doubled. Z passed, A bid two spades, Y and B passed and Z bid two no-trump. A and Y passed, B bid three spades, Z doubled and all passed. If Y opened the six of clubs, how should A plan the play of the combined hands?

WINNIPEG TEAM BEST PRODUCED IN CITY'S RUGBY

"Tammany Tigers," Western Champions, Leave Wednesday Morning For Ottawa.

CANADIAN FINAL

Buckingham of Rear Division is Star of Prairie Squad.

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 1 (Canadian Press)—Called upon to face a team whose stock has soared greatly by its clear-cut triumph over the redoubtable Queen's machine, and upholding the prestige of the entire Canadian West, Tammany Tigers of Winnipeg will leave for Ottawa on Wednesday morning in quest of the Dominion Rugby championship The Western champions who meet the Ottawa Senators in the gridiron classic on Saturday next, will be accompanied by a group of Winnipeg supporters.

While the sporting fraternity of Ottawa is celebrating victory and the Capital city's first Eastern championship in many years, Winnipeg fandom is agreed that the Tigers represent the strongest aggregation that has ever ventured afield from Winnipeg for the highest rugby honors.

Throughout the season, the Western champions have performed brilliantly and on only one occasion have they emerged on the short end of the score. The squad is composed of a bunch of youngsters, and a number of veterans who have given the requisite balance to a powerful machine, both offensively and defensively.

No Creating False Hopes

Local experts, however, are not creating any false hopes in the minds of the fans. Sporting writers acknowledge the strength of the newly-crowned Eastern champions and recognize in the Senators a squad which must be accorded more than the usual measure of respect.

It is upon the courage that the Tigers have displayed throughout their season's campaigning, the speed and the "breaks" which usually play an important part in any game that the Western invaders will base their hopes of success.

Their Season Short

"Tiny" Houston, formerly a member of the Toronto Argos, has had charge of the team here and with the aid of "Bunny" Warren, manager, the players have been forced to work their heads off. Faced with the short playing season here the Winnipeggers will go into the East and West contest with less actual experience on the field than the Ottawa Senators, but the strenuous training indulged in since the close of the playing season here, is expected to have good results. When inclement weather made outdoor practise impossible two weeks ago the Tigers took to the gymnasium and have been hard at it for hours each day since.

Twenty-four players will be included in the squad which will journey east and every man will be in condition to play, Coach Houston said Monday.

Easterners will be particularly interested in Johnny Laing, a former member of the Hamilton Tigers, and a strong cog in the strong Winnipeg backfield. Laing is one of the regulars.

The Tigers boast two capable booters in Greg Warren and Jimmy Grant. Both men are sure on catches, are speedy runners and capable tacklers Information is that they compare favoraby with their opposition in the Senator backfield. The real star of the Tigers team, however, is Buckingham, the other member of the back division. Buckingham has been a sensation this fall in every game in which he has taken part He has been the greatest yard gainer on the team and his team-mates are confident that he will be hard to stop in the Dominion final.

INSIDE GOLF.

Maker of 91 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans

By CHESTER HORTON

Hook and slice spins can be imparted to the ball at the player's will by thinking them, as the saying is, rather than by consciously trying to direct the clubhead through the ball for the spin effect. That is, if you want a hook, determine mentally while addressing the ball that as the clubhead hits you will roll the right hand over some just as the clubhead goes through. To your surprise you will discover that the mind, acting on this positive suggestion, will automatically control the hands and bring about the rolling action desired. You can even go further than that — you can cause a pronounced roll, for a quick hook, or you can use just a little roll, for a late hook For a slice spin you do the same thing except for instead of rolling the right hand over you depress it under as the ball is taken. Do not alter your customary stance at all.

BATSTONE WEPT AFTER THE GAME

COMMENT ON GAME.

(From Ottawa Journal).

Confounded by Ottawas' playing and dumfounded by the verdict, Queen's trailed off the field and sought the solace of silence, in their dressing room as thoroughly cowed and beaten a team as ever limped off a gridiron. The plaudits that they heard were for another team, there were no outstretched hands to wish them well and no thumping pats on the back to tell the world that Queen's was triumphant once more.

Filing into their room they slumped in an attitude of dejection on the benches. Outside a woman sobbed while "Red" McKelvey tried to comfort her. Inside Red Batstone, his cap pulled down over his eyes, cried, and refused to be comforted because he gave a touch that meant nothing at the time, but which he thought had thrown away all hope of victory for Queen's. On the rubbing bench Walker and Thomas sat rigid as statues till Thomas pulled himself together and exclaimed, "What a team, boys! We have to hand it to Ottawa."

Gave a Real Cheer.

Galvanized into activity by this remark, Queen's players rose to their feet and an ear splitting and defiant Queen's yell reverberated back and forth to show that, though the Tricolor was beaten it could accept defeat and still hurl vocal defiance at its foes. Another cheer for Bill Hughes, and another for Batstone shook the building and then a resounding peal as the Queen's team gave the Ottawa yell and then rushed out to invade Senators' dressing room.

Straightway they marched, led by Bill Hughes, and the jubilation in the Ottawa stronghold was hushed as he mounted the table and congratulated the new champions on their game.

"We were beaten by a better team to-day. We couldn't have been beaten by a fairer team. They are champions every way you take them, and when we lost we were proud to lose to such a wonderful aggregation."

Tears welled into the eyes of the great coach as he grabbed Dave McCann by the hand and wished him luck. "Liz" Walker almost broke Jim McCaffrey's heart as he peeled off his sweater and conferred it on Don Young who passed his over and Walker put it on.

Shewed Fine Spirit.

The move was an incentive for all others to change regalia, and the Ottawa manager almost swooned as the Queen's players left with the Senatorial jerseys on their chests. Bud Thomas, charging his way through a mass of humanity, finally found Harold Starr and said, "You are the toughest man I ever played against. I have played against Fear and Thom and all the good ones for some years, but I never played against a better man." Seeking Joe Tubman, he exclaimed, "Talk about tackling Conacher—Joe you have the biggest knees I ever went against in my life, and I missed you so often I have a sore side from falling on the hard ground."

Again an ear-splitting yell as Ottawas gathered together and the Queen's anthem pealed out in token of a great and game team losing for the first time in years. There were cheers for Bill Hughes, cheers for Bud Thomas, and cheers for Batstone; and Queen's found in the ranks of the enemy that appreciation which their own followers withheld in the hour of their defeat.

Great teams may come and great teams may go—but no finer losers or greater gentlemen have ever adorned the rugby field than Queen's. They gave all they had but it wasn't enough. They lost to a superior foe—and acknowledged it.

Doc Davies Danced.

Seldom has the Ottawa dressing room witnessed such scenes as were enacted after the game. Dr. Davies, whose work with the line brought them almost to a state of perfection, danced a jig and he and Joe Fraser and Dr. Sims gave their famous song of victory, part in French and part in Latin. Players thumped and hugged each other, everybody shook hands with everybody else. Over in the corner Tom Clancy, whose fighting speech at half-time had inspired Ottawas, sat almost choked with emotion. Doc Hand dashed to and fro shaking hands with all and sundry, and finally policemen came and cleared the dressing room to give the tired Ottawas a chance to get into their street clothes, and go home—or any place.

It was a treat to see players, officials and spectators stand rigidly at attention just before the kickoff, when the band of the Governor-General's Footguards struck up the National Anthem. It made one think of the great number of gridiron stars of yesteryear who had played another game in Flanders' mud when the call came.

Old-time football players and present-day stars surged through the massive crowd that stood with their fellow-men to give tribute to the greatest football team that has worn Ottawa colors in 16 years.

There was Eddie Gleason, brainiest backfield player of them all; Tom Clancy, Tom Boucher, Ovide Lafleur, names to conjure with years ago—all were there to enjoy the victory that marked the dethronement of the greatest football machine that ever stepped on Canadian gridiron.

That No Record?

Had Queen's merged victorious they would have broken a rugby record standing for the past 33 years. Since 1892, no team has won the Dominion championship more than three years in succession. Toronto Varsity, defeated by Hamilton in 1908, came back and won Canadian honors in 1909, 1910 and 1911. Winners in 1922, 1923 and 1924, Queen's were smothered by Ottawas just as they believed themselves on the threshold of another Dominion championship.

Queen's record for invincibility. 26 consecutive victories, from November 18, 1922, to November 21, 1925, is likely to stand for years to come. The Ottawa College fourteen of the eighties which won the Ontario Union championship five years in a raw, 1885, 1886, 1887, 1888 and 1889, was the only team that came anywhere near the mark.

The backfield play of Joe Tubman and Joe Miller constituted a stellar performance, one of the best ever witnessed on a Canadian gridiron. They faced the blinding rays of a westering sun and an adverse wind for two periods, plus the stiffest kind of tacking throughout the game without flinching.

First and foremost came Joe Tubman. In years gone by Joe earned his spurs, but in this game he rose to the heights of greatness. His return kicking broke the back of the Tricolor backfield resistance. His superb punting, and his shifty play made him an outstanding player.

Eddie Gleeson, probably the greatest half-back that ever trod a gridiron, said of his exhibition that it was perfect. Greater praise no man could have.

Queen's harried Tubman at all times. Thomas tried his utmost to bring him down, and Walker did his best, but the silent, trudging Ottawa back was as elusive as a will o' the wisp. He faked kicks, he returned running kicks, and he did everything that a capable halfback should do. In the past rugby fandom has considered Leadley and Batstone great, but Tubman was greater. Bud Thomas proclaimed him a harder man than Conacher to bring down.

(From Kingston Standard).

Where Queen's have shone in the last four years, they failed to show that brilliance on Saturday, namely on the back division. It may have been that the slippery ground had a lot to do with it, for several times when end-runs were seemingly going to be successful, Batstone or Leadley slipped and fell. Leadley's kicking was not as effective as usual. His drives for the most part were not high enough to allow his wings sufficient time but even at that Tubman proved a greater obstacle than anything the students have been up against since Snyder's great day here three years ago. Norrie, Brown and Airth worked their heads off, but the Ottawa line was unbeatable all afternoon. At quarter Baldwin worked hard, but the Ottawa wings were breaking through, and nipped many of the trick plays in the bud.

When they took off their sweaters on Saturday the following players took them off for all time so far as Queen's are concerned, for they will graduate this year: Leadley, Batstone, "Red" McKelvey, Muirhead, Lewis, Thomas. May success follow them wherever they go. They have played the game cleanly, fairly and well. May they play the game of Life in the same spirit! Their Alma Mater is proud of them!

It may look a little tough to lose two championships on the same afternoon, but on the other hand, please remember that it is given to but few institutions to be in that position where its athletes are in position to win or lose two on the same day.

Well, that's that. Now all the strain on the players is gone. It sure was a mighty task to keep up the great reputation Queen's made, and in fact too much was expected of them. But they certainly went down scrapping, and at the end of the game were battling just as hard as ever.

(From Hamilton Spectator).

Saturday's game at Ottawa showed that the brand of football played in the Interprovincial Union is as good as is dished up by the college teams. Tigers were beaten in Ottawa by a score of 8 to 3 and made a much better showing against Tubman and company than Queen's did last Saturday. The Ottawa team is composed mostly of "home-brews," and will be practically intact for next season's campaign. With the young Tiger team having had the needed experience this season, the Bengals should be heard from in 1926.

Commenting on Saturday's game The Montreal Gazette says:

"Never has there been a greater upset in Canadian rugby than that of Saturday afternoon. Queen's, a squad which has made football history by winning twenty-six consecutive matches, were made the three to one favorite over a team of practically unknown quantity, but comprising players who were going through a new experience, that of playing for a Dominion title, and who went through their work in a manner that has never been surpassed on any Canadian gridiron.

OWNED BY PIRATES.

Johnny McKinnon Taken From Montreal Canadiens By Decision.

MONTREAL, Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press).—Johnny McKinnon, former Winnipeg and Pittsburgh amateur hockey player who was have played with Montreal Canadiens this season, belongs to Pittsburgh Pirates. This was the decision announced Monday by Frank Calder, President of the National Hockey League, after considering Owner Rigby's claim to the player.

Leo Dandurand, manager of the Canadiens, voluntarily relinquished on hearing Mr. Riby's report.

QUEEN'S COACH CONGRATULATES OTTAWA TEAM ON THEIR VICTORY

Billy Hughes Admits Disappointment and Says Practically Whole Team Closed College Grid Career in Ottawa.

"NO REGRETS AND NO EXCUSES."

KINGSTON, Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press).—"We have no regrets and no excuses but we congratulate wholeheartedly the members of the Ottawa rugby team" said coach W. P Hughes, of Queen's inter-collegiate champions in a statement Monday.

"Naturally I must admit a sense of keen disappointment," said Coach Hughes, "first of all for the players of the squad who worked so long and so faithfully, and whom I would have liked to see go through the season without a defeat; and next for those who so loyally supported the team for the past four years.

"On the other hand while we admit this disappointment, we know that they all share with us an abiding sense of pride in the glorious record of Queen's senior football team.

Their Last Game.

"While it is true that practically the last man of that original squad who demonstrated to the Canadian public the highest type of clean sportsmanship on the Canadian football field, and who constituted the greatest team that ever played in Canadian rugby, passed out of intercollegiate rugby on Saturday, that spirit of Queen's did not pass out with them. It will live in Queen's teams of the future, and the Canadian public no doubt will again be thrilled by the work of Queen's players on the gridiron.

"While we admit the disappointment, at the same time we have no regrets or excuses. We congratulate wholeheartedly the Ottawa club, players, executive, coach and supporters. We feel that their path has been somewhat similar to that of Queen's; for years they were the underdogs in the inter-provincial as were were in the inter-collegiate and we congratulate them on the attainment of their ideals, which they worked hard for, and we wish them all success."

SENATORS RESUME WORKOUTS FOR FINAL WITH WESTERNERS

Ottawa Fans Slow to Realize Rough Riders' Achievement in Dethroning Queen's — Rested Yesterday.

JOE MILLER MISSING NEXT SATURDAY.

OTTAWA, Ont, Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press).—Wearing their newly-won honors somewhat hilariously but nevertheless modestly, the Ottawa Senators are all ready to continue the rugby grind for another week at the end of which preparation they meet Winnipeg Tammany Tigers here for the Canadian Senior Rugby championships. The Westerners represent the last obstacle in the path of the Ottawas on their march to Canadian honors. Yesterday was a rest for the Eastern titleholders but this afternoon they will be back in harness. Dave McCann is going to allow no let up in the Ottawa camp and the men themselves, proud of their achievement in toppling the mighty Queen's machine, are keen as can be on going right through to the Dominion title.

Joe Miller left for St. Paul last night, where he will play hockey this winter, but in Edgar Mulroney the Senators have a backfield player who is being counted on to uphold that end of the team. Mulroney will be paired off with Captain Joe Tubman on the half line and if he goes in the form that has marked his previous efforts this season, the rearguard will be just as steady as ever Miller's absence will be felt nevertheless, for he is a field general in addition to a sure catch, a tricky runner and a good kicker.

Tigers Powerful.

There is no under-rating the visitors. They are said to have collected a team that will do credit to the West and the Senators will not slacken a bit in their efforts to defeat them. In Buckingham and Vanvlett, the Tigers have a pair whom the critics rate with the best in the East and they are reputed to have a very powerful line.

The city is rugby crazy. The fact that Ottawa had defeated Queen's and won the Eastern Canada championship did not sink in until after the game was over. It was not till Sunday and yesterday that the fans are fully alive to the fact that the mighty Queen's machine has at last been stopped and by a team that outplayed the famous tricolor crew at practically every turn.

Many Congratulations

Congratulations from many outside points and from ex-Ottawas all over the country have poured in on the Senators. Joe Tubman is the best-known citizen of this city right now, and close behind come Jimmy Wright. For a number of years Wright has been one of the most faithful members of the local squad, content to give his best for the short periods asked without a murmur, always fit and ready to do what he was asked. Fortune has been kind to him finally and now his name is written in the rugby annals alongside those of the other makers of rugby victory.

ARSENAL PLAYED MAGNIFICENT GAME

Defeated League Leading Sunderland Team on Icy Field.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Fifty thousand eMtropolitan ians crowded Arsenal's ground at Highbury Saturday to see Sunderland, the North of England Club, that have been ridirg roughshod over the first division of the English Football League fail in perhaps the most crucial test of their present season when Arsenal, playing a magnificent game on a field that looked like a hockey rink, due to frost and ice, sent the former league leaders down to defeat by two goals to nothing. Additional to seeing the crushing of the leaders the crowd saw also their own club, Arsenal, take the top position of the league with excellent prospects of retaining it for some time to come.

G. N. GORDON, K.C. DONATED SOCCER CUP AND MEDALS

Thistle Players Received Two Sets of Medals, 1924 and 1925 Season

NAMES OF PLAYERS.

De Laval Juveniles Accept the Gordon Cup as League Champions.

A very successful soccer season was terminated last evening in the Chamber of Commerce when a large number of the fans attended the presentation of the medals and cups to the winning teams of the local elevens that have enjoyed the sportsmanship during the past season under the auspices of the Peterboro and District Senior Association. President Wylie was in the chair.

G. N. Gordon Presented Medals.

G. N. Gordon, K.C., made all the presentations to the players and intimated that he had seen the day when he was at college that it was no small achievement for him to be in the college team that gave clean, healthful sport to build up a strong physique, thereby making splendid citizens. Hockey is our great winter sport and is very much like soccer that calls for the best in the individual. I always considered that the smaller boys should be encouraged in this sport; also it is absolutely essential that every assistance should be given them. In the medal, which I have chosen, as a small contribution of mine to the game; it is just a memento to the boys so that they may keep it as a recognition of their efforts. This silverware can be worn as a fob or any other way. It is of solid sterling silver and should last a long time.

List of 1924 Players.

President Wylie called the following players present to receive their medals, which the donor handed over. The following participants are entitled to a medal who played with the Thistles during 1924:

W. Curtiss, A. Anderson, J. B. Rae, R. Carmichael, A. Jackson, D. Ross, R. Young, P. Hutton, H. Richmond, R. Dawson, A. Burgess, N. McPhail, C. Hotson and A. Williams—14 medals.

Unique Design.

On each medal presented by G. N. Gordon his name was inscribed thereon. The design was of an unusual kind, thereby making it more valuable. It is one inch in diamteer of solid sterling silver with a soccer player in a running attitude, with the ball at his foot, and running in below is a maple leaf of elite character on the front while the back has the donor's inscription with an alaborate display of maple leafs entwined.

Association Medals.

The medals presented by the board to the winners of this year's league champions—the Thistle—along with the White challenge cup, were of a different shape entirely. This year's souvenirs were an inch and a quarter maple leaf of solid gold with a circular panel in the centre containing a soccer player in the act of touching the ball with his left foot.

The following Thistle players received 1925 league championship medals

J. Brown, A. Anderson, F. E. Wade, R. Carmichael, J. Wade, A. Williams, T. Wilson, P. Hutton, H. Richmond, R. Dawson, A. Browell and G. Nimmons, secretary-treasurer.

Hugh Richmond responded with an amicable reply.

A Splendid Trophy.

In introducing the presentation of the juvenile trophy, President Wylie said, "the feature of the evening,"—and no doubt it was. The trophy is a beautiful solid silver cup of elongated design, with two arch handles attached thereon. The inscription on the cup reads thus: "Presented by G. N. Gordon, K. C., to P. and D. F. A. for annual competition and is finished in a magnificent mahogany base.

Captain and Manager Accepted Trophy.

Hon. G. N. Gordon stated that he noticed that it read "annual" but he did not intend it as such; but if the present winners (De Laval Juveniles) won it next year, he would give another cup, because he intended the silverware to be won two out of three. He continued further when he addressed Captain Watkins and Manager Fowler of the De Laval Juniors on winning the cup, also for the skilful tactics shown during the season. "I would like to see some of the older boys divulge some of the tricks of the game that cannot be got out of books; this is the only way that individual methods can produce splendid players in the great national game. A debt of gratitude be extended to the managers and gentlemen who give their time ungrudingly to foster the sport. Age and weight now prevents me from participating in the game."

Captain Watkins received the cup and Manager Fowler made a suitable reply.

Association thanks Press.

The Board of Directors instructed the secretary to write and thank the manager of the Examiner for the splendid reports and assistance received during the year.

Bowling

At K. of C. Alleys

At the Knights of Columbus' bowling alleys last evening, the Shamrocks (Miss Helen Quinn, captain) took two games out of three from the Larks (Miss Margaret O'Brien, captain), and the Morning Glories (Miss Marion Hayes, captain) took two games from the Orchids (Miss Marita Collins, captain). Mrs. E. Cronin of the Shamrocks' team, had high score of 167, and Miss Madeline O'Heron of the Orchids made a score of 159.

C.G.E. DRAFTING ROOM LEAGUE

C.G.E. drafting room scores are improving each time out. Last night A.C. No. 1 took three from Miscellaneous, D.C. took two out of three from Ind. Motors and A.C. No. 2 took the odd game from Switchboards.

Foster rolled high three for the night with 708, which included singles of 249 and 270. McLeish was second high with 619 for three, which included a single of 256. Other nice singles were turned in by Morton 220, Allen 202, Metherel 201, Hutchinson 221 and 208; Thorton 209, McCabe 204, Stanton 238 and Jackson 222 and 216. These boys could put a team on the alleys that would make things very interesting for the League leaders in the City or Mercantile five-pin leagues.

The Cardinals took all three games from the Larks, capturing the last one by the close margin of five pins, Miss Ryley's nice single of 192 giving them a close race for the game. The Cardinals bowled a nice game of 730 for the first one, Miss Adams having a splendid single of 222. She also was high for three games with a good total of 566, having two other singles of 184 and 160.

George St. took all three games from the Woollens and rolled some great games to do it. The third one was especially good, with every one rolling over 200 for an excellent total of 1067. Robertson was high for three with 642 made up of three nice singles of 233, 215 and 194. Other good singles were Nels Routley's 237 and 219, Curvin's 226 and 204, Outram's 207, Norm Routley's 204 and Hillman's 231.

WHIPPING SOUGHT FOR DRUG PEDDLERS

British Columbia Legislature Asks Federal House to Amend Act.

VICTORIA, Dec. 1. (Canadian Press).—A motion seeking to authorize the use of the lash on men convicted of the sale of narcotic drugs was unanimously adopted by the British Columbia Legislature to-day.

The motion, moved by Major Gus Lyons, Conservative, called upon the Federal Government to amend the Opium and Narcotic Drug Act, 1923, so as to provide whipping in the discretion of the judge in addition to the penalties already provided.

to swim and where they will be adequately protected.

Benefit Concert.

It was announced that a benefit concert will be held in the G.W.V.A. Hall on Monday next in aid of the widow of the late Comrade Jack Crompton, who was accidentally killed in Peterborough this spring by falling from a Utilities pole.

The meeting approved a plan drawn up by the executive committee to sponsor a war picture that will appear at the Regent Theatre next week, the G.W.V.A. to profit by a substantial share of the proceeds. With the approach of winter, and the usual calls for assistance, the executive feels the need of increased funds. Every year, as the effects of the war on individual soldiers becomes more pronounced, the demands upon the G.W.V.A. for help are increasing. The members believe they are doing a community service, and are discharging a duty of the citizens, and on this ground they are asking support through patronage of the war picture to be shown at the Regent Theatre.

AT THE CAPITOL

RUDOLPH VALENTINO IN "COBRA"

The fascinating Rudolph is appearing once more in our midst, a trifle stouter, just a little heavier about the shoulder line, but still sleek of head and charming of manners. The attribute of Valentino that chains the interest to his acting is perhaps his restraint. He never overdoes anything and seldom appears to be acting. His role is more that of a side-liner forced into the limelight and impressing his audience with his own mental reactions to various situations.

"Cobra" has a somewhat sad ending. At least, as far as the hero is concerned, because the handsome Valentino is pictured as renouncing the one real love of his life for the sake of friendship, and in expiation of an act which had caused that same friend much suffering.

Women spell trouble to the handsome young Count Rodigo Torriani, the impoverished Italian nobleman who is taken to America by a chance friend and becomes a member of the latter's antique merchandising firm. Still, he cannot resist them, for when Nita Naldi, playing the role of Elise Dorning, wife of his business partner, becomes infatuated with him, he is involved with her in an intrigue that leads to her death. In the meantime, he has actually fallen in love with Mary Drake, Dorning's secretary, also loved by the latter after the death of his wife. And Valentino finally gives her up and goes away. That is the ending to a story that is romantic and entertaining and owes its interest to the charm of the star. "The screen's most perfect lover" doesn't do a great deal of emotional work in this picture. And his role is not a particularly attractive one, when boiled down to its essentials. As a philanderer, he plays with fire sufficiently to burn his own hands considerably and to lose out in what has come to be the best game in his life. The real happiness that he cares for slips away from hands too weak to hold it and he is compelled to give to his faithful friend that which he has not deserved for himself.

The fascination which the cobra has for the tiger, its intended victim, as portrayed in a piece of marble, explains the title, Torriani declaring it to be similar to the fascination of women for him.

There is an excellent supporting cast. Nita Naldi is as snaky as usual in her vampish role, and Gertrude Olmstead is particularly good as Mary Drake, the blonde young secretary. Claire de Lorez is a striking minor figure in the role of Rosa Minardi, a light of love of the young Count.

The comedy is a Mack Sennett mixup, entitled "Cold Turkey," with plenty of action in its absurd situations, and there are the usual excellent short reels.—Jeannette.

AT THE GRAND

BRINGING UP FATHER IN GAY NEW YORK.

An attraction calculated to meet with immediate approval and endorsement is underlined as the next offering at the Grand Opera House Saturday, December 5th, with the customary matinee. It bears the title of "Bringing Up Father in Gay New York", and of course, is based on the world-famous George McManus cartoons of the same name. Once more Jiggs, Maggie, Dinty Moore and the rest of the merry Mahoney clan will participate in side-splitting and rollicking situations. Their adventures are scheduled to carry them at a fast-going clip through and around the biggest city in America, besides paving the way for a brand of humor and comedy that is part and parcel of these same inimitable comics. Twenty fascinating and bewitchingly beautiful young women, all resplendently gowned and talented on their own account, music of a lilting and infectious brand, surprises, screams, novelties, and fun that brings joy to the saddest heart, comprises a production that should recommend itself to any theatregoer. This is the identical offering that won favor and immediate endorsement at the Lyric Theatre, New York where is enjoyed a long and profitable run.

"LUCKY 7" IS DUMBELLS LATEST.

The vivacity and versatility that made them from their very formation the cleverest entertainment troupe in Haig's armies has not deserted The Dumbells.

Graced by the presence of such ever-popular favorites as Al. Plunkett, Ross Hamilton, "Red" Newman, Stan. Bennett, Pat. Rafferty, "Jock" Holland, Ben Allen, Morley Plunkett, Glen Allan and Jimmy Devon, they will offer their latest and greatest success "Lucky 7" at the Grand for a one night request return show on Wednesday, December 9th.

That his seventh annual revue in Canada might prove his greatest offering as a theatrical producer Captain Plunkett has supplied his constellation of stars with the best musical numbers and sketches available in the world's markets and has supplied each individual item on the program with a special setting.

The Dumbells are so firmly intrenched in the affections of local theatre-goers that their engagements here have come to mean crowded houses at every performance. Relying on past records for his assurance of the future Captain Plunkett has increased his cost of production and weekly expense by over a third more than any preceding season and has adopted as his slogan "No empty seats." The management of the theatre and the box-office staff are out for a new record this time and reserved seats will be put on sale at the theatre on Monday, December 7th, while mail orders are now being accepted and filled in the order of their receipt. Mail orders should be accompanied with cheque or money order for the value of the tickets, plus tax.

AT THE ROYAL

"REVEILLE" AT ROYAL.

Appealing Story of Love Laughs and Thrills—Sure to Attract Large Crowds.

Betty Balfour, better known locally as "Squibs," is back at the Royal and the usual large crowds are in evidence. "Reveille" is a slice of life itself. Starting with the war, then the armistice and the reconstruction days in England, it is a glowing tribute to the part the British women played in "carrying on."

As Mick the flapper in "Reveille" she has created a character of exquisite light and shade with its phases of great emotion and comedy relief.

It is decidedly a worth-while offering. Mention should be made of the excellent music setting for the feature by the Royal Orchestra.

As a prologue, the songs made popular by the war was flashed on the screen, the audience joining in with great enthusiasm.

A POPULAR CAST IN "PATHS TO PARADISE."

Betty Compson, Raymond Griffith Featured in Fine Comedy.

Betty Compson and Raymond Griffith, the funny fellow with the silk hat, are co-featured in the principal roles of a Paramount picture, "Paths to Paradise," which comes to the Royal Theatre for a three days' run on Thursday.

"Paths to Paradise," a riotously funny crook comedy, was adapted for the screen by Keene Thmopson from Paul Armstrong's play, "The Heart of a Thief." Clarence Badger, director of "New Lives for Old" and "Eyes Secret," and who was also associated over a period of years with Mack Sennett as a producer of laugh films, directed the production.

Betty is the fictitious queen of a band of counterfeiters in San Franciscos Chinatown. Griffith pays a visit to their underworld den one day and believing him to be a sap, they take his bankroll away from him. He flashes a badge however and threatens the pack of them with prison, suggesting that they might buy their way out of the situation, which they do—only to discover that he is a more clever crook than they. The "police badge" he purposely leaves on the table when he skips out reads "San Francisco Gas Meter Inspector."

Fred Kelsey is cast as one of Betty's confederates in the production, while Tom Santschi has the role of the detective whom Griffith impersonates in a successful attempt to get his hands on some valuable gems at a fashionable reception. Bert Woodruff is the owner of the jewels over which Betty and Ray wage a regular battle of wits.

If there ever was a picture with a hand picked cast this is it. Remember Ray Griffith in "Forty Winks" and "The Night Club"?—the fact that he's in the cast is an entertainment guarantee for any picture.

St. George's Society Decides Reading is More Educational Than Travel.

Last evening the meeting of St. George's A.Y.P.A. took the form of a debate, the subject being: "Resolved that reading is more educational than travel." The affirmative was taken by Miss M. Huxley and Mr. F. Dorrell, and the negative by Miss I. Parkes and Mr. A. Robertson. The chairman for the evening was Mr. T. Robertson. The judges were Miss E. Parkes, Mr W. James and the Rev. J. L. Hughes. The debates brought out several good points. The points were given out by Miss Parkes, who awarded the winning points to the affirmative.

The meeting was closed by the rector.

BOY LOST LEG BENEATH TRAIN

Lad Was on Way Home From School When Companion Pushed Him.

ON CLOSED STREET.

PARRY SOUND, Dec. 1. (Canadian Press).—Billy Greer, aged 6, son of Ernest Greer of this town, had his right leg crushed by a C.P.R. train yesterday afternoon.

The boy was on his way home from school, and when he reached the crossing which the children have been in the habit of using, although the streets has been closed by the C.P.R., his little companion is supposed to have pushed him under a moving train. He was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital, where his leg was amputated below the knee.

OBITUARY

MRS. WILLIAM RICHARDSON.

NORWOOD, Dec. 1.—The death occurred on Sunday morning, Nov. 29th, at her home on Peterborough street, Norwood, of Mrs. Wm. Richardson, Sr., at the advanced age of 92 years. The deceased had lived in this district for practically all her life and had resided in the house where she died for nearly seventy years. A short while ago she fell and broke her hip and on account of her advanced years the shock was too much for her. Her husband, who was one of Norwood's oldest residents, predeceased her a few years ago. She leaves to mourn her loss three sons, Mr. Robert Richardson of Western Canada, Mr. Archie Richardson, of Tilsonburg, and Mr. W. A. Richardson, of Norwood, also one daughter, Miss Annie, who resided with her mother.

The funeral will take place this afternoon from her late residence. Interment will be made in the Norwood cemetery.

SEVEN FAMILIES ARE HOMELESS AND NINE BUILDINGS DESTROYED EARLY MORNING FIRE IN MATTAWA

Damage Is Expected To Amount To About $150,000.

STARTED IN STORE.

Flames Gained Great Headway Before Fire Was Discovered.

NORTH BAY, Dec. 2. (Canadian Press).—Latest advices received in North Bay on the fire in Mattawa are to the effect that the total damage will be in the neighborhood of $150,000, part of which is covered by insurance. The Gignac, Monseur, Guilbeau, and Savazin families, who lost everything, were saved in their night attire by fire fighters.

Seven Families Homeless.

Seven families are homeless, four dwellings and five stores are burned to the ground, while a number of other buildings are damaged. According to fragmentary reports received here of the fire which broke out in Mattawa early this morning, reports are to the effect that the blaze started in the grocery store of K. C. McDonald, and when it was noticed at 5 this morning, it had gained too much headway to be checked. The flames spread to a fruit store owned by N. Karan, an Assyrian, to a hardware store owned by J. A. Fink, to the dry goods store of Mr. Monsour and to the Customs Office. An apartment building tenanted by H. E. Gilbeau and Mr. Gignac, the C.P.R. agent, was destroyed, as was the residence of L. Mousseau. The names of the owners of the other houses are not available at present.

Mattawa is a town of about two thousand people, situated about fifty miles east of North Bay, at the junction of the Mattawa and Ottawa Rivers. It is in the heart of a lumbering district.

WIFE LEAVES HIM; SUES FOR $10,000

Case To Be Heard in Peterborough—Local Lawyers Are Acting.

An interesting case in which Peterborough lawyers are acting, and which will probably be tried in Peterborough is that of James Mooney, a farmer residing in the township of Cardiff in the County of Haliburton, and John Doherty, a switchman, residing in Belleville. The plaintiff through his lawyers, Gordon and O'Brien, alleges that John Doherty last year sought to induce the plaintiff's wife to leave him and invited her to come and live with him at his home. Up until this time the plaintiff says his wife and he had lived happily together but on June 9, 1924 the defendant succeeded in inducing Mrs. Mooney to leave her home. Since then, it is alleged, she has lived with the defendant and has never returned to her home, having abandoned her husband and her children.

The writ goes on to say that "as a result of the above mentioned acts of the defendant the plaintiff has been deprived of the society of his wife, the said Ethel Mooney, and of cohabitation with her, and his home has been broken up as a result of the heartless schemes and plans of the defendant in inducing the said Ethel Mooney to leave her husband and home and children.

"The plaintiff has suffered great loss and damage as a result of the acts of the defendant, and has been put to much pain and mental suffering and has been humiliated in the eyes of his friends by the disgrace brought upon his wife by the defendant.

The claim made by the plaintiff is for the sum of $10,000 damages and for the costs of the action. The writ was delivered yesterday.

COUNCIL TALKS COST OF BREAD

Members Say Price in Peterborough is Higher Than Other Places.

ENLARGE BUILDING.

At the session of the County Council this morning a motion was passed authorizing the chairman of the property committee to consult an architatct and obtain plans for an annex to be built at the north end of the county buildings.

Following a report, presented by J. F. Breckenridge, on the House of Refuge, it was decided that the County Council as a whole visit the property this afternoon. Mr. Strickland, during the course of a discussion said it had been brought to his attention that much of the supplies for the House of Refuge was purchased in the City of Peterborough. He said that this was particularly true concerning bread, and thought that supplies should be purchased from dealers in the county.

Warden Rye said he had heard that the bread as formerly supplied by a Lakefield bakery was not satisfactory. He also declared that the price per loaf was too high.

Mr. Strickland said that all prices were high at that time, and came down later.

BLOOD PRESSURE LECTURE SUBJECT

St. Catharines Doctor Has Been Making Experiments With Good Results.

TORONTO, Dec. 2 (Canadian Press)—Attention has recently been given the possible value of extract of certain organs, particularly liver, in the treatment of high blood pressure, and the matter has been the subject of extensive experiments by Dr. W. J. MacDonald of St. Catherines. A review of these experiments was given by Dr. MacDonald in a lecture which he delivered last evening to the members of the Academy of Medicine. The historical phase of the question was treated by Professor J. J. R. MacLeod of the University of Toronto.

The lecture was limited to members of the Academy only, and with the close, emphasis was laid upon the fact that the treatment under consideration was still in an experimental stage and had not been brought to the point of being made available to the public or that section of it which is afflicted with high blood pressure.

The Wettest November in 30 Years, But Snowfall Light

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 2—Weather reports for November are replete with surprises, while Monday, the last day of the month, was the coldest day on record in 36 years with a temperature of 17 degrees below zero, recorded at the Experimental farm early in the day, the November snowfall of this year was far below the average for the same period, the rainfall on the other hand was almost twice the average of the preceding 36 years.

The figures for last November are as follows: snowfall, 4.10 inches; rainfall, 3.09 inches; average temperature, 39 degrees above; highest temperature, 55 above, and lowest, 11 below, on November 30.

GERMANY WANTS OTHER REFORMS BY THE ALLIES

No Feeling of Equality Until All Foreign Troops Are Withdrawn.

LIBERALS PLEASED.

Absolution From War Guilt Charge Another Issue Not Adjusted.

BERLIN, December 2. — Canadian Press. — Exaltation over the formal signing of the Locarno treaties continues to be confined to the Liberal Press of Berlin, although all the newspapers give much space to describing the London ceremonies.

While welcoming the culmination of the European peace undertaken at Locarno, the German editors aver that complete fulfilment of German hopes depends upon further reforms and corrections in Germany's post war relations with her former opponents. With these reservations it is conceded that the Rhineland pact negotiated at Locarno has taken the sting out of the security problem, making possible the substitution of a pact based on co-operation for the military alliance suggested in the proposed tri-party pact between Great Britain, France and the United States.

Other German Demands.

Germania, the organ of the Centrist party, laments: "Europe still is far from being livable, and will remain so until we are able to hold our own with honor in peaceful competition with the United States."

This paper sees in the treaties of Locarno Europe's last opportunity and hopes that M. Briand will seize upon it.

That Germany is still being deprived of a just measure of equality is asserted by the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, which declares that the mere signatures of the high contracting parties will not remedy the existing injustice. Such issues as universal disarmament and absolution from the charge of war guilt remain to be adjusted, says the industrialists' organ, and it adds that so long as foreign troops are posted on German soil, and the principle of a neutralized zone remains unapplied also to the areas west of the Franco-Belgian frontiers, there can be no talk of equality.

The reactionary organs confine their discontent over the London signing formalities by reporting them under such captions as "Renewal of Versailles."

ONE KILLED AS TRAIN HIT CAR

Howard Clark, 21, Was Hurled Through Side of Sedan.

DRIVER HURT.

LONDON, Dec. 2 (Canadian Press)—Howard Clark, aged 21, son of A. J. Clark, a grocer, was instantly killed, and Cyril Hayes, 37, was severely injured shortly after noon yesterday when a light sedan driven by Hayes was struck by an east bund C.P.R. flier at St. George and Picadilly streets.

Clark was hurled over Hayes and through the window on the driver's side of the machine. Then, according to witnesses, the wrecked motor was thrown twice around and Hayes was catapulted to the side of the tracks. Clark had suffered a severe wound at the base of the skull and died almost instantly. Hayes was able to stand after the accident but later collapsed and was taken to St. Joseph's hospital where it was found that he had fractured ribs and spinal injuries.

GOOD MAGISTRATE COULD HELP IN CHILDREN'S CASES AS WELL AS COULD A SPECIAL JUDGE

Captain C. H. Buckland Addresses Annual Meeting of Children's Aid Society.

TREND OF TIMES.

Reports Show Some Parents Taking Less Interest in Their Children.

That a good magistrate could be as helpful in dealing with juvenile court cases as a special judge, was the declaration made by Captain C. H. Buckland, in the course of an address to the Children's Aid Society last night. The occasion was the annual meeting, when reports from the various committees were received and showed a highly profitable year's operation.

In a special report presented by the secretary it was stated that the past year had been a busy one and that the cases were becoming more frequent and of a more difficult nature. Parents appear to be taking less interest in their children than in former years—a tendency which has a serious effect on the character and development of the child. A great deal of patience is necessary in dealing with those who come under the jurisdiction of the society, as in many cases some of the children are taken out and given homes for the rush season. Other are taken out, supplied with clothes, and are returned to the society when the clothing becomes worn. Mr. Edgar in his report stated, however, that the situation had its brighter side, and that in many cases the children were taken into good homes, provided with comforts and attention, which would ordinarily be given to the children of the foster parents.

CANADA'S NAVAL BILL IS LIGHT

Only $1,400,000 For Present Year—Jellicoe Asks For $36,000,000.

AID MOTHER LAND.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 2 (Canadian Press)—Apropos the suggestion by Viscount Jellicoe, as reported by cable yesterday, that Canada should, in addition to other Imperial naval assistance, contribute $36,000,000 yearly for the next few years towards the cost of the Imperial navy. Records here show that the appropriation made by parliament at its last session for the upkeep of the Canadian navy during the present year was $1,400,000. A similar sum was appropriated by parliament for the same purpose for the fiscal year 1924-25.

Since the establishment of the Canadian navy in 1910 up to April 1, 1925, the amount of $54,286,490 has been sent by Canada on the navy. No direct contribution is being made to the Imperial navy.

Canada's Naval Program

This year's appropriation is being expended towards the upkeep of two destroyers, 4 mine sweepers, 2 naval training establishments and two naval dockyards and the necessary personnel, the training establishments and dockyards being located at Halifax and Esquimalt, on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts respectively. A body of 1500 Royal Canadian naval volunteer reserve, who train at their headquarters and at the training establishments on the two coasts, is also maintained.

In addition, a Royal Canadian Naavl Reserve, composed of officers and men who follow the sea as their profession and who receive their training at Halifax and Esquimalt, has been established.

The suggestion as to Canada's contribution to the navy is made in connection with an appeal by Viscount Jellicoe in Brassey's naval annual publication to all the British dominions to "face the situation" and assist the motherland, each portion of the empire sharing the naval burden in proportion to its population.

TURKEY CASE APPEAL WINS

David Beck's Conviction Quashed on Hearing Before Judge McGlade.

AGAINST G. WARD.

Yesterday before His Honour Judge McGlade, the appeal of David Beck from the decision of His Worship O. A. Langley was heard. J. A. O'Brien appeared for Mr. Beck at the appeal, and also at the trial when Beck was convicted of the theft of a turkey hen and 10 young turkeys.

It will be recalled this case before the Magistrate took pretty nearly two days to hear it, experts having been brought from Guelph.

Yesterday after a review of the whole evidence His Honour Judge McGlade allowed the appeal, and quashed the conviction of the Police Magistrate and awarded Mr. Beck costs of the appeal and of the hearing before the Magistrate, both costs to be paid by the informant George Ward who claimed the turkey hen and ten young ones in question.

FEWER ACCIDENTS THAN IN OCTOBER

Fatalities To Workmen Also Decreased During November.

TORONTO, Dec. 2.—(Canadian Press).—The Workmen's Compensation Board awarded during the month of November $469,163.91 in benefits, $404,011.63 of this being compensation and $65,151.85 medical aid.

Accidents reported during the month numbered 5,062, of which 33 were fatal, as compared with 5,761 during October, of which 40 were fatal.

The year 1925 shows an increase of 656 over the year 1924 in number of accidents reported to date, the figures for the eleven months of 1925 being 54,805, as compared with 54,149 during the same period last year.

Liquor Scalping Rampant With Government Vodka

MOSCOW, Dec. 2.—(United Press.)— Liquor "scalping" is rampant here since the introduction of the sale of Government vodka. The "scalpers" send their agents — often women and children—into the liquor line at the Government stores and having obtained a supply at the prevailing monopoly price, then retail it at double the original figure.

'CANADA AWFUL' SCOTTISH GIRL WRITES MOTHER

Begged in Letter to Glasgow For Return Fare Home.

DREADS TORONTO.

Says Girls Unsafe in Ontario Capital After Dark.

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 2.—The tragedy of Betty Brown, the young Scotch girl who with a taxi-driver friend was found dead from gas poisoning in Toronto a few weeks ago, has made a poignant impression on her two girl friends, Jean McPhail and Lizzie Cullen, to judge from letters these two Toronto girls have sent home to their mothers in Scotland. The girls paint a terrible picture of Toronto as a city in which it is unsafe for a girl to go out after night.

Miss McPhail, who is a typist, arrived in Toronto from Scotland about six months ago. She resides with Miss Cullen.

Describes Ordeal.

In the following pathetic letter to her mother, Miss Cullen graphically describes her ordeal when she identified the body of her friend.

"Dear Ma:

"As I write this letter my heart is breaking for a girl friend that Jean and I fell in with from Glasgow. She has been found dead. She was with Jean and me until she went away missing a fortnight ago, and to-night both Jean and I were taken from our work for identify a girl who was found dead, and it was our girl friend — but not the nice looking girl we knew.

"She was so badly bruised we hardly knew her. It was like some horrid nightmare to me. Jean and I just clung to one another and asked God to take us home, back to our mothers and ones who love us.

"Well, mother, she belongs to Glasgow. She was friendly with a girl, who used to go to school with Jean. She is also missing. I expect they will find her the same way.

"When the news went out that a girl had been found dead, 150 mothers went to see if it was their daughter. There are so many girls missing here. But you need not worry about us, for we never cross the door at night. We quit work at 5.30 and land home at 6 p.m., and we never leave the door till next morning, so you can rest your mind about Jean and me, for we don't dream of going out at night.

"Well, ma, I wish you could get my fare, for I am heart-broken and only wish to God I was home beside you, for Canada is awful.

"Your loving daughter,

"Liz."

Wants to Go Home.

In a touching postscript the writer emphasizes her appeal to be taken home: "Mother, dear, hurry up and take me home, for this has made me worse than I was, and I am scared now to even go out the door."

A letter in similar tenor was received by Mrs. McPhail from her daughter, Jean. Referring to the tragedy, the writer said: "It was a great blow to us. We were both taken from our work to identify her. Mother, it was some shock to us. I have cried myself sore for nearly a week now. Lizzie collapsed altogether when she was taken to the morgue. No one would have known it was the same pretty wee girl—she was so badly battered.

Another Missing.

"Mother, dear, the first time you are in Glasgow I would like you to call on her people. The name is Mrs. Brown. The girl's name was Beatrice, and if they want to know anything or for me to do anything for them I'll only be too willing to do so.

"She was friendly with another girl, who used to go to the Main Street School with Nellie and me. She lived right at the top of Random Street, but they left there some time ago and went to live in Dundee. She is also missing. They are searching for her, but I guess the same fate has befallen her, poor girl. I never go out, so you don't need to worry about me, mother. — Your loving daughter, Jean."

Needless to say, receipt of these letters has caused great perturbation to the relatives of the girls, and letters received in Montreal from Scotland indicate that the case of Betty Brown has created a sensation there almost equal to that caused by the unsolved murder of Janet Smith in Vancouver.

COUNTY COUNCIL TURNS DOWN THREE PROPOSALS TO COMPEL THE LIGHTING OF ALL VEHICLES

Ill Prince Cured When Forester Pounds His Back

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 2.—King Christian of Denmark has as novel way of curing lumbago.

While he and King Gustaf of Sweden were hunting elk with Prince Charles, the latter suffered an attack. King Christian immediately ordered one of the foresters to hammer away with clenched fists as the small of the prince's back.

Prince Charles howled with pain, but after a drubbing lasting ten minutes admitted the lumbago had lifted.

"I had my revenge," said the prince. "I managed to pot two elk that day while Christian did not even get a chance of blazing away a single shot."

OTTAWA GUARDS BAND WILL PAY NEW YORK VISIT

Will Play at Official Opening of Tex Rickard's New Rink.

THREE DAY VISIT.

Canadiens and Americans Scheduled For First Game at Gardens.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 2. (Canadian Press). — The band of the Governor-General's Foot Guards, forty strong, will pay an official visit to New York City this month to take part in the official opening of the new Madison Square Gardens on December 15, when the New York Americans will play their first home game of the season with the Canadiens of Montreal as their opponents. The band will also be the guests of the Canadian Club of New York.

The schedule of their activities in New York is as follows:

The band will arrive in New York on the morning of Monday, December 14, proceeding at once to the Armory of the 71st Regiment, where it will be quartered for the visit. At one o'clock that day the band will march from Battery Park with a mounted police escoft to the City Hall, where it will be received by His Honor Mayor Hylan and members of the City Council at 2.30 p.m.

Play For Veterans.

On the afternoon of Tuesday the members of the Canadian Club in New York will hold a reception in honor of the band at the Belmont Hotel. Afterwards the unit will march to the Neurological Institute and render a one-hour programme for the benefit of the disabled United States war veterans being treated in that institution.

Arriving at the new Madison Square Gardens at 7.45 p.m., December 15, the G.G.F.G. Band will escort the two hockey teams in parade around the rink and will play the National Anthems of both countries at the raising of the British and American flags, afterwards playing during the intermissions of the game.

Following the hockey match the band will be the guests of honor at a ball in the Biltmore Hotel, where it will also render a few concert numbers.

The unit returns to Ottawa on Wednesday, December 16.

To be ignorant of what happened in the world before you were born is to be all your life a child.

Would Be More Bother Than Worth, One of Councillors Says.

NO ACTION TAKEN.

Responsibility Is On Auto Drivers to Protect Horse Vehicles, Contended.

Although the communications file of the County Clerk contained three different letters advocating an enactment which would enforce the carrying of lights by all wheel vehicles, no action was taken in that regard by the County Council in the first regular session yesterday afternoon. Warden H. B. Rye appeared to be the only member of the Council in favor of the legislation. A general discussion which followed brought out the facts that the carrying of lights would inconvenience the drivers of horse-drawn vehicles; that the lights would be more trouble than they would be of use.

W. A. Anderson, Deputy Reeve of Otonabee, pointed out that as the enactment would be locally confined to the county, there would be difficulties arising when residents of neighboring counties passed the borders into Peterborough. He said that it should be a matter for Provincial or Dominion consideration.

Another councillor declared that the drivers of motor vehicles should take upon themselves the responsibility of driving slowly enough to enable them to distinguish the horse-drawn vehicles while using the roads at night.

The communications were received from Milton, Peterborough, Chamber of Commerce and the Ontario Motor League Headquarters. Thus one of the important questions to come before the County Council was summarily disposed of at the first assembly.

Help For Ward.

John Edgar presented a plea that a young ward of the Children's Aid Society at present in Nicholls Hospital, be removed to a sanitarium, where specialist treatment might be given. The matter was referred to the County Solicitor and the Finance Committee.

The matter of purchasing a Burroughs adding machine for the County Clerk's office was also left over for the consideration of the Finance Committee.

Present at the meeting were: H. B. Rye (Warden), Ed. M. Elliott (County Clerk), J. Scott, J. Robb, R. Scott, N. Lean, H. B. Parker, W. T. Curtis, J. Hawthorne, W. A. Anderson, M. E. Smithson, George Simpson, J. A. Middleton, M. P. Coughlin and F. J. Breckenridge.

WOMEN HONEST SAYS OFFICIAL

Province of Saskatchewan Has Had Large Sums From Immigrants.

LOANS REPAID

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 2.—(By Canadian Press). — The natural honesty of women has been well demonstrated in the success that has attended the plan of bringing Old Country girls to Saskatchewan under the Assisted Passage Scheme, remarks J. J. Kelso, Superintendent of Neglected Children of Ontario. Officials of Saskatchewan brought over 591 young women and of this number 539 have repaid their loans in full and the balance have paid a large proportion of the money advanced. Altogether the Province of Saskatchewan paid out $49,723 and has received back $49,433. The records show that 268 of the young women are in country positions, 169 in city employment, 35 have gone to other Provinces while 107 are married and residing within the province. The figures given are for the years 1920 to 1923 inclusive.

ART STUDY CLUB CANADIAN NIGHT

Members Met at Home of Mrs. Kidd—Discussed Paul Peele's Work.

LOCAL INTEREST.

A very interesting meeting of the Art Study Club was held last evening at the home of Mrs. R. J. Kidd, 402 Hunter Street, when the members held a "Canadian Night." The work of Paul Peel was the special subject under consideration. As Mr. Adrian McDonald, English teacher at the local Normal School, has included in his recent book, "Canadian Portraits," a chapter devoted to Paul Peel and his work, Mrs. F. C. Neal, the speaker of the evening, contented herself with reading this chapter to the members.

Paul Peel was born in London, Ontario, in 1860, and died in 1892. When he was eighteen years of age, he went to Philadelphia for four years' training, afterwards going to England for a short time and then to Paris, where he made his home for the remainder of his life. He was an artist whose work was marked by great sincerity and thoroughness and who never succumbed to the modern unconventional trend in art. His most notable work, perhaps, is the picture of the happy children in "After the Bath," which was first bought by the Hungarian Government, after the painter had refused many offers, including several from Sarah Bernhardt, for its purchase. After the recent war four men from his native city of London, Ontario, went abroad and bought this picture from the Hungarian Government, bringing it home to the artist's birthplace.

Paul Peel was anxious to do something for his native Dominion, but a visit here shortly before his death proved very disappointing to him. The majority of his pictures went for a song, and there was no great demand for them, although one was purchased for the National Museum at Ottawa and another for the City Hall at Toronto.

An interesting feature of last night's meeting was the response to the roll call, which took the form of the name, birthplace and brief reference to the work of some Canadian artist. The members also showed examples of the work of the artist named. Two names included in the roll call that had a local touch were the choice of Mrs. W. R. Widdess and Mrs. R. J. Kidd.

Mrs. Widdess mentioned the name of Robert Holmes of Cannington, a well-known painter of flowers, who is now Professor of Art in the College of Art in Toronto.

Mrs. Kidd alluded to the work of a Peterboro artist, Miss Mamie McCarthy, and showed examples of her work in a couple of oil portraits and a pretty piece of hand-painted china.

The next meeting of the Art Study Club will be held on December 15, at the home of Mrs. J. M. McCulloch, Charlotte Street, when a paper on Michael Angelo will be given by the president of the Women's Art Association, Mrs. Wm. Blackwell, and the response to the roll call will be a quotation from an Italian author.

COSTUME SONG RECITAL.

The Conservatory of Music Hall was filled almost to capacity last evening for a very enjoyable costume song recital given by pupils of Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park. The first section of the entertainment consisted of solo numbers by a number of Mrs. Park's pupils and the second portion was a series of interesting solo, duo and quartet renditions, done in old-fashioned costumes. The stage setting was charming, with green curtains as a background for a number of pieces of antique furniture, including a spinet and a spinning-wheel. A simulated fire in the grate at the rear and a couple of rose-shaded lamps added a bright touch of color.

The vocal numbers comprising the first part of the programme were all well rendered, showing the excellent training imparted by Mrs. Park and the attention given to enunciation and interpretation. Outstanding numbers were those of Mrs. Walter Byers, Mrs. Ford Turner and Miss Geraldine Collins, the latter receiving a great deal of enthusiastic applause for her lovely solo, also a bouquet of flowers. Miss Margaret Dickson of Hall's Bridge also delighted her audience with her rather out of the ordinary soprano voice and its limpid, soft tone. The programme for this portion included the following numbers: "Linden Lee," by Miss Kathleen Conner of Campbellford, "The Leaves and the Wind," by Miss Margaret Dickson of Hall's Bridge, "Dawn," by Miss Ida McBride, "Ritournelle," by Miss Helen Lytle, "Silent Noon," by Miss Bertha Hill, "The Bells of Fairyland," by Miss Helen Lamb, "Longing," by Mrs. G. S. Parlour, "A Prayer in Absence," by Miss Ethelwyn Dix, "In Maytime," by Mrs. Leila Spriggs, "Now's the Time to Love," by Miss Alice Price, "The Crying of Water," by Mrs. N. D. Foote, "A Request," by Miss Geraldine Collins, "Elsa's Dream" (Lohengrin), by Mrs. W. J. Tanner, "Gretchen at the Spinning-Wheel," by Mrs. Ford Turner, and "Winds in the Trees," by Mrs. Walter Byers.

The second portion, with the ladies in old-fashioned costumes, was particularly attractive. Hoop skirts and black lace mittens, poke bonnets and fichus, were in evidence, and harmonized splendidly with the old-style music rendered.

Songs of Old London, "Down Vauxhall Way" and "Buy My Strawberries," were sung by Miss Helen Lytle and Miss Ethelwyn Dix, and a very dainty duett was the "Cornish May Song," rendered in fine voice by Mrs. L. Spriggs and Miss Alice Price. Other old-time songs were in the cycle, "Old Furniture," with the opening number, "Old Furniture," sung by Miss Kathleen Conner, "The Spinet," by Mrs. W. J. Tanner, "The Spinning-Wheel," by Miss Ida McBride, and "The Rocking Chair," sung by Miss Geraldine Collins. Miss Verna Burgess was the dainty bride of a Hundred Years Ago.

A vivacious number in Italian was "La Folletta," sung by Mrs. G. S. Parlour, in the costume of an Italian gypsy, and a charming trio that called forth applause sufficient to bring back the singers in an encore, was "Three Little Maids from School," done in dainty Japanese costumes, complete with gaily-colored kimonas, obis and ear 'mums and waving paper fans, by Mrs. Walter Byers, Mrs. N. D. Foote and Miss Bertha Hill. Another Gilbert and Sullivan bit was "The Sun, Whose Rays are all Ablaze," also sung in Japanese attire by Miss Margaret Dickson of Hall's Bridge, who again charmed her audience with the pleasing quality of her voice.

"Flora's Holliday" (a cycle of Old English melodies) included a number of solos and quartets of bright atmosphere. Mrs. Ford Turner, Miss Helen Lamb, Messrs. Maurice Park and R. A. Brown took part in the cycle, with three quartets, "Come, all ye Lads and Lasses," "Gentle Dawn," and "The Country Dance"; a soprano solo, "Love's Greeting," by Miss Helen Lamb; a contralto solo, "Maidens, Beware Ye," by Mrs. Ford Turner; a bass solo, "Sound Argument," by Mr. R. A. Brown, and a tenor solo, "Tell Me, Charming Creature," by Mr. M. H. Park. Mr. Park's number, excellently adapted to the fine timbre of his attractive tenor, met with repeated applause and the singer was compelled to respond with a repetition to the enthusiastic appreciation of his hearers. The cycle ended with a jolly catch, "The Pedlar," a bright final bit to a cheerful series.

The concluding number on the programme was a quartet by the same singers, "The Commotion of Love."

The accompaniments for the entire programme were played by Miss Agnes Logan in her usual proficient manner. Mr. Hugh Lush assisted with the make-up and the stage furniture was loaned by Mr. B. A. Mitchell.

During an intermission, Mr. W. H. Fretty spoke briefly with regard to the excellence of the work of Mrs. Park's pupils and the value of musical appreciation, and Professor Gliddon also referred to the Ernest Seitz recital next week.

Ideal shopping days are now the rule. The delayed Christmas shopping may run you into disagreeable weather. Better do it now, and on your rounds you will find Neill's an ideal place to procure sensible, serviceable and acceptable gifts at a most reasonable outlay.

American Lady To Get 6,600 Francs For Damage to Chateau During War.

PARIS, Dec. 2.—(United Press.)—Mrs. Belowa, attorney, of 32 Broadway, New York, was to-day awarded 66,000 francs damages because of the partial destruction of her chateau, Bonnieul, near Paris, by German air bombs, French anti-aircraft operations and American troop occupation. This is one of the largest sums awarded for such claims.

Finds Way to Stop Stomach Souring

Glendale, N. Y. Mrs. Catherine Leyndecker writes:—"For weeks and weeks, whatever I would eat formed gas and acid in my stomach and made me feel miserable. Why, the acid would actually rise right into my mouth. At a friend's advice I took Carter's Little Liver Pills and not only has the sour stomach stopped but I am no longer constipated, my appetite has improved 100 per cent and I feel years younger." Carter's Little Liver Pills relieve the constipated condition by cleansing the intestines of their waste matter. They are sugar coated, small, easy to take and not habit forming. All druggists.

REV. CANON ALLEN PREACHED SUNDAY

Congregation Was Pleased to Welcome Rector After His Illness.

MILLBROOK, December 1.—The Sunday morning congregation at St. Thomas' church was much pleased to have the rector, Rev. Canon Allen, able to preach for the first time since his severe illness, which began some months ago, and has kept him, until recently, from taking any part in the church services of the parish.

The occasion was the first Sunday in Advent ,and was also the time appeal for the National Laymen's Missionary campaign, each member of the congregation being asked to give the equivalent of one day's pay. In gratitude for their beloved rector's recovery the members of the Women's Auxiliary brought their St. Andrew's Day offering as a token of special thanksgiving. A total of over one hundred and seventy dollars was received through the offertory, an amount that will fully meet the missionary apportionment of the church.

A pleasant social evening was enjoyed at Golden Sheaf Rebekah Lodge, No .176, at the close of the last busines session for November, the attendance being the largest for some months.

Impromptu speeches by the men, each to last for not less than two minutes, were a feature that created considerable merriment and applause, some very novel ideas being brought forth. Afterwards games of various kinds gave opportunity for all to be actively occupied until the supper hour.

Those who wished to remain for a short time after refreshments had been served and enjoy a game of cards or dancing, did so, before the gathering finally broke up.

The Rebekahs are holding a progressive euchre on Thursday evening of this week when as usual there will doubtless be a large number in attendance

Previous to reading the Scripture lesson at the Sunday morning service in the United Church, the pastor, Rev .F. H. Howard, announced the result of the canvass made during the week, in connection with the Maintenance and Extension Fund.

The allocation for the Millbrook circuit is $1800 and of this $1300 is now assured with a number of subscription cards yet to come in. Mr. Howard expressed his personal appreciation of the work which the canvassers had done, and added "I somehow feel assured that we will yet go over the top before the year ends next March."

On behalf of the congregation Rev. Joseph Wilks moved a hearty vote of thanks to the "busy men who have taken time from their business and their farms to cover the entire circuit during the time appointed, and accomplish this task for us and for the Master and His Kingdom.

Ex-Warden A. J. Henderson seconded the motion, and the congregation expressed its approval by a standing vote, after which all joined in singing "Praise God from Whom all Blessings Flow."

The officials who did the canvassing included: W. Brown, S. Hamilton, H. A. Earle, J. H. Might, G. E. Burnham, M. McDowell, P. Stinson, W. E. Bell, Dr. A. Jemison, W. G. Hetherington, W. H. Coombe, H. W. Johnston, F. W. Fallis, A. J. Brown, J. Whitfield and T. F. Aiken. In this remarks Mr. Howard referred to the very cordial reception accorded the men in the various homes and the spirit of ready sympathy and cooperation which prevailed.

In view of the fact that the congregation subscribed nearly $600 in October for the annual church thankoffering and gave supplies in generous measure for the fowl supper which followed the same week the feeling, is that excellent results have been obtained in the canvass which has come so closely after the other appeals.

"Via Media, or the Middle Way," was the subject of Mr. Howard's morning sermon, based on the fifth chapter of Acts where three methods of action are illustrated, verse 33, "When they (the high priest and they that were with him) heard that, they were cut to the heart, and took counsel to slay them;" verse 38: "Refrain from these men and let them alone;" verse 29: "We ought to obey God rather than men."

"The middle way is illustrated by the attitude of the Christian nations, that are not Christian, toward the Armenians of whom 1,200,000 have been pillagd, ravaged, raped, and slaughtered by the Turks in the last few years. Fearful of results to themselves should a firm stand be taken with Turkey, France, the United States, and other nations have stood aloof, chosen the middle course, "refrain from these men," and the innocent have gone through the tortures of hell, a sacrifice to selfishness and lack of Christian intervention and relief.

"Pilate is another example of one who chose the middle course. He desired no ill to Jesus, and yet wished to keep friends with the turbulent Jews, so, in his dilemma washed his hands in his self-declared innocence, and refrained from the justice he knew he should have executed.

"On the temperance question, how many choose the easier, middle way? This is a good time to talk and work for temperance; in the heat of an election we are influenced by party, not by principle. We talk of government control when we really mean government sale; the Ontario Temperance Act is government control, but what government can please a mother anxious about her boy, and the liquor party as well

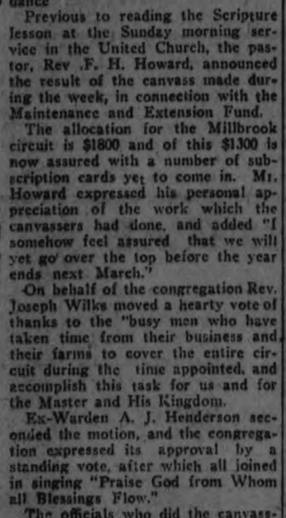
"Let the government go into the business of controlling the sale of liquor same as it controls the Post Office, or the Customs, is a specious plea for the devil can always put things attractively. But there is a Judas spirit behind such argument, and hypocrisy is double iniquity, while fair words are often only a cloak for foul actions.

"Christian courage, trusting in God no matter what dangers threatlike the apostles when they affirmlike the apostles yhen they affirmed, we ought to obey God rather than men, though imprisonment, scourging, and possibly death might follow, will develop within us that holy boldness which is a true virtue, and a goodness which is never fearful except of sin."

As a result of the voting on Friday, November 27, for the representative from East Durham for the Fifth Older Boys' Parliament, R. L. Sainsbury was elected by a majority of 81 votes over his opponent Willard Meldrum, both candidates being from Port Hope.

Locally the vote stood Sainsbury 27, Meldrum 4. J. Larmer was the deputy returning officer.

The pupils of the Continuation School are preparing an entertainment, "The Romance of Canada," to be given in the Town Hall on Thursday, December 17, at 8 p.m. Miss S. Muir and Miss K. Sutton, principal and assistant principal of the school, are training the pupils for the concert.



ALNWICK SALE OF WOOD LOTS

Authorized By Township Council For Saturday, December 12.

ROAD AGREEMENT.

ROSENEATH, December 2. — The Alnwick township council held their regular meeting in the town hall, Roseneath on Saturday, Nov. 28, with Reeve Mouncey in the chair and all the councillors present.

The question regarding the old Johnson road, which was discussed in the October meeting, was against brought up. At the last meeting it was decided to leave the matter for the 1926 council. Since that time on the request of Mr. Chidley, a deputation of the council visited him to discuss his proposition. They were so favorably impressed that Mr. Chidley was asked to meet the council on Saturday at their meeting. Mr. Chidley was present and laid his plans before the council in a very able manner, and after much discussiou it was decided to accept them providing the council could legally do so, and Reeve Mouncey and the clerk were appointed to interview the solicitor.

An agreement was drawn up by which the council were to gravel the said road, or at least what was not now gravelled, and to repair one bridge, Mr. Chidley to furnish one-third of the teams and the gravel free of charge. On the completion of the job to the satisfaction of Mr. Chidley, Mrs. Chidley, the owner of the property, agreed to take over by deed, the said road, thus relieving the council of all up-keep or ownership thereafter. The work will be done as soon as possible; the object is to have everything completed before the last sitting of the council.

This road has been a constant source of expenditure and the ratepayers should congratulate the council on the steps they have taken.

On resolution of Councillors Parker and Brown, Reeve Mouncey and Councillor Braithwaite were appointed a committee to sell the following lots of timber, on Saturday, Dec. 12, commencing at 2 'clock p.m.:

1 On the south end of Delbert Sherwin's farm.

2 On the south end of Joseph Dunnett's farm.

3 On the south end of Thomas Sandercock's farm.

Accounts Passed.

The reeve was authorized to sign orders on the treasurer for the following accounts:

James Lamey, repairing and gravelling West's Hill, $150.75; S. A. Tucker, making tile, $8.90; F. W. Fowlds, cement, $57.55; Austin Lean, postage as assessor, $1.50; Albert Halstead, cartage and dragging road, $2.95.

The council then adjourned to meet Tuesday, Dec. 15, at 10 o'clock a.m.

Personals.

Sufficient snow fell on Friday to make it possible for a few sleighs to be on the road.

A number from here have received invitations to attend the reception to be given to Mr. M. E. Maybee, M.P., and Mrs. Maybee, at Campbellford, on Friday evening next.

Mr. Alf. Braithwaite and daughter, were in Cobourg on Wednesday.

CAMPBELLFORD NEWS

FOWL DINNER HELD AT ST JOHN'S, IDA

Many People Attended Fine Affair in Parish Hall.

CAVAN, Dec. 2.—St. John's Church, Ida, held a very successful fowl dinner and concert in the new Parish Hall on Friday evening. The hall is not yet completed, but the men of the congregation fixed it up so that it nicely accommodated the large crowd which attended. An excellent dinner was served in the basement. There was plenty of everything and a sale of surplus fowl after the programme.

The programme was good. Mr. F. Bowen, M.P., and Mr. A. J. Fallis, M.P.P., were present and spoke. The Rev. Canon Allen was chairman and every person was glad to see him once more able to occupy that position, as for some time he has not been well enough to perform his customary duties.

Solos were sung by Miss Daisy Murray, Springville; Mrs. D. C. King, Peterboro, and Mr. Lowes, Mount Pleasant. Miss Nixon and Miss Helen Staples recited.

Mr. Benso had his Victrola in the hall and this helped to provide entertainment while the dinner was being served.

A quilt, which had been donated by a lady of the congregation, was sold during the evening and brought in eleven dollars. Tickets were sold for it, Miss Ethel Veals securing the lucky ticket.

News Briefs.

Mr. Frank Galbraith, Port Hope, who with Mrs. Galbraith was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Staples over the week-end, attended Cavan Centre Sunday School on Sunday afternoon. He taught the lesson to the Bible Class, and also gave a short address to the school.

Mr. Gerald Staples, Lifford, spent the week-end at his home in Cavan.

Miss Helen Syer, Otonabee, spent the week-end at home; also Miss Muriel Matchett of the Peterboro Normal School.

Miss Muriel Newton went to Toronto on Friday to visit friends.

The Ladies' Aid of Cavan United Church will meet for their December meeting at the home of Mrs. David Hunter on Thursday afternoon. This will be "Mothers' Day," and will be an open meeting to which every person will be welcomed.

The dance in Cavan Community Hall last Thursday evening drew a good crowd. The Fisher-Moncrief orchestra furnished the music.

Mr. A. I. Sainsbury, Port Hope, spoke in Cavanville on Thursday night to the Tuxis Boys. This was his second appearance in Cavan during his campaign for election to the Boys' Parliament. The voting took place on Friday. Mr. Sainsbury was elected by a majority of 88. There were about three hundred votes in the East Durham riding.

The annual Sunday School convention for Cavan and South Monaghan will be held in Cavan United Church, Tuesday, December 8th. Mr. Harstone of Woodville and local ministers will be the speakers.

SCHOOL BOARD TO ASK COUNCIL TO BUILD SCHOOL

Pass Resolution Tonight Asking That Action be Reconsidered.

REPORTS RECEIVED

Dental Officer's Report Shows Improvement in Teeth of Children.

The Board of Education will ask the City Council to reconsider its decision not to grant $386,000 for the proposed vocational and academical addition to the Peterborough Collegiate Institute. This was decided at last night's meeting of the Board.

The reports of the inspector of manual training and domestic science classes were read. The domestic science classes were given a high grade in all respects, but some defects in the manual training were pointed out and the reports were referred to the property and supervision committees for action.

Dr. Greene, School Dental Officer, submitted comparative reports on the inspection of the children in the King George and Prince of Wales Schools. His figures for the King George School were:

Inspections, 1923, 351; 1924, 322; 1925, 315.

Percentage found defective, 1923, 96.6; 1924, 77.6; 1925, 61.

Number of cavities in permanent teeth, 1923, 1111; 1924, 531; 1925, 467.

Number of cavities per pupil, 1923, 3.7; 1924, 1.62; 1925, 1.4.

For the Prince of Wales School the figures were:

Inspections, 1923, 634; 1924, 617; 1925, 561.

Number found with perfect teeth, 1923, 50; 1924, 156; 1925, 228.

The school attendance report was as follows for November:

School	On Roll	Average	Per Cent.
P.C.I.	632	609	96
P. of Wales	594	562	94
Central	486	447	92
King Edward	483	451	93
Queen Mary	469	435	92
Q. Alexandra	376	354	94
King George	355	329	93
S. Central	50	47	94

Many children lost time through colds and other ailments.

Owing to the continued ill health of L. J. Petit, of the English department of the Collegiate Institute, he was granted further leave of absence without salary until June 30, 1926. Owing to the impossibility of getting a qualified teacher at this time of year, Mrs. H. R. H. Kennor, who has been supplying for Mr. Petit since September, was prevailed upon to continue in the work, although she wished to discontinue the work at the end of the year.

ITALY WILL LIVE UP TO SIGNATURE OF PEACE PACTS

But Will Not Be Carried Away By Sentimentality, Say Papers.

KEEP CLEAR HEAD.

Is Not Minimizing Vast Possibilities of Locarno Treaties.

ROME, Dec. 2. — (Canadian Press).—Without minimizing the vast pacific potentialities symbolized in the ceremonious signing of the Locarno pact at London yesterday, Italy, as reiterated in responsible government circles and leading Fascist newspapers, does not intend to be swept off her feet by too idealistic sentimentality. She intends faithfully to live up to the spirit and letter of her signature, but intends, above all, to keep a clear-headed realistic attitude in future international relations. In this connection influential Italians recall passages in Mussolini's Armistice Day address when he declared: "We look with one eye upon the dove of peace if it rises on the distant horizon, but with the other eye we look to the concrete necessities of life."

TRENT RIVER

TRENT RIVER, Dec. 2.—The teachers and officers of the Sunday School are rehearsing for the sacred cantata, "The Shepherd Prince."

The weekly prayer and praise service will be held Friday night instead of Thursday night, for this week.

The pupils of the Public School are practicing for their annual Christmas concert.

Mrs. Isaac Lawson returned Saturday from Oshawa, where she spent the past few weeks with her daughter, Mrs. Fred. McGovern.

Mr. Stanley Carnrite has been confined to bed suffering a severe illness.

Mrs. W. Tedford and daughter, Miss Dorothy Patterson, of Peterboro, spent Sunday with the former's father, Mr. George Scott, and brother, Mr. Fred. Scott, and family.

B11-8

"If I only had your lovely skin, Alice!"

"Mine is so bad, not even rouge and powder do any good. But anyone would think you had just got back from vacation. What's the secret?"

"Why, Madge, there's no secret. I would have told you long ago but I felt I couldn't speak of it until you asked me. My doctor told me that constipation was the cause of most skin troubles. Poisons from the waste matter are picked up by the blood and carried to all parts of the body, especially the skin. They were ruining my skin, too, until he prescribed Nujol for me. Nujol stopped the constipation and my complexion began to improve right away. Try it for a week or two and see."

Don't Refuse the Beauty Aid Nujol Will Give

No one needs to have a sallow, muddy complexion. The cause is simple, the remedy is in your own hands. Proper diet, exercise, sufface cleanliness and—above all—internal cleanliness. Nujol prevents the formation of intestinal poisons that ruin your health and complexion.

Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. Nujol simply makes up for a deficiency—temporary or chronic—in the supply of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular elimination, without overtaxing the intestinal muscles.

Nujol can be taken for any length of time without ill effects. To insure internal cleanliness it should be taken regularly in accordance with the directions on each bottle. Unlike laxatives, it does not form a habit, and can be discontinued at any time.

Start taking Nujol today. Very soon you will notice an improvement in your looks. And you can look forward to the beauty and attractiveness that are the natural right of every woman.

THE G.W.V.A. STAND.

The members of the Great War Veterans' Association have taken a stand in favour of Sunday bathing and daylight saving, and their action in this respect will do much to call the attention of the electors to the fact that these questions are to be settled by the vote of the people at the municipal election.

In the case of the vote on Sunday bathing there seems little doubt of the result.

The Examiner is satisfied that the bulk of the people are opposed to depriving citizens of the privilege of a cooling dip on a hot Sunday, especially when other citizens who own cars or summer homes, or both, are free to bathe as they please.

The daylight saving question will cause more controversy, however, although the vote of the G.W.V.A. members, the majority of whom are employees of local industrial concerns, seems to indicate that the men who work in factories or stores or offices are impressed with th eidea of an extra leisure hour of daylight during the summer months.

It is to be hoped that the vote on both these questions will be large enough to afford a real concensus of public opinion, because the decision given at the municipal election will affect all citizens to a greater or lesser degree next summer—and it will be too late then to do anything to reverse the verdict.

THE LOCARNO PACT.

A new day dawned in the history of war-torn Europe yesterday when in the drab, old building in Downing street that has seen so much history made representatives of the leading powers signed the Treaty of Locarno.

When the plenipotentiaries of Great Britain, France, Germany, Belgium and Italy affixed their signatures to that document, which guarantees the maintenance of the territorial frontiers established by the Treaty of Versailles, they accomplished what Premier Briand of France accurately described as "the most important step in the history of the modern world."

There may still be obstacles in the way of permanent peace among European nations, but none of them so great as those so safely negotiated, and it is not too much to say that the pact launched at Locarno and finally consumated yesterday makes a European war appear as an utter impossibility.

At least that end is in sight, and the signing of the treaty should be followed by an economic and political readjustment that will bring prosperity and happiness to a degree that a short time ago looked impossible to the people of the leading nation of Europe.

Chancellor Luther, who signed the pact for Germany, declares that the pacification of the world and in its wake the prosperity of the nations is the final aim, and Canadians will rejoice that so much has already been accomplished in the completion of that programme.

TOBOGGAN SLIDES.

Among many citizens there will be a sincere hope that the decision of the city fathers in regard to the Jackson Park toboggan slide is not final, and that there is still a possibility of the project being financed and carried out.

The Hunter street chute would be a poor substitute for what was expected, inasmuch as it is impossible to provide the facilities for tobogganing that are feasible at Jackson Park.

The latter offers an opportunity for a winter recreation ground that could not be surpassed, as those who recall the old slides there will be first to testify, and it would be a pity indeed if the undertaking had to be scrapped by the Council now when the public has become interested in the proposal.

A modern slide with three chutes, comfortable dressing-rooms and other accommodation would provide hundreds of Peterboro citizens with ideal recreation this winter, recreation that would take them out into the frosty air of the Canadian winter and give them health and strength as well as amusement.

The idea should not be too hurriedly abandoned.

It might be possible with wise planning to prevent the cost of the work from being unduly expensive, and the very evident demand from a large section of the citizens for proper toboggan slides justifies the Aldermen in giving the proposal every consideration.

The obstacles in the way of going ahead with the scheme do not appear to be insurmountable if the Council will go whole-heartedly into the matter.

LIGHTS ON VEHICLES.

The Peterboro County Council has declined to line up with progressive counties, such as Wentworth and Lincoln, and to take advantage of the enabling legislation passed by the Legislature to put into effect a bylaw calling for all vehicles travelling the roads of the county at night to carry lights.

The almost complete unanimity with which the county legislators, with the outstanding exception of Warden H. B. Rye, condemned the measure is surprising.

Many of the members of the Council undoubtedly drive cars themselves, and they must know of the difficulty of seeing an unilluminated horse-drawn vehicle under certain conditions.

It is all very well to say that motorists should drive so carefully that there would be no danger of an accident from this cause.

All motorists should drive carefully at all times, of course, but even the most judicious driver comes close to smashing into a horse-drawn vehicle every now and then when the absence of lights makes it impossible to observe the buggy or wagon ahead of his car.

The legislation offers protectoin to the farmers—because when a collision occurs between a horse-drawn vehicle and an automobile it is not usually the latter that suffers the most—and yet opposition to the measure comes only from those who are most protected.

It is the duty of the Legislature to deal vigorously with this question.

It must go farther than authorizing County Councils to pass bylaws covering their own territory.

It must introduce a Provincial-wide measure that will eliminate a positive menace from the highways of Ontario.

PEPALL CASE AGAIN.

(From the Financial Post.)

A jury of his peers has decided that Andrew Pepall was not guilty of any of the four charges brought against him in respect to the Ontario Government bond transactions in connection with which Aemilius Jarvis and Peter Smith were both convicted and sentenced. That verdict is final, and with it there is no intention to find fault, but it is doubtful if in the future the people will have confidence in the law to protect public servants from temptations.

In regard to the charge of bribery under the Secret Commission Act of 1919, Mr. Justice Wright made the following very direct statement to the jury in the Pepall case:

"This charge should be more simple. The evidence is reasonably conclusive. In fact, it is admitted by Pepall in the witness box that on two occasions, and the crown say three, Pepall gave securities to Smith. On one occasion it was $15,000, and on another it was $25,000. Pepall says these were by way of loan. Do you believe it? There was no note, not even a pledge of stock, no interest, no security, no payment. Do you believe it was a loan?

"If not a loan, then what other interpretation is there but that these were gifts to Smith for favors he had extended or agreed to extend to Jarvis and to Pepall, in his position as Treasurer of the Province?"

Under our system of government men are frequently appointed to position of great financial responsibility with small remuneration, and called upon to live on a scale which is in itself a temptation to take advantage of convenient opportunities to increase their incomes. They should at least be reasonably protected from having those opportunities brought to their attention by others who also stand to profit thereby.

"LUCK."

What is luck? The query is suggested by a conversation regarding the success of a certain individual born into wealth and good fortune who had made a great success of life. If it had not been for his favorable start, it was said, he would not have got any further than any one else. He was lucky enough to have parents who could afford to give him the best of everything in the way of education and comfort, and it was owing to that fact that he had been able to make a distinguished name for himself. What chance would a poor boy have had to do so well? It is just a question of luck. Those with a good start naturally win over those who are handicapped in the race of life. Of course, there is a certain amount of truth in this. No one would be so foolish as to deny that there is a great advantage in having the initial help of money and all that money can provide; but wealth does not guarantee success in the best sense of the word, and "luck" really plays only a minor part. It is character and equipment, rather than luck, that gets a person somewhere, and it is open to all to equip themselves adequately. Would you be a scholar? There is no other way to succeed except through study and perseverance. Luck will not help at all. It is only through personal effort that knowledge is acquired, whether one is rich or poor.

It is a very serious mistake to get into the habit of attributing success or the lack of it to luck. A man is the architect of his own fortune, especially in a country like ours, where all doors are open to genuine merit. Let that fact sink in. Merit is the essential thing, and what is known as luck is usually the result of merit of some kind. There are cases, no doubt, where merit does not get its full reward, at any rate so far as can be judged outwardly. But it can be said with confidence that when a worthy end is faithfully pursued, it is generally attained. Think of all the poor boys, with no advantages beyond their native ability, who have got to the top. It was something more than luck which took them there. They worked hard, sacrificed much to realize their ambition. When opportunities came, they were ready for them—and that is the important thing. Luck consists in being prepared to avail oneself of a favorable opportunity when it presents itself. What you would be you must prepare for, and, if properly prepared, there need be no fear about ultimate triumph. "'Tis not in mortals to command success, but we'll do more, Sempronius, we'll deserve it." That should be the attitude. One usually gets one's deserts sooner or later. It is idle to think about what might be in another set of circumstances. The point is to make the most of the opportunities one has. Do not resign yourself to fate, as if everything has been prearranged and no effort can change what is to be. Say, rather, with the poet: "I am the master of my fate, I am the captain of my soul." One thing, at any rate, every one can ensure for himself—something more precious than any material possessions—and that is self-respect.—Hamilton Spectator's editorial for young people.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The winter is young, but already Doucet is trying to steal the cold weather record from White River.

Some Ontario cities whose municipal elections takes place early this month report an overdose of aspirants for office. It is a good sign.

The city fathers have decided to let the Jackson Park toboggan slide, as it were.

With Parliament not meeting until January, Santa Claus will not be able to put the premiership into anybody's stocking.

The news of the Sunny Riviera shivering under a snow blanket and Florida swept by gales is the stuff we like to read. Now is the winter of our discontent made glorious summer.

With Mr. Meighen appealing in the riding, it is safe to say, in the words of war bulletins, that "a certain liveliness" is developing in Bagot.

Who is to be the next young business man to follow Mr. Matthews' example and offer his services on behalf of his fellow-citizens?

Hamilton continues to hold the Provincial record for hold-ups. It has got so now that every time a stranger reaches in his pocket for a match Hamilton folks automatically put up their arms.

FOUND DEAD IN HOME.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., December 2.—Canadian Press. — Neighbors who noticed no sign of activity about the house of Richard Palmer, an elderly man, Tuesday afternoon notified the the police, who entered the house, and found him lying dead upon the floor. Palmer, whose wife is in an hospital, had been in ill health for some time, and death was due to natural causes.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

Peterboro—Toronto—Montreal —Winnipeg

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Dec. 1. — A good part of today's cattle receipts consisted of Western feeders, among them three loads of black steers. Two of these averaging 900 lbs. sold at $6 a cwt. In the handyweight butchers line there was not much for sale, and any good steers and heifers were $6.50 to $6.75 a cwt., with choice half a dollar higher. A few export steers, heifers, cows, and bulls were bought again today at steady prices. There is a good supply of butchers' cows and canners, but the latter are hard to get without taking other common cows. The late run brought in over 300 cattle, but the demand will take care of this week's run.

The scarcity of real good veal calves brought the top up to 50 cents a cwt. to 13 1-2 cents a pound on Monday, and similar calves are bringing that today. Calves are more than good mediums are 9 to 11 cents. Grassers are 5 1-4 to 5 3-4 cents a pound.

Lambs are strong and in general 25 cents a cwt. higher than last week, and good light ewes and wethers are 14 cents a pound. Good sheep are firm at 7 cents a pound.

Monday's hogs were all taken at $11.75 a cwt. f.o.b., and although the packers are still talking $11.50 for today, there does not seem to be much chance for a reduction. Buffalo has advanced hog prices this week, and this is having an indirect effect here.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Dec. 1 (Canadian Press).—Sky-rocketing prices in the wheat market today accompanied reports that black rust is spreading in Argentina. At the same time urgency of demand for wheat was such that not a single bushel was delivered in Chicago today to fill December contracts. After scoring extreme gains of 5 3-8 cents, the wheat market here closed strong 2 5-8 to 5 1-8c net higher, new style, December 1.70 5-8 to 1.71, and May 1.66 7-8 to 1.67, with corn unchanged to 3-8c up; oats at 3-8 to 1c advance, and provisions unchanged to 25c lower. Contrary to recent expectations the advance in wheat prices here trailed after other markets, rather than led the way. Both at Liverpool and at Winnipeg, wild soaring of quotations preceded the upward swings of wheat values in Chicago. Notwithstanding that prices here started to advance as soon as trading opened, it was only in the last half hour of business that fluctuations went beyond ordinary limits, and that excitement among brokers developed. From the outset however, it was evident that the general public was taking a much larger share in the market than has been the rule for some time, and that profit-taking on a big scale was putting no curb to the advance.

STERLING RATES

MONTREAL, Dec. 1 (Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here today as follows:

Sterling demand $4.84.

Sterling cables $4.84 3-8.

EGG MARKETS

OTTAWA, Dec. 1 (Canadian Press).—No change is noted in the Canadian egg situation today. New York market is also unchanged while Chicago is higher. Stronger feeling in the market for turkeys is reported from Montreal.

Toronto — Unchanged. Jobbing, fresh specials 80, extras 75, firsts 60, storage extras 46, firsts 43, seconds 37.

Montreal—Jobbing, fresh extras 70, firsts 65, storage extras 46, firsts 41, seconds 36. The turkey market shows strength with choice dressed quality lots selling at 36 to 38, other poultry unchanged.

Winnipeg—Dealers quoting country shippers, extras 65, firsts 50 to 55, seconds 32 to 33. Live Springs 12 to 19, fowl 9 to 14, roosters 6, ducks 11, geese 10, turkeys 15 to 22, dressed turkeys 22 to 28.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Dec. 1 (Canadian Press).—In oats the feeling was very firm, but prices were unchanged with sales of car lots of Ontario and Quebec No. 2 white being made at 53 cents, No. 3 white at 51 1-2 cents, and No. 4 white at 49 1-2 cents per bushel, ex-track. Ontario malting barley sold at 85 1-2 cents per bushel.

Owing to the strength displayed in the Canadian cash wheat situation the local flour market for spring wheat grades was stronger and one leading milling concern marked up their prices 20c per barrel. A moderate amount of new business was done, but the market on the whole was rather quiet.

There were no new developments in the market for winter wheat flour, but the undertone remains very firm in sympathy with the high prices ruling for the raw material and the limited supplies available from Ontario millers. The trade in white corn flour was quiet at $6.80 to $7 per barrel in jute bags, delivered to the trade.

The only important change made in millfeed was an advance of $1 per ton for middlings, while the tone of the market for other lines was very firm, with a good steady trade passing.

Eggs Near Peak.

A very firm feeling prevailed in the market for all grades of eggs, but the impression of some in the trade is that prices for strictly fresh eggs have reached their peak owing to the fact that supplies are now ample to meet all requirements, which is due to the arrivals from British Columbia of several broken lots and one straight car, with more on the way. The trade in storage eggs was fairly active under a good demand for supplies, and prices were unchanged. The receipts were 136 cases, as against 2,490 for the same day last week, and 1,105 for the corresponding day a year ago.

Although the embargo that was placed on potatoes a short time ago by United States railway lines has been lifted, there was not much activity in the local market, but the undertone was firm and prices were fully maintained.

The stock of creamery butter in store in Montreal was placed at 122,911 packages, which showed a decrease of 22,628 packages, as compared with November 1, and a decrease of 74,910 packages with December 1, 1924, while the stock of dairy butter on the first of the month was 757 packages smaller than the same date last month, and 2,374 packages below a year ago.

Australian Butter.

It was reported that purchases of several small lots of Australian creamery butter have been made which is said will arrive here around the first of the year, and other sales of 2,500 packages have also been made that will come to hand about February 15. This butter, however, will no doubt be all wanted, and stocks of top quality grades here are small, for which the demand continues ady.

The stock of cheese in Montreal today was given out as being 179,175 boxes, which showed a decrease of 101,930 boxes, as compared with November 1 and an increase of 40,276 boxes with a year ago. Cable advices receive reported the stocks of Canadian cheese in England at 209,700 boxes, showing a decrease for the month of 27,600 boxes and an increase of 500 boxes with a year ago, while the stock of New Zealand cheese was 4,800 boxes smaller than on November 1, and 54,400 boxes below December 1, 1924.

The receipts of cheese today were 4,571 boxes, as compared with 5,672 for the same day last week, and 2,349 for the corresponding day a year ago. There was some business reported over the cable, but the volume was small, and the market on the whole was quiet with October Western make on spot nominally quoted at 21 1-2 to 22c per lb., and current receipts at 18 1-2 to 19c per lb.

Beans were steady at $2.40 per bushel.

Wise and Otherwise.

He was a bold man that first ate an oyster.—Swift.

A THOUGHT.

FEAR AND MORAL ENGINEERING.

By Glenn Frank.

The conquest of fear is the beginning of health, happiness and achievement.

If I go through life glancing uneasily over my shoulder at dreaded dangers, I can neither work well by day nor sleep well by night.

The problem of fear and how to meet it is as real a problem for us as it was for our primitive ancestors.

Our primitive ancestors had to face wild beasts that were stronger than they. They were stricken dumb by the terrors of earthquake and lightning and flood and famine which they did not understand.

Few of these fears of nature remain. Wild beasts are now confined to jungles and circuses. We have conquered most of the terrors of nature. Those we have not conquered we at least understand. And a fear understood is a fear half conquered.

But we have taken on a lot of new fears for old.

The stage-setting of our lives is different, but it is the same old play of fear and flight.

The riddle of civilization is breeding fears for us as the riddle of nature bred fears for our primitive ancestors. And despite our sniffish attitude towards ancient superstitions, we are reacting to our fears very much as they reacted to theirs. The various bogies that keep us nervously fearful about our future and the future of our children are to us what the swarms of evil spirits were to our primitive ancestors. And we have these bogies for the same reason that our ancestors had evil spirits. That is because we leave most of the issues of our lives in the gray twilight of guesswork in which things can so easily assume fearful and fantastic shapes.

If we could only drag our fears into the daylight, half the battle against them would be won. Those that were legitimate we could fight; those that were groundless we could forget.

Knowledge kills fears as sunlight kills germs.

One fear particularly shadows us to-day: the fear of insecurity. The rich are afraid they will lose their investments; the poor are afraid they will lose their jobs. The old sense of security that men knew when every man was more or less his own boss, and investments were largely local, not far-flung and sensitive to happenings on the other side of the world, is gone. A sense of insecurity like this tends to freeze the fountains of enterprise and chill the hearts of men.

We shall never conquer this fear by moral exhortation, but only by moral engineering. This means that we must devise specific ways and means for increasing our security and for cultivating our courage. And the cultivation of courage, as Bertrand Russell has suggested, is not to be achieved through fairy tales, but through a really scientific development of our inner morale. Of all this, more another day

TREATIES SIGNED.

London Cordially Greeted German Representatives—Formal Functions.

LONDON, Dec. 2. — (Canadian Press).—Germany really got back into the European family Tuesday when Chancellor Luther and the German Foreign Minister, Gustav Stresemann, signed the Locarno pact.

It was a pleasant little family party in the reception room of the British Foreign Office, with only three hundred persons there in all. The black gowns of Lady Chamberlain, Mrs. Stanley Baldwin and the other ladies who attended suggested the loss which Great Britain has just suffered in the death of the Queen Mother Alexandra, which made it impossible to have a more ceremonious signing.

But it was better so, and the London crowds welcomed the German delegates everywhere with enthusiasm, which demonstrated that Britons generally share in the joy of the leaders of the government that the great European powers have "one friend more."

Bolsheviks Absent.

There was no empty chair for Russia, but the absence of the Soviet Government from such a European gathering was mentioned informally by many of the delegates, and M. Briand expressed the hope that Russia might soon decide to enter the League of Nations and speed Europe in the restoration of normal economic and political conditions.

The nations affixing their signatures, and their representatives were: Great Britain, Austen Chamberlain and Stanley Baldwin; Germany, Chancellor Luther and Gustav Stresemann; Belgium, Emile Vandervelde; France, Aristide Briand; Italy, Vittorio Scialoia; Poland, Count Skrzynski; Czecho-Slovakia, Eduard Benes.

Only the nations signatory to the Locarno pact attended the signing.

The disarmament spirit was in the air and there seemed to be a general feeling that a disarmament conference must be held shortly, in order to lessen Europe's staggering military and naval burdens.

Informal Luncheon.

After the signing the principal delegates lunched informally with Sir Austen and Lady Chamberlain at No. 11 Downing Street, which Mrs. Baldwin loaned for the occasion, and Lady Astor and a number of other prominent women were invited to join this party. Later in the afternoon the seven delegations were received at Buckingham Palace by King George, which gave the last official approval necessary for the re-admission of Germany, the prodigal son, back to the family of nations.

Then the German Chancellor and Dr. Stresemann had an informal conference with M. Briand, in which they discussed at length the changed problems which will arise in the Rhineland control and the relations generally between the two nations since the Locarno pact has become a fact. Disarmament, possible reduction of the limitations on German aviation, the admission of Germany to membership in the Rhineland control commission and the evavcuation of German territory by Allied troops were discussed.

The conference was friendly, and M. Briand said at its conclusion that no decisions were reached, but that the Locarno spirit prevailed throughout.

Guests at Dinner.

Sir Austen and Lady Chamberlain entertained all the members of the delegations at dinner at Lancaster House last night. The United States Ambassador and many other representatives of the powers not signatory to the Locarno pacts were present. The Prime Minister and Mrs. Baldwin will entertain the delegates at dinner to-night, and almost all of them will leave London Thursday.

HANDCUFFED THIEF FLED FROM POLICE

Escaped in Woodstock Under Chief's Fusilade.

WOODSTOCK, Dec. 2 (Canadian Press).—A novel case of a man who was arrested by Chief of Police Moore and Sergeant Jerry and who not only escaped but took the police handcuffs with him by running away from the two police officers through the downtown section of Woodstock, was the subject of interesting disclosures at a meeting of the Woodstock police commission held yesterday afternoon.

Charges that the two officers, after arresting the man, wanted for the theft of an automobile, were unable to prevent his escape although pursuing him through the streets and firing their revolvers, were made by Mayor Rea, and admitted by Police Magistrate Ball, while the fact that the police handcuffs subsequently recovered in Galt, were handed back to the local chief of police in three pieces, was admitted by the police magistrate in reply to questions by the mayor. No statement was forthcoming from the chief of police when asked to comment on the charges.

LASH FOR ANOTHER.

Manitoba Judges Adopt Drastic Penalty.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 2 (Canadian Press).—Resort to corporal punishment as a means of stemming the crime wave which has swept Winnipeg and district during the past few months, found an advocate in Mr. Justice Fullerton, who Monday sentenced William Ditchfield to four years' imprisonment and twenty lashes. The accused was convicted of highway robbery.

John Morcianz, found guilty of manslaughter in connection with the death of Mike Aleszyna at Frazerwood, Man., on May 31 last, was sent to the penitentiary for two years. Eleczyna was slain during a drunken brawl in which a number participated.

RETURN TO WORK.

Quebec Shoe Makers Resumed on Tuesday.

QUEBEC, Dec. 2 (Canadian Press).—The task of settling down again to steady work was commenced Tuesday morning in the 14 boot and shoe factories that have been idle during the past two weeks due to the strike which was settled Monday, but it is expected that at least a week will pass before all the employees of the factories can return to their jobs.

H. V. Gale, resident of the Quebec Boot and Shoe Manufacturers' Association, and representatives of the three unions interested in the recent industrial dispute, have signed articles and posted guarantees to the effect that the men should return to work immediately pending the final settlement of the wage question before a board of arbitration.

OBITUARY.

MRS. EDWARD CASSAN.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 2. — There passed away on Sunday, November 29, an old resident of Campbellford, in the person of Mrs. Edward Cassan. Born in Cobourg of Irish parents 92 years and 4 months ago, Annie Smith, afterwards Mrs. Edward Sheffield Cassan, had resided on Ranney Street, Campbellford, for a number of years. Her husband predeceased her several years ago and her daughter, Mrs. Hopps, has resided with her. She was a lifelong member of Christ Church. She is survived by four daughters, Mrs. Chas. Bonnycastle of Seymour, Mrs. Hopps and Mrs. Jas. W. Johnston of town, and Mrs. Andrew Govan, Toronto; two sons, Alfred of Peterborough and Ernest of town; and one brother, Wm. Smith of Ranney Street, town.

The funeral will take place at 1.30 Rev. G. G. Clarke will conduct the religious service at Christ Church, after which interment will take place in the cemetery of the parish.

MRS. HERBERT PETHERICK.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 2.—The death occurred in Seymour of Edith Milne, wife of Herbert Petherick, aged 37 years and five months. Deceased was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Milne. She leaves to mourn her demise her husband and eight small children, also three sisters: Mrs. Wm. Cummings, Strathclair; Mrs. Walter Cook, Minnesota, and Mrs. John Seabrook of Havelock, also one brother, Frank, of Florida.

The funeral took place on Tuesday from Zion United Church.

WINDFALL FOR FAIR OFFICIALS AT WARKWORTH

Athletic Association Makes Grant of $150 to the Fair Board.

BAD FAIR DAY.

Percy Township Council Has Only Accounts to Pass at Regular Meeting.

(By a Staff Reporter).

WARKWORTH, Dec. 2. — The directors of the Percy Agricultural Society had an unexpected windfall Tuesday when President George Poole was informed that the members of the Warkworth Athletic Association, at a meeting held the previous evening, had voted to make the Fair Board a grant of $150.

The directors, it will be recalled, had a bad season owing to the untimely snowstorm which reduced the usual receipts at the Fall Fair by at least 50 per cent. In spite of this hard luck, the officials were able to meet all their financial obligations, and every prize-winner got his money. The Board was allowed wet weather insurance to the amount of $100, and it was probably the first time that the Department was ever called upon to settle for the loss caused by a blizzard.

The Athletic Association uses the big cattle barn of the Society for a skating rink every winter and pays the directors all over their actual expenses. Last winter business was not good, and the Board did not expect anything from this source, hence the general surprise of the $150 donation. The Association will also expend $50 in repairing the building so as to make it more comfortable for those who watch the skaters and the hockey games.

Percy Council Meets.

The Percy Township Council met here Tuesday, with Reeve McCubbin and all the other members present. The session was short and the only business done was the passing of the usual accounts.

Deputy Reeve Nelson gave notice of a by-law to provide for the holding of the usual municipal nominations and election.

The statutory and final meeting of the Council will be held December 15th.

Scalded Woman Continued To Work, Fearing Poverty

OTTAWA, Ont, Dec. 2—Mrs. Ellen McCormick, aged about 55, a widow compelled to do outside scrubbing, was admitted to hospital Tuesday with her body a mass of burns as a result of an accident two weeks ago when she was scalded by a bursting hot water pipe, although suffering untold agony, she continued her daily work, fraid if she ceased that she would be unable to earn sufficient to live on. Her body is covered with blisters from her neck to below her knees. Th city authorities are investigating her case.

LIBERALS OF NORTHUMBERLAND WILL RE-ORGANIZE THEIR PARTY WARKWORTH CONVENTION DEC. 16

Attribute Defeat in Federal Contest to Lack of Organization.

NOT DISCOURAGED.

No Suggestion of Acclamation to Maybee if Election Called Soon.

(By a Staff Reporter).

WARKWORTH, Dec. 2 — At a meeting of the executive of the Northumberland Liberal Association, held in the Leonard House on Monday afternoon, it was decided to call a party convention on Wednesday, December 16, to prepare for the Dominion and Provincial elections, which appear to be imminent.

There were between 25 and 30 members in attendance from all parts of the riding, these including Sam. Clarke, M.L.A., and F. J. Slade, the candidate in the recent election. Those present from Campbellford were Returning Officer Stone, D. W. Douglas, and Marshall H. West, the latter the vice-president for Seymour Township. Clarence Massie of Morganston, acting president, presided.

Will Be Ready.

Even though the party met with an overwhelming defeat in the riding on October 29, the delegates did not appear downcast or show any disposition to quit. The situation was throughly discussed, and the causes which led to the reverse considered. In the first place it was agreed that the other side had more money for campaign purposes, but the main reason given was the lack of Liberal organization.

This was the first campaign in several years in which the Liberals have had a candidate in the field in a two-man contest; and naturally, in the interval, the organization had fallen to pieces and it was impossible to build it up again completely in the time at the disposal of the leaders. If the election had been deferred for a year the Liberals in Northumberland would have been in a better position to conduct a campaign, and the result might have been different.

If there is an election, Dominion or Provincial, or if both Parliament and Legislature make another appeal to the people within the next six months or year, the Liberal party, it was given out, will not be caught napping. Every sub-division in the riding will be thoroughly organized, this work to begin at once. The firmest believer in the virtue of organization is Sam. Clarke, the veteran who is regarded as a past master in that department of politics.

Convention is Called.

It was unanimously decided to call a party convention to meet in Warkworth on Wednesday, the 16th, and the Town Hall was on Tuesday rented for this purpose. At this convention, which will be regarded as the annual meeting of the party, organization work will be launched and officers elected.

Acclamation Not Considered.

There has been talk in local political circles to the effect that if there is another Dominion election within a year that M. E. Maybee, M.P.-elect, should be given a walk-over as in view of the huge majority which he polled, it would be useless to oppose him. At the Monday meeting, however, such a proposition was not even mentioned.

WEDDING BELLS.

CROSSLEY—STAPLES.

WELCOME, December 2. — At high noon, on Saturday November 28, at the home of the brides father, the marriage of Miss Christie Staples, daughter of Mr. C. J. Staples, and Mr. Lewis J. Crossley, was performed by Rev. D. R. Clare.

The bride who was unattended, wore a gown of sandalwood satin crepe, touched with gold lace, and carried a sheaf of roses and lily of the valley. She wore the groom's gift, a string of pearls.

During the signing of the register, Miss Hazel Bamsay sang "Until."

Afterward the guests sat down to a sumptuous repast prepared by the bride's mother.

Mr. and Mrs. Crossley left on the 4.20 train from Port Hope for Fenelon Falls, where they will be the guests of his son.

Crimson was first worn by Harvard athletes in 1858, when Harvard oarsmen wore China red bandanna handkerchiefs tied around their heads to distinguish them from other crews in a regatta on the Charles River.

This is Victor Day

Your day to hear one of the greatest achievements in the history of music

In every large city--in every province, a wonderful new instrument is being demonstrated. . . Hear this newest and greatest invention announced by the Victor Talking Machine Company of Canada Limited at the stores of "His Master's Voice" Dealers

TODAY . . . a new instrument is being demonstrated—an instrument that will give a new meaning to the word . . . music. It will amaze and enthrall millions of people everywhere; and the more critical their attitude toward music, the more astounded they will be. Be one of them.

Don't let preconceived ideas rob you of this inspiring experience. There is a fullness, a richness, a depth and magnificence of tone that is incredible. As the first notes are played, you will feel that the artist in person is before you, and that there is a nearness and intimacy that even the concert stage cannot give. Be sure you hear it, for no description is adequate.

Go to any store where Victor products are sold. The demonstration begins at nine o'clock and continues throughout the day. You will be surprised beyond measure and you will have an experience you will never forget.

If it is impossible to hear this marvelous instrument today, go tomorrow or the next day or any day from now on, at any hour. You need spare only a few minutes, and in those few minutes you will hear music such as you never believed to be within the range of possibility; and within a single minute after the first astonishing tones greet your ears, you will agree with the hundreds of great musicians who have heard it—that this is one of the most important contributions ever made to the art of music.

SUNDAY SERVICES HELD AT BURNBRAE

Young People Were In Charge of Evening Service in St. Andrew's.

BURNBRAE, Dec. 2.—The usual services were held at St. Andrew's on Sunday last. Rev. Robert Simpson of Stirling was the preacher at the morning service, and took as his text, I. Peter i., 24. At the close of the sermon a communication was read which dealt with the budget requirements of the church.

The evening service was in charge of the Young People's Society, with the president, Grant Thain, as leader. Mr. Thain and Mr. W. A. Milne conducted the devotional exercises. Mrs. G. V. Taylor gave an interesting topic address on "Character," while Mrs. Craighead's talk on "Success in Life" was given close attention. Vocal solos by Miss Emma Bennett and Mr. Geo. Donald, and a reading by Miss Edith Wallace completed the programme. Fifty-seven were in attendance, and as a stimulus to greater activity, the society has been divided into two groups under the leadership of Mrs. Craighead and Mrs. (Rev.) McKenzie.

Burnbrae folks were pleased to hear of the election of Mr. Jack Haig, Campbellford, as member for East Northumberland, in the Older Boys' Parliament. Jack is well-known here, and his father, Dr. Andrew Haig, is an old Burnbrae boy. Several Burnbrae boys who have joined the Tuxis Square at Hoard's had the privilege of voting for Jack at the election last Saturday.

Mrs. Andrew Watson, who has been in poor health for some time, visited a specialist in Peterboro on Saturday last.

Friday's heavy snowstorm has made the cuntryside appear quite wintry, and farmers are beginning to think about wood-cutting. However, the winter may be one of short duration, as changeable weather has been quite in order this year.

"I Can Now Do My Work Without Feeling Tired"

Mrs. Thally, St. Paul, Alta., writes—

"For two years I suffered from pain in the back. For three months I could not walk. The doctor told me I had severe kidney trouble, and that it would take a long time to get better. I tried everything I could get, but was not improving. Then I saw Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills advertised in your Almanac. I tried one box, and they did me good, so I took six, and in less than a month I was feeling fine and could do my work."

LEAGUE MEETING POORLY ATTENDED

Burnbrae Was Declared Winner Due to English Line Defeat.

BURNBRAE, Dec. 2—A meeting of the executive of the Seymour Baseball League at the Seymour Parsonage on Saturday evening was poorly attended due to severe weather. As English Line had decided some time ago to default the second game of the play-offs, the Burnbrae team was declared winner for the season. The deposit fees were also paid back as none of the teams failed to complete their regular schedule. Any plans for next year are only tentative, but the popular game of softball may encroach on the league limits. Prospects are that not more than three teams will be in the field when the 1926 season opens.

PORT OFFICIALS SHOT FOR THEFT

Twelve Men Executed By Soviet For Taking State Merchandise.

FORMER OFFICERS.

LENINGRAD, Russia, Dec. 1. — (Canadian Press). — Sentences of death have been carried into effect against six former port officials and six private traders for misappropriation of 1,500 tons of State merchandise, valued at more than a million dollars.

They were shot to death Saturday after the Central Executive Committee of the Soviets had dismissed their appeal for clemency.

Among those executed were the Assistant Commandant of the port of Leningrad and the chiefs of the transport, supply, fuel, stores and building department. All were formerly officers in the Imperial Army. The trial involved 123 persons.

BOX SOCIAL WAS VERY SUCCESSFUL

Good Sum Was Realized By Madoc L.O.L.—Institute Meeting.

MADOC, Dec. 2.—L.O.L. No. 160 held its annual box social in the Orange Hall last Friday evening. Mr. Bronson of Bannockburn acted as master of ceremonies, and the large rooms re-echoed with the sounds of happy laughter and tripping feet in "ye olde-time dance." Messrs. Gunn and Moon provided the music, and a large crowd enjoyed an evening packed full of merriment and good-will.

Mr. Jas. Caskey, W.M., acted as auctioneer for the boxes, which were of various shapes and colors, most artistically arranged. Some were decorated with the letters and number of the lodge, some were in the shape of a crown, others represented orange lilies and others flowers. All brought very good prices, one going as high as six dollars. The evening resulted in a gain of about one hundred and fifteen dollars for the lodge, which will be used toward clearing the debt off the hall.

Women's Institute Meeting.

The Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. C. J. Smith on Friday afternoon. Owing to stormy weather, a small attendance was recorded, but the lack in numbers was made up in enthusiasm. Owing to the absence of the President, Mrs. T. Tumelty, who is ill, and also of the Vice-Presidents, who were unable to be present, the chair was taken by Mrs. T. Nickle, Secretary-Treasurer. Roll call was responded to by ideas for inexpensive Christmas presents. Mrs. E. Brown suggested plants in enamelled flower pots. Enamelling ordinary flower pots in yellow and black and filling with bulbs or a pretty plant makes an acceptable yet inexpensive gift. Mrs. English caused a ripple of amusement by answering with a cure for chilblains, which, she said, she was sure would be as good a Christmas present as possible for any one so afflicted.

Arrangements have been made for securing an instructor for a sewing class to be held the last two weeks in February. A request has also been sent in asking for an instructor in basketry work, as a number have expressed a desire for this work.

Mrs. Bronson, who was the Institute delegate to the convention recently held in Toronto, gave a comprehensive and excellent report of the meetings and topics discussed. Mrs. Nickle, who was the district representative, also gave an interesting talk on her branch of the work. Mrs. A. Kincaid sang, accompanied by Mrs. A. H. Foster.

At the close of the programme the usual dainty refreshments were served the hostesses for the day being Mesdames C. Moon, E. West, W. Nugent and E. Brown.

SHOT LARGE GOOSE.

SARNIA, Ont., Dec. 2.—(Canadian Press).—Bloss Walter Tuesday brought down one of the largest wild geese seen in this city for some time, along the London Road. The big bird weighed 11 pounds, and had a wing span of almost four feet.

SYNOPSIS

It's a very worried group in Aunt Celimena's house in Connecticut. By midnight Connemara Moore was to announce her engagement—to Bing Carrington or Salt Adams—or be disinherited by auntie. Instead, Connie, disguised as a gun, slipped out of the house, hailed young Dave Lacy as he was driving past, and, though she had never seen him before, climbed into his car. Now Connemara and David are on a ferry-boat, crossing Long Island Sound toward the New York shore.

"It won't be necessary to make a profession out of it. This is not a permanent flight by any means. And," she added, touching his arm ever so slightly, "you've no idea how grateful I am to you for the loan of your wings."

A bare-chested oiler rose, Mephistophelean, from the red maw below the engine-room gratings. He stood gulping the air, one hand braced against the jamb of the door while with the other he mopped his face with a bunch of greasy waste.

Connemara observed him thoughtfully. "I should think men like that would make good athletes. They get so soaked in oil they must work easier than most people."

Lacy did not deign a reply. His mind was feverishly attempting to project itself into the future. The further it projected the more complex the situation seemed to become, until finally the whole affair broke off of its own weight and dropped into the abyss of chaos. The oiler stared at the pair for a moment and then disappeared.

A man squeezed through the passage between the wall of the engine room and the truck in front of them. This in itself was not extraordinary, but he was by no means an ordinary man. Indeed, had you seen him selling tickets in front of a side show you must have immediately purchased admission on the theory that any exhibition of human misprints that could waste such material for the collection of dimes must indeed contain rare pi beneath its canvas.

A battered check cap with a veritable awning of a peak clung miraculously to the side of his head at an angle that made it difficult to say if it served as an ear muff or a head covering. Certain it was that it constituted the only head covering available, for the hemisphere of his cranium which had been left exposed to the night was as free from hair as a country hotel mattress. Under the light it had the sheen of an oyster shell. The simile ends there, however, for his skin, far from being mother of pearl in color, was pigmented with a California sunset so brilliantly crimson in hue that in the twilight of the passageway it appeared to glow like molten metal. He wore a suit checked in the proportions of a leaded glass window. The skirt of his coat ran a race with the lapels which it won just short of his knees. Where the lapels gave up they were brought together by a black cord neatly secured at either end by two enormous pearl buttons. A spear or a bayonet might have been used as a last for his shoes to which half a dozen pearl buttons still clung desperately as mute reminders of better days. From the corner of his mouth hung a cigar, the charred end of which had opened like the petals of a rare night flower.

The bizarre vision stepped clear of the rear end of the truck, carefully brushed the knees of his baggy trousers, and then, without straightening up, proceeded to examine the license plate of the Isotta. Apparently satisfied by his inspection, he drew from his inside pocket a torn piece of paper which he read by the aid of the light over the engine-room door.

Lacy and Sister Connemara watched his movements with interest. The night had already offered such proof of the abundance of its sensations that they had both arrived at a state of acceptance such as Alice must have reached when she rose from the Mad Hatter's tea party. Nor was their trust to be abused.

The check suit squeezed along the side of the Isotta. Without so much as a glance at the occupants of the front seat, it opened the rear door and calmly unbuttoned the floor carpet of the tonneau. A swift, searching hand was inserted under the loose corner—a long hand with thin, tapering fingers, quite out of keeping with its home torso, a hand that might pass a match underneath this was drawn a crude anchor around which a snake had apparently retired for the night.

"Here's the rest on it," said Mr. Pooch, and bending over the front seat he injected a hairy forearm into the tiny circle of light. On the inner side of the limb was neatly engraved a small blue anchor passionately embraced by a sea serpent.

"Guess y' can't object to that," said Mr. Pooch complacently.

Lacy looked from the two bits of paper to the white shrouded head beside his, back to the rear seat where a luminous glow indicated the unhandsome features of Mr. Pooch, along the shiny bonnet of the car to the tail light of the truck in front, and back to the papers. Through his mind for the second time that evening there passed memories of other red-letter days, and nights, of his life—doing the Human Fly across the front of a Venetian palace while the siren object of his Lloydian amours mocked him with Virginia tobacco rings from window to window; thrilling days in the souvenir belt of New Guines, carving over-congenial gorillas in the privacy of his tent; a scientific experiment to prove the theory that one American is as good as six Frenchmen, conducted in an open-air laboratory off the wharves of Brest.

HASTINGS BOYS VOTED FOR HAIG

Gave Him Majority of 12 in Boys' Election in East Northumberland.

RESULT PLEASES.

HASTINGS, Dec. 2.— The vote cast by the boys in the Hastings United Church in connection with the Boys' Parliament was 13 to 1 in favor of the successful candidate, Jack Haig of Campbellford. The polling booth was at the residence of Mr. D. B. Scriver and Mr. Byrout Scriver acted as returning officer.

The local boys are very much pleased with the result of the election, when their favorite candidate won.

SUNDAY SCHOOL AT 2.30.

Marmora United Church Will Change Hour of Session.

MARMORA, Dec. 2.—Commencing next Sunday, the hour of Sunday School at the United Church will be 2.30 p.m. for the winter months.

The annual Christmas entertainment in connection with the aforementioned school will be held at the Town Hall on the evening of Dec. 23.

The Ladies' Aid of the United Church is holding a bazaar and sale of cooking at the Council Chambers on Saturday afternoon next.

Mrs. Langman, who has been on the sick list, is recovering.

The arrival of snow in liberal proportions has been the occasion for early sleigh riding by the juveniles. Cutters were to be seen out on Sunday, which must be their earliest appearance for many years.

Girlie, Favorite With Campbellford People, Old and Young To Stay In Town, Although Former Owner Moved Away

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 2—Alex Winter and his family have left town but "Girlie," the sturdy little Shetland pony that has drawn Mr. Winter to and from his place of business for the past 25 years, remains in town and will continue to be as much of a public character as ever. "Girlie" has been a favorite with the children in Campbellford, every one of them at some time or other longing to possess her. She has been one of the local attractions, something that has been pointed out to visitors as a fixture of long standing in the community.

To begin with: "Girlie" has attained the age of 36 years and looks like a pony still in its prime. Her first owner in Campford of whom there is any record was was H. R. H. Dryden, who formery published a newspaper, here and who, later was connected with The Review in Peterborough. Mr. Dryden sold the pony to his father-in-law, the late B. M. Frederick, who lievd on the farm on the outskirts of the town, now owned by Allan G. Watson. Mr. Frederick drove every day to his business in town behind "Girlie" until he sold her to Mr. Winter.

"Girlie" is as intelligent, but much less perverse, than "Whisker" the diminutive equine that Dickens made famous in his story, "The Old Curiosity Shop." If left tied to a post in the street, too long it has become a habit with her to slip her bridle and dragging the buggy with her, wander off to graze whither grass was to be found and on these jaunts she never met with an accident.

"Girlie's" new owner is Walter J. Lowe who has purchased her as a playmate for his children. In a semi-official transaction such as this, it is no breach of confidence to state that the consideration was $10 and everybody in town thinks that Mr. Lowe got the pony at bargain rates.

Housework won't worry you if you have abundant vitality, for the real burdens of housework are run down nerves and lack of vitality. These are what make you feel sometimes that you are not strong enough to go on any further and that you must just lie down for a rest.

Medical research has definitely proved that one of the causes of a run down condition of the body is a shortage of certain mineral elements, including iron, potassium, calcium, sodium and phosphorus, and until a sufficient supply of these minerals is restored to the body, good health is impossible. Wincarnis contains every one of these elements in addition to other health giving ingredients, and in a form in which they are most rapidly absorbed into the blood and carried to every part of the body to be converted into vital force.

Wincarnis has been recommended by over ten thousand physicians in cases of nervousness, anaemia, sleeplessness, and the general debility that accompanies a run down body. For fifty years this strength giver and nerve restorative has brought new life and happiness to weakened men and women.

Buy a bottle of Wincarnis today from your druggist. Try it and see the difference just a few days will bring.

CHILDREN SKATE ON CITY STREETS

Complaints Also Made About Practice of Catching on Automobiles.

FINES FOR PARENTS.

Chief Newhall stated to-day that he had received numerous complaints from citizens regarding children using the intersections of streets as skating rinks and of their hanging on to automobiles. He said that the corner of George and Lake streets and Hunter street from St. Peter's Cathedral were especially singled out and stated that any children who are caught at either of the above practices will be taken to the shelter and their parents will be called upon to pay a fine before they will be released.

PEN OFFICIAL FAVORS LASH

General Hughes Says Hardened Criminals Fear It More Than Jail.

ACCOMODATION GOOD.

OTTAWA, Dec. 2. (Canadian Press).—Brigadier-General W. St. Pierre Hughes, superintendent of penitentiaries, in an address here yesterday, stated that while dungeons, dark cells and flogging in penitentiaries were things of the past, he favored judicial use of the lash for hardened criminals. Most of them, he said, would rather face a five-year term than one application of the lash. Referring to the condition of modern penitentiaries, General Hughes stated that penitentiary accommodation is better than 99 per cent. of the hotels in Canada, excepting those in the larger towns and cities.

PITCHED BATTLE IN JAIL MUTINY

Nine Killed and Twenty-four Wounded—Led By Murderer.

RANGOON, India, Dec. 2. (Canadian Press).—Nine persons have been killed and twenty-four wounded in a jail mutiny at Pyapan, Lower Burma. Led by a murderer under death sentence, the prisoners overpowered the guards and seized arms. Police surrounded the jail and the prisoners surrendered only after a pitched battle in which five prisoners and four guards were killed and twenty prisoners and four guards wounded. The leader of the mutiny was among those killed.

TO APPEAL FOR BARNARDO BOY

F. W. Field, K.C., Files Notice at Osgoode Hall For Townsend.

SENTENCE HARSH.

TORONTO, December 2. Canadian Press. — On the grounds that the sentence was unduly harsh, severe and merciless, and disregardful of the prisoner's youth and mitigating circumstances, Frank W. Fields, K. C., of Cobourg, to-day filed notice for leave to appeal at Osgoode Hall, against the sentence of four years imposed on Frederick Townsend, a Barnardo Home boy, for forgery and false pretences.

It is contended that Townsend was not allowed to say anything in defence except to plead for mercy. The sentence was imposed by Magistrate Hind at Oshawa.

VIMY RIDGE LODGE ELECTED OFFICERS

Sister Wright Is New Worthy Mistress—A Presentation Made.

Vimy Ridge, L.O.B.A., 244, held its regular meeting December 1st, at which nearly one hundred members of the association were present.

Business and ritualistic work were conducted in a very able manner by the officers and members, which is one of the essentials in the upbuilding of a lodge.

A very impressive ceremony took place when the Worthy Mistress Sister Foster, had the pianist, Sister Broadley, presented to her, to receive from the lodge an address for her faithful services, and an emblematic ring as a small remembrance for duties she had performed. It was very ably replied to by Sister Broadley.

After the Worthy Mistress had declared all the offices vacant, she called upon Bro. J. M. Carl of Stirling, L.O.B.A., to conduct the election of officers. He was assisted by the Worthy Mistresses of Eastern Star, L.O.B.A., and Star of Bethlehem, L. O. B.A., also the old reliable of Vimy Ridge, Bro. George Porter, and the election resulted as follows:

W.M., Sister C. Wright; D.M., Sister Brown; Chap., Sister Dunsford; Rec.-Sec., Sister Campbell; Fin.-Sec. Sister D. Manley; Treas., Sister DeLong; Lecturer, Sister Lowes; Dep. Lecturer, Sister Meeks; D. of C., Sister Millard; Committee Sisters, Peters, Elliott, Steers, Miller and Carney; I.G., Sister Little; O. G., Sister Whatley; Guardian, Bro. Geo. Porter; Auditors, Bros. J. Spence and Bro. G. Porter; Degree Captain, Sister Devall.

After the officers had resumed their stations, short addresses were given by the visiting members and a hearty vote of thanks extended to those who had assisted in the election.

It was called to the attention of the members of the lodge by the Worthy Mistress that all members make a special effort to be present at the meeting on December 15, for the installation of officers-elect, and to do their part in making the banquet, which is being held, a success.

REBEKAH LODGE.

Regular Monthly Meeting Concluded With Social Evening and Cards.

The regular monthly meeting of the Golden Link Rebekah Lodge held last evening, concluded with a social evening spent in the enjoyment of cards and dancing, and attended by over two hundred people. Twenty tables of cards were played, the prizes going to Mrs. Matthews and Mr. Lemons. Dainty refreshments were served, and excellent music provided by Follis' orchestra.

General Upward Move Carried Forward To-day

NEW YORK, Dec. 2. (Canadian Press). — Constructive operations were carried forward successfully in to-day's Stock Market as favorable trade news from several quarters supplied the incentive for general buying. The stimulus of the heavy holiday trade, coupled with reports of record November earnings by some of the large mercantile establishments brought fresh buying into the store and mail order shares, while dividends and major developments enlivened the activity in miscellaneous shares.

Motor stocks, after the recent setback, were again accumulated on a fairly large scale, the rise in Chandler being associated with reports of an early merger in the Cleveland company. Chrysler and Stewart Warner were other strong spots in this group. The strong support which was evident for motor issues encouraged the resumption of pool operations in other speculative favorites, resulting in gains of 3 to 4 points in General Electric.

Heavy Trading In Oils With General List Active

TORONTO, Dec. 2. (Canadian Press).—With trading heavy in oils, which registered advances of from one to two or more points, activity developed in the general list on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning, and a number of substantial gains were recorded. Outstanding was Atlantic Sugar, which advanced a point and a half at 35 for Common and a point at 83½ for Preferred. Canada Bread Common was marked up three and a half points at 62¼, and Winnipeg Railway a point and a quarter at 48¼. Canadian Canners Common gained a point at 14½, and advances of seven-eighths of a point were made by Canada Steamships Preferred and F. N. Burt Common. Brompton and Brazilian also shared in the general climb.

Easier Trend Shown To-day On Standard Mine Exchange

TORONTO, Dec. 2. (Canadian Press).—An easier trend was shown on the Standard Mining Exchange this morning, with Kirkland Lake and Vipond assuming the leadership, and several silver stocks also active. Kirkland Lake sold down four points at 70, but Vipond climbed to 138, easing to 133 at the morning close for a loss of two points. McKinley Darragh, the silver leader, was sold up three and a half points at 23½, and Coniagas advanced 20 at 4.90. Teck Hughes and Tough Oakes were firm, while Beaver and Everett were among the weak issues.

December Wheat Hit $1.75 But Profit-Taking Set In CHICAGO, Dec. 2 (Canadian Press)—Persistent unfavorable crop conditions in Argentina together with a big new bulge in values at Liverpool led to further sharp advance today in wheat here. The entire market rose above any quotations heretofore reached in Chicago this season and December delivery hit as high as 1.75 per bushel, a goal which enthusiasts had long predicted. Heavy profit-taking sales immediately set in, however, and a quick reaction took place. Opening 1c to 4 3-4c higher, new style, December 174 to 175 and May 168 to 169, was followed by set back to 172 for December and 166 1-2 for May.

Corn displayed independent strength as a result of buying based more or less on government plans for credit to Iowa farmers. After opening 1-4c to 1c higher, May 79 3-4 to 79 7-8, the corn market continued to ascend, May touching 81 7-8.

Oats sympathized with corn and wheat, starting 1-4 to 1-2c up. May 43 7-8, and later showing additional gains.

Provisions were easy, affected by a decline in the price of hogs.

SCHEDULED GAMES TO BE PLAYED HERE

Manager of Senior O. H. A. Team Denies Rumors To Contrary.

To the Sporting Editor of the Examiner:

It has come to the notice of the management and players of the Peterborough Hockey Club, that reports and rumors are current on the street that the Peterboro Hockey Club intends to play its games away from here this season.

This is altogether contrary to what is the truth in the matter as the Peterboro Hockey Club intends to play all its scheduled games in the Brock Street Rink, Peterboro, and never had any intention of doing otherwise.

The games we have already played out of town were for the purpose of getting practice for our players. The S.P.A. games are required to be played in Toronto by all the teams participating. We, or no other team, have any control over this.

So far as scheduled hockey games are concerned, Peterboro public will see them played in Peterboro.

We just wish to correct the misapprehension that appears to be in existence in a great many minds in the city, as we appreciate our duty to the citizens in Peterboro to give them the best hockey we possibly can, and play it in Peterborough.

PETERBORO HOCKEY CLUB,
Ed. Wright, Manager.

COUNCIL TALKS

W. T. Curtis wanted to know how it was that Peterborough bread could be bought in Stirling at a price two cents cheaper than it could be purchased in the city. Mr. Elliott, County Clerk, said that he could buy Lindsay bread at a two cent advantage over the prices charged by Peterborough bakeries.

A motion was passed permitting the Peterborough Division Court Clerk to use one of the rooms in the Court House. The room in question was declared vacant by the Inspector of County Property and is located on the east side of the north corridor.

Enlarge Building.

The Council while dissolved into property committee, with M. E. Smithson as chairman, then entered upon a discussion concerning an addition to be placed at the north end of the County Buildings. On motion the Chairman was authorized to consult an architect for the purpose of obtaining plans and estimates for an addition measuring 39 x 40 and two storeys in height for the purpose of housing the County Clerk and the Registrar. It was determined that the cost of re-arranging the present offices would go considerably toward the proposed construction. In any case, additional space must be provided, an opinion which was universally granted by the Council.

A resolution was passed sanctioning the purchase of a book-keeping machine for the City Clerk's office, as the one previously in use had become useless and the cost of maintenance warranted the purchase of a new one.

M'MILLAN GIRL SENT TO SCHOOL

Not Mentally Deficient, But Is In Need of Schooling.

STOLE A BABY.

TORONTO, Dec. 2. (Canadian Press).—"Ann" MacMillan, properly Rachel Harret MacMillan, will go to Alexandra Industrial School for Girls for an indefinite period, Judge Mott decided in the Juvenile Court to-day. The fourteen-year-old girl has been under observation since she was arrested for taking Baby Robert Muldoon from his carriage in front of a department store to her home, and it is found that she is not mentally deficient, but merely in need of schooling. She has been absent from school for five years.

The baby was returned to its parents two days after its disappearance by the girl's father, who, with Mrs. MacMillan, is committed to trial on a charge of abduction of the infant.

YOUTH CONFESSES MURDERING CHUM

Whisky an Influence in Brutal Crime.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—For no other reason that that "he got the notion," Gordon Pirie, 19-year-old, undersized youth, rained axe blows upon the head of his friend, George Nye, and then took $5.60 from the dead lad's pocket, which he spent playing pool, going to a movie and buying ice cream sodas for three girl friends.

This, according to District Attorney McGeehan, of the Bronx, was the meat of a confession made by Pirie, after he had told three conflicting stories.

Nye's body was found Sunday night by Gordons' sister, Margaret, who had returned from a week-end visit.

Police were notified and squads of detectives searched all day for Pirie. Just as more detectives were to be assigned to the case, Pirie walked into a police station near his home.

"I'm Gordon Pirie," he said in a matter-of-fact voice to the police lieutenant. "I guess you want me." Two hours latetr, after attempting the recital of incoherent stories, he is said by police to have confessed the murder.

Youth's Confession.

According to McGeehan, Pirie told the following story He had invited Nye, a bricklayer's helper, to spend Saturday night at his home. When he came home from a party early Sunday he found Nye in bed and the two boys talked awhile of the money to be made in Florida real estate if a little capital could be obtained.

Two hours later Pirie awoke, dressed and went out for the Sunday newspapers. He read them, and then suddenly remembered Nye had said he had a little money. Then he "got a notion," obtained an axe, and six times, with all the force he could muster, brought it down upon his friend's head. They he wrapped up the body, and pushed it under the bed, first removing the small sum from Nye's pockets.

From poolrooms Pirie brought home two other friends, and they sat in another room of the Pirie home drinking whisky. Then came a visit to a movie theatre and the "treating" of some girls. He took one of the girls to her home and then started back to his own.

Outside a huge crowd had collected about an ambulance. Pirie was told some one had been murdered. He fled for the subway and rode back and forth in underground trains until his surrender to police.

Second Confession.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.— (Canadian Press.)—Neither an abnormal "irresistible impulse" to kill, nor jealousy, but a distorted sense of chivalry roused by resentment over a slur upon a girl's character, stirred Gordon Pirie, 20, to hack his chum, Gordon Nye, 19, to death with an axe, according to his second confession made public last night. Pirie first laid the slaying to a sudden "irresistible impulse."

It was explained the confessed motive was resentment and the desire to "get even" with Nye for his remark. The girl, it was said, was neither Pirie's sister, Margaret, nor his sweetheart, Violet Schmidt.

BOUDOIR CAPS

(Written for the United Press)

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—(United Press).—Holding bobbed locks in place and holding the husband can both be accomplished by means of a boudoir cap. Many a man has been disillusioned by a wayward lock at the rear of his wife's boyish bob. To be smart the rear bob must lie flat to the head and for this reason a sleeping cap is indispensable.

Many of the new caps are made exactly like a baby's bonnet fitting tight to the head with streamers of ribbon which tie under the chin or at one side. There may be ruffles about the face or a frill of net which comes over the eyes to assure becomingness.

Most models are made of net, either ecru or black and some have a round opening at the top to permit air to get to the hair roots. It is a mistake to wear anything on the head while sleeping which tends to smother the roots of the hair since the hair thrives on air. For this reason the old type of crepe de chene boudoir cap with the tight elastic which extended about the head was not as healthful as the newer little net affairs.

A cap of black net with a dotted net ruffle about the face which may be worn over the eyes like a little nose veil and with rosettes of varicolored rosebuds at the sides over the ears is extremely becoming and holds the wave in place as well as holding the back hair flat to the head. A little chinstrap of black velvet fastens at one side.

Another made of blond lace with an up-standing frill of blond lace edged in tiny wire so as to give the effect of a Russian headdress is also alluring. Often such a model has a band of gold matched by a gold ribbon chin-strap.

New also are wide bands of net cut to fit the head which end in lace streamers which tie at one side. These may be trimmed in tiny net ruffles and remind one of the caps worn by French nursemaids. The girl who wears bangs finds them indispensable.

Becoming Tam-O'-Shanters for Girls

The ensemble idea is charmingly carried out in girl's clothes by having a tam and leggings to match the material of coat or frock. Figure A wears a becoming model having eight shaped sections joined to a fitted band, and finished at the crown with a button covered of the material. If worn with a fur-trimmed coat, a pom-pom of fur in place of the button would be very chic. Figure B wears a tam fashioned of two circular pieces set together with a piping, made from a narrow bias strip of the material, and is also joined to a fitted band. A rosette made from contrasting ribbon is tacked to the center of the crown. The leggings may be worn up over the knees, or cut off below the knees for the older girl. No. 1280 is in sizes 4, 8 and 12 years. Size 4 years is suitable for 2 and 4 years; Size 8 for 6 and 8 years; and Size 12 for 10 and 12 years. Size 8 years requires ⅛ yard of 27-inch material for the two-piece tam, and ⅝ yard of 27-inch for the eight-piece tam. The long leggings require ⅝ yard of 36-inch material, and the short leggings ⅛ yard. Price 20 cents.

QUEEN'S SMILE IS STILL REMEMBERED

Little English Lady Thinks of Last Time She Saw Alexandra.

TORONTO, Dec. 2.—(Canadian Press).—"She had the most beautiful smile I ever saw. How I remembered the last time I saw it!" So softly said a little English lady who came out to Canada over a decade ago to make a new home here with her sailor husband, according to the Toronto Telegram.

"It was at least sixteen years ago," she said, "and I was just a little sad at leaving England for life in what I pictured as a Canadian wilderness. As I was walking in London, I saw the policemen line up as they do to prepare for the coming of a royal carriage. Then I saw it was the Queen Mother, and I made up my mind I would have a last smile all for myself. Beautiful Queen Alexandra was bowing to the crowds as she came along in that lovely, gracious manner which made her win all hearts. As she neared me I went out into the middle of the road and curtseyed. What a wonderful bow I received, and such a smile! It has stayed with me all these years."

MAY COURT CLUB DOES GOOD WORK

Band of Ladies Have Carried on Work For Past Twenty Years.

HAVE CHILD WARD.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press.) — The May Court Club of this city has been engaged in a campaign for $10,000. The Jounrnal praises its work in an editorial. For more than 20 years this band of devoted ladies in a club which was sponsored by the happy thought of the wife of a former Governor-General have carried on with conspicuous success a variety of community services, every one of which has brought solace and comfort to the sick or unfortunate.

It has maintained for years a special children's ward in the Water Street Hospital, it has rendered yeoman assistance to the Victorian Order of Nurses, and the Protestant Infants' Home. Every Christmas its members have supplied Christmas trees for the delight of those tiny sufferers in the wards of the city's hospitals. In addition to its purely children's work the club has maintained a free X-ray and tuberculosis dispensary and a convalescent home for women. It has also aided the Perley Home for Incurables.

TRINIDAD WOMEN DIDN'T BOB HAIR

Winnipeg Lady Tells About Life and Activities on Island.

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 2.—(Canadian Press).—Mrs. Hector Kemp, formerly Miss Grace Salter of this city, who went to Trinidad as principal of the San Fernando Mission School in 1920, is visiting here. She says that "Educated and emancipated though they are, the women of Trinidad take little interest in public affairs." This, she explains, is partly because high officials are appointed from England, not elected by the people. The other mid-Victorian characteristic of these women is that they wear tresses long and flowing, and are very proud of them, too. In Trinidad, only the blacks and the English shear their locks.

Weddings

VINING—BELTON.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 2.—A charming society wedding took place in St. Paul's Cathedral Saturday afternoon, when Doris MacLean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Belton of "Almardobel," Richmond Street North, became the bride of Charles Arthur MacLaren Vining, son of Rev. Dr. A. J. and Mrs. Vining of Toronto, Mr. Vining is Managing Editor of The London Advertiser. At the appointed hour the bridegroom with his groomsman, Mr. William McLelland of Hamilton, and the officiating clergyman, Very Rev. Dean Norman L. Tucker, and Rev. Dr. A. J. Vining of Toronto, took their places at the altar. To the strains of the "Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin, played by Mr. Harry T. Dickinson at the organ, the bridal party moved slowly up the aisle, led by the ushers, Mr. Ernest Little, Mr. Harry Wylde, Mr. Olaf Reckmitzer, Mr. Gordon McMillan of Toronto, Mr. William Levan of Toronto and Major T. W. McDowell, V.C., D.S.O., of Ottawa. Immediately following came the procession of bridesmaids in gowns of autumn tones shading from flame color through orange to maize. First came Miss Babby Moore and Miss Margaret Vining, sister of the groom, both wearing gowns of flame-colored Bechoff chiffon with gold lace petticoats. The second pair of bridesmaids were Miss Margaret Scatchard and Mrs. William Bartlett, both in orange tone chiffon, the gowns being similarly fashioned over petticoats of gold lace. Their flowers were arm bouquets of mauve 'mums. Mrs. Wilson Purdom, sister of the bride, who acted as matron of honor, followed the bridesmaids, wearing a gown of maize chiffon and carrying large golden and baby 'mums. Immediately preceding the bride was the wee flower girl, Miss Theresa Purdom, niece of the bride. The bride appeared on the arm of her father, in her nuptial robe of Patou chiffon, exquisitely embroidered in pearls and rhinestones. The gown was fashioned over a lace slip of pointe applique, and the sleeves fell open to the waist. A court train of ivory satin, lined with green chiffon and silver cloth, was caught at the shoulders with rhinestones ornaments to match the rhinestone girdle of the gown. A white satin pre dieu was used during the ceremony, which was conducted by Very Dean Norman Tucker, rector of St. Paul's Cathedral, assisted by Rev. Dr. A. J. Vining of Toronto, father of the groom. While the register was being signed the choir, in full surplice, sang the wedding hymn, "O Promise Me." To the strains of Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" the bridal pair left the church and repaired to the home of the bride's parents on Richmond Street North, where a reception was held. The bride and groom received in the living-room before a bank of palms, ferns and golden 'mums. Mr. and Mrs. Belton and Dr. and Mrs. Vining received with them. Mr. and Mrs. Vining later left for Bermuda, where the honeymoon will be spent. On their return to the city, shortly before Christmas, they will take up residence in their new home on Wellington Street North. Out-of-town guests for the wedding included: Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Vining, Miss Margaret Vining, Mr. Howard Wheaton, Mr. Walter E. Laidlaw, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Lind, Miss Mary Lind, Mr. E. Gordon McMillan, Mr. and Mrs. Winnett Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gooderham, Mr. and Mrs. Howard White, all of Toronto; Dr. and Mrs. G. Raymore Scott of Peterboro', Mr. Thomas Murphy of Sandwich, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Belton of Sarnia, Mr. and Mrs. Renee Lapetre of New York; Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Hindmarsh, Mr. and Mrs. John R. Bone, Miss Jessie Matthews, Mr. Harold Hambidge, all of Toronto; Mr. W. J. McLelland of Hamilton, Major I. W. McDowell of Ottawa; Mr. William E. Levan, Mr. Harold Schantz, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth McMillan, Capt. and Mrs. Herbert Scandrett, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Kemp, all of Toronto; Mr. John Mitchell of Sarnia, Mr. Edward Wainwright of Hamilton; Dr. J. C. MacLaurin, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Hanna, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Johnston and Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Chaley, all of Toronto.

Mr. Vining, the bridegroom, is a brother of Mrs. G. Raymore Scott.

NATURE LORE

By WALLACE HAVELOCK ROBB

Six of us were sitting before a roaring open fire, away up north, one evening during the hunting season.

Talk of the out-of-doors is likely to be interesting in a log cabin camp, after six men have been well fed and have had some experiences during the day.

We talked about many wild things which human beings do in the woods, and of the human actions of wild things. Then, just naturally, the other five picked on me and began to pull my leg a little on this nature faking business, and began to cross examine me as to my qualifications and my ability to tell the truth about nature. These other five men were no parlor naturalists themselves. I was forced to talk my prettiest nature stuff.

Finally, in desperation under their cross fire, I made this statement: "If you fellows can name me, or tell me, one story or thing about human beings, which I cannot duplicate in a more interesting form in the bird world, I will cook the breakfast and attend to the cook stove all by myself for three days, although it is really not my turn."

The gang left it to old Pa Fraser, a veteran fisherman, to corner me. Well, old Pa picked a tough one. "Since I have been a fisherman, men have been telling about the big fish which they hooked, the biggest they ever got, but they never bring it home and can never prove that they ever even hooked it. Now, what's a bird got to do with that? Birds can't tell fancy fish stories, can they?"

Of course I was stuck for a while, but I finally thought of the Osprey, our noble Nimrod. He is the greatest fisherman of all, the fishhawk. How much nicer to call him Osprey. He catches fish with grace and ease. He never takes more than he needs.

"Well, said I, "I think I have you baeten. You say that maybe men sometimes do hook big ones which get away, but the men cannot prove it. It is often difficult to prove things. A friend of mine saw an Osprey hovering over a salmon river, looking for fish. He finally spotted a whopper and down he came through the air, reaching out his talons and hooking that big fish. But the catch was so big that it swam to the bottom, pulling the bird down too. He hooked a big one but he couldn't prove it. It drowned him."

THE PUMPKIN PIE PRINCESS—XV

OTTAWA'S RUGBY ENTHUSIASM GLOWING FOR WINNIPEG GAME

Senators Have Lost Joe Miller and Charlie Connell May Be Missing.

WORD FROM WEST.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 2—(Canadian Press)—Another great assemblage of rugby enthusiasts is expected to be on hand here Saturday afternoon for the Canadian championship final between Winnipeg Tigers and Ottawa Senators. Interest in rugby is still very much alive locally despite the winter weather and while it is probable that the teams will meet on much the same kind of a field as last Saturday there is every indication that the game should be a good one.

Although a Western team has yet to defeat the Easterners in the annual playoff, the Ottawas are paying no attention to precedent and are working might and main, to win this contest and the title of Canadian champions. They went through a stiff hour again yesterday and will be out today and Thursday, letting off a little on Friday, although a signal trial on that day will likely be held.

There is some uneasiness being expressed over the condition of Charlie Connell. The star half liner suffered a cut foot in practice last week and then on Saturday when he saw the condition of the field, decided to play the first half wearing basketball shoes. Cold must have set in as his foot is now in bad shape and blood-poisoning is threatened. With Miller gone from the half line, the Senators cannot afford to also suffer the loss of Connell and his absence, if he is unable to play, will certainly be a severe one. None but those who follow his work closely can appreciate the tremendous gap Connell fills on the Ottawa team. His forte is defensive play where he revels in the heavy going but on the attack he is equally important and is one of the locals' best ground gainers on plunges.

With the exception of Miller and the possible exception of Connell, the eSnators will eb at full strength particularly "brainy" player. Mulroney was being counted on to fill Miller's shoes, but if Connell is also out, the youngster will probably be sent in the place of the latter as the second flying wing, with Jerry Ault teaming up with Tubman on the half line. Mulroney is a strong, rugged boy with an abundance of sand and great tackling ability. Another proposed shift is that Lynch play left half with the team on the defensive and then take charge at quarter when the locals are on the attack.

However, hopes are entertained that Connell will be in his usual place and thus remove the difficulty. Cote, who suffered an injury to his knee on Saturday, is around again and attended practice yesterday.

Tigers' Final Practice

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 2 (Canadian Press)—Favored with ideal weather, Tammany Tigers, Western Canada's hopes in the Dominion rugby final against the Ottawa Senators to be played in the capital city next Saturday, held their final practice Tuesday, prior to their departure for the East this morning.

The workout was confined to perfection of a number of plays with which the local squad hopes to challenge the bid of the Senators for the Dominion's highest rugby laurels. The boys scampered around the field and there was general agreemnt among observers that the Eastern champions would know that they had been through a real contest, irrespective of the ultimate result of the final game.

"If a team is only as strong as its weakest link, we're pretty well fortified," one official of the club said as the Tigers trotted off the field.

With Johnny Laing, Jimmy Crane and Greg Warren in the back field the opposition will find a strong defence. It is gencrally conceded that in Dick Buckingham, at flying wing, the Tigers have one of the best players that has ever been developed in Western Canada. Buckingham has enjoyed the best season of his career. He is a fearless plunger, tackles hard and is regarded as a particularly "brainy" player.

REVIEW OF OLD COUNTRY SOCCER

Sunderland, Chelsea, Rangers Among the Defeated on Saturday.

For the second Saturday in succession, bad weather prevailed in the Old Country on Saturday, with the result that several games had to be postponed owing to the wretched condition of the grounds and poor visibility. Two games in the first division of the English League were postponed, as well as several fixtures in the first round of the English Cup. There were more than the usual number of surprises, both in England and Scotland. Such fancied teams as Huddersfield, Liverpool, Tottenham, Middlesbro, Derby Conty, St. Mirren and Glasgow Rangers all went down to defeat.

The struggle at Highbury, between Woolwich Arsenal and Sunderland was a bitter one, as the leadership of the English League was the issue, the Gunners winning out by 2 to 0, and thus gaining a one-point lead over the Weirsiders. In additions, the Londoners have a game in hand. One of the smartest performances of the afternoon was the defeat of Bolton Wanderers by Cardiff City at Burnden Park. Only one goal was scored, but it was enough to give the Welshmen the much-needed points.

Woolwich Arsenal and Sunderland are not going to have things their own way. Week by week Aston Villa, Manchester United and Huddersfield keep improving their position. All three teams are but three points behind the leaders, and they have played fewer games. The Old Trafford crowd have a wonderful defence; in 17 games they have yielded but 20 goals, and their attack is also good. Manchester United will bear watching from now on.

New Leaders in Second.

New leaders are recorded in the second division of the league. The honor this week goes to Sheffield Wednesday, which team beat Chelsea in the most convincing manner. It looks as if the Pensioners have cracked. They sustained their first defeat of the season, the previous Saturday, and now Sheffield Wednesday comes along to add to Chelsea's misfortune. Derby County and Middlesbro also bit the dust. The defeat of Middlesbro on their own ground was one of the sensations of the day.

Surprises in Scotland.

In keeping with the general order of things, St. Mirren, leaders in the Scottish League, were humbled, so was Motherwell, and Glasgow Rangers were forced to take a licking on their own ground from Falkirk. St. Mirren still lead the parade, but the lead is a slim one. Three other teams are following in close pursuit, being only one point in arrears. These are Falkirk, Celtic and Airdrie.

Nithsdale Wanderers got the shock of their lives at Somerset Park, Ayr United winning by the huge score of 6 to 1. The result was a big tumble down the league ladder for the pride of Dumfriesshire. By losing to Clyde, Arbroath lost the leadership of this division, which again goes to Stenhousmuir. Third Lanark, a much-fancied team, had an easy win over Armadale.

English Cup.

There were one or two surprise results in the first round of the English Cup. Coventry, a strong contender in the third division, was beaten by Worksop, and Swansea, one of the best teams in the second division, was defeated by Exeter.

LADIES' LEAGUE—Y.M.C.A.

The first series of the Ladies' League which finished last Friday at the "Y" Alleys was won by the Bluejays, captained by Miss Mary Ross, who won twenty-one games to six losses. The other teams will furnish more opposition in the next series, as according to the final standing the teams were very evenly matched. All the teams finished with only one game separating them in the different places. The Robins, captained by Mrs. A. W. Clysdale and the Canaries, captained by Miss Ethel Rae, finished in a tie for second place.

The individual averages for the first series, which has just been compiled, show a steady increase in the averages over the past two years and undoubtedly the next series will show even better.

The final standing at the close of the first half is as follows:

CANADIENS WON IN CLOSE GAME

Were Outplayed at First, But Managed to Finish on Top.

SCORE WAS 3-2.

BOSTON, Dec. 2. — (Canadian Press).—Canadiens defeated Boston Bruins 3 to 2 in a fast game here last night, the issue of which remained in doubt until the last second of play. Both Boston goals were made by Carson Cooper, while Morenz netted two of Canadiens' tallies and Joliat the third.

At the outset the team from Montreal seemed sluggish, and was clearly outplayed, both on the attack and defence.

Outlasted Visitors, Scoring Two Goals in Second Session.

SCORE 4-2.

MONTREAL, Dec. 2. (Canadian Press). — Montreal defeated St. Patrick's of Toronto in a scheduled N.H.L. fixture here last evening, 4 to 2. Brilliant play featured the second session, when Montreal scored two goals to break a one-all deadlock and take a commanding lead in the battle. Montreal's defence was sound, and its forward line fast and tricky, with Siebert and Nelson Stewart starring. St. Pat's seemed out of condition and faded badly in the second session.

BOXING OFFICIALS OPPOSE NEW RULE

But N.Y. Commission Insists on Decision By Rounds.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2. (Canadian Press).—The State Athletic Commission refused Tuesday to alter its recent decision to have fights judged by rounds won and lost instead of on points, despite a plea by referees and judges in the Metropolitan area.

Voicing the opinion that the new ruling works an injustice on them, the officials told members of the commission that the change would lead to even more unsatisfactory decisions than were experienced under the old plan of judging the merits of two contestants on the basis of a complete contest, without regard to the standing by rounds.

Lucien Vinez, European lightweight champion, offered this his manager to fight Jimmy Goodrich, world's lightweight champion, at the Christmas Fund matches on December 23, on a basis of no compensation if he wins and $1,000 for training expenses if he loses. The commission approved the proposition and recommended to the promoters that they accept the offer.

PERSONNEL OF WINNIPEG TIGERS RUGBY LOCHINVARS COMING EAST

Western Canada's Senior Champions Have Weight and Experience—Roster Is Impressive.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 2 (Canadian Press)—Following are brief sketches of the individual members of the Winnipeg Tigers:

Dick Buckingham, the main cog of the Bengal machine and flying wing, weight 190 pounds, age 24. He started playing rugby with the original Tiger Juniors back in 1918. For the past six years he has played with the Seniors. Dick is one of the most reliable men on the team; a sure catch, brilliant broken field runner, dependable tackler and powerful punter.

John D. Laing, right half, weight 150, age 24. Captain of the team and noted for his speed and line plunging. With the exception of 1923, when he played for the Hamilton Tigers, Laing has been on the roster of the Tiger club. He is also a star lacrosse player, having been chosen on the All-Star Eastern team in 1923.

Lyman Van Vliet, left half, weight 170, age 25. A 10-second man and a tricky broken field runner. Has a brilliant record as a defensive player as well and is regarded as a sound tackler, has been playing the game since 1916, graduating to the Tiger fold from the Varsity Juniors.

Gregg Warren, centre half, weight 180, age 24. Is a sterling punter, but has also a reputation of being a deadly tackler. In past seasons he has played with the Winnpeg Victorias. For the major portion of this year he has been out of the game as a result of injuries, but is now reported to be in splendid shape.

Jimmy Grant, centre half, weight 165, age 21. With Warren, will do the booting for his team. He has developed from the ranks of the substitutes into one of the most reliable open field runners and on several occasions during the past season he has paved the way for a Tiger victory.

Art Shaw, quarter, weight 160, age 22. Another speed merchant and heady player. He is a great favorite with the local fans.

"Sunny" Coultry, quarter and end, weight 145, age 24. Is a valuable player in all departments of the game and one of the most experienced members of the team. He has played rugby for the past 11 years.

Louis Adelman, snap, weight 170, age 22. Has a sure throw and is strong defensively, being a sure tackler and plays second line defence creditably.

Oliver Redpath, end and half back, weight 165, aged 22. "Red" is the surest tackler on the squad and hits them hard. Also plays a strong game at half back and plunges well.

Jack Millidge, weight 155, age 19. Plays end and does drop kicking for his team. He learned the game at Ridley College and has improved greatly under expert coaching. He is a daring tackler.

Charlie Counsel, end, weight 165, age 24. Also a graduate of Ridley College. Plays a strong end game and believes in a policy of hitting 'em low.

Art Puttee, end, weight 175, age 20. His first year in Senior company, but plays the game like a veteran of many years. Is exceptionally fast and has proved an important factor on the defence.

Harold Roth, middle wing, weight 2?2, age 30. A product of the United States and has introduced many of the features of the game as played across the border. Harold is a great line plunger He is the coach of the team and was responsible for gathering together the present championship material.

Eddie McLean, middle wing, weight 225, age 22. Big but fast. He is one of the mainstays of the Bengal defence, while making yards is second nature to Eddie.

Ward McVoy, inside wing, weight 185, aged 24. Has developed into a real star. Ward is one of the most popular athletes in Winnipeg and his share in the offensive campaign of the Bengals has at all times been well entrusted. A good tackler and line plunger.

Bert Binney, inside wing, weight 190, age 23. Has speed to burn which is unusual for a line man. Broke into Senior company last year but has developed rapidly.

Jack McMahon, weight 185, age 24. Learned the game in the East and has proved an efficient line man and fills into advantage. Big and good natured, but "does his stuff."

Harry Bullock, weight 190, age 24. Chief strength on the offensive, and can be depended upon to fill any position.

By CHESTER HORTON

Making the tee ball take a spin is one of gold's accomplishments. Contrary to the ordinary player's idea of it, it is not the ball with overspin that carries far, but the underspun ball. To impart underspin to the tee shot you hit the ball slightly below its center. The ball then will loft fairly well and the air has the same effect upon it that air pressure has on wings of an airplane. The driving force sends the ball forward and the underspin on it keeps it up. Those long carrying balls that appear to hang in the air do so because the player has imparted underspin. The underspun tee shot goes far because the longer you keep the ball in the air the farther it will carry. Abe Mitchell can outcarry with his ball because he keeps it aloft three seconds longer, say, than would be the case without the underspin—and three seconds more in the air, through underspin, means 75 yards more on the fairway for the ball.

FIRPO WILL FIGHT IN CANADA SHORTLY

Argentine Heavyweight Plans to Get Back Into Competition.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Dec 1. (Canadian Press).—Luis Angel Firpo, Argentine heavyweight champion, plans to get back into the fighting game, and the first bout in his new ring campaign on this continent will be in Canada next spring. This announcement was made on behalf of the "brave bull of the Pampas" here to-day, but details regarding the prospective fight in the Dominion were not disclosed. He will fight in England before going to Canada.

CALENDAR HAS GREAT INTEREST

Prudential Issue Shows Victory Tower at Ottawa in Full Colors.

E. S. TURNBULL PAINTER

The pictorial calendar just issued by the Prudential Insurance Company has an outstanding interest for the people of Canada, and has a personal connection with Peterboro also. The design chosen this year by the Prudential Company of America for this calendar, which will be sent broadcast to every section of the United States and Canada, is a variation from their ordinary pretty girl picture. It is a variation of the Victory Memorial Tower, which is an imposing feature of the new Houses of Parliament at Ottawa, and is reproduced from the original painting of the Tower done this year by Mr. Edward Stanley Turnbull, formerly with the Department of Trade and Commerce at Ottawa, and now a member of the Arts Department of the Home Office of the Prudential Insurance Company, in Newark, N.J. Mr. Turnbull was specially commissioned by the company to go to Ottawa and paint the picture which has been placed on this year's calendar. It is a beautiful reproduction in a panel which shows the Tower, with mauve shadows outlining the creamy stone of which it is composed. Rising against the white-flecked blue sky, the Tower occupies the centre of the picture, and is a striking example of architectural beauty. To the twenty-seven million of people who will receive a copy of the company's calendar this year, residents of the North American continent, it will bring home very plainly one of the beauty spots of our Dominion.

The connection which Peterboro has with the achievement is the fact that the painter, Mr. Turnbull, is a brother of Mrs. Stanley Blewett of this city.

New Sweaters Ordered For Senators' Game On Saturday

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 2—Due to the good fellowship that existed between the members of the Ottawa Senators and the Queens' rugby teams in the Eastern Canada rugby play-off here last Saturday. Members of the Ottawa team are without team sweaters to play the Dominion finals with the Tammany Tigers of Winnipeg here on December 5. Members of the two teams exchanged their sweaters as souvenirs of the game. Manager Jim McCaffrey has ordered a new consignment of tri-colored sweaters.

England's Oldest Coroner Held Over 6,000 Inquests

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 2.—(Canadian Press Despatch).—At the age of 91, and with the record of having held over six thousand inquests, Dr. Samuel Craddock, Coroner for East Somerset and understood to be the oldest coroner in England, has just died at Bath. Sixty or more years ago, when he was appointed, the election was in the hands of the local freeholders, and partook of the importance of a Parliamentary election. Dr. Craddock has confessed that he spent over £700 in propriating the electors in manner which the Corrupt Practices Acts would render impossible nowadays.

CHAMPION BULL TO BE AUCTIONED

Prince of Wales' Fine Beast is Being Sold at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Ills., Dec. 2 (United Press) — "King of the Fairies," proud bearer of the royal colors of the Prince of Wales at the Chicago Live Stock Show is soon to depart from his royal owner. He will be auctioned off to the highest bidder tomorrow.

Mah Jong, selected late yesterday as the champion steer of the show, will also be auctioned off. Mah Jong comes from Iowa State College. Several other champions in the various classes were crowned yesterday afternoon.

FIFTEEN DAYS ON A DERELICT

Crew Had To Set Water-logged Ship on Fire to Attract Attention.

23 MEN SAVED.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2. (Canadian Press).—Fifteen days on a water-logged derelict to which they finally set a torch under their very feet in a desperate effort to attract the attention of the first steamer they had sighted in a week, was the tale told by the rescued crew of the steamship Algiers yesterday. Twenty-three men arrived on the steamship Dorca, having been transferred to her at Cardiff from the steamer Rassau, which rescued them after they had set fire to the Algiers on November 3.

GOOD MAGISTRATE COULD HELP

It was decided that Mr. Edgar should continue to carry on the work of Mr. Powell, who is at present incapacitated because of illness.

Captain C. H. Buckland.

Mr. Buckland of Toronto, in his introductory remarks, said that he brought greetings from Mr. Kelso, who had addressed the annual meeting which took place last year. He expressed the sympathy of Mr. Kelso and himself for Mr. Powell, who he declared, was one of the most efficient of local superintendents, in the clear and concise manner of presenting his reports.

Previous to 1921 he said, the work of caring for the waifs and strays of society was left in its entirety to the Children's Aid Society, but since that time much assistance has been granted by the government and private parties. To-day he was advocating the abolition of industrial schools, and declared that they could be rendered obsolete if people would come forward and take the responsibility of raising the children. He said that Judge Nott, the Juvenile Court Judge of Toronto, had sent only three boys to the Industrial school during the past year. He had followed the trial systems with 95 per cent of the parents, and with the children the remaining 5 per cent. The services of the society will vary directly as the zeal shown by the people.

Since the inception of the society 17,767 children had been made wards while almost 100,000 had passed through the hands of the society.

Many of those who had been aided by the society would repay the kindnesses a hundred fold. Every child is a member of the State and should be given a home, declared Mr. Buckland. If it was possible children should not be separated from their brothers or other members of the family, and every consideration should be shown the child of unfortunate circumstances.

Rev. Mr. Richardson submitted a resolution of sympathy which the society might show towards Mr. Powell and it was decided to send a token of flowers embodying that sentiment.

Rev. Mr. Mackinnon offered the use of a motion picture machine for the entertainment of the children at the Society home. Rev. Mr. Richardson told about the church attendance and Sunday school work in which the children were participating. The meeting was closed on the pronouncement of the benediction.

CRUISER SENT TO EASTERN TURKEY

Angora Assembly Anticipates Further Anti-Hat Demonstrations.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 2— (United Press)—The cruiser Hamadieh has been sent to Remzie in anticipation of further reactionary incidents in the Eastern provinces where "down with the hat" demonstrations against the new anti-fez mandate have occurred. The Angora Assembly had abolished its order prohibiting dervishes from visits to the holy mausoleums.

RIVERA WILL FORM CABINET

Military Directory Will Be Replaced By Civil Administration.

RIVERA AS HEAD.

MADRID, Dec. 2. — (United Press).—General Primo de Rivera announced to-day that he would form a Government soon.

Spanish advices a few days ago announced that the Spanish Directory would be converted into a civil regime with Primo de Rivera still the strong man in Spain's affairs.

Theatre

AT THE CAPITOL

GLORIA "STAGE STRUCK" IN PICTURE BY THAT TITLE

In "Stage Struck," her newest starring picture for Paramount, produced by Allan Dwan from an original screen story by Frank R. Adams, Gloria Swanson comes to the Capitol Theatre on Thursday, as an abused little waitress in a river town in the middle west who, though she has never done anything, to prove she can act, decides to go on the stage because Lawrence Gray, who has the role of Orme Wilson, pancake cook in the restaurant where she works, likes actresses.

As it chances, one of the Ohio River's floating theatres arrives in town and Gloria, as Jenny Hagen, takes a desperate chance. She approaches the manager with the information that she is a student in a correspondence school for acting. He sees a chance for something funny and puts her on the programme in a female boxing bout with the leading woman of the floating show, played by Gertrude Astor.

Jennie knocks her rival down and so elated she tries to recite a poem to the crowd. The other girl gets up and Jennie takes one on the chin for the count.

The crowd hoots; Jennie flees. Ormi Wilson tried to find her and catches her leaping into the river. He treats her cave-man fashion and the picture closes (in natural colors) with him making fancy designs with pancake batter—two hearts and an arrow—while Jennie looks on admiringly.

Ford Sterling, recently seen with Tom Moore and Florence Vidor in "The Trouble With Wives" has a great comedy role as manager of the floating theatre who gives the star a job. Marguerite Evans, Carrie Scott, Emil Hoch and Margery Whittington complete the cast.

AT THE ROYAL.

"PATHS TO PARADISE" AN UP-TO-THE-MINUTE COMEDY

Produced by Three-"Man"-Team of the Old School

"The old team is again back in double harness and pulling strong."

This statement was frequently heard around the Paramount Hollywood studio lot when Clarence Badger started production on Paramount's "Paths to Paradise," featuring Raymond Griffith and Betty Compson. For Badger and Griffith made a highly successful picture five years ago—and have not been together again since up to the time Paramount teamed them.

These two men have much in common through a varied experience that furnishes a substantial background for excellent motion picture production. Both are honor graduates of highly specialized comedy schools. Griffith at one time wrote, directed and acted Mack Sennett comedies, and then went in for comedy—drama, where he has carved a name for himself. Badger has both written and directed comedies for Sennett, knows every angle of the laugh-making game, and has turned out many excellent screen dramas.

Betty Compson rightly says it is a three "man" team, for she entered upon her screen career with Al Christie, where she arose to the heights of a comedy star.

"Paths to Paradise," which will be the feature at the Royal Theatre on Thursday next to remain for three days, is a clever crook comedy that includes Fred Kelsey, Tom Santschi, Bert Woodruff and others in the supporting cast.

"SQUIBS" PLAYING TO CROWDED HOUSES AT THE ROYAL

Once again Betty Balfour crowded the Royal. All we will say we do not blame our popular Prince of Wales for recommending this slice of life. Tonight is the last opportunity; better take advantage of it. The musical accompaniment by the Royal orchestra is worth the price of admission.

AT THE GRAND

"BRINGING UP FATHER IN GAY NEW YORK."

After a long and successful run at the Lyric Theatre, New York, a Broadway showhouse where the best of attractions are offered, "Bringing Up Father in Gay New York," and the entire Mahoney clan will be the next presentation at the Grand Opera House on Saturday, December 5, matinee and night. Those who have already seen this latest version of the famous George McManus cartoon creations pronounce it as the best of the series up to date. Of course, Jiggs, Maggie and Dinty Moore will be very much in evidence. What would a "Father" entertainment be without them? Then there will be a dominating and exceptionally captivating usual bevy of pretty young women, trained beauties, capable of finding favor on their own account in any environment anywhere. Music that lingers, laughter that adds to the delight of living and singing and dancing that long will be remembered after the proceedings are over and enjoyed.

THE DUMBELLS' NEW SHOW.

"Lucky 7", the Dumbells' latest and best show, will be seen here for the second time at the Grand theatre on Wednesday, December 9th. "Lucky 7" marks the seventh year of The Dumbells as an all-Canadian body of entertainers, and so far has given indication of justifying its title. In color, variety, novelty and ambitious spectacles, it is conceded to touch a new level for the soldier showmen, and it provides the public with all the essentials of a first-class up-to-date revue.

The sketches strike a new note in "Up the Hill", a symbolical and highly effective spectacle in two tableaux, with a polgnant Canadian appeal. For comedy, "Red Goes on Leave," with "Red" Newman in a delightfully characteristic role and "Us Girls Must Have Fun," with its burlesque nonsense, as is "High St., Africa", keep the audience in continuous laughter.

The songs are admirably varied and prove unfailingly diverting. Red Newman has a worthy successor to "Oh, It's a Lovely War" in "Let's Start the War Again." Al. Plunkets is on the top of his form in "Whites than Snow", "Hi, Hi, Ho", a radio number; and "As Long as She Loves Me", a song feature. Ross Hamilton has two features with spectacular setting of charm in "I'm Wonderful" and "Darling, I Love You," the latter written by Howard Fogg, The Dumbells' conductor.

Pat Rafferty, Jock Holland, Stan Bennett, and Ben Allen, with Morley Plunkett, keep the fun going steadily; and Capt. Plunkett's jazz orchestra, with song features in tableaux on a raised platform within a picture frame, complete the full measure of a first-rate entertainment.

AT THE REGENT

"THE MYSTIC AN EXPOSE OF TRICKS OF SPIRITUALISM

Romance of Medium Bares to Public Dishonest Practices of the Seance Chamber.

DIRECTOR FORMERLY SEER

Tod Browning, Past Master at Black Art, Discloses How Victims Help the Fakers.

Probably the oldest and most persistent human desire is to communicate with the dead.

About this desire Director Tod Browning has written and translated to the screen a thrilling crook drama which exposes the methods of crooked mediums without in any way reflecting on the religious beliefs of any sincere sect or individual.

Director Browning has gained much fame among the millions of picture fans as author and director of thrilling underworld films founded on the machinations of banded crooks. Only a short time ago he gave the picture-goers the unique and much admired film, "The Unholy Three."

In "The Mystic," Browning has created and filmed a story that will go a long way toward exposing crooked mediums who prey on a grief-stricken public made gullible in their almost hysterical desire to communicate with departed loved ones.

"Some of these crooks accumulate fortunes by merely charging fees for alleged spirit communications, and others work hand-in-hand with banded crooks who care nothing for the usual small fee charged for spirit readings. Occasional police investigations and prosecutions have failed to put a step to this form of larceny, because the field is so rich and the people so easily duped that fake mediums and clairvoyants merely change their names and locations and open up again. Very few of these swindles are exposed because the victim hates to let the public know he has been duped."

Aileen Pringle and Conway Tearle are seen in the featured roles of "The Mystic," at the Regent Theatre now playing.

GERMANY REGISTERS ELEVEN TREATIES

Shows Desire to Fall in Line With Obligations of League Members.

She registered eleven International engagements entered into with eight different Powers.

Chateau was reproved by the judge, who apologized to Gould.

IRISH BOUNDARY TO BE APPEALED BY FREE STATE

Will Ask League To Interpret Article 12 of Anglo-Irish Treaty.

DELICATE SITUATION.

Britain Advised League That Questions in Empire Could Could Not Be Appealed.

GENEVA, Dec. 2. — (Canadian Press).—Ireland will appeal on the Ulster boundary question to the League of Nations or The Hague Court, or both, if Great Britain and North Ireland seek to impose the findings of the Kettham Commission according to well-informed sources.

The League will be faced with one of the most delicate questions it has ever attacked should the Free State take such action. The correspondent learns that the Irish will use every means at their disposal to prevent the permanent inclusion of Tyrone and Fermanagh Counties in Ulster.

The Irish Free State will appeal to The Hague Court for an interpretation of Article XII. of the Anglo-Irish Treaty, which Dublin declares was inserted in the treaty especially to rectify an injustice in the 1920 Act. It will furthermore appeal to the League under Article XV. of the covenant. This action would create an issue which would strike at the very foundations of the League. A year ago the British Foreign Office sent a note to the League, which stated specifically that questions arising among the Dominions and Great Britain could not be appealed to the League.

Dublin immediately replied, holding the opposite view, and the Free State Envoy at Geneva informed the correspondent that Ireland would withdraw if the viewpoint of Britain were upheld should it ever come to a show down.

SCOTTISH REVIVAL STORY TO BE TOLD

Rev. William Allan, of St. Paul's Will Speak at Prayer Meeting.

The story of the great revival which broke out some years ago among the fishermen along the north-east coast of Scotland will be told this (Wednesday) evening in St. Paul's Church by Rev. Wm. Allan, the pastor, who took an active part in it. After the revival broke out, Rev. Mr. Allan, who was then acting as pastor of a congregation in New York, received a request to visit Scotland and assist in the campaign. His congregation consented to release him, and for a number of months he was associated with the leaders of, what proved to be, one of the greatest revivals that has ever visited Scotland. Humble fishermen, without a scholastic training, were so filled with the Holy Spirit that they were the means of converting large numbers of others. One of these men was later asked to address the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Scotland and also of the Free Presbyterian Church. The address will be given to-night at the usual prayer meeting service, and a welcome to attend is extended to all who are interested.

SOCIALISTS WARN AGAINST TIMIDITY

Say France Needs a Strong Government—No Dictatorship.

PARIS, Dec. 2 (United Press)—The Socialists have issued a manifesto warning against timidity and hesitation in the Government and declaring that "Cascism and Bolshevism" prosper on deception and delay. The statement particularly condemns inflation as a menace to the workers and middle classes of France since it eevlops high price and instability of production and exchange.

The Socialists suggest that France needs a strong govrnment, but appeal to the masses to stand firm against dictatorship in the battle for workers' liberties.

LIMERICK WINS.

Former Peterborough Man Has Winning Entry at New York.

Among the Canadian owned horses which won distinction at the National Horse Show at New York, just closed, was the fine jumper Limerick, owned by Mr. Frank P. O'Connor, of Toronto, formerly of Peterboro, who was awarded the reserve championship in the heavyweight hunters' class against an exceptionally strong field of American-owned horses. Bantry, a middleweight hunter, also from the stable of Mr. O'Connor, captured a third ribbon in the novice middleweight hunters' class. This was Mr. O'Connor's initial effort in the tan-barked arena across the line and in Toronto, at all of which shows he succeeded with a very great degree of success. At both the Royal Winter Fair and Toronto Hunt Club shows Mr. O'Connor's horses made a splendid showing.

LLOYD GEORGE READY TO QUIT

Former Premier Will Retire If He Is Obstacle to Party Unity.

MEETING LAST NIGHT.

LONDON, Dec. 2 Canadian Press—"If I am an obstacle to Liberal unity I am prepared to retire." Is the reported definite pronouncement made by Lloyd George at a private gathering of Liberals here last night when Lord Oxford and Asquith was entertained with a view to further healing of the differences between the two wings of the Liberal party.

Reports of the gathering agree that a specially conciliatory tone was adopted by Lloyd George, particularly with regard to his land campaign which, it is understood, fails to meet with the entire approval of both sections of Liberalism.

Lloyd George said his land policy could be modified. Lord Oxford and Asquith declared that he and Lloyd George had worked together harmoniously for 10 years and though there had been differences between them they had come together again and were the best of friends. He said he had every hope that the differences over Lloyd George's land policy would be settled in a few days. He plainly intimated, however, that if they were not settled shortly the party would have to do without him for he would be unable to remain with a disunited party.

LEAGUE QUESTION.

LONDON, Dec. 2. (Canadian Press).—Yesterday's rumor of the possibility of war between Great Britain and Turkey over the Mosul boundary failed to cast a shadow on the general rejoicing over the signing of the Locarno treaty, but the ugly problem was not forgotten and was discussed informally in the lobbies of Parliament and elsewhere. Nothing developed, however, to give more solid form to the rumor. Delegates of the nations are now starting for Geneva, where the Mosul dispute will be one of the main topics before the Council of the League.

K. OF C. MEETING.

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien Tells of Catacombs in Rome.

The regular meeting of the Knights of Columbus, held last evening, was featured by an address given by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, who gave an interesting account of the ancient catacombs in Rome. There was a good attendance and the evening was enlivened by community singing, led by Art Costello, and a vocal solo by A. J. Reynolds.

BRIAND TO FACE STORM WHEN HE REACHES PARIS

News That Currency Inflation is Proposed Not Favorably Received.

ASKS CONFIDENCE.

Wil Request Immediate Consideration of Financial Plans.

PARIS, Dec. 2 (Canadian Press) —Premier Briand, fresh from the rarified atmosphere of peace and good will of the Locarno treaty signing in London, will be confronted with a gathering storm, when he returns to Paris, which will require all his experience and skill to ride out. News that parliament is to be asked speedily to vote for the inflation of currency has by no means made a favorable impression in the lobbies and while it is not doubted the financial bill of Louis Loucheur will be passed, it is thought it will be by a narrow margin and after a hard struggle. After he reads his ministerial declaration, the tenor of which already is known, M. Briand will request the postponement of two dozen interpollations on the Government's general policy which have been announced and will request immediate consideration of the inflation bill. He will make the bill a question of confidence and it is expected the chamber will accord this.

PROPOSALS OF DOMINION BOARDS OF TRADE MOSTLY ACCEPTABLE TO GOVERNMENT, PREMIER SAYS

Big Delegation of Canadian Business Men Carry Program to Ottawa.

WINNIPEG RESULTS

Resolution Adopted at Recent Conference — Premier Doubtful of Money Outlay.

OTTAWA, Dec. 3. — (Canadian Press).—Resolutions embodying the Legislative programme of the Boards of Trade of Canada were presented to representatives of the Government and Conservative Opposition parties in the House of Commons here yesterday. A big delegation representing the various Boards of Trade which participated in the recent Winnipeg economic conference waited on Premier Mackenzie King and his Cabinet in the early afternoon, and later discussed their proposasl for a national economic policy with three of the Conservative leaders: Sir Henry Drayton, Senator G. D. Robertson, and Hon. S. F. Tolmie.

In the Premier's office, discussion of the programme was prolonged. The meeting with the Conservative group was brief. Sir Henry Drayton, referring to the sheaf of resolutions, said, "I don't think there is anything here we can quarrel about."

Premier Mackenzie King expressed keen satisfaction with the character of the resolutions, found them for the most part very acceptable to the Government, but pointed out that where the expenditure of any considerable sums of money was involved, the Government might find itself unable to go the whole way in meeting the wishes of the delegation.

Agree on Immigration.

The vigorous policy on immigration recommended by the Winnipeg conference was particularly acceptable to the Government, said the Prime Minister, and it did not differ very materially from the policy which the Government hoped to put into force next year, but the question of expense entered into it, and there might be difficulty in finding the money to carry it out.

The proposal to establish a commission of business men to advise on matters of immigration, he said, might lay the Government open to the charge that it was shifting its responsibility to other shoulders, and in passing the Premier referred to the expense involved in the operation of the Civil Service Act. The Civil Service Commission had grown into a large department requiring great expenditure, and the effect of its operations was that the Government had not the control of the public service which it should have.

Invite Premier Baldwin.

ALBERTA MINERS INCITED BY I.W.W.

Independent Workers of the World Fomenting Trouble at Wayne.

250 INFLUENCED

CALGARY, Alta., Dec. 3. (Canadian Press).—A special despatch to the Herald from Wayne, Alberta, says:

"Two hundred and ninety-five men, partially or completely infected with the virus of Radicalism, have hoisted the banner of the 'Wobblies,' as the International Workers of the World are called in Wayne, while more than 700 other members of the Wayne Mine Workers' Union who, it is said, want to go back to work, accept their dictates in silence.

"Operators here were confronted with a demand for recognition of the I.W.W. yesterday morning and a return of the 1924 wage scale. A further demand for an answer within one hour was totally disregarded by the operators.

"Organization of the I. W. W. faction was completed by Sam. Scarlett, who is said to have extended his activities to Rosedale.

"Miners joining the new organization have been assured that their subscription of fifty cents will bring them strike pay of $2.50 a day while the mines are shut down."

Are Operating On Convict He Swallowed Razor Blades

LEAVENWORTH, Kansas, Dec. 3 (Canadian Press)—C. H. Mansfield, 34, convict at the Federal prison here, will undergo an operation Thursday for the removal of two razor blades from his stomach. Mansfield swallowed the blades a week ago while shaving in the Tulsa Okla jail, where he had been sent following his conviction for violation of the Dyer act. He had the two blades in his mouth when a friend slapped him on the back, causing him to swallow them, he told prison officials.

BRITISH HOUSE SAT IN SECRET UNTIL MORNING

Safeguarding Industries Was Subject Debated in All Night Session.

STRANGERS OUT.

Laborite Proposed Exclusion of Outsiders About Three Hours Before Close.

LONDON, Dec. 3 (Canadian Press).—The House of Commons sat until 7.15 o'clock this morning, after a session, the last three hours of which were held in secret—a precaution not taken before since the critical days of the Great War.

The subject under discussion was the Government's safeguarding of industries' proposals, which the Liberals and Laborites are opposing tooth and nail, on the ground that they are equivalent to a protective tariff.

The dramatic change to secrecy was brought about by a Laborite motion to exclude all "strangers." The supporters of the ministry made no effort to oppose the motion and the chairman was obliged to put in operation the rule ordering strangers to leave.

When the exodus was ordered, the ministerialists had defeated attempts by the Liberals to secure reduction in the proposed duty of 33 1-2 per cent on knives to 5 per cent, and the Opposition had begun a similar seemingly hopeless effort on behalf of scissors.

While nothing was given out as to the proceedings in the secret session it is believed the cutlery resolution passed the committee stage after a long series of divisions.

White Engineer's Feat Ends Indians' Tradition

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Dec. 3.—Engineering wizardry of the white man has blasted an Indian tradition of three hundred years' standing at the Pueblo of Isleta, near here.

Since the year the Pilgrim Fathers landed at Plymouth, the body of Juan de Padilla, martyred Franciscan padre, has risen annually to the earthen surface of the Catholic chapel in the peublo plaza where it was buried beneath the altar, tradition runs.

Two years ago the United States Indian Service constructed an irrigation ditch through the plaza and since there have been no further risings of the body.

The body is in a remarkable state of preservation, resembling a mummy with long, dark whiskers, Indians who have seen it said.

Slain by Indians in 1580, half a century after he remained behind when Coronado's expedition returned to Mexico, Father Padilla's body was removed from the distant Grand Quivira, according to tradition, and was placed beneath the altar of the Isleta church.

The white man explained it a natural phenomenon but the Indian always regarded it as an unearthly act.

Scotland Yard Disapproves London Necklace Fashion

LONDON, Dec. 3.—Scotland Yard has entered the realm of fashion to voice a protest.

The cause is the new fad women have of wearing pearl and diamond necklaces with strings down the back. As a "help yourself" idea of displaying precious stones, the detectives said it was sure to make more work for them.

MAY INVOKE CURFEW ACT

Chief Newhall Scores Parents For Lack of Interest in Boys.

20 BOYS TAKEN.

There was a long list of names at the police station this morning the result of twenty-one youths being brought in by the police last night. Their ages ranged all the way from 7 to 15 and they were found loitering around movie shows and street corners. They were dismissed with a warning, but Chief Newhall said that if they were brought in again they would be charged under the Curfew act which decrees that the fine for the first offence is $1, second offence $2.00, third offence $5.00. The Act states that no children shall be allowed out after nine o'clock at night unless they are accompanied by an adult appointed by the parents or guardians. Chief Newhall stated that a great number of these boys were selling newspapers and were poorly clad, and was of the opinion that they could be looked after better by the Children's Aid Society. He stated that they had some of the boys at the station until between 10.30 and 11 o'clock without receiving any enquiries regarding them, which in his opinion clearly showed a lack of interest and care on the part of the boys'

FASCISTS THROW OUT SOCIALIST

Dragged From Seat in Italian Chamber and Ejected.

ANOTHER ATTACKED

ROME, Dec. 3. — (Canadian Press).—The Italian Chamber of Deputies was the scene of a scuffle yesterday when Vincenc Saitta, a Social - Democratic deputy from Sicily, and a member of the Aventine opposition, which has been abstaining from the parliamentary sessions, was forcibly ejected from the Chamber.

Upon spying Saitta, a group of Fascist deputies, led by Achille Starace, shouted, "What are you doing here?" rushed upon him, dragged him from his seat and pushed him out of the room.

This incident was the second to enliven the Chamber proceedings Wednesday. Lugi Repossi, a Communist deputy, narrowly escaped injury when attacked by several Fascists whom he angered by a remark during a discussion of the Government's oil researches. Sergeant-at-Arms intervened, but disorder reigned for 10 minutes.

TURKS DYING TO RETAIN FEZES

Author of Attack on Hats Was Hanged By the Authorities.

RIOTS REPORTED.

ANGORA, Turkey, Dec. 3 (Canadian Press).—Old-fashioned Turks who do not want to be westernized are fighting and even dying for their fezes, which the Government has ordered to be replaced by modern hats. The author of an attack on hats which was placarded on the walls of a village near Sivas in Eastern Anatolia, has been hanged by sentence of a local tribunal.

Reports reaching Angora tell of a riot directed against Occidenta reforms in one of the Eastern provinces. A mob at Marache paraded before the Governor's, shouting: "We don't want hats." Forty rioters were arrested and the rest dispersed with difficulty.

BANK MANAGER ARRESTED FOR ALLEGED THEFT

Charged With Taking Bonds Valued at $5,000 in Schomberg.

AT MONTREAL.

Tendered Resignation a Week Ago to Imperial Bank.

MONTREAL, Dec. 3. (Canadian Press).—Harry Coffeey, manager of the Imperial Bank branch at Schomberg, Ont., was placed under arrest in the Imperial Bank here last evening on a charge of theft of bonds, preferred against him by R. W. Phillips, Chief of Police of York County, it was ascertained this morning.

Mr. Coffeey is 39 years old.

TOTAL $5,000.

TORONTO, Dec. 3. (Canadian Press).—Henry Coffeey, who was arrested in Montreal last night, is charged with the theft of $5,000 in bonds, according to A. G. More, superintendent of branches of the Imperial Bank. Coffeey notified the bank of his departure for Montreal and tendered his resignation a week ago, which has not yet been accepted. He is bonded by a local concern.

The direction of the bank's affairs at Schomberg has been placed under W. R. Rodgers, who was brought into the limelight by his encounter with a robber while manager of the bank at St. David's.

IRISH BOUNDARY SETTLED TO-DAY

Agreement Reached at Meeting of British Government and Irish.

LONDON, Dec. 3 (Canadian Press).—An agreement has been reached on the Irish boundary question. Details will be announced tonight. The agreement was reached this morning at a meeting of the British Government representatives with William T. Cosgrave, president of the Free State Executive Council, and Premier James Craig of Ulster. It is stated to be satisfactory to both Northern and Southern Governments.

CALM IN BELFAST.

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, Dec. 3.—(Canadian Press).—Belfast received the news that an agreement had been reached on the Irish boundary question calmly. Satisfaction was felt because the Ulster slogan of "not an inch" has been fulfilled, but there is some dislike of yielding of the British Cabinet on the financial provisions of the Anglo-Irish treaty.

More Than Million Dollars' Damage Done in Business Section.

BOILER EXPODED.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, Dec. 3 (Canadian Press).—Fire caused more than $1,000,000 damages in the business district of Council Bluffs today. The flames started in the basement of the Continental Furniture Co., when a boiler explosion occurred. J. McManigal, night watchman at the building, was badly burned about the head and body.

Eighty guests at the Grand Hotel were safe although forced to flee in scant attire when flames enveloped and later destroyed the hotel. Their personal property was lost.

SHAW ADVISES RUSSIA TO DROP INTERNATIONALE

Says Members Might Better Write Movie Scenarios Than at Present Work.

VERY HARMFUL.

Has Done More Harm To Russia Than Did Rasputin.

LONDON, Dec. 3. (United Press) —Bernard Shaw is again at his old pastime of advising the Communists how to run Soviet Russia. This time he has selected Gregory Zinoviev's Third Internationale as the target of his adverse criticism.

The members of the Third Internationale would find better employment writing movie scenarios or stories for young boys, thinks Shaw, than at their present work.

As one of those who contributed toward the bail of the dozen British Communists who were recently convicted in Bow Street court, Shaw protests against the Third Internationale because the convictions, he says, were the result of its "silly adherence to the convicted men."

"The Third Internationale cannot be trusted," writes Shaw in the current New Leader, and either to give good advice or to spend money sensibly. Can any doubt remain that a new diplomatic policy as well as a new economic policy are absolutely necessary?

"I do not suggest that the Soviet drop Third Internationale through a hole in the ice of the River Neva, although it has been more harm to Russia than did Rasputin. I ask the Soviet to disband the Third Internationale and to finds its members employment as writers of movie scenarios and stories for boys under 14. I feel sure that I have the hearty support of Tchitcherin, Krassin, Rakovsky and everybody else who has ever to do a day's genuine, effective diplomatic work for Russia."

FIRE DESTROYED FARM BUILDINGS

Overheated Stovepipes Believed To Have Caused Disastrous Blaze.

NEAR BETHANY.

BETHANY, Dec. 3.— Fire, supposed to have been caused by overheated stovepipes, caused the total destruction of the buildings and contents on the farm of George Smith, about three miles west of Bethany, late yesterday. The fire started in the house, from which nothing was saved, and jumped to the barn, which was quite close. There was not a great deal of material in the barn, and no animals were lost, but such implements as were there were burned. The house and barn were located in a secluded spot and the fire had made great headway before any assistance arrived.

TWO AIRMEN KILLED.

Planes Collided Over San Diego Bay.

SAN DIEGO, Calif, Dec. 3 (Canadian Press).—Captain Harry Sheppard and Lieutenant John Christian, airmen attached to United States Marine Aviation Squadron No. 1, were killed yesterday when the planes they were flying, collided at a height of 3,000 feet over San Diego Bay.

Balmy Breezes Blow Breath Of Summer Over the Prairies

WINNIPEG, Dec. 3 (Canadian Press).—The weatherman yesterday smiled graciously upon Western Canada, mild and balmy breezes boosting the mercury to respectable levels, following a week of cold and snow. Everywhere on the Prairies, the temperature was well above the freezing point, Medicine Hat basking in near-summer weather with 60 above.

GRANT REFUSED MATRIC CLASS

County Council Rejects Request From Norwood School Deputation To-day.

LAKEFIELD OBJECTS.

A deputation representing the Norwood High School Board of Education waited upon the County Council at the session this morning with a view to obtaining a grant for the maintenance of an Upper school room in the High school. The matter was referred to the Finance committee.

E. C. Squires, chairman of the Board, said that there were 25 students taking senior matriculation classes, seventeen of whom were from without the boundaries of the village. He declared that if the grant was withdrawn the fifth form work would of necessity be withdrawn.

J. G. Keefer said that the school was free of debt and that matriculation classes had been started after crowded conditions had closed the doors of the Peterborough Collegiate to rural pupils. He stated that the $800.00 could be raised by a levy of 1-12 of a mill.

J. C. Strickland, Reeve of Lakefield, took objection and stated that whereas Norwood school was free of debenture debt, Lakefield was still laboring under a heavy assessment because of a school debt.

Mr. Squires replied that the Lakefield school had been made a High school recently while Norwood had been carrying on for sixty years.

W. A. Anderson, Reeve of Otonabee, questioned if the matriculation work could be withdrawn, as the county had invested a certain sum of money in the equipment of the room.

Other members of the deputation were F. Fry, W. H. Buck and Hugh Cuthbertson, trustees appointed by the county.

After discussing the matter the Council as a Finance committee decided that no more grants be allotted to schools. A motion was carried to this effect, although J. Scott, of Asphodel and J. A. Cobb, Reeve of Norwood, proposed an amendment to the effect that the matter might be laid over.

Adjutant Smith and R. C. Braund formed a deputation to the Council soliciting a grant for the Maternity Hospital. The matter was referred to the Finance committee.

NURSE INJURED AT HOSPITAL

Visitor, a Spaniard, Suddenly Attacked Night Nurse With Razor.

CONDITION SERIOUS.

VANCOUVER, Dec. 3 (Canadian Press).—Menitic Pasquale, 41, a Spaniard of this city, last night visited the General Hospital and while seated beside the bed of a friend in one of the wards, suddenly attacked Miss Ann Roedde, 21, night nurse, with a razor, inflicting a terrible gash in the young woman's throat. Pasquale the attempted to take his life by cutting his own throat. Miss Roedde's condition said to be serious. Pasquale, it is believed, will recover.

Pasquale is believed to have been brooding over a recent illness, as he was a patient at the hospital for month, having been discharged from the institution on Tuesday.

Virtually all the veins, arteries and muscles in the nurse's neck were severed and the bones of the spinal column were partially exposed.

Peterboro Fireman Dies Suddenly Today on Return from Duty

Herbert Meehan Passed Away About Noon While Resting After Night Trick—Had Been With Department Here Twelve Years and Was Popular Member.

PROMINENT IN ASSOCIATION.

President of Peterborough Branch of Federation of Ontario Fire Fighters—Funeral Under Comrades' Charge on Saturday Afternoon — Family Survives.

Death came suddenly to Herbert Meehan, a veteran member of the Peterboro Fire Department, at his home this morning. Coming home after working on the night platoon, Mr. Meehan lay down on a couch gasping for breath, and passed away almost immediately.

Mr. Meehan was one of the most popular members of the Brigade. He first joined in 1912, and served for about five years. After an absence of about two years he returned in 1920 and had been with the brigade ever since. He was at the time of his death President of the Peterborough branch of the Ontario Federation of Fire Fighters.

For the past six weeks the deceased man had not been feeling well, and for five weeks he had been doing only desk and office work because of his indisposition. His death was, however, a total surprise, and a great shock to his comrades.

Mr. Meehan lived at 203 Rink street, and is survived by a wife and two young children. The funeral will be held at 2.00 o'clock on Saturday afternoon from Bellegham's Chapel. The firemen will attend in a body.

Trotsky Has Taken Rest Will Resume His Three Jobs

MOSCOW, Dec. 3 (United Press) — After a vacation in Kislovodsk, Leon Trotsky returned here today and is expected to continue in his three positions, the chief purpose of which is economic. Only a few intimate friends met him at the station.

No special political significance is attached to his vacation and home coming.

MOSUL DECISION CAUSES UNREST

Unanimity Required May Be Hard To Obtain in League Council.

SITUATION CRITICAL.

GENEVA, Dec. 3. — (Canadian Press).—Great unrest is manifest in League of Nations circles over the Mosul dispute between Great Britain and Turkey on which the League Council must make a decision, because it is realized that it may be difficult to reach the unanimity in the Council required under the recent ruling of the Permanent Court of International Justice. Another disturbing factor is the announcement by Turkey that she is unable to recognize any decision which fails to meet with her views. It was learned to-day that the situation is so critical that various members of the Council already have been privately consulting one another during their meetings in the various European capitals.

$3,489 SHORTAGE.

Charge Against Treasurer of Kingston Township.

KINGSTON, Ont., Dec. 3 (Canadian Press).—John F. Leatherland, former treasurer of the Township of Kingston, yesterday faced trial before Judge H. A. Lavell on the charge of fraudulently omitting to account for and pay monies received by him for the Township of Kingston. In his evidence A. H. Muir, auditor, who was the first witness, told of his auditing of the township books, and stated that Mr. Leatherhead had signed a statement in his (Mr. Muir's) office, acknowledging a shortage of $3.489.

PRINCE VISITED SCOTLAND YARD

Wales Restive During Period of Mourning for Alexandra.

A SURPRISE CALL

LONDON, Dec. 3. (Canadian Press).—The Prince of Wales yesterday paid a surprise visit to Scotland Yard, where he inspected the famous "Black Museum," in which relics of murders, burglaries and other crimes are stored. He also witnessed various phases of the police activities.

The Prince is having a comparative rest from society, most of his official engagements having been cancelled owing to the death of his grandmother, Dowager Queen Alexandra, but he finds time hanging heavily for one of his restive nature. He spent several mornings recently exercising his hunters in the country, but he did not join in any actual chase.

When not making duty calls in London, he visits all sorts of odd places.

ONTARIO WILL INSIST ON RIGHT TO MORE POWER

Will Demand Development of Surplus Waters of St. Lawrence.

FACES SHORTAGE.

Chairman of H.E.P.C. Will Call on Premier King To Renew Efforts.

TORONTO, Dec. 3. (Canadian Press).—With the spectre of power shortage pointing a gaunt forefinger at Ontario industry, the Provincial authorities intended to insist before the Federal authorities upon their right to develop the surplus waters of the St. Lawrence, not needed for navigation, for power purposes. While Premier Ferguson reiterated yesterday that everything possible in the way of pleading and argument had been placed before the Ottawa Government by himself and his Cabinet he intimated that Ontario would, with more determination than ever, continue her task of convincing Ottawa.

One of the first of the province's renewed efforts to utilize for her industries the wasted waters of the St. Lawrence is to be a personal call by Chairman Charles A. Magrath of the Provincial Hydro Commission upon the Dominion Prime Minister and Right Hon. George P. Graham, Minister of Railways and Canals, who is concerned with the proposal for the St. Lawrence development.

COAL STRIKE TO LAST TO SPRING

Miners and Owners Are Prepared To Fight To a Finish.

FINANCES GOOD.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., Dec. 3.—(Canadian Press.)—The anthracite strike is expected to last all winter, according to opinion in the coal region, which is that it will be the longest strike on record. Preparations for a "fight to a finish" are under way by operators and mine workers. Employers are making arrangements to have the banks of New York and Philadelphia carry those coal companies which may be hard pressed.

Mine union officials are counting their resources and announce that their local union and district organization treasuries will be adequate to meet demands for relief.

BANK OF ENGLAND HAS RAISED RATE

Outflow of Gold Was Responsible For Increase To 5 Per Cent.

LONDON, Dec. 3 (Canadian Press)—The Bank of England today raises its official minimum discount rate to five per cent., an increase of one per cent.

The increase in the official minimum was found necessary in order to check the outflow of gold which has amounted to 19,000,000 pounds approximately $92,150,000) since the bank rate was reduced in October and over 10,000,000 pounds (approximately $48,500,000) on balance since the country returned to the gold standard. It is understood there were prospects of further withdrawals of gold and as New York exchange is hovering near the gold point, the protective measure was thought necessary if the bank's proportion of reserve to liabilities was not to be further lowered.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action, it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

TWO KILLED IN PLANE COLLISION

American Marine Aviators Met Head-on Over San Diego Bay.

TRAVELLING FAST.

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Dec. 3. — (Canadian Press).—Colliding head on 1500 feet above San Diego Bay when their Voight airplanes were travelling faster, than 100 miles an hour, Capt. Harry H. Shepperd and Lieut. John D. Christian, attached to the marine corps, aviation squadron one, at North Island, were killed yesterday. The airplanes, their locked wings and fuselages parting after dropping 1,000 feet, plunged into the bay about four miles south of Coronado, Tent City.

SUCCESSFUL BAZAAR HELD AT OMEMEE

Good Sum Realized By W. M.S. From Sale of Many Articles.

OMEMEE, Dec. 3—The Women's Missionary Society is being congratulated on the success of its annual bazaar which was held on Friday afternoon and evening, the financial result of which was $140.00. The bazaar was opened promptly at 3 o'clock by the president of the Society, Mrs. Rowland, with the doxology and prayer.

On entering the Sunday school room the first booth visited was the handkerchief booth, which was in charge of Mrs. Bushnell, Miss Marion Rea and Miss M. Faulkner, where a most attractive display of 'kerchiefs done up as roses, umbrellas and many other novelties were displayed. Passing on one visited the fancy work booth where an endless variety of dainty lingerie and fancy work was being quickly disposed of at moderate prices by Mrs. J. Shields, Mrs. A. Rutherford, Mrs. L. A. Mahood and Miss Marjorie Connell.

The white elephant booth was nevt in line where everything from coal oil lamps to baby outfits, went like hot cakes under the capable management of Mrs. William Henderson and Mrs. S. T. Wison.

Next in turn came the country store where new laid eggs, homemade bread, cakes, tarts and whipped cream pies, headcheese and pickles, tempted the nickles and dimes from the pockets of thrifty housewives. This booth was in charge of Miss L. Parsons.

The candy booth under the able supervision of Mrs. Bradburn, with the Misses Weir, Lamb, and Woods as the attractive helpers was sold out early having disposed of many boxes of toothsome sweets.

The Orange Tree proved to be a novel attraction this year with its dozens of orange paper wrapped gifts, which sold at five and ten cents, thus taking the place of the old time fish pond. Mrs. Harry Lamb handled carefully the outgoing oranges and the incoming nickles and dimes.

The heaviest stock in the bazaar was in the sample booth which was in charge of Mrs. R. Williamson, Mrs. George Wilson and Miss A. Neil, where one could procure anything from dry goods to stovepipe varnish, fine china and floor wax not to say anything of the appetizing bread, bun and cake department, contributed by the Pure Bread Company and Brysons of Lindsay. A novel attraction at this booth was two guessing contests, one for the number of beans in a jar, the prize a handsome jardiniere, donated by Ryries of Toronto; the the second the weight of a huge candy cane which weighed 8 lbs., 3 oz., and was donated by Olmypia Candy Works of Lindsay, the cane being the prize. 10c a guess was charged and at the end of the evening it was found that Mr. Wesley Wilson was the winner of the jardinere, his guess being 440, and the jar contained 444 beans. The candy was won by Master Arthur Williamson, who guessed 8 lbs., 6 oz.

A splendid supper was served for 25 cents to all who cared to dine and many were the shoppers who took advantage of the tasty meal served by a number of girls.

The tea room was in charge of Miss Rutherford, Mrs. C. L. Morcombe, Mrs. Haygarth, Mrs. W. Best, Mrs. J. Widdes and Mrs. D. Rea.

REPORTS TO THE COUNTY COUNCIL

HOUSE OF REFUGE

Gentlemen: I herewith submit for your observation the different expenditures and receipts for this year to October 31:

Expenditures:

Meat	$ 160.61
Potatoes	60.25
Tea	115.35
Drugs	159.25
Bread	462.52
Groceries	1,149.79
Milk	266.51
Butter	185.40
Syrup	23.90
Honey	7.90
Turnips	2.50
Clothes and Boots	843.52
Ice	10.55
Light and Power	528.74
Fuel	1,292.90
Salaries	1,080.02
Wages	745.55
Board of Management	215.70
Stock	806.63
Machinery	38.05
Insurance	316.00
Gen. Repairs	340.09
Various	947.74
Bedding	237.50
Permanent	961.14
Total expenditures	$10,958.11
Add Debenture liquidation	2,354.70
Expenditures	$13,312.81
Receipts	1,104.60
Cost for 1925	$12,208.21

The above being for 10 months does not in a conclusive manner determine net cost for the whole year, but you will have some idea of what is to be confronted by a Board of Management. There are some inmates that have some means and your Board have appealed to the County Solicitor to advise in the matter.

Your Board had the use of the County Roads' Mixer and Caboose and utensils and had had the same stored at the farm, so that if the succeeding Council decides to build a barn, operations can be commenced early in the spring, and thereby save moving such machinery and tools. Acting on the authority vested in us, we have had a vegetable cellar built 20 x 20 at a cost of almost $600.

I have this to say, that the Superintendent and Matron now acting at the House appear to fill their respective positions satisfactorily.

We, your Board, have given the conduct of the Institution a trial insofar as we were able under the circumstanes, that is without a barn. It appears much the same as eating be without butter.

Less than one half mill would build a barn if the Council so decide. The expenditure was unavoidable heavy this year from the fact that the septic tank refused to operate and the laundry drain refused to work and a number of the windows had to be provided with screens and weather strip. It is my candid opinion that all current and permanent expenses could be met in the future without the issue of debentures and the old, once paid off means less money in the near future from the ratepayers.

Stock Expenses.

Referring to stock expenses, the following indicates that some of the same was purchased in 1924, namely all payments made 9 January were for the previous year and all cited herewith indicates the same to be prior to any of this year's crop.

1925:
Jan. 9—W. J. Charlton, Stock feed..... $ 143.69
C. Garbutt account, breedi.. ..... 1.50
Fr. Finnimore, vet-account 2.00
Jar. 15—W. Bickell, hay..... 17.60
Apl. 8—Fairbairn, straw 5.00
W. Fairbairn, hay .. 3.00
Miss Sanderson, hay 16.75
G. Fairbairn, straw.. 25.00
V. Young 37.50
W. Charlton, stock feed 62.45
May 1—Miss Sanderson:
Oats 22.25
Straw 6.00
Hay 8.00
Clucking hens 5.00
July 1—Int. Stock Food Co. account 30.75
W. J. Charlton:
Seed 41.35
Stock feed 49.80
Miss Sanderson, Oats 18.60

Making a total purchased last year and prior to June 30 this year of $520.24

At the close of last year there were $2,100.00 current liabilities unpaid, which will be more than the current liabilities at the close of this year. Of the $12,208.00 paid out to October 31, 1925, $2,100.00 belonged to last year, so that that leaves net paid out to October 31, $10,108.00, and I can safely estimate that the $12,017.00 provided by the chairman of finance for 1925 will be adequate.

THURSDAY, DEC. 3, 1925.

NO BY-ELECTIONS.

There has long been prevalent an opinion that we in Canada are overgoverned, that we have too many law-makers, and that we have to pay too much for to maintain our Governments.

Premier Ferguson will do much to strengthen that opinion by his decision not to hold any by-elections in the seven constituencies not at present represented in the Legislature before the coming session.

If seven ridings in Ontario can get along without representation at Toronto during a whole session, and apparently not worry about their interests being jeopardized as a result, there will be many people who will come to the conclusion that it might be possible to materially reduce the size of the Legislature without causing any suffering in the Province or inefficiency to develop in the transaction of public business.

Be that as it may, the failure of the Government to bring on the by-elections now gives colour to the impression that there will be a general election early next summer, and the chief interest will lie in the policy that will be presented to the people on that occasion.

That that policy will embrace Government control as a means of dealing with the liquor question seems to be the general opinion, and signs confirming the truth of that prophecy are not lacking.

EARLY SHOPPING.

Christmas shopping should be done not only early this month and early in the week, but, if possible, early in the day.

Much of the congestion of Christmas business would be needless if the business could be properly distributed.

The morning hours offer the best possible opportunity for shopping under comfortable conditions, yet how few, even of those who are in a position to make use of these hours, ever do so.

Peterboro merchants can testify that usually the morning business is quiet, while as Christmas draws near the afternoon hours finds crowded stores, much confusion, difficulty in securing service and limited choice that often leads the shopper in desperation to select gifts that are not what she planned, but that she feels she will have to make do.

There are those, of course, who cannot shop in the morning, and they, too, have to suffer because of congestion caused by other people who could quite easily attend to their shopping before noon and thus leave the field clear for citizens unable to be out in the morning.

Don't put off your gift buying until the last possible chance, and if you can shop in the morning and give others a chance in the afternoon or early in the week and give the farmers an innings on Saturday, by all means do so.

You will be helping yourself, your fellow-shoppers and the merchants and store staffs generally.

THE INCOME TAX.

Windsor is still pressing for the abolition of the municipal income tax, and many individuals, not only in the Border City, but generally throughout the Province, will be in hearty accord.

The situation in Windsor, of course, is a little peculiar, inasmuch as many of Windsor's citizens are employed in Detroit, and thus have to pay an income tax on both sides of the border on the same income.

Leaving that factor out of the situation, however, several sound objections to the municipal income tax still remains, and one of the most potent reasons for complaint is the haphazard way in which the levy is made with the result that in some municipalities the tax is not collected at all, while in others the last cent is insisted upon.

In some cases township authorities make no attempt to collect the municipal income tax at all, and people living in these townships at the outskirts of a city and enjoying most of the privileges of urban dwellers escape payment.

Again there is undoubtedly a feeling that it is impossible to apply the assessment equitably, no matter how conscientious may be the work of the municipal authorities, because there are many means of escape that are utilized by those wishing to evade the tax.

Where it is possible to secure a pay roll the man who works is one individual who never escapes. He has to pay, but others whose incomes may be larger find a way to dodge the levy.

RELIEF CUT OFF.

The action of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment in cutting off the yearly winter relief which has hitherto been given through the D.S.C.R. to returned soldiers will undoubtedly occasion distress among needy veterans, especially in large centres where unemployment is a factor during the winter months.

Hitherto the department has extended relief to unemployed pensioners and commuted pensioners, whether married or single.

Single war veterans, out of employment, were assisted to the extent of $1.00 a day, while married men received help to the extent of $45 to $67.50 per month, according to their family responsibilities.

Under the new arrangement there is to be no assistance for veterans with commuted pensions, and single men will receive nothing unless they have dependents and a pensionable disability of twenty per cent. or over.

This latter condition applies to married veterans as well, inasmuch as they will not be helped by the D.S.C.R. unless they have a pensionable disability of at least 20 per cent.

The winter relief extended in other years by the department helped materially to tide many veterans over lean months of unemployment, and the situation caused by the change in policy will throw a heavy burden upon municipal relief agencies in cities where unemployment may be serious this winter.

ETHICS FOR BOTH SIDES.

An official inquiry into labour conditions in England at present in progress in connection with unemployment insurance, is likely to bring out the effect of half a century of labour-union ethics on production. Of course, unionism is much older than that; but it is only since the '70s that workers have been taught to regulate their output by that of the least competent and slowest of their number. They are taught that in this way more work is provided for others, and that if they work nearer to the limit of their capacity there will be fewer jobs, while their pay will not be increased. No more immoral doctrine was ever taught, but it has a superficial plausibility, especially to those who do not understand that only production itself can provide employment. Application of this doctrine has proved again and again that it means not merely that the worker loses his job, bu that the employer also goes out of business.

During the war, in many industries, a system of bonuses brought out extraordinary individual production raising the level all round to an astonishing extent. It both increased wages and cheapened the cost of production. Its defect was in the temptation to reduce the bonus where wages of individuals were unusually large at the end of the week. Here the workers have a legitimate grievance. It was none of the employer's business that a workman was receiving $110 a week, if he could be profitably employed at that figure. But a large number of foremen tried to make a good showing, both in high production and low wage cost. In effect, the workman said, "What's the use?"

There is no such thing as an absolute wage. Minimum and maximum are equally absurd. A wage of $110 a week may be low when compared with the value of the product. There are plenty of workers kept in employment by union rules who would be dear at a fourth of that sum. It is strictly true that the union destroys ambition, and in no long time deteriorates the first-class craftsman. But that is no reason for sharp practice on the part of the employer.—Barron's.

PRISONS AND TRADES.

It is now reasonably certain that the case of Frederick Townsend, the Barnardo youth whose sentence to four years in the penitentiary on a charge of forging a cheque for four dollars and a half aroused so much criticism by the public and in the press, will be reviewed by the Supreme Court. Notice of appeal, which has been entered at Osgoode Hall, will be dealt with in due course.

One noticeable feature which characterized the discussion of the sentence was the unanimity of the comments upon it. The view expressed on all hands was that the penalty was unjustifiably harsh. An attitude so general is significant of the popular determination that justice as dispensed by our courts shall be duly weighed, shall be even-handed, and, when circumstances sanction it, shall be tempered with mercy.

Apart entirely from the merits of this case, which are under appeal and therefore are not open to debate, some reflections upon the sentence made by officials of the lower court are worthy of attention as indicating peculiar views of the powers and responsibilities resting upon the Magistrate—views which may be shared in other inferior courts.

Crown Attorney Grierson, in discussing the sentence, expressed surprise at all the commotion which had arisen in connection with it, and he declared his own satisfaction with the Magistrate's decision. Townsend, he insisted, was "an idle fellow who had never made good," and had been guilty of forgery, misrepresentation and vagrancy. There were other counts against him known to the police, but which had never been charged against him in court.

"I thought all the time," Mr. Grierson is reported as saying, "that the very best thing to do with him was to give him a chance to learn a trade. Now, that is the whole thing. The fellow may turn out—after he serves his term he probably will be of use to the community; he certainly is of no use now."

This must be regarded as a very hasty and heedless way of disposing of the liberty of the subject, even if the subject in question should not be deserving of sympathy. It is certainly not the view which should be taken by one to whom has been committed the task of holding the scales of justice evenly. Opinion and not proof, hearsay and not evidence, would be the determining factors in trials held under these conditions.

Nor will there be any general agreement with Mr. Grierson's view that a four years' term in prison was the "very best" thing for Townsend because he would be taught a trade. The duty of the courts in dealing with criminals is to make the punishment fit the offense, not to rob the individual of his freedom with the aim of giving him an occupation. If in the institution to which he is committed he can be made a useful citizen, so much the better for himself and the community in which he will live after his release; but it is no function of a Magistrate in pronouncing sentence to go beyond the strict limits of justice to benefit society or provide offenders with useful trades.

Nor is this the only line of reasoning which can be urged against undue terms of imprisonment imposed on youths convicted for the first time of misdeeds. Young men herded in the penitentiary with old and seasoned criminals will inevitably learn more than a trade. Their real instructors will not be the guards who supervise the work they do, but their fellow-prisoners, who will mould them in their own moral likeness, will teach them disregard for law and contempt for honesty, and will impart a knowledge of criminal methods which will enable them to prey on society when they regain their freedom. This is a real danger which may well cause Magistrates to reflect when imposing sentences on impressionable young men.

A wave of crime is today sweeping over the United States, and is not sparing Canada. It is significant that it is chiefly men under 30 who are engaged in the banditry which is terrorising the great cities. The training schools in which the art of crime is most readily learned, where at least the tutors are most efficient, are probably the penitentiaries where long sentences are being served, and that fact ought not to be overlooked by Magistrates.—The Globe.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Never were honours more richly earned than has been the knighthood conferred upon Right Hon. Austen Chamberlain, the hero of Locarno.

A series of new taxes has been demanded in France. A new Cabinet can be expected at any time.

Group of Detroit's industrial leaders had luncheon in an aeroplane, the price of the meal doubtless representing the cost of high living.

It is about time for the Toronto Star to say that the Quebec by-election must be important because both sides are exerting every effort to Bagot.

PROPOSALS OF

that the Boards of Trade hoped to bring Premier Stanley Baldwin, the British Prime Minister, the Right Hon. L. C. S. Amery, Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs, and Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister, president of the Board of Trade of Great Britain, to Canada in January as guests of the Dominion Boards of Trade. Premier King said that he would add his personal influence to try and induce these gentlemen to accept the invitation of the Canadian Boards of Trade, but he intimated that the Dominion Government could hardly intervene in the matter.

Last night the delegates, who are members of the London, Ont., Toronto, Montreal, Quebec City, Ottawa and Edmonton Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce, are guests at a banquet given by the Ottawa Board of Trade.

Developing Trade.

Mr. King pointed to the Australian and West Indies trade treaties when the next resolution advocating development of Imperial trade relations and trade within the Empire was discussed. These treaties were an effort along the lines suggested, but the Government had been criticized for injuring Canadian trade, he said. However, it proposed to follow along the lines which it had laid down in the matter of deevloping trade within the Empire.

The Prime Minister declared that at the present time the Government was engaged in going over the estimates for the coming year with the object of reducing them. He pointed to the difficulty which he claimed was encountered when efforts were made to effect important economies along the line of amalgamating Government departments, etc. It was to be assumed, he said, that the need for the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment would gradually decrease with the re-establishment of a great many of the soldiers. But he was not satisfied that the Government could go into Parliament and say that this Department should be eliminated. Such a proposal would probably meet with great opposition.

Mr. King expressed his strong personal approval of the resolution calling for the establishment of national research laboratories under the National Research Council of Canada.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

An Old Country importing firm took heifers this morning at $7 to $7.25; cows at $5 to $6; a bull at $6 a cwt. H. P. Kennedy & Co. are shipping out 80 bulls and heifers via Boston for Hamburg. The local beef buying was quiet but prices remained steady. Cows were active and buyers assert that prices are no lower than they have been. All the good to choice handyweight steers and heifers were taken by Rogers and Maybee for export. Steers cost from $6.60 to $7.75 and heifers $6.75 to $7.50 a cwt. Export bulls were firm from $4.75 to $6.25 a cwt. Export bulls were firm from $4.75 to $6.25 a cwt. Good medium butchers sold from $6.25 to $6.75 and medium butchers $5.50 to $6 a cwt. The market was not too active.

The buyer for the Buffalo market is finding difficulty in getting calves for that market owing to the high prices ruling here. Few calves sold below 9 cents a pound and choice calves were 12¼ to 13½ cents a pound.

Some choice lambs are being collected for the Christmas trade and this is keeping the lamb market firm. One deck of Southdown wethers, 90 lbs. each, brought 14¾ cents a pound and the market on other good lambs was 14 to 14¼ cents. Sheep were steady at 7 cents a pound for the good ones.

While the packers bid on hogs is still held at 11.50 a cwt. f.o.b. sellers are not finding much difficulty in getting $11.75 a cwt. and it is fully expected that this price can be maintained for the balance of the week.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Dec. 2 (Canadian Press).—In Ontario malting barley market the feeling was stronger and prices advance 1 cent per bushel under a keener demand for supplies and sales of car lots were at 86 1-2 cents per bushel, ex-track.

The market for oats was quiet and prices were unchanged with car lots of Ontario and Quebec No. 2 white selling at 53 cents, No. 3 white at 51 1-2 cents, and No. 4 white at 49 1-2 cents per bushel, ex-track. Canadian Western grades of oats were steady.

The trade in potatoes on spot was reported quiet, but as supplies coming forward have decreased to some extent of late on account of the bad condition of the country roads, which has prevented farmers from making deliveries to shipping points th tone of the market remains firm and prices were unchanged.

The receipts of butter were 132 packages, as compared with 131 for the same day last week, and 415 for the corresponding day a year ago. The, were no further developments in the local situation, prices for all grades being fully maintained with a steady business passing for domestic account and for shipment to outside points.

The receipts of cheese were 1,509 boxes, as against 1,740 for the same day last week, and 557 for the corresponding day a year ago. The trade was without any new feature to note, business in all directions being reported quiet on account of the continued limited demand from foreign buyers and prices were unchanged.

EGG PRICES.

OTTAWA, Dec. 2 (Canadian Press).—The only change in the egg market today comes from Vancouver, where a 2 cent drop has been recorded. American markets higher. Calgary reports very heavy poultry receipts.

Toronto—Firm and unchanged. Jobbing, fresh specials 76, extras 73 to 75, storage extras 55 to 56; firsts 52 to 53, seconds 46 to 47. Two cars No. 1 dressed turkeys sol' 32 f.o.b. Saskatchewan, and 2 cars same grade 34 f.o.b. Monitoba, freight to Toronto 3 to 4 cents.

Montreal—British Columbia fresh, selling at extras 78, firsts 72, seconds 62. Storage prices are firm and unchanged; 41 is bid for original extras regarding firsts on spot.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Dec. 2 (Canadian Press)—Spectacular trading in grain widened out today, and took in corn as well as wheat.

Highest prices yet this season were reached in the wheat market, with December delivery commanding at one time $1.75 a bushel, but immense profit-taking with late reports of better crop conditions in Argentina wiped out most of the day's gains in wheat. On the other hand a sharp advance in the corn market based on government measures to finance, orderly handling of the Iowa corn crop proved to be sturdy enough to stand up in the face of the reaction of wheat.

An exciting close after a wild day was witnessed both in corn and wheat, with corn 2 3-8 to 3 1-8 cents net higher, May 82 to 82 1-8c and July 84 to 84 1-8c, whereas wheat finished at 1 3-8 net decline to 1 1-4c advance, December 1,71 1-2 to 1.71 7-8 and May 1.66 1-2 to 1.66 3-4; oats 1-4 to 3-8c up, and provisions 2 to 25c down. Attention of speculative traders focused chiefly at first on the wheat pit, where reports of increasing crop damage in Argentina together with a new bulge in prices at Liverpool gave wheat values here a fresh upward whirl of 4 3-8c a bushel. The fact, however, that $1.75 had finally been attained here, a milestone long looked forward to in many quarters, was apparently the signal for wholesale collecting of profits on the part of holders. Severe declines in price followed, but many rallies due to fresh buying ensued.

A THOUGHT.

WHAT TIME IS IT?

It is time to be brave. It is time to be true.
It is time to be finding the thing you can do.
It is time to put by the dream and the sigh,
And work for the cause that is holy and high.

It is time to be kind. It is time to be sweet.
To be scattering roses for somebody's feet,
It is time to be sowing. It is time to be growing,
It is time for the flowers of life to be blowing.

It is time to be lowly and humble of heart.
It is time for the lilies of meekness to start,
For the heart to be white and the steps to be right,
And the hand to be weaving a garment of light.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

THE TREND CITYWARD.

Dear Sir:—

The Hon. Robert Cooke in his speech when here some time ago mentioned two things that I feit worth considering.

The first was the number of people who have left the farms and have gone to towns and cities.

The second was that all the electrical power developed from the different power houses on the River Trent wold be subscribed for by the year 1926.

The fact that so many people desert the farms for the towns and cities I feel is a national calamity, and after looking at the matter from different angles I feel the remedy lies with the members of the local Legislature and the Hydro Commission.

The man on the farm is a sociable being and will not stay unless the woman stays with him, and the only way to make the woman contented is to give her the same electrical conveniences that her sister in the city has.

At the January election a ballot should be presented to the electors of the different townships asking whether they are in favor of Hydro and if so a by-law should be passed making all property liable. Then the Government should devote some of the money now spent for immigration towards making the price of Hydro to farmers as near city prices as possible. We could worry along without the foreigner for a time.

We have been told that the Hydro belongs to the people, but it looks to me as if the moneyed interests and the high priced engineers are playing poker with it. The head offices of the Hydro should be at Campbellford, near the development of this power, and it sure is bad, very bad business to be thirty-three or thirty-four miles away.

Another thing, there is no reason why the Seymour farmer should have to pay sixty-five cents freight on a cwt. of sugar from the factory at Montreal while the Toronto man, one hundred miles further from the same factory, is only taxed thirty-four cents or thirty-one cents less. As the Ottawa Government now owns the railroad it is up to them to do a little tardy justice.

It is also pretty near time for this Ottawa Government to consider building a post office in Campbellford.

For a town the size and importance of Campbellford not to have a government building of any kind shows the unfairness of the Government and the modesty and patience of its citizens.

Yours respectfully,
T. J. HORKINS,
Campbellford, Dec. 1.

ARE WE EXCLUSIVE?

Dear Examiner—What a line of thought your editorial started when you ask, "Are We Exclusive."

I for one do not think we desire to appear exclusive. And because we do not do things at the same hour and the same days as other communities should not suggest exclusiveness.

We may have very good reasons why we do things to suit ourselves, quite apart from any thought of being different from our neighbors.

The weekly half holiday among the retail merchants is of their own choice, and the fact other municipalities have chosen Wednesday may have influenced them in their decision to take another day, so our retail business houses would be open should outside people desire to visit us on their holiday.

We celebrate Civic Holiday on the second Monday in August, and this date was no doubt selected and covered by the by-law to prevent transportation difficulties which presented themselves when everyone travelled by trains on the same days. This was before automobile traffic became so heavy, and possibly the same thought was in the minds of the Aldermen when the second Monday in August was selected to allow our people to shop elsewhere if they so desired. The commemoration of Armistice Day is generally arranged for the Sunday nearest together with the actual day which now is Thanksgiving Day—so one cannot see how this could be improved.

The memorial service to the late Queen Alexandra was arranged as near the day of burial as possible, owing to engagements made, and difficulty of obtaining a suitable auditorium, and while we do not function on the day and hour set by others, yet we function. And possibly the story told of another watching a military parade may help our viewpoint—for the lady remarked: "The whole regiment was out of step but her son, John."

70 ONTARIO CONSERVATIVES, BUT MENTION MADE ONLY OF QUEBEC'S LIBERAL BLOC OF 60, SAYS CARDIN

Federal Minister of Marine Follows Hon. Mr. Meighen in Bagot.

TARIFF DEBATED

Christmas Tomatoes Used as Example—Tariff Peace Not War Needed.

ST. PIE, Que., Dec. 3. (Canadian Press)—With the staff of speakers and workers rapidly increasing, the last phase of the by-election fight in Bagot will be intense. Both sides are battling sharply in every parish and village. Meetings follow each other with rapidity. Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Conservative leader, had scarcely left St. Pie yesterday when Hon. P. J. A. Cardin, Minister of Marine, arrived with the Liberal reply.

Mr. Cardin devoted special attention to Mr. Meighen's announcement that, when he is in power, he will put import duties on American farm products as high as the duties the United States puts on ours.

"What Mr. Meighen is advocating," warmly declared Mr. Cardin, "is a tariff war with the United States and with other countries and tariff wars, no more than other wars, are profitable to a country. The well-being of countries is secured not by tariff wars but by the development of trade and the exchange of products."

He spoke of higher protection as meaning a higher cost of living and benefitting primarily the holders of watered stock.

Christmas Tomatoes.

"Mr. Meighen says he will protect the Canadian farmer by putting a tax on American farm products, but it is words, nothing but words. We import certain farm products from foreign countries but they are largely products which we are not at the time placing on the market ourselves. If American tomatoes and cucumbers were selling in the stores of Montreal at Christmas, they do not enter into competition with your product, for you have none to market at Christmas. A higher tariff on them would not help you in the slightest."

Mr. Cardin said that in the general elections Conservative speakers had predicted that the Canadian markets would soon be flooded with foreign potatoes. But scarcely had the prediction been made when the price of potatoes began to rise—not by reason of any change in the tariff but because of the crop shortage in the United States; "and Canadian potatoes," he added, "are entering the United States over the top of their tariff wall."

Should Develop Markets.

Mr. Cardin laid stress on the point that at the present time Canadian farms produced three or four times as much as could be consumed in Canada, and efforts, he urged, should be directed rather towards the development of outside markets for Canadian products.

He instanced hay. During the last fiscal year hay had been imported to the value of $400,000. That was over the whole of Canada and amounted to about 30 cents for each Canadian farmer. On the other hand, Canada exported to the United States hay to the value of $2,500,000.

Mr. Cardin referred to Conservative speakers as criticising Western Progressives.

"Western Progressives," said Mr. Cardin, "are citizens of Canada like ourselves. They are entitled to every consideration; and they are entitled to full examination of every legitimate request they make for the good of their province and of their country. Canada would never be great and would never develop as she should develop unless policies were adopted for the good of the country as a whole. We should co-operate with the citizens of the West," said Mr. Cardin, "if we wish our country to recover from its difficulties and continue on its path of prosperity."

Sour Grapes in West.

He added that if Progressives had shown the slightest disposition to support Mr. Meighen, Conservatives would have had for them nothing but compliments. Like the fox of the fable, Conservatives did not like Progressives because the grapes were sour.

There was talk—Mr. Cardin proceeded—of the bloc in Quebec because in that province, Liberals had elected 61 members, but there was nothing said of the Conservative bloc of seventy members in Ontario. It was apparently all right for Ontario to elect seventy Conservatives but apparently all wrong for Quebec to elect sixty Liberals.

FAKIR IN COURT WITH PROMOTER

Winnipeg Music Man Faces Unpleasant Tune on Fraud Charge.

HIS BUBBLE BURST

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 3. (Canadian Press).—Handcuffed together, Joseph Xavier Hearst, promoter of the "million dollar music bubble," and A. D. Blake, designated "king of fakirs," were arraigned in the Police Court here yesterday on respective charges of fraud and escape from legal custody. Blake pleaded guilty to the latter charge and was remanded until Tuesday for sentence. Hearst was remanded for one week, pending a decision on the question of bail.

Hearst surrendered to the police several months ago, after police had conducted a world-wide search for him on a warrant alleging theft of funds from the company of which he was the head. Blake was a member of the quintette that escaped from the Provincial jail on October 6 last. He was captured in Brandon several weeks later.

Few golf officials can boast a record of service to compare to that of Edward Tufts, who has been re-elected president of the Southern California Golf Association for the 20th consecutive year.

BRIAND'S FINANCIAL PROGRAM OF INFLATION AND INCREASED TAXES COLDLY RECEIVED BY DEPUTIES

Finance Minister's Bill Passed Committee, But Will be Opposed Later.

PREMIER DEJECTED

Addition of 7,500,000,000 Francs to Currency Proposed By M. Loucheur.

PARIS, Dec. 3. — (Canadian Press).—Premier Briand went before the Chamber of Deputies yesterday with his ministerial declaration on the government policy with reference to restoration of financial stability.

The finance minister M. Loucheur, introduced his bill providing for raising the limit of the issue of paper money from 51,000,000,000 to 58,500,000,000 francs, which was referred to the finance committee. Later the committee adopted the bill without modification.

The halo of Locarno peace and good-will which M. Briand brought back from London did not appear to change the attitude of the political workers at home, and the cabinet's life after the ministerial destruction is still in jeopardy. Inflation to the amount of 7,500,000,000 francs was the weapon with which the opposition assaulted the ministry. The bill was referred to the finance committee, which demanded a suspension of the session and this was carried 415 to 154. Though the finance committee accepted the bill without modification later, the cabinet is certain to meet with a stubborn fight in the open chamber.

Premier Looked Tired.

M. Briand seemed tired and dejected as he read the declaration. M. Loucher's inflation bill, which followed immediately, caused the already frigid temperature in the chamber to go still lower.

An increase in taxes ranging from ten to one-hundred percent., as outlined in the bill, created consternation especially among the provincial representatives inasmuch as the farmers will have to pay fifty percent. additional taxation.

The ministerial declaration, while non-committal on certain questions, took a decided stand on the settlement of inter-allied debts, and the naming of Senator Berenger to proceed to Washington is regarded as imminent.

M. Briand was taken by surprise after the enthusiastic welcome which greeted him at the station on his return from London, when he was faced by an antagonistic chamber in fighting mood, which contrasted sharply with the principles he advocated at Locarno.

Inflation Big Obstacle.

M. Loucheur's financial plan is the bone of contention. Inflation, which has already reached 17,500,000,000 francs since the 1924 elections may prove a hard obstacle for the Briand government.

In a modest paragraph in the ministerial declaration was a reference to the return to district, or arrondissement polling. This was received with silence by the chamber, but with an outburst of enthusiasm by the extremists.

Daughter Testified Against Father in Dauphin.

DAUPHIN, Man., Dec. 3 (Canadian Press). — Sam Chipisium, charged with the murder of Sam Babyk, was freed yesterday after 24 hours' deliberation of the jury.

The trial was featured by the testimony of Chipisiuk's 10-year-old daughter, who testified that she had seen her father strike the dead man. Another young girl also took the stand against the accused.

Babyk died at Sunville, Man., on August 11, from the effect of wounds.

FALLS FAIL TO DETER PRINCE

Is Riding Again in Hunting Season Despite Mishaps.

TWO THIS YEAR

By SIDNEY J. WILLIAMS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, Dec. 3. — (United Press)).—With hunting in Britain in full swing the English public is speculating on how many times this year the Prince of Wales will fall.

In a little less than a month he has had two tumbles. This makes thirteen mishaps since November, 1920. The "Tory" newspapers are loud in their condemnations of the risks run by the heir to the British throne. They demand that less fiery steeds and safer jumpers be chosen for him.

A controversy is also raging as to whether the Prince is a good or bad rider.

The majority of hunting people favor the former. They point out that only the good rider takes risks possibly involving a fall, whereas the poor riders make for gaps in the hedges and prefer to dismount and open a gate rather than take the chance of their horse jumping it.

The uninitiated general public is not so sure, however. Possibly the reason is because every time the Prince falls the incident is bannerlined in the newspapers. A mere "ordinary" doesn't get into print.

The question is becoming a public issue.

A story is going the rounds that a newspaperman asked the Prince why it was he always fell when riding a horse.

"I don't fall," replied the Prince, "It's the horse that falls. What do you want me to do, remain up in the air?"

Meanwhile the Prince complacently hunts on.

Previous to this year his riding accidents were:

November 1920—Fall while hunting in Norfolk.

December, 1920—Fall while hunting in the Grafton country.

March, 1921—Thrown during Grenadier Guards point-to-point races near Banbury, but remounted and finished third.

November, 1922—Fall while riding with the Badminton Hounds near Malmesbury. Suffered contusion of ankle and sprain, and was on crutches for several days.

February, 1923—Knocked his knee while hunting.

March, 1923 — Thrown during Beaufort Hunt point-to-point races at Larkhill.

March, 1924—Fall while riding in the Army point-to-point races near Workingham. Suffered slight concussion and abrasions.

JAPANESE TO BUY CANADIAN WHEAT

Agents in Winnipeg With Order for 150,000 Tons of World's Best.

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 3 (Canadian Press).—In Canada with the avowed purpose of buying 150,000 tons of wheat for the Nissin flour mills and the Mitsui grain company of Tokio, two representatives of these companies conferred with local grain dealers yesterday. They intimated that there was a possibility of establishing brance offices in Vancauver, where the agents do most of their buying. The total capitalization of the two concerns is $67,000,000.

MAY LIMIT RACE MEETS

WINNIPEG, Dec. 3 (Canadian Press).—Winnipeg's 1926 race programme may be curtailed by legislation, it was indicated in government circles yesterday. While tthe Bracken Government has not announced definitely its intentions, it believed that race meets will be limited to four weeks a year. In the past the season has been extended over six weeks.

Nominated in Vancouver.

VACOUVER, B.C., Dec. 3 (Canadian Press).—Louis Rubinowitz, retired pioneer business man of Vancouver, was nominated yesterday for Mayor and will oppose Louis D. Taylor, who is seeking re-elecftion as Chief Magistrate of the city. Elections will be held December 9.

No Progressive Candidate.

BRANDON, Man., Dec. 3 (Canadian Press).—Progressives in session here Wednesday failed to nominate a candidate to oppose Hon. T. C. Norris, Liberal, in the approaching bye-election in Lansdowne. It was decided to leave the question open until nomination day, the bye-election was necessitated by the resignation of Mr. Norris, who entered the Federal contest as a Liberal candidate in South Winnipeg.

OBITUARY.

The Greatest Electric Range Improvement ever made—the New Element—SPEEDIRON

HERE is an achievement which gives the McClary's Electric Range undisputed leadership over all Electric Ranges.

The Speediron Element overcomes all the weaknesses common to open elements and combines the advantages of protected elements.

Can Be Removed Instantly

McClary's new Element—Speediron—can be removed in a second or two—no bolts, screws or wire connections to loosen. Just lift it up—that's all.

—has a smooth top cooking surface without open grooves or exposed wires that water or grease might harm or "muck up."

You can use the smooth top of a McClary's Electric Range with Speediron Elements just as you would an old-fashioned cook stove—it cannot be damaged by pots or pans or knocks or spills.

Lifetime Service Coils—Easily Renewed

As durable as iron protection can make it, with coils that last much longer than coils in open elements, because they are not exposed to accidents and can be easily and inexpensively replaced should they burn out.

In a moment, by removing one bolt in the unit, the burnt out coil is exposed and may be replaced—almost as easily as a burnt out bulb in a lamp socket.

Come and See It

If you have an Electric Range you will want to see this new, splendid improvement, because you know all about Electric Range troubles now. If you are going to buy an Electric Range you should see the Speediron Element in McClary's Electric Range—the trouble-proof Element. The Speediron Element is now on view at all leading dealers. Come and see it—today.

CAMPBELLFORD I.O.O.F. HELD THEIR FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY

Grand Lodge Officers Guests at Wednesday Night Function.

CHARTER MEMBERS.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 3—The Oddfellows will celebrate the 40th anniversary of their organization tonight with a banquet in their rooms in the Ferris Block, when Grand Lodge officers will deliver addresses, and at least one member of the Order who witnessed the institution of the lodge 40 years ago is expected to be present. This veteran is Turner Sine of Stirling.

The Charter Members.

It was on October 8, 1885, that the Campbellford Lodge was instituted, the official who conducted the ceremony being Dr. Robert Parker of Stirling, who was deputized for the occasion by the Grand Master of the Province. Six names appear on the charter, which was issued to the new lodge, these being: Joseph Townsend, Gorge H. Boyce, James Carr, C. S. Gillespie, Harper Shaw and George G. Eakins. Of these, Mr. Gillespie is the only one still living in Campbellford. Joseph Townsend and James Carr are dead, Harper Shaw resides in Toronto, and George H. Boyce in Edmonton. The latter made a trip by auto to this town from Edmonton last summer and spent some time here renewing old acquaintances. Mr. Eakins moved some years ago to Toronto.

A Leader Among Men.

C. S. Gillespie was not only a charter member but he was elected the first treasurer of the new lodge. Mr. Gillespie has been one of the first to identify himself with every movement in Campbellford. He was the first man to join the curling club, to which he still belongs, and was also one of the promoters of the lawn bowling club, in which he is regarded as one of the best players. He was on the local team that won the silver cup at the tournament in Belleville last summer and was the oldest bowler who took part in that event. He helped to organize the first hunting club in this district 46 years ago, and has in that time not missed a season or failed to secure a trophy of the chase.

In municipal life, as well as in fraternal and sporting circles, Mr. Gillespie has made a record. When he was Reeve of Campbellford, it was largely through his exertions that the system of waterworks was put in.

The First Officers.

After the charter was secured, the members began to come in, so that there was no difficulty in securing a staff of efficient officers, the first roster being as follows:

N.G., G. G. Eakins; V.G., Jos. Townsend; R.S., T. S. Tait; F. S., J. B. Ferris; Treasurer, C. S. Gillespie; Warden, G. H. Boyce; Conductor, S. J. Potter; R.S.N.G., Jas. Carr; L.S.N.G., Wm. Morton; R.S.V.G., E. S. Platt; L.S.V.G., Jas. Dickson; R.S.S., Harper Shaw, L.S.S., J. M. Jeroy; Inner Guard, David Archer; Outer Guard, Ed. Morton; Chaplain, T. G. Gillespie.

The present officers are:

N.G., F. McKenzies; V.G., C. Holmes; R.S., Jos. Poulton, Sr.; F.S., J. E. Dooher; Treasurer, R. J. Bullen; War, W. J. Dunstan; Conductor, Jos. Poulton, Jr.; R.S.N.G., T. J. Craighead; L.S.N.G., W. O. Dorie; R.S.V.G., H. Petherick; L.S.V.G., A. Campbell; R.S.S., L. Reynolds; L.S.S., Geo. Phillips; Inner Guard, Kay McNaughton; Outer Guard, H Hill; Chaplain, Ray Phillips.

T. S. Tait, the first recording secretary, is still actively engaged in business here.

Has Over 130 Members.

The lodge which began existence in a modest way 40 years ago, now has over 130 members, and occupies elegant and commodious rooms in the Ferris Block. There have been a great many changes in the personnel of the membership in the four decades, and brethren who first assumed the obligation of the Order in Campbellford are now to be found in all parts of the Dominion. There are in Mount Pleasant Cemetery and in the burying places in the district 20 well-kept graves which are decorated by the surviving brethren with impressive religious services every summer. The membership includes nearly all of the leading citizens of the town and the fraternal spirit is shown whenever the necessity arises for a kindly act or charitable deed.

Grand Lodge Officials.

The distinguished members of the Grand Lodge who are expected tonight are Grand Secretary William Brooks of Toronto; Grand Warden C. A. Byam of New Liskeard, and District Deputy Grand Master Jetty Thompson of Stirling. One of the most distinguished of all the guests, if he is able to accept the invitation sent him, will be Turner Sine of Stirling, who witnessed the institution of the Campbellford Lodge and who forms so important a connecting link between the past and the present.

Baby Eczema

Soon Disappears with the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment

Only mothers who have witnessed the suffering of their babies when tortured by eczema fully appreciate the remarkable soothing, healing effects of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Most babies at one time or another fall victims to skin irritations, chafing of the skin or eczema. For this reason it is a fine habit to always have at hand when bathing baby a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment. You never know when roughness and redness of the skin is going to develop into something more serious. A touch of Dr. Chase's Ointment keeps the skin smooth and velvety and prevents serious skin affections.

There are scores of uses for Dr. Chase's Ointment. Once it finds its way into the home it is soon considered in-

Says Women Better Than Men For Poultry Raising

Dec. 3.—Women, because of Dec. 2.—Women, because of their natural tendency of home-making, are better qualified than men to raise poultry, says Miss Harrison Bell, operator of the All-Women Chicken and Duck Farm.

As the name indicates, all work about the farm is done by women who are studying with a view of branching out for themselves as soon as they have graduated.

Poultry raising, in Miss Bell's opinion, is an ideal career for the out-of-door woman.

CONTRACT ENDS IN DIVISION COURT

Two Men Quarrelled Over Cost of Constructing Roller.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 3.— J. R. Wilkinson and B. M. Marks formed a partnership last spring for the purpose of constructing a roller for use on the green of the Bowling Club, their remuneration to be the remission of their fees as members of that organization. Like so many men engaged in business enterprises, the partners differed on questions of policy and resort was had by both to the Division Court to straighten out the tangle in which they found themselves involved.

The case was heard Tuesday by His Honor Judge Huyke, of Peterborough, D. J. Lynch appearing for Wilkinson and G. A. Payne for Marks. The former sued Marks for $35.00 and the latter put in a counter claim for $13.05.

The story as unfolded by the evidence, was that Marks' estimate of the cost of the roller was $16 or $18, where as the actual outlay was abonut double that amount. Marks claimed that his services while engaged on the construction work were worth $1.00 an hour, but it seems that he held the mechanical skill of his partner in light esteem as he believed that he was entitled to only 40 cents an hour. According to this scale of wages Marks would get $13.05 more than the sum due the other, and it was for this amount that he sued.

Two Cream Separators.

When Mr. Wilkinson gave up the dairy business he had two cream separators which he left with Marks who, he says, agreed to sell them at a price set by the owner. No sale was made and when Mr. Wilkinson went for his property Marks demanded payment for storage. Mr. Wilkinson also testified that a steel shaft that he had furnished during the partnership had disappeared and he held Marks responsible. He valued this shaft at $35.00 and sued for this sum, and also asked that the court order the return to him of the cream separators without the payment of storage charges.

Judge Huycke ruled that Marks was entitled to $5 for taking care of the separators, but his other claim was thrown out. No order as to costs was made.

STOLEN LIBRARY BOOK RETURNED

Reference Dictionary Mysteriously Disappeared From Lakefield Public Library.

BAZAAR SEASON.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 3.—The disappearance of the large reference dictionary from the Public Library and its equally mysterious return recently has led to the announcement made many times before that reference books must not be taken from the Library.

The mutilation of the books by children and others has been brought to the attention of the Library Board who wish again to point out that everybook costs money, and it is hard for book lovers to realize that there are some vandals who must tear the pages out of a book in order to read it.

Surely the privileges of the Library could be used without being abused.

List of Bazaars.

The bazaar season is again approaching and the announcements regarding dates are made.

On Saturday afternoon, December 5th, the Ladies' Guild of the United (Presbyterian church are having an apron sale and also home cooking and candy, in the store formerly used as the Liberal committee room on Queen St. They also serve afternoon tea on Thursday afternoon, December 10th. The chancel Guild of St. John's church are having a sale of fancy goods, home cooking, etc., and afternoon tea in the school room of the church on Friday afternoon, Dec. 11th. The Ladies' Guild of the Regent St. church are holding their annual bazaar, which is always on a large scale. The usual booths will be in operation and also there will be novel features. Miss Webster is the President of the society.

Season of Advent.

Sunday, being Advent Sunday, was specially observed in St. John's Anglican and St. Paul's Roman Catholic churches.

Memorial Service.

A memorial service to the memory of the late Queen Mother was held in St. John's church on Sunday morning with favorite hymns of the late Queen sung and an appropriate addres by the Rector. Immediately following the offertory, the National Anthen was sung and the organist, Mrs. Todd, played the dead march after the

Until tonight he had considered these as adventures. Now he realized that they were not adventures but incidents—unicellular episodes after which one was assured of a warm bath and clean clothes.

Here, however, was a situation which began nowhere and ended in approximately the same position. Indeed, instead of ending, it seemed to accumulate bulk and impetus as a rolling stone dislodged from a Swiss mountainside will multiply in its course, thundering through great forests and erasing villages until, having changed the topography of a country, it ceases as unexpectedly as it began. Yes, this was his first adventure.

Another difference between this and any previous experience was that heretofore he had always played the principal role. Tonight his function appeared to be merely that of stage manager. As long as he furnished transportation to the troupe he was allowed to tag along, but no one thought of consulting his desires in the development of the plot. As a matter of fact, he did not know yet how many persons there were in the cast. The thought pleased him. He would carry on and, if the cast grew too large, he would abandon the Isotta and hire a sightseeing bus somewhere.

A voice in his ear returned him to the Greenwich ferry. "Didje come right up from the works?"

"As fast as I could get here."

"Y' had us guessin'. We thought you might come on the other ferry. Some o' Swede's gang is up there watchin' of y'. If they missed you they was to beat it on back to the boat an' have her ready fer us, so it's all right either way."

Connemara started. Since Pooch's appearance she had been groping blindly, frantically for some logical explanation to illogical events. Never for one moment, however, had she doubted the frank good looking man beside her with whom she had spent a life time in less than two hours. She would as soon have suspected Aunt Celimena of being a professional second-story worker. The finding of the papers in the car and the artistic identification of Mr. Pooch had been the work of some unseen force over which neither she nor her travelling companion had control.

Now for the first time a little devil of doubt hopped over the hood of the car and sat grinning at her through the windshield. Could it be that the "we-ness" of things was not so firmly established as she had supposed. A dawning consciousness that it might be rash to hop into the cars of strange men in the middle of night sent its chill down her back.

There was a movement in the back seat, and Mr. Pooch's phosphorescent countenance glowed between them like a Chinese lantern.

"S-a-a-y, sister, I get y' now. That's good, that is! I ben tryin' t' get y' since I hopped in. I got y' now, though. I was only expectin' one, an' it trun me off a mile when I seen two on y', as th' fella says when he got th' D. T.'s. S-a-a-y, you're good, you are. I seen everythin,' pulled, I guess, but I ain't never seen th' num gag worked before. Say, this business ain't no profession no more. It's an art. But looka, Sister. Why th' mask? I hardly knowed you at foist. What's all the Ku Klux over y'r best friend? There ain't no nuns in Toikey."

Then spoke Sister Connemara words soft and assured which exploded in Lacy's ears like a giant cracker, "I put it on, Pooch, 'cause I thought I saw somebody I knew."

Great Heavens, was this girl connected in some way with that caricature of a hairless Mexican on the back seat? Or was he possibly going crazy? Had he hit a telegraph pole after leaving Stamford, and was he now lying broken in some ditch while his brain danced a crazy reel with death? That sounded like a movie title. Had someone slipped him a drink of bad Scotch?

Pooch glanced through the back window of the car. "So-o-o." He snapped his fingers in thoughtful imitation of castanets. "Guess we might's well give this ol' seagoin' hack the once-over before we beach. Good now's never." He climbed out and disappeared around the back of the car.

A blanket of silence fell over the front seat. The lights of Bayville were pricked out of the blackness ahead. In another ten minutes they would be committed to the hands of an unknown destiny, who might turn out to be a policeman. Lacy's heart was heavy with suspicion and disillusionment, but his old passion for adventure, handed down through the generations from some gentleman buccaneer in the queen's service, was flaming high. Without knowing where the dawn might find him, he cared less. Only one thing was clear and definite in the midst of all this uncertainty. He would look upon the face of this woman who dressed like a nun, spoke like an angel, scented herself like an April flower, and associated with the flotsam of dime museums.

Connemara on her side of the front seat was having her own troubles. Unwelcome, but ever-growing, distrust formed the motif, and a rapidly increasing panic played hide and seek around and through it. One good scream would break the spell and bring her back to the world of ordinary people who spoke and acted in expected ways. She opened her mouth and took a deep breath in preparation for a drum-rocking yell. Then she saw the headlines in the morning papers: "Popular debutante denounces joy riders. Season's bud disguised as nun declares companions thugs on Greenwich ferry."

No, no! That was too grotesque. She closed her mouth and let out her breath.

The motor of the truck ahead backfired several times, filling the passage with a cloud of evil-smelling smoke. Chains clanked in the bow.

"There's a Pierce on the other side," observed Mr. Pooch, climbin'. "We'll be off foist, though. Rather have 'em behind us. If they folly along, I guess this baby c'n dust 'em." Wherewith he struck a match with his thumb, set fire to the exploded cigar, and proceeded to offer his contribution to the general atmosphere of carbon monoxide.

The cars were moving off. "Stick close behind that bambino," Pooch waved his incense burner at the truck ahead. "Our feller's waiting at the end of the dock. You're t' jolly him along behind."

They were creeping off the boat, the powerful motor whirring with eagerness for the open road. Out of the darkness at the end of the short dock their headlights picked up the nose of a green Packard touring car. Pooch sprang from the back seat, ran ahead of the lumbering truck, and spoke to the driver of the green car. It pushed forward into the line, and Pooch stepped upon the running board of Lacy's car as it passed.

"Get 'round th' damn' ark in front an' behind them guys I spoke to. They'll take us over th' quickest way. Step on her. Keep right on their tail." He stood up and surveyed the cars behind, then satisfied with the inspection, settled into the corner of the rear seat and set about relighting his faithful companion.

ARE OF GREAT VALUE.

Campaign Against Them Started By Ammunition Companies.

(By Arthur Slyfield)

It is now more than two years since certain sporting journals and other newspapers in this country and the United States, stimulated by the dangerous propaganda of ammunition companies, began to urge a nation-wide crow-shoot, a movement which, according to some was going to usher in a new era for agriculturists and sportsmen. At that time one of our well-known Canadian papers began printing short anti-crow articles to which the present writer strenuously objected. In a letter to that paper, published some two years ago, I criticized an article advocating that steps be taken to organize a general crow-shoot, the end in view being to bring about the crow's utter extermination. In that letter I pointed out the grave dangers that lay in such propaganda, my chief objection being that it is very unwise to interfere with the balance of Nature. I brought to the editor's notice the findings of the experts of the United States Biological Survey, Washington, with regard to the crow's economic status. At the same time I said: "The general opinion among naturalists is that the amount of good (done by the crow) does easily balance the harm." I did not deny the nest-harrying propensities of Mr. Corvus; in fact, I frankly admitted them. But, be it remembered, I did emphatically disapprove of any campaign of destruction that would fill our fields and woods with a host of irresponsible men and boys armed for an orgy of shooting. I was convinced that the propaganda that newspapers and sporting journals were spreading was not in the best interests of men or birds.

The purpose of my letter was to discourage the campaign of extermination. I thought the editor might see the folly of such a war of extermination and might, perhaps, discontinue to advocate such. Nevertheless, to my great disappointment, it did not prove so. After the publication of my letter other short articles appeared in which an effort was made to convince the public that the crow is all black, that he is "a black outcast" and that his extermination would be a profitable investment for the continent to make, and that it would be "generally in line with broad ideals of the greatest good to the greatest number."

All this "shoot the crow" talk which flooded the United States and Canada was originated, not by men who have made a careful study of the crow and other predatory birds, but by certain ammunition companies which were to reap an extraordinary harvest through the sale of ammunition. I turn to a Canadian sporting journal (a number more than two years back) and in it find three startling advertisements. One pictures a crow; underneath he is labelled: "The outlaw of wild life—get him!" At the foot of the advertisement is the name of a well-known ammunition company. The ad. of another cartridge company figures some crows flying about and beneath are the words: "Watch these black devils come." Some advice follows: "Drop these crafty destroyers of game birds and crops—hawks too, owls," etc. On the back cover of the same magazine still another powder company features the crow murderously plundering a Bob-White's nest. Below is the injunction: "Shoot these pests now."

So much for the genesis of the crow-shoot talk.

Newspapers whose editors were wrongly informed and who had a very superficial knowledge of wild-life—who had, in fact, made no special study of ornithology, the relations of birds to man, or the crow in particular—continued to induce the public to take up arms against the so-called "vermin."

Seeing that anything I might say against the advisability of a crow-shoot would be ignored, I set myself to work to get, through direct and personal letters, the expert opinion of those competent to speak of the crow and its place in Nature. All the great American and Canadian authorities emphatically disapproved of a nation-wide crow-shoot and stated their case in no mild terms.

The first man whose opinion I sought was Frank M. Chapman, Sc.D.; Curator of Birds in the American Museum of Natural History, New York City—a man whose authoritative works on ornithology meant a great deal to me. Dr. Chapman is the foremost ornithologist of his day in America, a man who is not merely a great naturalist, but who is a profound scholar. Dr. Chapman writes me as follows:—

"The American Museum of Natura History. New York City.
July 7, 1924.

"My dear Sir:—

"Replying to yours of July 2, I thoroughly disapprove of the efforts of ammunition companies to promote a campaign of destruction against the crow, and in an address which I delivered recently in Washington, I include a generalized statement to cover their present action. I am enclosing a copy of this address which you ....are at liberty to quote as you see fit.

Yours very truly,
F. M. CHAPMAN.
Curator of Birds."

The address, referred to, was entitled "Birds and Man," and was delivered before the National Conference on Outdoor Recreation, at Washington, D.C., May 22, 1924. Dr. Chapman underscored the following in the copy he gave me:—

"While I believe that no question of sentiment should prevent due justice being meted out to bird-offenders, I hope that this body will protest against the wholesale condemnation of any bird without due consideration of its merits, as well as of its demerits. A verdict should not be pronounced by the plaintiff; give the accused a hearing before the "Federal Court of the Biological Survey. Then we may accept whatever decision is handed down with the assurance that it is based on adequate evidence and an unbiased, expert estimate of it, not from a LOCAL but from a NATIONAL viewpoint."

Let us see what the "Federal Court" of the Biological Survey has to say:—

"United States Department of Agriculture,
Bureau of Biological Survey,
Washington, D.C.;
July 14, 1924.

Mr. Arthur Slyfield,
Oshawa, Ontario, Canada.
Dear Sir:—

"In response to your letter of July 2, about the nation-wide crow shoot I may say that the Biological Survey does not approve of any such general campaigns against birds. The views of the Survey have been published in a press bulletin, copy of which is inclosed, and in a more extended article in the last number of the Nature Magazine, which we are also sending you.

"Trusting that this information will be of value, I am,
Very truly yours,
W. W. NELSON,
Chief of Bureau."

The press bulletin reads:—

Not as Black as Painted.
Biological Survey Says Crow Does as Much Good as Harm.

"Crows have recently been roundly condemned in numerous sportsmen's periodicals and newspapers because of their destructiveness to other bird-life, especially game birds. The articles which were based on information gathered on the coastal islands of Virginia by an expedition financed by a well-known ammunition company, have made a profound impression in many quarters. Under emphasis on peculiar local conditions, however, together with lack of distinction between the common crow and the fish crow and a faulty interpretation of the evidence at hand, has conveyed a grossly exaggerated and wholly erroneous idea of the predatory habits of the crow, according to specialists of the Biological Survey, United States Department of Agriculture. A bulletin of the department says:

"That the situation is by no means as serious as pictured is apparent from statements in the articles that the Virginia islands mentioned abound in game and are the favorite nesting places of large numbers of marsh birds. The whole district also is, and has been for many generations, one of the favorite hunting places of the East. There is no question that on these Virginia islands the fish crow and the smaller numbers of the common crow present are to be seen at their worst, as regards their relation to other birds. These objectionable traits have been given due consideration in the efforts of the Biological Survey to appraise correctly the economic worth of the crow. Such activities, however, must be placed in their true perspective, and evidence secured under peculiar local conditions cannot serve as a basis for a universal estimation of the species.

"Government experts state that the bird to blame for most of the vandalism on the Virginia islands is the fish crow, a species quite different in habits from the common crow. While mention has been made of this fact in the articles referred to, the difference is frequently lost sight of and the whole race of crows is condemned by the evidence obtained largely against the maritime species. The number of eggs of other birds reported to have been found under crow nests also has been emphasized. Under a right interpretation, the evidence will have a less serious meaning, so far as other birds life is concerned. Scientists state that breeding birds readily replenish losses due to egg destruction, and under the conditions described the production of two or more nests of eggs before a brood is brought forth is doubtless the regular occurrence.

"The biological survey takes the attitude that on game farms and on reservations where both time and money are spent to maintain bird-life in more than normal numbers, control of certain injurious species, including the crow, is warranted and even necessary. Government experts have done much experimental work and advise control measures in localities where the birds are injurious to crops. On the other hand, a careful study of the economic status of the crow demonstrates that over much of its range the bird probably does as much good as harm, and under some conditions its usefulness is pronounced."

For a fuller consideration of the case for the crow I beg to refer my reader to a masterly article, "Twenty-five Hundred Dollars Reward," ("Nature Magazine"—July, 1924, page 13), by E. R. Kolmback, Assistant Biologist, U.S. Biological Survey.

Mr. Norman Criddle, distinguished Canadian naturalist, confirms what has already been said:—

"Entomological Laboratory,
Treesbank, Man.,
July 9, 1924.

Dear Sir:—

The problems relating to the economic status of crows have long interested me, both from an agricultural and sportsman's viewpoint and as I have lived on a farm most of my life I have had a good opportunity for studying the birds. My conclusions are as follows.—

Crows, in the aggregate, are more useful than harmful but there are times when it is desirable to reduce them in numbers. Amid the farmers crops, with few exceptions, the crow is an ally which has few equals as an insect destroyer. It habitually follows the plough or cultivator for the purpose of picking up the grubs, etc., exposed. Thousands of wireworms and white grubs are thus destroyed which would otherwise live to destroy the crops. Crow stomachs collected here and sent to Washington contained among other things, 72 wireworms, 46 white grubs, and 91 grasshoppers in individual birds, others having been found crammed with cutworms.

The destruction of small birds is evidently greatly over-rated because even when a crow does destroy a nest the parent birds immediately commence to build a fresh one. Hence much of the apparent loss is mitigated by this habit.

Most people who condemn the crow are sportsmen or men who view the bird's economic standing from a sportsman's standpoint rather than from an agricultural one. If we are to consider only the game birds then there might be far more reason in condemning the crow particularly in the vicinity of marsh lands where ducks breed in numbers and where stock have often eaten off the herbage to such an extent as to make the detection of nests an easy matter. Many such places exist in the west and many duck eggs are destroyed in consequence. It is around such places that crows might be killed to advantage. The same applies to duck sanctuaries.

In brief I believe the crow is a valuable asset to agriculture but under certain conditions it may do harm; the bird should not, for instance, be tolerated around the barnyard where poultry are kept.

Crows are not desirable in the vicinity of duck breeding places. Crows are not a serious menace to Grouse or song birds.

I am emphatically opposed to any individual, firm, or corporation being permitted to influence the general public to destroy any form of wild life unless such destruction is duly authorized by government on the advice of experts.

Yours very truly,
NORMAN CRIDDLE."

Jack Miner, the man who has made the wild goose tame and whose sanctuary at Kingsville, Ontario, has won for him international fame, wrote me that he found it necessary to discourage the crow and other predatory birds on the sanctuary, but he thought a nation-wide crow shoot unwise.

Mr. R. M. Anderson, Chief of the Division of Biology, at the Victoria Memorial Museum, Ottawa, held the same opinion as the United States authorities with respect to the international crow shoot. He did not hesitate to state that he believed such a campaign would be highly dangerous and productive of more harm than good in that it would encourage large numbers of irresponsible people to patrol the woods and fields with firearms in the close season.

"I am enclosing," writes Mr. Anderson, under date of July 9, 1924, "copies of resolutions passed recently by different organizations. I was present when the American Society of Mammalogists passed the resolution at Cambridge, Massachusetts, against wholesale destruction of so-called "vermin." The U.S. government experts who were there were not in favour of these wholesale campaigns but believe in reducing pests where they are doing real damage."

The American Society of Mammalogists ("a professional society of international membership of students of wild life") objected to international campaigns of destruction mainly on the following grounds:—

1. The campaign propaganda is advanced by those superficially informed.
2. There is no real occasion for such campaigns.
3. The campaigns furnish pretexts for illegal hunting out of season.

These objections were embodied in the resolution drawn up by the Society at its sixth annual meeting held at Cambridge, Mass., April 16, 1924.

The evidence collected seems to warrant my emphatic disapproval of a nation-wide crow-shoot and also to confirm what I wrote some years ago:

"The Crow's character is hardly as black as his coat."

SELLING FRUIT TO JAMAICANS

Market is Limited But Some Canadian Apples Are Sold.

NOT MUCH ELSE.

As Jamaica produces a great quantity and variety of fruits, the market for imported fresh fruits is very limited, writes Trade Commissioner James Cormack, Kingston, in the forthcoming issue of the Commercial Intelligence Journal. During the calendar year 1924 a total of roughly 140,000 pounds of fresh fruit, valued at about $9,000 were brought into the island. Apples account for 85 per cent of the total trade.

Except for small and occasional shipments from Halifax, apples are imported into Jamaica almost wholly by the United Fruit Company's service from New York. About 30 barrels per week appears to supply the market fully at present.

HONEY CROP GOOD.

Many Apiaries in British Columbia Produce Large Harvest.

VICTORIA, B. C. Dec. 3 (Canadian Press).—The value of the honey crop in British Columbia for the 1925 season, based on a price of 22 cents per pound, is $140,530, according to a report furnished by the minister of agriculture.

The capital value of the bees, hives, supers and other equipment, reckoning 15,505 hives at $25.00 each, is placed at $387,625.

There are 426 apiaries in the province, working 15,505 hives, which produced a total honey crop of 638,319 pounds, averaging forty-one pounds to the hive.

EVIDENCE AGAINST FRUIT COMBINE

The picture shows two truck loads of evidence against the 42 western fruit firms and eleven individuals. The documents are guarded night and day in a room in the Vancouver court-house by Constables Fred Bryson and George Scrogg, of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. The constables have cots in the room and sleep there. The great amount of work involved in the case may be judged from the fact that every page of every book has been initialed for identification purposes.

PROSPECTS FOR APPLE SALE IN HAMBURG GOOD

Total Sales Are Expected To Be About Half Million Boxes.

DUTY RAISED.

Is Now 72 Cents a Box—Contracts Let For B. C. Apples.

Prospects for the present season are for a larger total quantity of North American apples than that sold last season, when total arrivals amounted to about 460,000 boxes of North American apples and actual sales to 330,000 boxes and 30,000 barrels, the remainder of the arrivals having been transhipped to Scandinavia or the United Kingdom, writes Trade Commissioner L. D. Wilgress, Hamburg, in the forthcoming issue of the Commercial Intelligence Journal. This year it is expected that the total sales will be around 500,000 boxes. Contracts for about 30,000 boxes of British Columbia apples have been placed and these should begin to arrive towards the end of this month, while after Christmas regular consignments of British Columbia apples are being arranged.

The general rate of duty on fresh apples, packed, was increased on October 1 from 48 to 72 cents per box, or from $1.66 to $2.50 per barrel. At the same time a conventional rate of duty on apples, packed, has been introduced amounting to roughly 58 cents a box and $2 a barrel. This lower rate of duty applies to apples from all countries having most-favoured-nation agreements with Germany, such as Great Britain and the United States, but it does not apply to Canadian apples. In boxed apples the German market requires only hard, good-keeping sound stock, red varieties, Winesaps and Rome Beauties being the most suitable while Jonathans may also be shipped provided the fruit is not too soft. In barrel apples, Gravensteins are the best variety.

COLD WEATHER HOLDS UP WORK

CROPS LEFT OUT.

COBOURG, Dec. 3.—The present spell of almost zero weather has caused apprehension among farmers and market gardeners, for they are all behind with their work. The heavy rains have greatly retarded the fall work, as much of the ground was too wet to plough. These rains left the ground as sodden as the usual spring freshet. On a few farms buckwheat has not been all harvested owing to the unseasonable weather.

CORN IS SOLVING PROBLEMS OF ALBERTA STOCK

Corn Belt Has Been Definitely Brought Into Alberta Dry Belt.

BIG EXHIBITION.

Many Prizes Were Taken By Produce of Drought Ridden Lands.

LETHBRIDGE.—The corn belt was definitely established 200 miles farther north, when what is destined to be known as the Alberta Provincial Corn Growers' Association held its first province-wide corn show in Lethbridge, with more than 2,500 ears of well-matured corn on exhibit, coming from 61 individual exhibitors, covering territory from Medicine Hat to Lethbridge, north to Carmangay and to Bindloss and south to the Montana border.

Not only has the holding of this show, which was amazingly successful, brought the corn belt definitely into Alberta, but it has demonstrated the fact that in the feeding of stock from corn lies to a great extent the solution of the problems that confront southeastern Alberta. It is significant that this section of Alberta, drought ridden and seemingly hopeless, swept the boards of prizes at the corn show. Hon. George Hoadley, addressing the corn growers, emphasized the hope that lay for this country in the raising of corn, and pointed to the example of Kansas, which has been populated and depopulated three times, until finally corn-growing was found to great extent to be the way out.

The first attempt to grow corn in Alberta was made at Bindloss, away north of Medicine Hat. This was two years ago, when the department of agriculture got seed for farmers in that district and encouraged them to try it out. At the corn show, Bindloss exhibitors took prizes. Milk River, already in the corn belt for two years, was a big prize winner, but the glories went chiefly to the territory known as the dry belt, which is under the direct supervision of Jas. Murray, of the department of agriculture, and who is responsible for inducing many of the farmers to get into corn growing.

BRITISH FARMERS WILL VISIT AFRICA

Return Visit of South African Farmers To Britain.

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 3.—(Canadian Press Despatch)—Preparations are already under way for a party of British farmers to journey to South Africa, and so to make a return visit which was paid this summer by South African farmers to Great Britain.

The tour, which had received the approval of the King, is to be limited to one hundred bona-fide British and Irish farmers, and the cost of the trip, thanks to the generosity of the railway and steamship services, will be kept at a particularly low figure. The itinerary, which is being arranged will afford the fullest possible opportunity for seeing the best of the agricultural districts of the Union, as well as the more outstanding mining and industrial centres. A big attraction, although somewhat outside the chief purpose of the tour, will be the visit to the world-famous Victoria Falls, and to Cecil Rhodes's and Jameson's graves in the Matoppos, Rhodesia.

The party is expected to leave England early in February, and will remain in South Africa until the end of April.

WEST'S BUTTER RECORDS.

REGINA.—A record has been established in the shipment of creamery butter from Saskatchewan to Great Britain during the present year, according to a report of the provincial dairy commissioner. In the first nine months of 1925, 8,572,068 pounds of creamery butter manufactured in the province was graded for export under the Canadian federal regulations.

HEREFORD CATTLE ARE AMONG OLD RECOGNIZED BEEF BREEDS ALTHOUGH ORIGIN IS OBSCURE

Started Late in Seventeenth Century in Herefordshire, England.

WIDELY SPREAD.

Have Found Favor Wherever Cattle Are Raised For Beef.

Hereford cattle had their origin in the county of Hereford, England, close to the Welsh boundary. Herefordshire is known as a great grazing county, rather rolling and even hilly in topography but producing an abundance of luxuriant pasture. The breed is one of the oldest recognized and while its origin is more or less obscure, it is known that late in the seventeenth century, certain white-faced cattle were imported from Holland and crossed on the native cattle of the district. At the same time, some claim that the real foundation of the breed was a certain white-faced bull brought into the district from the Tees Shorthorn county about 1760. In the early days of the breed, several colours were recognized, among them being light grey, dark grey and red with white faces, while some others had mottled faces.

Perhaps most credit for the early development of the breed should go to the Tompkins family. Richard Tompkins, at his death in 1723, left some cattle of Hereford type to his son Benjamin, who, in turn, at his death in 1789, left to his son of the same name a considerable herd. This latter Benjamin, by a practice of close in-and-in breeding, was able to produce a much smoother, earlier maturing, higher quality class of cattle than had previously been bred. After his death, in 1815 the entire herd was sold at auction in 1.

Prominent in the work along with the elder Benjamin Tompkins was Wm. Galliers, who was born in 1713 and who died in 1771 and who used practically the same foundation blood as that used in the Tompkins herd.

Following the younger Tompkins came John Price, who also practised, in his breeding work, the closest possible concentration of blood and produced cattle of great scale with a wonderful spring of rib and depth of fore quarters and considerably more quality in the hind quarters than had been common to the breed. Price worked great improvement in the breed and his cattle were in demand right up to the time of his death in 1841.

Mention should also be made of John Hewer, born in 1787, and who was prominent in the breeding of Hereford cattle until his death in 1873. It is said that present-day strains of cattle almost invariably trace to Hewer's stock.

Widely Distributed.

Hereford cattle are widely distributed wherever beef raising is a prominent branch of agriculture. The breed has found great favour in sections of various countries devoted to grazing. Herefords are good range cattle, very hardy and thrifty. The breed has become popular in the United States, in the Argentine, and in Western Canada, and while it is fairly liberally sprinkled over Ontario, has not gained the prominence in this Province that one would have expected. The breed had its introduction to America in 1817.

The Hereford compares favorably with the Shorthorn in size and females of the breed should weigh from 1,300 to 1,500 pounds or more, with males from 1,800 to 2,200 pounds and even up to 2,500 pounds. The colour of the Hereford is a distinguishing feature with the body a cherry red and the face, head, top of neck and brisket generally white. The white markings generally extend well down the back and the underline is also generally white, as is also the switch and usually some white is found on the legs below the knee and hock. A light yellowish red or an unduly dark red may be frequently found, but is not as desirable a colour as a bright cherry red.

Herefords should conform closely to beef type. They are cattle with great constitutions, good middles and wonderful fronts. They are noted for their short, broad heads, strong muzzles, showing great feeding capacity. The horns should be flat and fine and preferably should turn inward and downward. The neck is short and thick and the shoulders usually very smooth, but the breed has a tendency toward an over development of dewlap and brisket. The Hereford shows a great spring of rib, strong heart girth and good middle, but has a tendency to run a little light in the hind quarter. The best specimens of the breed, however, are straight on top, broad over the loin, smooth at the hook bones and reasonably well filled between hooks and pins as well as being low in the twist and thick through the thighs. Good Herefords are very fleshy animals and the meat should be laid on smoothly and evenly. Their hides usually run a little heavier than those of the Shorthorn, but the skin should be soft, pliable and mellow. Hereford cattle usually have plenty of bone. No breed excels the Hereford in beef type from hook bones forward, and breeders have made wonderful improvement in smoothness over the hind quarters of their cattle.

Polled Herefords were originated in the Province of Ontario and were first bred by Mossom Boyd near Bobcaygeon, who used in the making of the breed Aberdeen Angus bulls on pure-bred Hereford cows. Later, a somewhat similar type of cattle was developed in the State of Iowa by using a red Polled bull on Hereford cows. Some time later a breeder named Guthrie located a few Polled females amongst pure-bred Herefords and these formed the foundation of pure-bred Polled Hereford blood. No other strain of Polled Herefords is now recognized but that developed from pure-bred Polled Herefords. The breed is widely distributed in the United States and a few herds are to be found in Western Canada, but it has never made any progress in the Province of Ontario.

LOW GRAIN YIELD FOR AUSTRALIA

Dry Weather is Responsible For Poor Crops This Year.

FODDER SCARCE.

Owing to dry weather in Australia grain yields much below the average are expected, writes Mr. C. Hartlett, Melbourne, in the forthcoming issue of the Commercial Intelligence Journal. The pastoral and dairying industries are also being adversely affected by the dry conditions, and the consequent disappearance of grass in many parts of the country is resulting in a considerable all-round depreciation in the value of sheep and cattle and a corresponding rise in hay and other fodder. The quality of Australian wheat for the 1925-26 harvest available for export will be more limited than in recent years and the volume of butter, cheese, meat and other primary products will also be much curtailed.

What the West Can Do For New Immigrants

CALGARY.—That there are many opportunities on Western Canadian farm lands for the man who wants to get ahead, is evidenced by the experiences of Joseph McClafferty, who came to Canada from Donegal, Ireland, in August, 1924. Immediately upon arrival a job was secured for him with a farmer at Lamont, Alberta, with a wage of $40 a month. Six months later his salary was doubled and now McClafferty has $800 of his wages saved and is being established on a farm of his own.

LITTLE DAMAGE DONE TO GRAIN BY BAD WEATHER

There Will Be Little Left Unthreshed Over the Winter.

NEARLY FINISHED.

Some of Grain Lost in Grade Because of the Discoloration.

REGINA.—Threshing is nearly completed, according to telegraphic reports received by the statistics branch of the Saskatchewan department of agriculture. It is now certain that any quantity of grain left unthreshed this fall will be negligible. The largest areas of unthreshed grain are in the Yorkton, Prince Albert and Star City districts, where five or six days of good weather are required to complete operations. Only scattered fields remain to be threshed in any of the other districts, and only one or two days are required. In seventy-five per cent. of the districts of the province all threshing is completed. Much of the grain threshed since the rain has suffered the loss of one or two grades due to discoloration, and quite a large percentage is grading tough or damp. Hay and green feed are practically all stacked or housed. The weather during the last week has been ideal all over the province. Livestock are running out and with plenty of feed are entering the winter period in good condition.

CHOICEST FRUIT SENT TO CANADA

Australian Control Board is Taking Great Care Quality is Right.

FEW SULTANAS.

The Commonwealth Fried Fruits Control Board is taking the greatest care to ensure that only the best quality of Australian dried fruits are to be forwarded to Canada, writes Mr. C. Hartlett, Office of The Trade Commissioner, Melbourne, in the forthcoming issue of the Commercial Intelligence Journal. Only experimental shipments of first quality fruit will be licensed and it is anticipated that with the opening of the new season fruit of excellent quality will be available for Canada. Very few sultanas are available for export at present and operations on the Canadian market will consequently be confined to the new season's crop, which will be ready for export about the middle of April, 1926.

It is expected that expert trade representatives will be sent to Canada by all the industries benefited by the trade agreement with Canada.

SUGAR BEET CROP.

LETHBRIDGE.—Almost one hundred per cent. of the beet crop in the sugar beet areas of Southern Alberta was harvested before being damaged by the severe cold weather, and the new factory is having a very satisfactory run.

CANADA'S FRUIT INDUSTRY WORTH MANY MILLIONS

Yield This Year Has Been, on the Whole, Very Satisfactory.

PRICES GOOD.

Larger Yield of Apples Than Usual, Due to Ontario's Bumper Crop.

Canada's fruit industry is worth fifty-seven million dollars in annual production. This year on the whole the yield has been generally satisfactory. Small fruits have done well in every province except in British Columbia, where the unusually low temperature had a bad effect on strawberries and raspberries. Prices have also been helpful to the grower, strawberries running from 8 to 14 cents per quart compared with 4 to 8 cents in 1924. Apples, however, owing to their exportability and their possibility of storage are our main crop and of them in the total there has been a yield rather above the average, thanks to the abundance in Ontario, where an increase of half a million barrels for the year is reported. In Nova Scotia unfortunately there appears to have been a decrease of half the quantity. Such in brief is the testimony given by The Dominion Fruit Commissioner, Mr. G. E. McIntosh, before the Pomological Society of Quebec.

STOCK YARD RULES HAVE BEEN REVISED

Exploitation of Farmers Was Reason For Changing Regulations.

MONTREAL, Dec. 3 (Special). — The formation of livestock exchanges in this city to protect the farmers against exploitation has been decided following an agreement between the two stock yards, one in the east end of the city, owned and operated by the Canadian Pacific Railway, and the other operated by other interests in the west end of Montreal. A special committee has been named to revise the rules and regulations of the stock yards, and these revisions have been approved by the Federal Government.

Under the new rules a bond of $10,000 shall be furnished by all members of the livestock exchanges, as a guarantee of good faith and security for their customers and it is further provided that commission men shall not purchase livestock on their own account but shall act as agents of the farmers' produce. This will not preclude dealers from transacting business on the markets in selling their own stock, nor does it prevent farmers from doing so as far as their own stock is concerned.

Low prices for live stock had so discouraged farmers in the past that according to Federal Government figures, the number of cattle in the Province of Quebec had decreased by 331,000 head in the five-year period, 1920-1924. This decrease is ascribed to the action of the farmers in killing off new born calves rather than face the work and loss involved in raising them to maturity and being forced to then sell them below cost.

Keep eggs in the coolest place possible and market them often in hot weather. Eggs that are fertile will begin to spoil in twenty-four hours or less if the temperature is as high as 60 degrees.

An English bronze half-penny is exactly an inch in diameter, and therefore gives us a very convenient measure. Laid on an ordinance map of the inch scale, the half-penny just covers 500 acres.

The average daily amount of sunshine in England the year round is four hours.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS ENTERTAINED

Children Were Guests of Their Teacher, Mrs. George Taylor.

WARSAW, Dec. 3—Mrs. George Taylor entertained her Sunday School class, numbering about twenty, in the Sunday School room, one evening last week. There were games and music and supper. Mrs. Taylor always takes much interest in her class week days as well as Sundays. The young people spent a very happy time.

Rev. H. B. Herrington began his series of sermons on "The Christian Hope," on Sunday evening, taking the text, Job XIV:14, "If a man die shall he live again?" The lesson was Ecclesiastics IX:2-10. In taking up the series Mr. Herington began with the ancient conceptions of death and compared these ideas with the present day ones and showed how these ideas originated.

Rev. Walter Cox held a memorial service in the Anglican church and preached a most impressive sermon. Mrs. Charles Foster sang, and the orchestra assisted with the music, and played the Dead March in Saul. The church was well filled. The members were out in good numbers also many from the other churches.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Edwards spent a few days with Mr. Edward's relatives in Warsaw.

Born—To Mr. and Mrs. George Barr, on Saturday, Nov. 28th, a daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Thompson are moving into the manse. A new roof is being put on the stable.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES.

Large Congregations Present at Services and Concert at Welcome.

WELCOME, Dec. 3.—The anniversary services of the Welcome United Church were held on Sunday and Monday, Nov. 29 and 30. Large congregations were at both services.

Rev. D. R. Clare, the pastor, was the preacher for the occasion.

At the morning service, Mr. Clare took as his text: "She hath done what she could." His subject was "The One-Talent Man."

Mrs. Cawker of Bowmanville was the soloist of the day. The choir rendered two anthems.

In the morning, Mr. Clare Symons and Mr. E. A. Martyn sang a duet, and in the evening the Welcome Quartette sang. The offering of the day was $140.

On Monday evening a high class concert was given in the church. The artists for the evening were Mrs. Cawker of Bowmanville, vocalist; Mrs. Smith of Oshawa, vocalist; Mrs. Adams of Bowmanville, reader, and Mrs. Hough of Caulon, pianist. Miss Staples of Orono was accompanist. A large audience showed their appreciation of the various numbers.

DOUBLE FUNERAL IN CAMPBELLFORD

Grandmother and Granddaughter Were Buried Yesterday.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 3—Side by side in the parlor of a residence in Ranney street on Tuesday and Wednesday stood two caskets, the one containing the remains of the eldest of the Cassan family, Mrs. Edward Cassan, aged 93, and the other that of the stillborn infant daughter of her son, Herbert. The double funeral was held yesterday afternoon, the coffin of the grandmother being carried to Christ Church in the hearse while those of the infant followed in the undertaker's private auto. The latter was not taken into the church but was buried after the last service had been read over the grave of the aged head of the family.

Rev. G. C. Clarke officiated at the Church and grave and in a brief discourse commended the exemplary life of the diseased who had been so devoted a member of the congregation, faithful to all her spiritual duties.

The pallbearers were: William and George Smith, John Wallace, J. P. Archer, Walter J. Lowe and William Cock.

MOCK COUNCIL AT LAKEFIELD

"Reeve" Rev. Walter Cox Presided at A.Y.P.A. Entertainment.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 3—On Monday evening the regular meeting of the A.Y.P.A. was held taking the form of a mock village council which provided a good deal of amusement as the council proceeded to make the village according to their own ideas with remarkable results. Reeve Cox was in the chair and there were present Councillors Robertshaw, Stenner, Simpson, Webster and Blewett. Chairman of the School Board Hampton and Chief of Police Woodhouse were also present.

In the absence of the Clerk, Reeve Cox read the minutes of the previous meeting which containd the record that a by-law entitled "a by-law to make compulsory the carrying of lights on baby carriages and carts," had received its several readings and been passed. The arrangement with the Canada Cement Co. in which they had agreed to pave one mile of streets each year was left over as unfinished business as the councillors could not agree on the streets to be paved first. A motion to license cats was left over till the next regular sitting and also a motion to grant $200 to the A.Y.P.A. and a petition to increase the lights on Ermitinger St.

Councillor Stenner, chairma of the Finance Committee submitted the budget for the year on which the tax rate should be based. The sum of $5000 was to be given to the Welfare Committee to provide a community picnic in the Park, three mills were to be given to the Street and Sidewalk committee for their work in keeping up the streets and other allotments were made accordingly. The petition of Hunter and Webster and Hill and Sabatino for better traffic regulations at the junction of Queen, Bridge and Albert streets and also at Reid and Queen streets was discussed and the appointment of E. Robertson and T. Simpson as traffic cops at $20 per year confirmed.

A letter was read from the inspector of public works to the effect that the high level bridg was condemned and that a new bridge must be constructed at a cost not exceeding $20,000.

Councillor Robertshaw demanded not less than 4 mills for the work he felt should be done on the streets and urged strongly that a license should be placed on cats. He protested against the small salary allotted to him and suggested the Chief Woodhouse could take on the work in connection with his own.

Councillor T. A. Simpson, chairman of the Charity committee reported several cases of dire need and recommended the payment of accounts for oysters, silk stockings, olives, etc., which were urgently needed.

Councillor Webster spoke of a complaint of ladies resident near the school of the smoke being a nuisance on Monday and would urge that the janitor be asked not to have a fire on wash day.

Councillor Blewett, who was chairman of the Welfare Committee urgd a ferry to the Park and also strongly recommended that all cats should be provided with tail lights and mufflers.

The council adjourned.

Rev. W. Cox read a report of the Dominion Conference held in Brantford recently, the branch being indebted to Miss Jessie Maconomy of All Saints, Peterboro, for the splendid report.

Funeral of Mrs. Northey

The funeral of Mrs. W. J. Northey was held on Tuesday afternoon from the family residence, Reid St., and was conducted by Rev. S. A. Kemp, assisted by Rev. P. L. Jull, and was attended by a very large number of friends and relatives who gathered to pay a last tribute of respect to an ideal wife and mother, a sincere friend and a good neighbor.

Mr. Kemp spoke briefly from the 26th verse of the 11th chapter of the gospel according to St. John: "and whosoever liveth and believeth in Me, shall never die.

To those gathered to mourn the loss of a loved one there is infinite comfort in this thought of the life eternal.

The loved one is gone past the hearing of earthly voices but is able to hear the voice of God for she is with God.

Death is but the passing through the doorway into a wider and fuller life.

Death is also an unmooring, the ship lies at the dock and then when all is ready the unpinning is taken away the ship glides out into the ocean of God's love.

Death is also a homecoming for there on the other shore are waiting many loved ones who were near and dear in this life and with whom our dear ones go to spend eternity.

The pall bearers were Messrs. Bruce Preston, Albert Armstrong, Bruce Fitzgerald, Aldus Northey, Walter Preston and A. McCall. The cortege proceeded to the Lakefield cemetery where interment took place.

Besides her husband, son and daughter, who mourn her loss, Mrs. Northey had two sisters, Mrs. Jacob Rapp and Mrs. Charles Konkle, both of Cleveland. In April, 1926, Mr. and Mrs. Northey would have celebrated their golden wedding, an event to which the family were looking forward.

Debate and Social

On Monday evening, Nov. 30, a happy event took place in the Orange Hall at the Sixteenth when a pie social and debate was put on under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of Wesley United Church. The Hall was filled to capacity. The debate, "Resolved that books are more educational than travel," was very ably handled by four young men, Rev. Mr. Spencer and Mr. Allan B. Mann for the affirmative and Messrs. Erie Pearson and George Munroe negative. Each speaker was allowed seven minutes and their interesting and witty arguments kept the audience in merry humour. Mr. Spencer was allowed four minutes for rebuttal. The judges, Miss Burgess, Mrs. H. A. Shearer and Mrs. Howard Pearson gave the decision in favour of the affirmative by two points.

Rev. P. L. Jull of Lakefield occupied the chair in his usual capable manner. The programme was as follows: opening selection, String Orchestra; remarks, chairman; reading, Rev. Mr. Spencer; instrumental selection, Bertram and Clayton McCue; reading, Mr. Geo. Munro; instrumental selection, Bertram and Clayton McCue; debate; instrumental selection, String orchestra; Judge's decision; God Save the King. A bountiful array of appetizing pies had been donated and at the conclusion of the programme the ladies of the church served sandwich, pie and tea.

The proceeds wre quite gratifying, amounting to about $25.00 with expenses paid.

Curling Club Meeting

The first meeting of th season of the Curling Club was held in the Council Chamber on Monday evening with the President, J. E. Galvin in the chair.

The adoption of the constitution was an important item of business and was carried through successfully. A set of definite rules and regulations governing the local competition for the Fitzgerald trophy were also passed.

The club have decided this year to admit to the club this year at half rates boys of nineteen years and under who will be allowed equal privileges with the older curlers. There is no doubt this opportunity will be taken advantage of by many of the boys. All those interested in the proposition should notify the secretary, Mr. Percy Spence.

The general meeting will be held on December 11th and at this meeting the draw will be made for the local competition. All who wish to be drawn must be paid up members on or before that date.

LOUCHEUR'S BILL MET OPPOSITION

Socialists, Whose Neutrality Was Expected, Are Opposed To Bill.

VOTE FAVORABLE.

PARIS, Dec. 3 (Canadian Press)—The first finance bill of the new Minister of Finance, M. Loucheur—providing an inflation of six billion francs and setting an emergency tax designed to recoup more than three billion francs—came before the Chamber of Deputies yesterday afternoon, and it was immediately evident that the fate of the Briand Government hung on the way it was received. At an early hour this morning, a vote of 296 to 113 was recorded in favor of the new Government, on a proposal to proceed with discussion of the finance measure.

The Chamber's finance committee asked to have it from 5 until 9 in the evening, and finally at 10.30 reported favorably nad asked the Chamber to adopt it. Immediately the Socialist upon whose benevolent neutrality Briand counted for the success of his Government, decided to vote against it. That turned the night session into a decisive occasion.

Inflation Passed.

By a margin of only seven votes Premier Briand today obtained authorisation from the Chamber of Deputies for a vast inflation plan. The vote on the inflation section of the Government's bill was made a question of confidence. It was the fourth vote given during the session which lasted all night.

MISSION STARTS CHRIST CHURCH

Rev. F. H. Hartley, of Toronto, is Conducting Special Services.

"WALKING WITH GOD."

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 3.—Rev. F. H. Hartley, Rector of St. Matthias Church, Toronto, who on Wednesday began an eight-day mission service in Christ Church, told his hearers in his first discourse that the rite of baptism is essential and no person lacking it can be regarded as a Christian and cannot hope for eternal salvation. The virtue of this sacrament, the speaker said, did not consist in the pouring of water, but it was an act of obedience to the commands of Christ, who said that all must be born again of water and of the Spirit. The unbaptized person cannot gain admission to the church on earth; how then could he hope to enter the church in Heaven?

"Walking With God."

The subject of Mr. Hartley's discourse was "Walking With God," based on the story of Genesis of the close communion of Enoch and Noah with the Creator. The sermon was a quiet exhortion to all to take up the Christian life. Walking with God meant doing His will and trying faithfully to help on His work. Morality does not make a man a Christian, for the Jew and Jap may be moral, but morality is the basis of Christianity.

Little Change in World.

There has been, the speaker said, little change in human nature since the days of Enoch and Noah. There were greedy people then, just as there are now; in contracting marriage, too many are today, just as in the early age of the world, attracted by looks or wealth, rather than by the main consideration, which should be character.

No one has an excuse to be anything but a Christian as everybody born into the world is endowed with sufficient gifts to do the will of God. Mr. Hartley said that the object of the mission was to show people their duty. People outside the Church would attend and in this way could be reached. He believes that the people of Campbellford need still more religion, and asked those present to attend regularly and to bring others with them.

The programme arranged for Thursday, Friday and Saturday is as follows: 8 a.m., Holy Communion; 10 a.m., Morning Prayer; 4.15 p.m., Children's Service; 5.15 p.m., Evensong; 8 p.m., Mission Service.

The hymns used last night; the congregation doing the singing, were the familiar Gospel songs heard at special services of all denominations —"Tell Me the Old, Old Story," "I Need Thee Every Hour," and "Breathe On Me Breath of God."

SYRIAN FIGHTING AGITATES ISLAM

Moslems of Palestine and Trans-Jordania Denounce French.

NO RISING EXPECTED.

JERUSALEM, December 3. — Canadian Press. — Moslem Palestine and Trans-Jordania are agitated by events in Syria. The French are denounced as the worst enemy of Islam. Collections for victims of the French campaign in Syria continue to be successful in all the larger centres among the nationalist circles in Palestine.

Nevertheless there is no fear of repercussion in Palestine. It is believed that the Arabs here are persuaded of the power of Great Britain and unlikely to foment trouble even if so disposed.

SACRAMENT IN KEENE CHURCHES

United (Presbyterian) Circuit Has Passed Budget Allotment.

KEENE, December 3. — On Sunday, November 29th, sacramental services were conducted at the Keene and Westwood United Presbyterian churches, by the minister, Rev. John Archibald, when quite a number united with the church on profession of faith. It was announced that the amount subscribed for the maintenance and extension fund was $1400 which was $200 over the objective.

This is most encouraging as it is the highest mark for budget purposes in the history of the church.

Sacramental services were also held in the United Methodist churches Keene, Bethel and Zion, on Sunday last, Rev. Andrew McLaughlin officiating. The canvas for the maintenance and extension fund is not yet completed but the returns so far are very encouraging and the committee in charge feel quite confident of reaching the objective of $1025.

PRESENTATION MADE BY CHOIR MEMBERS

Mrs. Charles Towns Given Silverware on Wedding Day.

DOURO, Dec. 3.—On the day of her wedding, Mrs. Chas. Towns (nee Seraphine O'Brien) received a handsome gift of flat silverware from St. Joseph's Choir, of which she was a member. Miss Mabel Allen read the following short address; Miss May Whibbs making the presentation:

"We, the members of St. Joseph's Choir, Douro, have united on this joyful occasion to offer to you our congratulations. We wish you every success and happiness in your future life. You have been a faithful and valued member of our choir for many years, and we ask you to accept this gift as a slight token of our esteem.

Signed by the choir members, viz: Misses Mabel Allen, organist; May Whibbs, Kathleen Towns, Isabel Towns, Hazel Heffernan, Clara Condon, Agness Sweeney, Mary Quinlan, Lillian and Anne O'Brien, and Messrs. Cyril Lee and John Sheehan.

Mr. Towns responded in behalf of his bride, thanking the choir for their kindness, and hoping that there would soon be other presentations to other members on similar occasions.

CIVIL CABINET FORMED IN SPAIN

Primo de Rivera, Head of Military Directorate, is Premier.

SUDDEN CHANGE.

MADRID, Dec. 3. — (Canadian Press). — Civilian government, abolished when the Alhucemas Ministry was overthrown by a military coup in September, 1923, has been restored in Spain, General Primo de Rivera, who was president of the military directorate, remains at the head of the Government as Premier.

The return to civilian rule, while expected, came with dramatic suddenness. Rumors of all kinds became current with the return to Madrid from Morocco on Monday of the President. As many as fourteen Cabinet slates were circulated, but Primo de Rivera at the time had nothing definite to say. Members of the new Spanish Cabinet are for the most part soldiers or academicians.

SCIENCE FINDING MORE USES FOR WHALE CARCASS

Fertilizer, Egret Plumes, Choice Steaks, All Off One Beast.

MODERN METHODS

Very Little is Left Now for Sharks—All is Used.

VICTORIA, B.C., Dec. 3 (Canadian Press).—Science is finding almost as many uses for the whale as Chicago packers have found for the hog.

As a result, the whaling industry is not a thing of the past, as the majority of people seem to think. As the various branches of production are expanded and new uses are found for the carcass of the big mammal the industry is entering a steadily widening field and those engaged in it foresee a future as profitable as the past, if perhaps not quite so picturesque. The old days of the greasy schooner, away from port for months at a time, with hand harpoons and other primitive equipment, are gone; but such things as these would never survive in this modern age when whaling is carried on under an entirely different setting.

The whale is no longer caught only for the oil it yields. In fashionable London and Paris gay hats with egret and osprey plumes might, if they could, tell of their affinity with the finely shredded fibres of the so-called right whale.

On the dinner table of Far Eastern merchants, when company is to be treated with special honors, salted whale tails are served.

The changing shape of milady might be said in part to owe allegiance to the useful and pliable qualities of whalebone. Hard-fibred brushes to sweep the obstinate corners of the home, "Ivory" backed brushes with initialed monograms, toilet soaps and many other articles of household use may trace their origin to the plunging monster of the North Pacific.

The rice fields of Japan and China, the truck gardens of British Columbia and other parts of the Coast owe the richness of their crops to the fertilizer bloods and bonemeal of the whale.

Victoria is the headquarters for the whaling industry of the North Pacific, although United States whalers operate on a smaller scale out of several Washington and Oregon ports.

Some 10,800 barrels of oil were put up by the Consolidated Whaling Company of Victoria, as a result of the operations of four stations from May to October this year. The higher grades of oil go into the manufacture of toilet soaps. Grade 3 is used for tanning purposes and for tempering steel. Number 4 grade is used for fruit and other sprays, while blood and bonemeal are also used for the culture of flowers and fruits. The fertilizer field has opened up a new line of development recognized as of enormous importance, for it will eliminate all waste from the various reduction and manufacturing processes. Compared with the methods of the old days, the whaling plants leave very little for the sharks and seagulls.

Twenty-three years ago the whaling industry was established in Victoria by the late Dr. Rissmuller, formerly of Newfoundland, and Captain Sprott Balcom, one-time famous as a sealing skipper. Eight vessels now comprise Victoria's whaling fleet, each carrying a crew of 11 men, including one gunner who mans the harpoon gun.

SPANISH GOLD LURES ADMIRAL

Vice-Admiral Sir Guy Gaunt is Fitting Out Expedition.

OTHER GUESTS

VICTORIA, B.C., Dec. 3 (Canadian Press).—The lure of Spanish doubloons, pieces of eight, gold from the temples of the Incas—in short, buried treasure is luring to the tropical seas one of Britain's most picturesque adventurers.

Vice-Admiral Sir Guy Gaunt, who played a daring role during the war as British secret service agent and incidentally exposed one of the most dangerous spy conspiracies in New York, is in Victoria outfitting a 174-foot schooner for what he expects to be his most romantic exploit of all—the quest for buried treasure on Cocos Island.

This attraction of Cocos Island has been a will o' the wisp in the past to many dauntless mariners and explorers, but Sir Guy Gaunt is ready to throw his fortune with that of those who have gone before him. The failures of his predecessors does not convince him that the Spanish doubloons and the Incas' gold are not to be found. Only his own attempt will satisfy him, and so he is going about the outfitting of his craft with the firm resolve of a veteran sailorman answering his nature's first call.

But Sir Guy has more than Cocos Island in view. If he fails to find treasure there he will at least have enjoyed the first part of what seems destined to be a long and extremely interesting voyage, for he plans to sail from the treasure island across the Pacific to Papua, the land of the head hunters.

Unlike Joseph Conrad, Jack London and others who sought adventure in the South Pacific, Sir Guy intends to carry with him at least a little bit of civilization. He is sparing no expense to equip the vessel luxuriously and the space formerly used for the accommodation of freight on the craft chosen for the voyage will be laid out in palatial saloons, library and workshop. There will be a radio set and auxiliary engines for use in calm weather.

After a distinguished career in the British Navy, Sir Guy Gaunt was appointed naval attache at Washington, serving there from 1914 to 1918.

Sergeant Jack Adams made such a hit with St. Louis boxing fans in his recent defeat of Romera Rojas, that he has been matched by the same club to take on Jack Renault, the big Canadian, in a ten-round bout on December 1.

FIND DIATOMITE NEAR QUESNEL

Fossil Meal is Used for Lining Cold Storage Rooms.

TRIBUTE TO CLIMATE

VANCOUVER, B. C., Dec. 3—(Canadian Press.) — Discovery of the valuable commercial material, known as infusorial earth or diatomite, has been made by George H. Turner, near Quesnel, in the Cariboo country.

The materially is really "fossil meal," which is little known except to the trades that use it. The presence of diatomite in the locality is also a tribute to the weather, for scientists say this form of shell life settled in agreeable climates, judging by the places in which it has been found.

Diatomite keeps heat in and cold out and is the best and cheapest material for lining cold-storage rooms and refrigerators. It is indestructible by fire and is also very light, weighing only seven pounds per cubic foot. It is particularly valuable for the sound-proofing of modern buildings, as it can be mixed directly with plaster or cement. This remarkable material also finds many uses in widely varied industries.

The British admiralty, during the war, worked out the diatomite deposit of the Isle of Skye, the material being used in submarine construction. The only deposit being worked in the United States is in Florida, where a suction dredge pumps it from the bottom of the lake.

Before the dawn of modern times, according to a scientific description of the material, myriads of two-cell forms of life, known to science as diatoms, selected such places as Florida and the Isle of Skye, off the coast of Scotland. These diminutive creatures of antiquity settled in compartively few known spots. It would require three million of them to occupy as much space as a one-inch cube. They formed shields or shells for their armor and these decompose and form fossil meal or infusorial earth.

Finds way to get rid of muscular aches and pains

HOW OUTDOOR MEN TREAT MUSCLE-STRAIN

Sprains, bruises, rheumatism also yield to this treatment

Outdoor men who do hard muscular work, who undergo exposure and risk of accident every day, know how necessary it is to give prompt attention to muscle-strain, bruises, sprains and other injuries.

A member of a survey party, sent out by the government of British Columbia to do sub-division work three hundred miles from civilization writes: "The chief of our party with rare foresight brought along as a part of our first aid supply a bottle of Sloan's Liniment. And through weeks of exposure and hardship we found it our best help for sprains, bruises, stiff muscles and rheumatism."

Sloan's gives real relief because it doesn't just deaden the pain. It helps your body to throw off the cause.

Just a little Sloan's patted on lightly—and a healing tide of fresh new blood is sent right to the place that hurts. The aching and stiffness are helped right away.

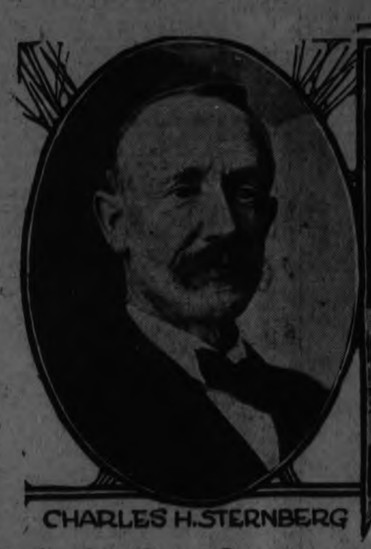
FOSSIL HUNTER ATE PONY'S PARCHED FEED TO GUARD ANCIENT RELICS AGAINST RIVAL



CHARLES H. STERNBERG

GEORGE M. STERNBERG at work on the skull of a horned Dinosaur.

Sternberg Later Came to Canada and Helped Build Up Remarkable Collection of Dinosaur and Other Prehistoric Specimens at National Museum — Whole Family Were Paleontologists.

The Sternbergs are a family of fossil-hunters.

This may sound as dry as dust, but actually it is at times as exciting as being a prospector in a gold rush, as is proved by Charles H. Sternberg when he tells of how he lived for days on parched corn sooner than leave his workings and take a chance of having a rival searcher "jump his claims."

Incidentally it might be mentioned that the Sternbergs were largely responsible for the collection of the wonderful specimens of the prehistoric age now on view at the National Museum in Ottawa and that the youngest boy in the family, Levi, has done similar valuable work for the Royal Ontario Museum in Toronto.

It was away back in the sixties that the founder of the family, then a lad of ten, started to gather fossil leaves and shells in the Susquehanna valley of New York State. Later the family moved west, and at the age of seventeen Charles H. Sternberg announced to his father that he had decided to dedicate his life to the study of paleontology.

In the spring of 1875 Sternberg was at the University of Kansas Agricultural College. And that year one of his professors, B. F. Mudge, was sent out in the field with a party to collect vertebrate fossils for Yale. As the expedition had its full complement made up, young Sternberg was unable to get a place on it.

But he was resolved that he would be among those in the field. Accordingly he wrote a letter to Prof. Cope, a distinguished Philadelphia naturalist, telling of his burning desire to conduct explorations and asking for the loan of three hundred dollars. Although the boy gave no references save his past record, Cope promptly mailed a draft for the sum requested.

Sons Emulate Father.

Thus Sternberg was able to buy a wagon, a team of horses and a camping outfit. Then he hired a man to act as cook and driver and left for that very district in which Mudge was already working. There was great rivalry on that first trip.

Sternberg tells of one instance in which he and his man ran out of food and lived on parched corn (intended for the ponies) for three days, not daring to leave the rich field in which they found themselves for fear that Mudge and his party might discover it during their absence and secure the pick of the specimens before they could return and beat them to it.

That first season established Sternberg completely. He had attained splendid results in his collecting, which for about half the time had been carried out in spite of illness.

So began the first generation of the fossil-hunting family. Charles H. has remained almost all his life what might be termed a free-lance paleontologist.

The founder's son, George, first went to the field with his father when he was thirteen years old. Next came Charles M. Sternberg, who began his real career in the year 1906. Two years later the youngest son, Levi, then fifteen years of age, joined the profession.

In 1912 they came to Canada and joined the staff of the National Museum at Ottawa, or the Victoria Memorial Museum, as it was then called.

Those were the early days of the museum and the division of vertebrate paleontology hardly existed. A few specimens had been collected, it is true, but they were mostly fragmentary and small, so that they had little value in exciting popular interest. There was nothing like the huge and almost complete skeletons of dinosaurs which the Sternbergs added to the collections in a very few years.

When first the fossil hunters arrived in Ottawa the equipment with which they had to work was so inadequate as to render the mounting of large specimens extremely ticklish and well nigh impossible.

However, the veteran Charles H. decided to work without the proper appliances, and produced results so good that the authorities took notice, so that it was not long before he had a well-equipped workshop. When finally he left in 1916 he had established a really splendid national collection, which his son Charles has greatly enlarged since.

Year after year Charles, the younger, goes out to the Red Deer district, in the Bad Lands of Alberta and brings in skeletons of dinosaurs which roamed that part of Canada three million years ago when Alberta was a low-lying country not far from the sea.

Since the Sternberg group broke up after its stay in Ottawa, all the members have been actively at work in different parts of this continent. George has been down to South America for the Field Museum of Natural History, Chicago. And this year he is back in the Kansas chalk, where both he and his father began their careers. Levi is employed at present by the Royal Ontario Museum at Toronto, where he is building up a division of vertebrate paleontology much as his father did for the National Museum.

And the father himself, the veteran hunter, is still active. This year finds him in California, collecting remains of prehistoric mammals from a geological deposit known as the pleistocene.

Nor does this line of scientists end with the three brothers, for George has taken his young son to work with him in Kansas. And so begins the third generation of a fossil-hunting family.

FROM THE LIVERS OF THE LOWLY CODFISH, WEAK, FRAIL, THIN PEOPLE GAIN NEEDED WEIGHT AND STRENGTH

McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablets will increase your weight 5 pounds in 30 days or money returned from any druggist.

Medical science progresses rapidly and now you can get at your druggist's, real, genuine cod liver extract in sugar-coated tablets that young and old can take with ease and pleasure.

Even the rundown and skinny grown-ups, who need to take the health, strength and weight producing elements that comes from codfish livers, because it really is the greatest vitamine food and builder of healthy flesh in the world, will feel extremely joyful when they read this welcome news.

Of course, doctors have been prescribing cod liver extract in tablets under another name for several years, but it is only of late that one can walk into a drug store and get a box of these flesh-producing, health creating tablets just as easy as a box of talcum powder.

Thin, run-down, anaemic men, women and children who need to grow strong and take on flesh are advised to get a box of McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablets and if the gain is not 5 pounds in 30 days just get your money back.

One woman gained fifteen pounds in five weeks, according to her own doctor. Another ten pounds in three weeks. A very sickly child aged nine, twelve pounds in seven months and now plays with other children and has a good appetite.

Just ask for McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablets. The Harris Drug Store, McDermid & Jury, Jas. Lynch, Bond's Drug Store or any druggist will tell you that they are wonderful flesh and health builders. Only 60 cents for 60 Tablets—and don't forget that they are wonder workers for feeble old folks.

Get McCoy's, the original and genuine, and beware of imitations.

BEST HOMES ARE THOSE SOUGHT FOR

Better For Homeless Children Than Those Which Make Application.

TORONTO, Dec. 3—(By Canadian Press).—"In providing for homeless children" says J. J. Kelso, Ontario Superintendent of Neglected Children, "the best homes as a rule are those that are diligently sought instead of waiting for applications to be sent in. Friends of children can greatly assist the Society in this work. For instance there are many women in the rural districts with comfortable homes who could take a homeless child on a visit and then get their friends to give the child a permanent home. They would be well rewarded for their efforts and this plan is heartily commended to those wishing an opportunity for service."

ECLIPSE FASHIONS

Exclusive Patterns by Cecil Beaton

1233

The Graceful Side Flare

Double side draperies are here charmingly adapted to the matron, and give lines of flowing trimness. This type of frock is chic, distinctive and slenderizing, and will grace many an afternoon and evening function. It may be made sleeveless or with short sleeves and is fashioned of figured velvet, having two semi-circular side draperies of plain georgette, through which the design of the material is plainly discerned. The draperies are placed one above the other, and are stitched to the frock across the top and down the sides about three or four inches from the edge, leaving the ends to fall in graceful cascades. The V neck and long unbroken line at center front and back are particularly becoming to the figure of large proportions. No. 1233 is in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust. Size 40 bust requires 3⅛ yards of 36 or 40-inch material for the plain dress, or 5¼ yards for the dress with double side draperies. Price 20 cents.

The designs illustrated in our new Fashion Book are advance styles for the home dressmaker, and the woman or girl who desires to wear garments dependable for taste, simplicity and economy will find her desires fulfilled in our patterns. Price of the book 10 cents the copy.

FEWER CHILDREN GIVEN TO SOCIETY

Desirable Falling Off in Recent Years, Says J. J. Kelso.

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 2.—(By Canadian Press).—"In recent years there has been a desirable falling off in the number of commitments of children as wards of the various Children's Aid Societies", reports J. J. Kelso of the Ontario Government Children's Department. 'From an average of one thousand per annum, the number has dropped to seven hundred. This is due, to some extent, to the Mothers' Allowance Act but more to the better organized social work that realizes the child's inalienable right to its own home. There is still much more to be done in this direction."

The Everlasting Masculine.

Husbands are people who get peeved when you don't pay any attention to them, and mad when you make any suggestions.

And suspicious if you look at any one else and nervous if you don't.

And nasty if you think about clothes and cynical if you don't.

And worried if you don't have a lot of woman friends, and bored or even jealous if you do.

And indifferent when you feel loving, and affectionate whenever you are in a hurry or they need a shave.

And disagreeable if you show any money sense and peachy if you don't.

Yes, husbands are people who never think you are overdoing when you scrub around the house for weeks and weeks, but are always sure of it if they find you have been out two days in succession.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorncliffe

SHE DESCRIBES A YOUNG GIRL'S PARTY DRESS.

I was called into consultation yesterday on the designing of a young girl's party frock.

The mother, who is a good client of Madame's, was having a fitting and chatting with me as I stood by to watch the results.

"My clothes' problems are cared for with so little effort to me, when Madame gets on the job, that I never have to worry about them," she remarked. Then she sighed and said:

"But I have a young daughter who has just reached the age where her clothes present great difficulties."

"What age?" I asked.

"She's fifteen and quite youthful for her years," the mother answered. "The trouble is, however, that her clothes ideas are not youthful."

I have heard mothers complain before of their young daughters wanting to dress beyond their years, and knew that this young lady probably wanted more frills than should be her allotted share.

"I tell her that I want her to have something left to look forward to when she gets her real coming-out party frocks," the mother said. "The point of conflict just now is a frock for a dancing school party that is to be at night.

"It's her first evening party."

I learned that the young girl had her heart set on silver lace, and the mother had decided on her having it was so pleased to give her the drawing, as she has always been very nice to me when she has come in the shop.

Flesh Crepe and Silver Lace Make This Charming and Youthful Frock.

This was enough, and I took a pencil and started to work to design the most youthful frock I could think of, and still one which used silver lace.

"I think your daughter would look well in flesh crepe de Chine," I said. "And I know I can think of a frock of flesh crepe de Chine and silver lace, which still manages to be simple in appearance."

The mother was delighted, and the frock above is the one I suggested. The two tiers of lace make youthful sleeves, and the skirt is made of rows and rows of silver lace.

The mother was delighted, and I

MANY MEETINGS HELD IN WARSAW

Various Societies Held Gatherings Recently in Dummer Villages.

WARSAW, Dec. 3.—The Presbyterian Ladies' Aid met last Thursday afternoon. There was the usual routine business.

The Presbyterian Sunday school will hold its annual entertainment before the public school closes.

The United Ladies' Aid held its social afternoon last Thursday. There was a good turn-out, and after devotional exercises, the ladies produced their fancy work, and plied their needles, while a very interesting little programme was given. While some of the numbers caused a good deal of laughter, they were all wholesome. Later, work was put away after closing prayer, chairs were drawn into a circle, and a most enjoyable half hour was spent over the social cup of tea. All was over by 4.30 p.m.

The afternoon was an innovation and many hope it will be repeated.

Miss Sage, teacher in Third Line school, is training her pupils for a concert to be held on Tuesday evening, December 22nd. On the closing afternoon of the Warsaw school, the pupils are to have a debate—"Resolved that we should open our doors to the Americans."

The U.F.W.O., held their annual meeting on Tuesday afternoon; the new officers are: President, Mrs. Rufus Payne; vice-President, Mrs. W. S. Anderson; Sec-Treasurer, Mrs. Harold Darling; Delegate to convention, Mrs. Fred Morgan.

The Club is helping get girls to attend the sewing and millinery class held by the Agricultural Department, in February.

The regular Woman's Institute meeting will be on Dec. 10th. The delegate to the convention will give her report, which should be interesting, as the convention was intensely so.

The U.F.O. held their annual meeting last Wednesday evening. New officers are: President, Rufus Payne; vice-President, David Miller; Sec-Treasurer, Harold Darling; Delegate to Convention, Fred Crowe. The bank handles the money. Efforts are being made to have a good number for the class in agriculture.

The Anglicans gave their annual entertainmen on Wednesday evening. The Lakefield Anglican Glee Club supplied the music, and delighted the audience. The home talent were: Mrs. Percy Lloyd and Dorcas and Robert Selby, who recited. Refreshments were served at the close. There was a good attendance.

Charles Foster and Ralph Selby attended a dairymans' banquet in Belleville on Wednesday evening.

The Hockey Club gave a dance on Friday evening which was well attended.

The opening social gathering of the Young Peoples' Society, was attended by about forty, but last Friday's Devotional evening had too many counter attractions and was not so well attended; those who were present, felt they had done well to go. Rev. H. B. Herrington and the members, also a solo by Mrs. Herrington.

Probably the only women in the United States who make a business of rat extermination are Helen A. Caldwell and Anna May Wright. The two girls, who hail from Virginia, have travelled through 33 States, and by the use of scientific methods have rid many cities of unwelcome rodents.

CHRISTMAS BAZAAR HELD AT BETHANY

Ladies' Anglican Church Conducted Successful Sale of Work.

BETHANY, Dec. 3.—The annual Christmas bazaar of the W. A. of St. Paul's Church was held Saturday, November 28, in the town hall. The many booths were tastefully and prettily decorated with streamers in pink and white with colored butterflies floating about.

There were many beautiful articles for sale, embroidered pillow cases, towels, table linen, etc. A good many useful articles were also to be found in socks, mittens, aprons, large and small, besides numerous smaller things suitable for small Christmas gifts. A farmer's table laden with all sorts of appetizing things such as chickens, ducks, butter, eggs, fruit, flowers, syrup, vegetables, all kinds of delicious home-made cooking, etc., was in charge of Mrs. Arthur Flack and Mrs. W. H. McCartney. These ladies were certainly doing a rushing business. Mrs. Dr. Hamilton, Mrs. Alice McGrath and Mrs. Ida Cascadden were in charge of the fancy goods booth, while Miss Flo Smith and Miss Laura Morton were busily engaged at the booth where smaller articles were to be purchased, such as centrepieces, vanity sets, handkerchiefs, etc.

The Girls' Guild had a dainty candy booth where all sorts of home-made candy was to be purchased. This was in charge of Miss Iva Smith; Miss Nellie Williams and Miss Mildred Smith, who were in charge of the fish pond, were kept busy helping the little tots to fish. The tea room, which was divided off from the rest with evergreens and streamers, was also quite an attraction. The daintily set tables accommodated four and almost the whole village took tea here for a change. The tea room was in charge of Mrs. John Sisson, Mrs. R. W. Price and Mrs. Ed. Swanson.... Among the young ladies who assisted were Miss Mae Magill, Miss Nesbitt, Miss Fierheller, Miss Hazel Swanson and Miss Violet Tompson; Mr. J. J. Preston was treasurer and occupied a table near the door. A number of rising young musicians provided the musical side of the programme and kept the piano busy during the afternoon and evening.

The ladies deserve great praise on the success of their bazaar. It is one of the largest bazaars held in this district and is always well patronized as everything sold is of the best and always brings good prices. The bazaar Saturday was of a quieter nature than other years, owing to the sudden and unexpected bereavement in two prominent Anglican families recently.

A Narrow Escape.

Mr. Wellington Fallis had a miraculous escape from injury and perhaps death the other day. He was drawing railway ties when the one o'clock C. N. R. train pulled into the station. He, with his team, was about to cross the track when the train came to a standstill with the engine just touching the planks of the crossing. Everything looked O.K. for a safe crossing but apparently the horses did not like the look of the steaming monster so close to them so they reared on their hinb feet, then bolted, giving the wagon such a twist that in almost a second the wagon was twisted in two and ties were scattered everywhere, the horses on their backs with feet in the air. It was almost impossible for anyone to touch the frightened beasts to get them righted and for a few minutes everything looked in chaos. Mr. Fallis came off safely with only a slightly bruised leg, but otherwise pretty well shaken in nerves. The horses never got a scratch through it all.

Died.—On Saturday, November 28, 1925, Russell, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Gervan Mulligan, Lifford, at the age of eight months. The funeral on Sunday was to St. Mary's cemetery, the service being in charge of Rev. A. Poulter. Only the immediate relatives and friends of the family were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Ward, of Peterboro', were in the village on Saturday visiting friends and attended the Anglican bazaar.

Mr. Sam. McKinnon, of Cambray, was in the village over the week-end visiting his brother James, and other friends.

Rev. Harry Wilkinson, of Pontypool, was a visitor to the village on Friday.

Mrs. P. C. Brown spent several days in Toronto visiting her cousin, Mrs. Sarah Gray returning home on Friday night.

YOUR HEALTH

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

Every country, every State, every mother has a peculiar way of dressing the baby. In one locality the swaddling clothes are used. In another, the baby goes almost naked.

In the one place the baby is rolled up and made into a sort of bundle. In another, the infant has a breech-cloth and nothing else.

Is there one "proper way" to dress a baby?

There are certain general principles which I think will appeal to you. The first one is, to dress the baby so that he has perfect freedom of motion.

Exercise is just as important to an infant as it is to an adult. Indeed, it is more important. To get symmetrical development to make the muscles strong, to cause the digestive organs to work as they should, there must be muscular effort every day and almost every hour of the day.

It isn't for amusement alone that the baby draws up his knees and flexes his thighs. He kicks up his heels and rolls about, not for fun, but because this muscular activity is essential to his growth and well-being.

When you dress your baby, bear in mind the importance of leaving his limbs free enough not to interfere with every desired and desirable movement. Any manner of swaddling which prevents free action of the legs, arms and body is a wrong way to dress the little chap.

The next thing to remember is that a baby's skin is very delicate, easily irritated and if irritated, extremely painful. The cry which may be thought to be due to a bad temper or serious illness, may, after all, be nothing more than a protest against the scratching and rubbing of a tender skin.

In dressing the baby the clothing should be soft, pliable and light. It should be selected with reference to the comfort of the tiny youngster and not chosen for its scenic effect.

The third thing I would mention in connection with clothing the baby is to suit the garments to the season and to the day. They must be warm enough to keep off the chill. They must not be so hot and heavy as to drive the child into a perspiration.

Warmth is essential to guard against colds, bronchitis and diarrhea. But the clothing must not be so heavy as to lead to sweating, moisture of the garment and then chilling of the surfaces. In this way, as well as from under-dressing, cold and other forms of illness may develop.

It takes a lot of study and good sense to dress a baby. Think about the needs of the infant and be governed accordingly.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES.

F. B. Q.—What should a girl of 13, 5 feet 2 inches tall, weigh?

2—What do you advise for excessive perspiration under the arms?

A.—She should weigh about 108 pounds.

2—Hot water compresses applied under the arms for half an hour daily should help this condition.

* * *

L. A. S. Q.—What will benefit muscular rheumatism and neuritis in my left arm which is stiff in the shoulder?

A.—Such a condition is probably due to infection in the system. Application of heat and massage should give relief until further treatment can be advised. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

* * *

M. E. Q.—I am pale and losing weight and have a heavy, sore feeling in my stomach. I also suffer from bad headaches and backaches. What would you advise?

A.—Have the gastro-intestinal tract X-rayed and then proper treatment can be advised.

* * *

D. F. Q.—What causes the inside of my nose to be sore?

A.—This is probably due to a catarrhal condition. Send self-addressed stamped envelope for full particulars and repeat your question.

* * *

L. G. A. Q.—Do you advise cod liver oil tablets, or other oils for a weak stomach?

2.—Are fruit juices harmful in case of rheumatism?

A.—I have observed good effects from such tablets.

2—No, fruit juices are not harmful in such cases.

* * *

Wm. O. Q.—Will —— or any other deodorant remove the odor of perspiring feet? If so are they harmful? What would you advise? I am a boy of 16.

A.—Soaking the feet twice a day in a hot antiseptic solution such as 5,000 parts water to 1 part bichloride of mercury or potassium permanganate solution, should help to overcome this trouble. Since I am not familiar with the preparation you mention I cannot advise you about its benefits.

Dr. Copeland will answer for readers of this paper questions on medicinal, hygiene and sanitation subjects that are of general interest. Where the subject of a letter is such that it cannot be published in this column, Dr. Copeland will, when the question is a proper one, write you personally if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is enclosed. Address "all enquiries" to Dr. Royal S. Copeland, in care of this office.

VICKS VAPORUB

AT THE FUNERAL OF RICHTHOFEN, GERMAN AIR ACE

Germany's national hero of the great war is no unknown soldier, but Baron von Richthofen, greatest of Germany's aviators, who was shot down by Capt. R. Roy Brown, D.S.O., formerly of Carleton Place, but now of Toronto. Richtofen's body was recently taken to Germany from France and buried with reverence and honor in the Invaliden cemetery in Berlin. The photo on the left shows the airman's mother and brother at the funeral. On the right the casket is seen covered with wreaths before the burial. The seat of Richtofen's machine is a war trophy at the military institute here.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silvar

DORIS HAS A CHAT WITH MRS. DEER MOUSIE.

Doris held her breath, for fear of frightening the pretty little creature running along the branch of the tree.

"Well, of all things," she mused creeping closer so she could get a better look at the pretty furry creature. "That's the smallest squirrel I have ever seen. Goodness, I just wish Happy Giggles was——"

"Did I hear you speak my name?" laughed a merry voice and a dear little elfin hopped down beside Doris and bowed very politely.

"Indeed, you did, Happy Giggles," Doris laughed softly. "Please glance up in that tree and tell me what kind of a squirrel that is? It's so very tiny, and has such a queer looking tail for a squirrel."

"It certainly has a queer looking tail for a squirrel," chuckled the elfin, and he blew on his magic whistle. The little creature glanced down and seeing Happy Giggles beside Doris, beckoned them to come up.

"I'd gladly come down, but I have the children to mind until Daddy Deer Mousie comes home," she said. "Please come up and bring your little friend, Happy Giggles."

This pleased Doris and she and the elfin were soon seated on the limb beside Mama Deer Mousie.

"What a Pretty Mousie!"

"Funny, I called you a squirrel," Doris laughed. "What a pretty little Mousie you are. My, your little fawn colored dress and pretty white feet don't look anything at all like the Mousie family we have in our barn."

"They can't boast of as pretty a tail as mine either," squeaked Mama Deer Mousie. "See, it's fawn color on the top side and soft white on the underneath side. Then, too, if you'll look closely, you'll see I have lovely soft hair on my tail and I understand the Barn Mousie hasn't any hair on her tail!"

"Well, I used to live in the barn, too. Daddy and I had our first home in your Daddy's big barn. From there we moved to a hollow log in the ground not far from here."

"Yes, then from there, you made a home in an old stump," laughed Happy Giggles."

"Remember when Daddy and I raised our family in that old bird's nest in the bushes?" laughed Mama Deer Mousie. "We even built a roof over it with just a tiny doorway on the underneath side. It was lovely."

"But come and peek into our little home we have now," and Mama Deer Mousie led Doris and Harry Giggles over to a hollow in the limb. There tucked in the dearest, soft, cozy nest rested five little baby mice. "This used to belong to Daddy and Mama Mousie. "We saw them leaving and we moved right in. We'll just stay all winter. Our store room has some supplies in it."

"But what will you do, if the supplies give out before Spring?" asked Doris. "You can't run around in the snow can you?"

"Goodness yes," laughed Mama Deer Mousie. "You see we are so very light, our feet don't sink into the snow. When our store rooms begin to look empty, we go out for more food. We eat seeds, nuts, insects and meat when we can get it."

"Then I'll see that your little family is well cared for," laughed Doris.

Just then her Mama called her into the house for lunch, and Doris, bidding her new friend goodby, hurried into the house.

SHOT DOWN RICHTHOFEN

Capt. A. Roy Brown, D.S.O., former R.N.A.S., of 25 Wrenson road, Toronto, who this week tells for the first time how he shot down Baron Manfred von Richtofen while in an attack from the air, above the German ace. The story is told at this time because, when the remains of the Baron were recently removed from France to Germany, a German spy spread the yarn that the ace had lanhed back of the allies' line and had been shot on the ground. It was also claimed that an Australian gunner had brought down the baron, but this was disproved at an enquiry. The seat of the German's plane is in the museum of the Royal Military Institute.

Her Face Was Covered With Large, Red Pimples

Miss Greta Carlisle, 23 Leonard St., Brantford, Ont., writes:—"A short while ago, my face was completely covered with large red pimples, and it seemed that it was almost impossible for me to get rid of them, as nothing I took seemed to do me any good.

One day I noticed an advertisement of

and I will never regret the day I bought it, as, now, my face is entirely cleared up of blotches and pimples of every kind."

WHERE THE POLICE FORCE USES FANS.

We would undoubtedly be a bit shocked to see the traffic policeman at the corner of Fifth avenue and Forty-second street, in New York, pull out a fan and begin to ply it as he signalled the traffic to go or stop. But that is by no means an infrequent sight in Peking on a Summer day.

A fluttering of fans is the universal symptom of a hot day in China. The fan serves any number of purposes. It is used of course, to keep the air moving and create a cool breeze. Then it is used to ward off flies and dust, and as a screen against the too brilliant rays of the sun.

Even the coolies going about their work, or carrying heavy burdens upon their backs, ply the fan busily with one hand as they go. Soldiers in the midst of their drill, draw fans from their bosoms and pause to use them.

That is why the Chinese have fans of such exquisite and delightful beauty. They have developed the business of manufacturing fans to an art. They have definite types of fans for definite purposes and stations of life. The true Chinese would never use a fan with a frame of black lacquer because black is significant of impurity. Red, on the other hand, is an emblem of joy and it would not be becoming for a Chinese to go about flaunting his joy in the face of others.

As a general rule, the frames are made of bamboo, uncolored, of sandalwood or ivory. Across these sticks is stretched the fabric of the fan itself, either silk or oiled paper.

These are the ordinary fans, but there are also fans that serve double purposes. There are those with maps on them. And there are fans that conceal daggers and fans made of iron.

The fans of China are justly famed throughout the world. And there are few things more charming to look upon than a dainty Chinese lady in her colorful costume, wielding her beautiful fan with easy grace.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 4.

Judging by the naga tive lunar conflagrations, this is likely to be a day of adverse conditions, both in business and in personal affairs. The unfriendly position of Jupiter warns against speculative enterprises and urges that all money be protected. New projects may be considered, but postponed constructive effort is advised. Those in the employment of others are enjoined to be very careful of their positions, since employment is under a hostile sway, as are heart and home affiliations.

Those whose birthday it is are under the prospect of a hazardous year, with the money jeopardized by speculative investment, ill-advised loans and extravagance. Those in employment are warned to be cautious and all should safeguard the domestic and affectional relations. A child born on this day should have the virtues of prudence, frugality and economy instilled early in life, as it may be prone to excessive generosity and prodigality, with a tendency to muddle its affairs as well as its employment.

Can you look your tongue in the face?

Do you get up in the morning with a nasty taste in your mouth and a dark-brown coated tongue, that you shudder to look at in the glass?

Do you enjoy the real flavour of what you eat and drink and smoke? Or has that "coppery" taste got into everything?

If so, it is because your digestive system is out of order. A furred tongue is one of Nature's ways of indicating that all is not as it should be. In all probability you do not get enough fresh air or exercise, are sitting down nearly all day, work too hard, worry too much and snatch hasty, unsuitable meals at midday.

This state of affairs cannot easily be avoided under modern conditions of life, but Nature makes no allowance for abuse of her laws. Sooner or later she rebels. The first sign is the coated tongue; then follow headaches, depression, constipation, and all the other ills arising out of a disordered liver and kidneys.

It is a duty that you owe to yourself to quicken up the action of these organs, to clear your blood, gently and surely to cleanse the impurities from your system. You can do this by taking Kruschen Salts. Kruschen is a combination of six salts, all of which are necessary to keep your body in perfect health. If you lived a vigorous, open-air life, your system would be able to extract these salts from your food. As it is, you require Kruschen. Just enough to cover a 10 cent piece taken every morning in your first cup of coffee or tea, will soon make a new man of you. You will wake up in the morning with a clean pink tongue, feeling properly refreshed by your night's sleep, bright-eyed and alert, ready to attack another day's work and another day's play.

It is a duty that you owe to yourself to look your tongue in the face every morning.

BOYNE CLUB HELD DEBATE ON ANIMALS

Points Brought Out Showed Cow More Useful Than Horse.

A very interesting debate took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bertrand, George Street, on Tuesday evening between members of the Boys' Boyne Club, the losing team providing the supper. The debate was, "Which is the most useful Animal to the Farmer, the Cow or the Horse?" Mr. J. Wilson championed the cow and Mr. W. Bertrand the horse. Each captain had five men and they were allowed five minutes each for their papers. At the end of the debate the judges counted up the points and Mr. J. Wilson's team won by a large majority for the cow. Mr. Bertrand's team lost and had to provide supper, consisting of a plentiful supply of pork and beans, along with other good things kindly got ready by the hostess, Mrs. Bertrand. After partaking of a good supper the boys sang "For they are jolly good fellows," and gave three rousing cheers for the cow.

ARTICLE No. 15

"When should the declarer lead trumps," is a question that is frequently asked. As a general rule, don't lead trumps until you have established your long suit, unless your trump holding is so strong that you can lead trumps and still retain control. Such hands, however, play themselves and the difficulty usually arises when the trump strength is or may be evenly divided between the declarer and his opponents. It often happens that the declarer has been forced to bid in response to his partner's informatory double and has only a four card suit, often without top honors. Such hands as these offer many difficulties, even for the experienced players, so any analysis of such hands should be interesting and instructive. The hand published as a problem in the preceding article was of this type. It is as follows:

Answer to Problem No. 9

Hearts—Q, 9, 3	Y	Hearts—A, J, 10, 7, 2
Clubs—10, 9, 4, 3	A B	Clubs—A
Diamonds—8, 3	Z	Diamonds—K, Q, 4
Spades—Q, 7, 4, 3		Spades—A, 10, 8, 2

Score, YZ 16, AB 10, rubber game. Z dealt and bid one no-trump, A and Y passed and B doubled. Z passed, A bid two spades, Y and B passed and Z bid two no-trump. A and Y passed, B bid three spades, Z doubled and all passed. If Y opened the six of clubs, how should A plan the play of the combined hands? A should figure Z with at least four spades to the king jack. Z would not have been justified in bidding two no-trump and doubling three spades with any less holding. He also should hold the king of hearts, the ace of diamonds and the king of clubs. It should be apparent, therefore, that A should not lead trumps. Z's trump holding is much stronger than his own and in addition, YZ's club suit is established. For those very cogent reasons, A should establish his heart suit before he leads trumps. At trick two, therefore, A should lead a low heart from B's, the dummy's hand. Z will be forced to win this trick and what can he lead. If he leads a club, A should trump in B's hand with the deuce of spades and lead a low spade through Z's hand. If Z plays a low spade, A should play the queen and then lead hearts, forcing Z to trump. No matter how Z plays the hand, he cannot win more than two spade tricks, one heart trick and one diamond trick. The hands of all four players are as follows:

	Hearts—6, 4 Clubs—Q, 8, 7, 6, 5, 2 Diamonds—10, 7, 6, 5 Spades—5
Hearts—Q, 9, 3 Clubs—10, 9, 4, 3 Diamonds—8, 3 Spades—Q, 7, 4, 3	Y A B Z	Hearts—A, J, 10, 7, 2 Clubs—A Diamonds—K, Q, 4 Spades—A, 10, 8, 2
	Hearts—K, 8, 5 Clubs—K, J Diamonds—A, J, 9, 2 Spades—K, J, 9, 6

See what happens if A should lead the ace and a low spade after winning the first trick. The lesson to learn from this hand is not to lead trumps until you have established your long suit.

Here's another hand that is an example of good play that comes up frequently enough to make a study of it well worth while. Think it over and compare your results with the analysis that will be given in the next article.

Problem No. 9

	Hearts—7, 2 Clubs—10, 5, 3 Diamonds—K, 8, 7 Spades—J, 8, 7, 5, 3
	Y A B Z
	Hearts—A, K, Q, 9 Clubs—K, Q, 8, 7 Diamonds—A, 10, 9 Spades—K, 10

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and bid one no-trump. A and Y passed and B bid two spades. Z bid two no-trump, A and Y passed and B bid three diamonds. Z now bid three hearts, A passed, Y bid three no-trump and all passed. A opened the six of clubs. How should Z figure out the cards held by his opponents, both from the bidding and the opening lead of the six of clubs? How should he plan the play of the hand so as to score three odd, game and rubber? Think it over carefully.

OUTLOOK FOR FUTURE OF CANADA SHOWS BRIGHT PROSPECTS FOR DEVELOPMENTS OF ALL SORTS

Sir John Willison Addresses Life Insurance Presidents on Conditions.

NO FAIR COMPARISON.

Growth of Canada in Past Cannot Be Compared With That of U. S. A.

There is no fair basis of comparison between the growth of the United States and that of Canada or between any achievement of the Republic as related to any achievement of the Dominion. This great commonwealth of States was founded nearly 150 years ago. For more than a century the United States shut Canada out of the eyes of Europe. The Old World knew that the Thirteen Colonies had organized as a new nation in a New World and proclaimed a new gospel of freedom. To the Old World the British North American Provinces were a land of ice and snow, of deep forests and sterile plains. Down to 1867 Canada was a group of scattered disunited and comparatively unimportant colonies. The adoption of a constitution does not of itself make a nation. It takes time to develop national spirit and national cohesion. We had no West until 1870 and no railway connection with the Pacific until 1885. We still had to destroy the legend that the West was unfit for human habitation and must for all rime be reserved for hunters and trappers. For only forty years have we had physical unity; perhaps not even yet have we full unity of spirit. It is true that again and again we have cherished expectations that have not been realized. In comparison with the United States, for reasons which have been suggested, our growth in wealth and population has been retarded. For this result we may have some responsibility but in the main it was inevitable. But if we have not made as much progress as was expected, when we think of all that has been overcome we realize that the story is one of fine endeavor and solid achievement.

Annexation Impossible.

One thing that has been settled is the political destiny of Canada. The Provinces, united in 1867 under a common Government, will not separate from one another nor from the Mother Country. Sir Wilfrid Laurier once said of the British Empire, "You can discuss problems of improvement; there is no occasion to discuss problems of existence." We could not from considerations of self-respect alone seek admission to the United States. We set ourselves more than half a century ago to make a nation. To confess failure would be to deny to Canadians in their own country the qualities which they exhibit in every other country. We could join the United States only as a defeated and conquered people; defeated by our own inability to work together for common purposes, conquered by want of faith in ourselves and lack of confidence in resources and opportunities which the gods might covet. The name of Canadian would lose its place of honor in the world and all that was won by sacrifice and endurance on Old World battlefields would have a lessened significance if not be utterly thrown away. Even Americans, who now hold us in respect, would think of us, if we sought absorption in the Republic, as a people who were unequal to their destiny and as a subject race in the Amcieans family. The Canadian national experiment would go down to posterity as the great failure in human history and those responsible for the failure as a spineless and futile generation. Fortunately, however, we face no such prospect nor are we required to make any such decision. As our public men tell us so often, We are a nation and shall continue to be a nation, forever increasing in confidence, in unity, in strength and in dignity, in the respect and goodwill of our American neighbors who wish us well and great as we are well and in influence and authority in the British Commonwealth.

What then is the immediate outlook for Canada? The figures of trade for 9,000,000 people are impressive and commanding. In 1901, as pointed out by Sir Thomas White, for ten years Minister of Finance in Canada, the total annual production of the Dominion was valued at $1,000,000,000, in 1910 at $2,000,000,000, and in 1923 at $4,000,000,000. For 1924 the estimate is $4,500,000,000. The volume of external trade as represented by imports and exports has increased sixfold since 1900 and the savings of the people sevenfold in the same period. No doubt these figures must be considered in relation to changing prices and occasional exceptional conditions but they nevertheless represent a steady and encouraging growth in the trade and wealth of the Dominion. It is true that the Great War laid very heavy obligations upon the Canadian people. When the war came the national debt was $360,000,000; it is now nearly two and a half billions, while the aggregate net debt of the Provinces is estimated at $650,000,000. But the greater portion of our national, Provincial and municipal indebtedness is owing to Canadian investors and therefore the obligation is by no means so onerous as if the securities were held abroad. We have, too, annual deficits on the National Railway System of $50,000,000 which make reduction of debt and expenditure a difficult problem for governments. But there is every ground for confidence that the deficits will decrease with increase of immigration, extension of settlement and growth of towns and cities and that a great railway system built with cheap money may become ultimately a very valuable national asset. No doubt it is true that the man who makes two blades of grass grow where one grew before is a benefactor of his kind but there is less to be said for governments which build three railways where two are more than enough.

Wheat Evils Less.

A year or two ago a representative of Minnesota laid before Congress a statement in behalf of Western American wheat growers. He declared that when the yield per acre in the spring wheat area of the United States and in Canada was applied to figures of cost per acre, the greatly higher cost per bushel in the United States became apparent. "The average yield," he said, "in the three Provinces of Canada, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, in 1923, is 20.6 bushels per acre. The average yield in Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota, and Montana is 9.5 bushels per acre. If the cost of production per acre were the same in both countries, the cost per bushel in this country would be more than 100 per cent higher than the cost of production in Canada." There may be in this the flavor of the advocate who desires to have maintained or increased the duty on wheat from Canada but even if that be admitted the figures have significance.

There is a great and increasing production of grain in the Canadian Prairie Provinces, there are vast grain areas still untilled and there is the likelihood that wheat prices will not fall again in this generation to the level of fifteen or twenty years ago. It must be remembered, too, that in ten years the United States will have added ten or twelve millions to its population, that its food production may not then exceed the home demand and that a great competitor of the farmers of Canada in export markets will have disappeared. Mr. Coolidge said not long ago, "We are not nearly a generation ahead of the time when the United States will witness a reversal of its relation to world agriculture. In a very few years," he said, "the natural increase of our population and the inevitable tendency to industrialization will place us among the nations producing a deficit rather than a surplus of agricultural staples." He added, "We were fairly on the verge of that condition when the World War gave a temporary and artificial stimulation to agriculture which ultimately brought disastrous consequences." He was convinced that in wheat and meat production the scales must soon turn against the United States. "We shall be," he said, "not only an agricultural importing nation but in the lives of many who are now among us we are likely to be one of the greatest of the agricultural buying nations."

It may be said that Russia will have recovered and that its contribution of food supplies to Europe will at least offset any decline in American exports. But Russia has an enormous population, and whatever else may come out of the revolution it does seem likely that a freer and happier people will finally emerge, with a higher standard of living and a greater home demand for Russian products. Distance gives Canada an advantage over Australia, and we should be able to hold our present relative position in competition with the Argentine Republic.

Exports To Orient.

In 1922-23 there were exported through Vancouver alone 770,000 bushels of wheat to China and 2,610,000 bushels to Japan. In the following year exports to China increased to 5,206,000 bushels and to Japan to 7,058,000 bushels. During the same period exports of flour to Hong Kong increased from 99,000 barrels to 303,000 barrels and to China from 270,000 barrels to 504,000. China itself is a great wheat growing country. But notwithstanding this there is an increasing import from abroad. This increase is attributed partly to greater cost of rice and partly to a change in the taste of the people. There is great room for expansion in a population of over 400,000,000 which has hitherto consumed about two bushels of wheat per head compared with six bushels per head in Great Britain. All this means that Canadian wheat and other food products should secure a more commanding position in world markets, that the crop area in the West should be steadily enlarged, and that through diminishing supplies from other countries prices should be maintained. It means, too, that Canadian farm lands will increase in value and the Dominion become still more attractive to homeseekers from other countries.

Openings For Immigrants.

Again, as one looks around the world and remembers that the United States has adopted a policy toward immigration which approaches exclusion, one realizes that only two countries remain which are likely to find high favor with British people. These are Canada and Australia. There will, no doubt, still be a movement of population to the Argentine, but who doubts that British people will desire to go where their own language is spoken? There never has been any great outward movement of British people to any countries save the United States and the Dominions and unquestionably Canada and Australia would have far larger populations if the United States for more than a century had not kept an open door for the people of Great Britain and Europe. Moreover for the first time Great Britain is encouraging and even subsidizing emigration to the Dominions, not necessarily out of sheer concern for the Dominions, but because onerous domestic conditions compel the Old Country to find homes elsewhere for a portion of its surplus population. These are vital facts of the situation and one cannot but think the time will soon come when the growth of population in Canada will be as great and conceivably greater than we may desire.

There are, too, increasing evidences that the policy of inter-Imperial preferences will become the accepted policy of the Empire. The Baldwin Government manifestly is going as far as its pledges to the electors of the United Kingdom will permit to give advantages to the Dominions. There is a division in Labor over Preference and Protection. There does not seem to be any other adequate remedy for unemployment in Great Britain than a tariff which will give some protection against the inflow of foreign goods and enable the Imperial Government to bargain for the reduction of foreign tariffs. There is, too, another reason which cannot be left out of account. More and more the manufacturers of the United States, secure in a great home market, are giving the keenest attention to foreign markets. What has to be recognized is that the United States will become less and less the competitor of the food-producing countries in foreign markets and more and more the competitor of Europe in the export of manufactures. For these and other reasons one reaches the conclusion that Great Britain will turn toward the policy of trade preferences throughout the Empire and will exert her best energies to people Canada and Australia and South Africa in the confidence, which the statistics of Imperial trade justify, than in the British Dominions she will enjoy an advantage over foreign competitors. With a preference in British markets would come great advantages to the Dominions, such a stimulus to immigration as could proceed from no other policy, and with increase of population in the overseas British countries they could take upon their shoulders some greater portion of the common defense of Empire and to the bond of sentiment would be added the bond of interest as the final guarantee of the permanence of the Imperial partnership.

New Era of Progress.

All these facts and conditions suggest a new era of progress and prosperity in Canada. One believes that the next quarter of a century will witness the greatest expansion in settlement and production not only in the life of the Dominion but in the history of the Continent. It must be remembered, too, that for the most part the United States has had its amazing development through the exploitation of just such resources as Canada possesses in such abundant measure. We have a pulp and paper industry which exports to an annual value of $15,000,000. We have now an annual production of gold in excess of $300,000,000, and in Porcupine and Rouyn two of the greatest gold fields ever discovered. There is abundance of coal in Nova Scotia, Alberta and British Columbia and an increasing national determination to supply the Canadian market from the mines of the coal-producing Provinces. More and more we are giving attention to scientific and industrial research and to all practicable measures to discover and develop the natural resources of the Dominion. Dr. A. P. Coleman of the University of Toronto, a sober and responsible authority, has said: "The last twenty-five years have seen the discovery of the Yukon placers, the Cobalt Silver region and the Porcupine gold region, the operation of the Creighton nickel mine, much the greatest in the world, and the opening up of the great coal fields of Alberta. It is natural to expect that the next quarter of a century, with a rapidly growing population, and so wide a stretch of virgin territory, will see equally important discoveries, and there is no evident reason why Canada should not in time rival its great neighbor, the United States, as a mining country." Of the grain-producing capacity of Canada all the world knows. For this year the total wheat yield is estimated at 422,000,000 bushels of a total value of $600,000,000 or $700,000,000. And there are many millions of virgin acres in the West still to come under the plow and room for a great increase in the farming population of all the older Provinces. This is the immediate situation in Canada and this the confident outlook of the Canadian people, although they are hindered by professional pessimists and now and again discouraged by failure to realize too sanguine expectations.

Nor were Canadians ever more anxious to be good neighbors to the United States, to interpret the British Empire to the American people in terms of amity and good-will and to share in the blessing which falls upon the peacemakers among mankind. If it be true, as it is, that Canadians, of whom you take far too many, become good and loyal citizens of this Republic, it is just as true that Americans who come to Canada constitute one of the best elements of our population, industrious, enterprising, well-living and well-doing and loyal to the institutions under which they live. "Partners in Peace" was the title of a little book I published a year or so ago, interpreting as best I could the relations which exist and ought to exist between the United States, Great Britain and Canada and partners in peace on believes will remain through the generations.

MILK BOTTLES WERE STREWN

Delivery Horse in Omemee Frightened By C.N.R. Train.

A.Y.P.A. MEETING.

OMEMEE, Dec. 3.—Runaway horses are beginning to be quite popular in Omemee. Only a week or so ago a team was reported and on Saturday Mr. Wilbert Paul, one of the local milkmen, had occasion to cry over spilled milk, had he not known the old proverb. Mr. Paul had left his horse untied, as he had done many times previously and had occasion to go into the C.N.R. station, where he was detained. An approaching train frightened the beast which was nowhere to be seen when the owner appeared, but a heap of milk bottles among them being several broken ones that told the tale, and the delivery waggon was smashed, the entire rim being taken from the spokes of the wheel. The horse was caught only a short distance away.

A.Y.P.A. Meeting.

Between fifty and sixty members met in Christ Church basement on Monday evening, Nov. 30 at the A.Y.P.A. meeting. At the close of the business there was something of a pleasant surprise when Rev. E. R. James, of Newcastle, former pastor of Christ Church, addressed the meeting. He voiced his surprise at the large attendance and wished the branch every success.

Music was the order of the evening and the air was truly filled with the concord of sweet sounds. Mr. W. Clemett opened the programme with an excellent solo, after which Miss Helen MacKey and Miss Lenore Jamieson delighted the audience with a piano duet. A well-delivered recitation by Mr. J. Wilby afforded a variety at this juncture. A rousing chorus by Mr. L. Adams, Mr. W. Clemett, Mr. H. Cunningham and Mr. A. Adams was then enjoyed by all and when the prolonged applause had subsided, Miss Marion Dickson and Miss Ethel Stephenson charmed the listeners with an excellent vocal duet.

That the evening was well appreciated is evidenced in the fact that all members were heartily encored and speaks well for the committee responsible.

Preached at Brooklyn.

Rev. E. W. Rowland motored to Brooklyn and preached Anniversary Services in the United Church on Sunday. Rev. Thomas Brown, of Lindsay, a former pastor on the Bethel circuit, took charge of Mr. Rowland's work in the Omemee church on Sunday morning, and taking for his text the passage of Scripture found in Luke 1, 66. "What manner of Child shall this be," delivered a very intellectual and inspiring discourse The evening service was in charge of Rev. Francis Johnston, also of Lindsay.

Miss D. Young, of Deseronto, has handed in her resignation to the Omemee school board, to take effect after Christmas. She has accepted a position in the Thorold graded school where she will have charge of the Jr. IV class only.

Congress at its coming session will be asked to take action on a proposal to erect a great stadium in Washington. The stadium is planned to have seating capacity of 100,000 and it designed to take a place among the great architectural monuments in the national capital.

AMENDMENT MADE JOKE AND BYWORD

Results Obtained By U. S. Government For Prohibition Are Criticized.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 3.—(Canadian Press).—Results obtained in prohibition enforcement by the present administratin were declared to have made the eighteenth amendment a "joke and a hissing byword among otherwise well disposed citizens." In an expression of views mailed to the White House to-day by the united committee for prohibition enforcement now in session here.

RAILWAYS HELPED FORM FRIENDSHIP

W. D. Robb Says They Are Important Factor in Keeping Peace.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3. (Canadian Press).—The railway has been an important factor contributing to the unbroken peace and friendship between Canada and the United States, says W. D. Robb, vice-president of Canadian National Railways. He is the speaker at to-day's meeting of the American Railway Development Association.

"Ignorance is the cause of much of the trouble in this world, and when it is dispelled there remains scant opportunity for misunderstanding," he said.

Rate Increase Made By Bank of England

LONDON, Dec. 3. — (United Press). — The bank rate was increased to-day from four to five per cent.

A decrease a few weeks ago was hailed as indicating improved conditions for the future in England.

Bank of England Rate Caused Disquiet in New York

NEW YORK, December 3. Canadian Press. — Speculative uneasiness over the local federal reserve re-discount policy, following a rise in the Bank of England's rate, exerted a temporarily disquieting influence on the stock market to-day, but failed to arrest the progress of constructive operations. Considerable doubt that the New York banks would follow the increase in London was aroused by reports that the Treasury officials found no immediate needs of a change here, while in certain financial quarters it was held that the market had already discounted the possible effect of a higher rate. More attention accordingly was paid to favorable business developments, including another sharp rise in grain prices and reports of a better demand for baking products. Early declines of 1 to 2 points in U. S. Steel and other leading industrials, were soon converted into corresponding gains and the entire market displayed moderate improvement.

Increased Firmness Shown But Mining Trade Fell Off

TORONTO. Dec. 3. (Canadian Press).—Increased firmness was shown on the Standard Mining Exchange to-day, despite a falling off in the volume of trading. Leading the market in strength and activity, Teck Hughes was sold up ten points at 241 and Tough Oakes advanced one at 54. Kirkland Lake, up five and a half at 74½, and Castle Trethewey, up six points, were prominent. Newray advanced two and a half, Canadian Lorrain two and Keeley five points. McKinley Darragh was active and opened strong, but closed the morning a half point lower at 22½. Atlas and Argonaut were also slightly lower.

Brazilian Was Strong Leading Toronto Exchange

TORONTO, Dec. 3 (Canadian Press)—The activity and strength of Brazilian was the feature of this morning's session of the Toronto Stock Exchange. There was a turnover of more than 1,200 shares of Brazilian and the stock reached 78, easing just a quarter of a point at the morning close for a net advance of a point and a half. Two other substantial advances were recorded. Laurentide Common was marked up two and three-quarter points at 86, and Canada Steamship Preferred two and a quarter points at 57. Coniagas, providing the bulk of the trading in the mines section, was sold up about fifty cents at $4.50. Greatly increased activity was shown throughout the list, but the market was not wholly firm. Among the few declines Mackay lost three-eighths and British Columbia Fishing a point.

Wheat Led Big Advance Shared By All Grains

CHICAGO, Dec. 3 (Canadian Press). — All round big fresh advances in value of every kind of grain took place today, with wheat in the lead. The chief immediate reason was the fact that Liverpool wheat quotations instead of showing an expected decline, went suddenly skyward. Immense buying in the wheat market here developed, especially on the part of houses with European and Canadian connections. All export offers of wheat overnight to Europe were said to have been accepted. Chicago opening prices, 1 1-4c to 4 1-2c higher, new style, December $1.75 to $1.76, and May $1.68 to $1.69 1-4, were followed by quick further upturns, December soaring to $1.77 1-4 and May to $1.71 1-2. Corn and oats took their cue largely from wheat strength. After opening 3-4c to 1 3-8c higher, May 83 to 83 3-8c, the corn market continued to mount, May touching 84 1-2.

Oats started 1 1-8c to 5-8c up, May 44 1-4 to 44 1-2. Later decided further advances were witnessed. Provisions joined in the general upturn of values in grain and in the hog market as well.

OFFICERS ELECTED BY BROTHERHOOD

Bro. R. N. Stewart Heads St. John's Chapter—Three New Members.

The annual meeting of St. John's Chapter, Brotherhood of St. Anerdw, was held on Tuesday evening, December 1, at St. John's Parish House.

The meeting opened with the usual opening exercises, led by the director, R. N. Stuart.

Three probationary members, Messrs. Stanger, Lyons and King, were proposed by the Director and seconded by Bro. W. E. Massey-Cooke. At the request of the Director, Bro. R. C. Blagrave explained to the probationary members the aims, duty and work of the Chapter, tracing its history from its beginning in the City of Chicago, its spread on this continent, and now it has reached England.

Work was then received and assigned.

The election of officers was as follows:

Director—Bro. R. N. Stuart.

Vice-Director—Bro. W. E. Massey-Cooke.

Secretary-Treasurer—Bro. H. E. Lang.

The meeting then closed with the regular closing exercises, led by the Director.

Leap From High Window Is Latest Election Stunt

KINGSTON, Dec. 3.—(Special.)—Something new in the line of election publicity "stunts" was enacted at Queen's University yesterday, when a masked student leaped from the second storey window of Fleming Hall, a distance of forty feet, into a life-saving net. Notices had been posted advertising the stunt and a big crowd of Queen's students gathered to boost their candidates in the Alma Mater elections.

The masked student was dressed in acrobatic regalia and was loudly applauded as he made his appearance at the second storey of the building. A number of students held the net and the stunt dare-devil made the jump without mishap.

PRETTY DESIGNS IN ART EXHIBIT

Hand-Painted Christmas Cards and Other Paintings Shown.

IN CONSERVATORY.

Among the dainty handiwork of the members of the Women's Art Association, exhibited in the studio of the Conservatory of Music on Saturday afternoon, were a number of lovely hand-painted Christmas cards and tally cards and a couple of small water-color pictures, done by Miss Maude Rush, a pretty example of pen painting in the branch of wild roses exhibited by Mrs. G. Coutts, a trio of old-style, interesting pieces of needlepoint shown by the convenor of the Exhibition, Mrs. N. H. Sutton, a hooked rug mat, the work of Mrs. H. E. Connolly, and some very pretty chip carving, in a tabouret and small boxes, the work of Miss Mamie Rogers.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

GET IT AT HOME.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

I was born and brought up in Peterborough, and lived here for a number of years before moving to Toronto, where I resided for about twelve years, returning to Peterborough some five or six years ago.

I had occasion to be in Toronto on a short visit the first part of this week with a friend of mine, and as I was familiar with shopping conditions in Toronto we agreed that we would see what we could do in the way of getting some classes of goods that we required at this season. To my surprise when our visit was over, we had not bought one dollar's worth, or secured any article in any of the stores in Toronto,—the reason for which was that we found we could do just as well in the stores of Peterborough as we could do in any store in Toronto. Having lived in Toronto, as above stated, I knew how to shop, and made every effort to see if I could do better than when shopping in Peterborough, and with the results as I have stated.

On thinking the matter over, I feel that in justice to our own merchants we should give them every opportunity to meet Toronto prices, and I am sure that if this is the case that more shopping will be done in Peterborough and less of our money going to Toronto for the upkeep of that city.

The only difference that I could find was that there was a greater selection from which to choose, but I know now that I can get what I want a home and at no greater cost.

Yours truly,
HOUSEKEEPER.

NEW LABOR TROUBLE FEARED IN SHANGHAI

Departure of Chekiang Troops Gives Chance to Labor Leaders.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 3.—(United Press). — New labor disturbances are feared in Shanghai as a result of the invasion of Kiangsu Province by Sun Chuanfang's Chekiang soldiers.

Efforts to re-open the headquarters of radical labor organizations are already being made. So far they have proved ineffective, the Chekiang officials refusing to sanction any activities by labor leaders while martial law is still in force in the Shanghair arear. One meeting, attended by approximately 5,000 students and laborers, has already been held, but it is said that further activities of this character will be curbed by the military authorities.

AMERICAN AGENTS AFTER DEPARTMENT

Decision of Japan To Use No U. S. Rails Causes Disturbance.

TOKIO, December 3. Canadian Press. — The statement of the railway department of the Japanese government, on November 26, that no United States rails would be used in its rail replacement programme, has caused disturbance in commercial circles here, and United States' steel agents have besieged the department.

THREE FINE CONCERTS.

Symphony Orchestra Announces a Series of Entertainments at the Popular Price of 3 For $1.00.

The Symphony Orchestra are working on a different plan this season, and will not try to finance by soliciting honorary memberships. Instead they are putting on a series of three concerts in the Conservatory of Music Hall, the first to be given on Tuesday, December 15th, the second in January and the third in February. Tickets good for all three concerts are now on sale at $1.00 for the series. The public can give their support by buying these tickes, which will give the orchestra the needed funds to carry on, and all ticket-holders big value for their dollar in the shape of three excellent entertainments. Under the hard working direction of Conductor Rupert Glidon, who is putting forth every effort to bring the organization to a high state of excellence, wonderful progress is being made, and the crowded house which should greet the orchestra on the evening of Tuesday, will certainly be proud that Peterboro is the home of so creditable a band of musicians.

Tickets are now on sale at Warne Drug Co., Kent's Drug Store and the Conservatory. Be liberal in your purchases, as the orchestra is in presenting so much for this low price—three high class concerts for $1.00.

MUSIC CLUB MET.

Influence of Early Church on Music Was Study Subject.

The regular meeting of the B Sharp Music Club was held Wednesday afternoon at Miss Adams' studio, 465 Weller St.

After the business of the meeting was completed, the study period started with a question box review, consisting of questions covering Lesson I of the text book, Standard History of Music. Lesson II was next taken up, in which was traced the influence of the early church on the growth of music from Pope Sylvester 330 A.D. to the time of Pope Gregory the Great about 600 A.D. The early Gregorian chants were illustrated by phonographic records.

The following program was given:

Rondo Villageois .....Dennee
Marguerite Kidd

Holidays ..... Gurlitt
Harry Marsh

Little Prelude .....Bach
Allison Gordon

The Swing...Adapted from Breslau
Margaret Lytle

Sam Weller in the Cellar.....
Markham Lee
Marion McLean

After the playing of musical games the meeting was brought to a close.

Ed. Clough, the big southpaw pitcher, who is to wear the uniform of the St. Louis Cardinals next year, won 23 out of 35 games pitched for the Forth Smith Western Association team last season.

TUXIS SQUARE BOYS HELD SKATING PARTY

Entertained C.G.I.T. Groups and Cavanville Boys.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 3.—The boys of the Tuxis Square and the Senior Trail Rangers provided a jolly evening on Tuesday when they entertained the C.G.I.T. group, and the members of the C.S.E.T. from Cavanville at a skating party, over 40 being in attendance.

The party met at the church and proceeded to Attwool and Shepherd's pond about 8 p.m., where, in spite of rather soft ice, a good time was enjoyed for two or more hours, when all returned to the starting place, and did full justice to a supper of baked beans, bread and butter, cake, and coffee.

Jas. Larmer is taking charge of the boys' work this season, in conjuction with F. N. Alcorn and C. C. Garside.

The pastor, Rev. F. H. Howard, was present on Tuesday and gave the boys assistance in entertaining their guests, the committee in charge including Nelles Rowland, Kenneth Skitch, Walter Sayles and W. Byam.

The affair was planned in honor of R. L. Sainsbury, of Port Hope, the newly-elected member who will represent East Dhrham at the Fifth Older Boys' Parliament, which meets in Queen's Park during Christmas week. "Pat," as the boys call him, had the almost unanimous support of the local Square, and apparently of the district as well. Unfortunately the member-elect was unable to accept the invitation to be present at Tuesday's frolic, but the social occasion gave unalloyed pleasure to the guests who were in attendance.

It is probable that an effort will be made to have Mr. Sainsbury address the local C.S.E.T. organization some time after the New Year, and when he has had his first year's experience of actual attendance at the Boys' Parliament.

Young People's League.

Mrs. (Dr.) Rae gave the talk at the Young People's League this week, her subject being, "The Springs of Stewardship,' and her remarks being followed with intense interest and profit throughout.

The devotional committee, Miss Jean Burnham convenor, was in charge of the programme. The book for study this year is Luther Lovejoy's "The Stewardship of the Whole of Life," and the monthly meeting devoted to this topic is of decided benefit to the young people.

A reading, "A Modern Paul of Tarsus," by Reg. Willis, was in line with the thought prevailing in the evening's study, and proved helpful.

It seems probable that the league department, will be represented in meetings will have to be discontinued shortly until after the New Year owing to the numerous practices necessary in preparation of the "Way of Life," the pageant which the Sunday School will present at its annual entertainment on January 1, 1926. The membership of the school, from the cradle roll to the adult the pageant, the latter having been specially written for the Diamond Jubilee Convention, under the auspices of the Ontario Religious Education Council, held recently at Hamilton.

The song service in the United Church on Sunday evening was much enjoyed. The numbers rendered by the choir under the leadership of Mrs. H. W. Johnston, included an opening anthem, "Sing Unto the Lord a New Song"; a duet, "Ever Near," by Mr. and Mrs. Johnston; a male quartette, "Just as I Am," by Messrs. Coombe, Lambert, McDowell, and Johnston; and two concluding anthems, "Be Not Afraid," and "O Come Ye Disconsolate."

The pastor gave a ten minute talk in lieu of the usual sermon, the message emphasizing the power of the white life, and the musical numbers bringing a Gospel message also, the hope being that it would be none the less effective because of the change from the spoken word to the ministry of song.

Petes Win First Game in S. P. A. Series 6 - 1 -- New York Stops Pirates

PETERBORO'S DEFENSE STOOD OUT IN FIRST VICTORY OF S.P.A. SERIES OVER FAST TORONTO CANOE CLUB

Dwyer, Parker and McLeod Were Exceptionally Effective And Carried Off Big Share of the Honors.

PARKER'S CHECKING WAS A FEATURE

McLeod Scored Two of the Petes' Six Goals — "Red Ringers" a Young and Agressive Team.

(By F. D. C.)

The Peterboro Senior O.H.A. team successfully commenced last night their defence of the S.P.A. Trophy which they won in such spectacular fashion last year, by beating Toronto Canoe Club, one of the new Toronto senior clubs this year, in the opening game of the Sportsmen's series at the Toronto Arena by 6 goals to 1, leading 1 to 0 at the end of the first period and 4 to 0 at the close of the second.

The score sounds as if the Petes had an easy task in subduing the Paddlers.

They had—and then again they hadn't.

The Red Ringers had youth and speed and aggressiveness and they fought until the final bell.

Practically the whole outfit has made the jump from junior ranks to the senior series this season, the line up including McKay and McPherson of last year's champion Aura Lee Juniors and Taylor Grant and other Toronto Canoe Club juniors of last season, and had they combined team work and scoring ability with their fast skating and close checking would have given the Petes a merry struggle.

For the same the Petes were not at their best by any means last night, whether because of under-rating their opponents or because the youngsters' style of checking made it hard for the blue and white crew to get working with their usual snap and effectiveness.

Whatever was the reason the S.P.A. holders were not as impressive as usual in their victory. Early in the game the defence was outguessed by the Paddlers' fast-skating attackers on a number of occasions while the forward brigade seemed to lack cohesion and punch. Fortunately Joe Dwyer was at the top of his form and his brilliant work steadied the whole crew and the defence soon got their bearings and turned in a fine performance. The forward line, however, although they improved materially as the game progressed never seemed to hit their proper stride all through the engagement and until the last period most of the really effective attacking was done by McLeod and Parker.

McLeod Scored Two.

These two, with Joe Dwyer, carried off the lion's share of the honors. Parker's work especially in the second period was wonderfully effective, his long poke check wrecking rush after rush, while his own attacks were marked by pretty stick-handling. McLeod, without any practice and with but a few minutes skating prior to last night, gave a grand performance in view of the handicap under which he was working. He scored two of the Petes' goals on rink-length rushes and defensively was good throughout. Dwyer, as already intimated, was in splendid fettle and the manner in which he smothered drives from all angles must have been heart-breaking to some of the young Canoe Club marksmen. The only shot that beat him was on a rebound after he had handled one shot at point blank range.

Irvin Bailey, who was before the game elected captain of the Petes, was the best of the forwards, although he had not as much success as usual in his attacks. Bailey, however, figured in two of the goal-scoring plays, one with Parker that resulted in the sweetest counter of the night. Babe Bogardis turned in his best performance of the season with the Petes and like Bailey participated in two goal-scoring expeditions. The rest of the attacking brigade gave a good account of themselves but the forwards, both individually and as a line, can turn in a better performance and will.

Taylor Dumped the Petes.

For the Paddlers the most effective players were Taylor, the sturdy young defence man, and Grant on the line. Taylor scored the Red Ringers' only goal, was dangerous on three or four other occasions and on the defence waded into all and sundry. He dumped nearly everybody on the Petes' line up with solid body checks and played no favorites. Grant was the fastest and trickiest forward, doing some fine stick-handling. Johnnie McPherson unlimbered a wicket shot from the right boards and although he could not beat Dwyer he made the Petes' goalie realize the game was not being played with a cream puff. McKay did some excellent work on the Paddlers' defence and he was missed when he had his ankle hurt early in the second period and had to retire from the game

Summary of the Play

The first period saw plenty of fast skating and indifferent hockey with the Petes forward line apparently unable to untrack themselves and the Red Ringers showing a lot of speed and persistent and all-over the ice checking, holding their own against the S.P.A. champs. In fact although the Petes got the only goal of the period, the Paddlers were just as good value as they were and had it not been for stonewall goaling by Joe Dwyer and the inexperience that caused the youthful Canoe Club outfit to toss away splendid openings Bill Box's boys might quite easily have skated off the ice at the end of the period leading the parade. The Petes' front guard could not seem to get going and most of the dangerous attacking was done by the defence pair, Bert McLeod and Harold Parker who staged a number of long jaunts that carried them in close for shots and tested Stone's goal keeping ability. It was on one of these raids that Bert McLeod registered the only goal of the period. He broke away fast, worked through the Red Ring forwards and let drive as he rounded the defence. His shot failed to leave the ice but it slid through Stone's feet for a counter. The Paddlers' net guardian was playing for a high shot and the slider had him lashed to the mast. The goal came at the end of sixteen minutes of play and the Paddlers had had more opportunities to register than had the Petes. The balance of the period was uneventful with honours even.

The Second Period

The Petes showed to much better advantage in the second period. They pressed right off the reel and Stone twice saved goals by dropping on the puck. The blue and white team were doing the bulk of the attacking at this stage. After five minutes of the period had gone Rose drew the first penalty but with a man short the Petes remained on the aggressive and there was a scrimmage in front of the nets in which three or four players spilled. McKay was hurt in this mix-up and started to limp to the side line just as Bailey broke from the Petes defence. Parker teamed up with him and with only Foster to beat Bailey pulled the T.C.C. defence man out and slid the rubber over to Parker who closed in on it fast and slammed it past Stone before the latter could turn round. It was the prettiest piece of work of the night. Right after the play Bailey broke fast again and handed a neat pass to Bogardis who drove a beautiful wing shot into the corner of the net putting the Petes three in front.

Four minutes later McLeod went down after shaking off the Canoe Club forwards, tricked the Paddler defence and worked in on top of Stone to score a pretty goal. That made it 4 to 0 and the figures were unchanged when the period ended although Collins drew a penalty and the Petes were short-handed for two minutes.

The Paddlers Score

Seven minutes of the last period had gone before the Paddlers finally broke into the scoring column. Taylor did the trick on a splendid rush working round the Petes defence and going right in on top of Dwyer. The Petes goaler dropped and stopped the first shot but Taylor batted in his own rebound.

Two minutes later Rose got away tricked two or three of the Paddlers by neat stickhandling and then cut loose with a drive that beat Stone completely.

The game materially slowed up after this successful raid, the Petes parking their defence and taking few chances. They held T.C.C. out although they kept on trying and finally just before the final bell Bogardis and Cox combined and the Collingwood youngster scored on a close in pass from Babe.

HOCKEY PICTORIAL BOOK OF CHAMPIONS

Canadian and U. S. Teams Shown in Annual.

The editor has received a copy of the Hockey Pictorial. 1926 edition, which is now on sale at all newsstands, and which is at once the handsomest and most complete publication ever produced in the world for any single sport. It is a marvel in artistry and industry of achievement. It is impossible to speak too highly of it.

The book represents years of effort —typographically and pictorially it is a "masterpiece." From cover to cover it is embellished with group pictures of championship teams from 1888 to 1925; in fact the history of Canada's Great Winter Sport is told in pictures.

Old-timers will be interested in the handsome halftones of the teams who were prominent a generation ago, while the younger enthusiasts will enjoy the reproductions of the more recent winners.

The book is not only lavishly illustrated but is literally crammed with much interesting information regarding individuals, clubs and leagues throughout the country.

Local hockey fans will also find very interesting group pictures of the United States Amateur Hockey Association Champions, who are practically made up of former well known Canadian Players.

The book, which is published by George King, 84 Victoria Street, Toronto, the well known Toronto sportsman, is a credit to the game and its publisher.

INSIDE GOLF.

Maker of 51 Golf Champions "Golf's most successful teacher." says "Chick" Evans

By CHESTER HORTON

The reason the golfer should avoid changing his stance or grip when he attemps to impart one of the spins to the golf ball is because the mere fact of the change will defeat the purpose he has in view. Say you use a square stance regularly. For an intentional slice let us say that you shift to an open stance with the ball played far forward. This stance will be new and awkward, and add to that your anxiety about the thing your are attempting, and the result will invariably be a poor shot. With the ball so much further in front you will invariably reach out for it, lest you miss it, and this will draw a body lunge into the shot. Maintain your regular shot and let the forearm roll over or under, for a hook, under for a slice. You will be suprised at the ease with which you can bring off intentional hooks and slices. Give the club time to swing.

GRANGE DID STUFF.

Was Star of "Pro" Football in St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 3—"Red" Grange performed spectacularly at Sportsman Park here ysterday when he led the Chicago Bears, professional football players to a 39 to 6 victory over the Donnelly Stars of St. Louis before a crowd estimated at 8,000.

The former Illinois captain scored four touchdowns. He stayed out of the contest for a greater part of the second and third periods, although the crowd put up several yells for his return.

Grange gained 84-yards in line plays, while forward passes, which he threw or received added 73-yards more. He made one run back of a punt for 33-yards, his longest run of the day.

SENATORS SENT THROUGH PACES

Fast Workout Yesterday and Tackling Practice Today on Hard Field.

JOE TUBMAN ILL

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 3.—(By Canadian Press)—Taking advantage of a slight moderation in the weather, Ottawa Senators reeled off a splendid practice at Lansdowne Park yesterday afternoon. Coach Dave McCann had his stalwarts hard at work for over an hour and they finished up the grind with a brisk run.

Joe Tubman, captain and kicking ace of the Eastern Canada titleholders, is indisposed with an attack of grippe but it is hoped that he will be in good shape for the big game with Winnipeg Tigers here on Saturday. Connell's condition is still doubtful.

The line up against the Tigers will probably be the same as that which faced Queen's in last Saturday's important contest. Interest is increasing in the coming tilt for the Canadian rugby crown. The entire city's sporting fraternity will be on hand for the fixture and it is certain that many outsiders will be here also.

The hard ground has been a big handicap to the Senators in their practices this week. On the concrete like surface, tricky running is extremely hazardous and McCann is driving them along carefully to guard against possible injuries. Tackling drill has practically been out of the question, but that they will be given a taste of it this afternoon. Friday's signal drill will complete the training for the final game of the senior 1925 season.

IF FOOTBALL WERE TALKED AS WRITTEN

He: Going to the classic gridiron spectacle today?

She: Yes, I plan to attend the pigskin battle.

He: Everything points to a gruelling contest.

She: Yes, I understand the gladiators are trained to the minute and that despite the fact that some of the warriors are on the crippled list it will be one of the greatest duels of the waning season.

He: I look to a fight to the bitter end.

She: It may even be an epic. By the way, have you tickets to this, the closing act in the 1925 football drama in the east?

He: Yes, I secured two of the coveted pasteboards yesterday.

She: Where did you get them. I thought they were as scarce as hen's teeth.

He: From the ever present scalpers who, despite the efforts of the ticket department and the police officials to curb the practice, seemed to have as abundant a supply as ever and who were holding out for as high as $50 to a choice pair on the 50 yard-line.

* * *

She: When do we leave for the scene of the gory battle

He: We should flock into town with the great vanguard of fur-coated football enthusiasts from all sections of the country who will begin pourning into town this evening on each incoming train and fill all the hotels to overflowing.

She: I suppose the streets will teem with exuberant old grads and beautiful women in costly fur raiment.

He: I am exceedingly anxious to be one of the merry passengers who will fill the countless special trains to be run under the most elaborate arrangements ever made by Mr. Mooney, supgrintendent of traffic, to handle the unprecedented crowd.

She: I suppose the police have made every arrangement to handle traffic.

He: Yes, indeed. There will be over 200 plain-clothes men on duty at the station, and every available patrolman will be at the field to look out for crooks.

She: How do you anticipate the most picturesque football function of the year will result?

He: It is a toss up as the hour for the referee's whistle approaches.

She: I understand Queen's is fighting with its back to the wall and will not be denied.

He: But do not forget that Ottawa has shown flashes of great strength in all departments during recent weeks, according to reports and may possess a will-o'-the-wisp in its famous backfield that will tear through Queen's line and upset all the dope. Should the contest be essayed on a lightning-fast field under clear skies of turquoise blue, a good game will be played on its merits, but should the weather man provide rain it will make the battlefield a veritable quagmire

She: Or a sea of mud more suited to aquatic sports than to football.

He: A lot may depend on the breaks of the game.

She: Always remember that a team that will not be defeated can not be defeated.

He: Shall we join the happy throngs milling their way to Lansdowne Park, scene of the most colorful spectacle of the football year?

She: Yes, by all means, let us be among those arriving as early as noon and finding our seats with little difficulty, thanks to the excellent seating arrangements.

LANGLOIS WON FOR NEW YORK

Scored on Brilliant Rush After Three Minutes' Overtime.

BEAT PITTSBURGH.

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 3.—(Canadian Press.)— After battling for three periods, without either side gaining any advantage, a brilliant dash up the ice by Langlois, defence man of the New York Americans, brought victory for his team mates by a two to one score, when he succeeded in enfilading the Pirates' defence and shot the winning goal, after three minutes and ten second of overtime play. It brought to an end a stubbornly contested conflict and gave the metropoliis braves their first victory in the N.H.L., and also the first defeat for the local team, after having secured two victories on foreign ice.

KINGSTON LOOKS FOR GOOD YEAR

Will Amalgamate Junior O. H.A. Teams as Well as Intermediates.

(Special to the Examiner)

KINGSTON, Dec. 3—The Kingston Hockey Club held a most enthusiastic meeting and everything points to another most successful year. Several important matters were dealt with, among them being the amalagamation of the junior teams for the O.H.A. This is regarded as a move in the right direction, and one that should result in Kingston putting out a strong junior O.H.A. team. The following officers were elected: President, Ald. T. A. Kidd; first vice-president, J. S. McDonell; second vice-president, Major Grant; secretary treasurer, E. J. Hartrick. T. F. Gelley was reappointed coach.

AGENDA OF O.H.A. ANNUAL

The amendments filed for discussion at the annual meeting of the O.H.A. at the Temple Building, Bay and Richmond street Saturday morning next at 10 o'clock are:

Change the date of the annual meeting from the first Saturday in December to the third Saturday in November to enable the new executive to arrange for the coming season.

Any player living in a town which has no O.H.A. club or rink used for hockey may be permitted to play with his nearest O.H.A. club on special permission of the O.H.A. executive.

That the consolation series in both intermediate and junior be discontinued or if the series is continued it be confined entirely to teams securing second place in their group.

Off-Side Rule.

That the off-side rule read as follows:

(a) A player shall endeavor always to be on his side of the puck. A player is off-side when he is in front of the puck or when the puck has been hit or touched or is being run with by any of his own side behind him, namely, between himself and the end of the rink no. which his goal is placed.

(b) A player being off-side is put on-side when the puck has been hit by or has touched the dress or person of any player of the opposite side, or when one of his own side has been run in front of him, either with the puck or having played it when behind him.

(c) Since a player who is off-side may be put on-side as provided for in clause (b) the referee shall not stop play unless the player offends the following clauses (d) or (e) of this rule.

(d) Persistent failure to be on-side shall be designated as loafing and penalized as a foul.

(e) If a player when off-side plays the puck or annoys or obstructs an opponent the referee shall stop the play and the puck shall be faced where it was last played before the off-side occurred. The deliberate making of offside plays shall be penalized as a foul.

(f) Despite the foregoing clauses a player on the defending side is not to be considered offside within a nace of 40 feet out from his end of the rink and extending to the side of the rink. A line parallel to the end of the rink shall be drawn across the ice of the rink to designate this distance. Within the space between this line and his end of the rink a player on the defending side, even though in front of the puck, may take a pass from or play the puck as it bounds off his goalkeeper or the end of the rink or netting, or is passed by any of his team-mates.

Canadian List.

The minor changes in the regulations and the playing rules adopted by the Canadian association automatically become operative in the O.H.O. They will come before the convention for formal adoption, and are:

Regulations.

Every player in the C.A.H.A. must hold an amateur card.

All registration card duplicates are to be forwarded to the national registrar within 15 days of receipt by branch registrar. February 10 is the final date for registration with the national registrar.

All games are prohibited with teams of United States A.H.A., but Canadian teams may be permitted to play college or university teams in the U. S. upon securing sanction from their branch.

All branches of the C. A. H. A. must declare winners by March 5th, senior and junior.

In all cup finals, senior and junior, the best two out of three games shall decide the winner.

No player shall be eligible to play unless he has been a bonafide and continuous resident of the city, town or district that the club represents since the 15th day of May preceding the date of the first games. Students alone excepted.

Playing Rules.

Goalkeepers' pads, Maximum width 12 inches lying flat, instead of 14.

No body-checking on the forward line. Body checking only permissable by defence men in their positions back of the 40 foot line and they must not charge an opponent.

New defence area—40 feet from the end of the rink instead of 20. In this area the old rule applies, viz., no offside for the defending team. All rinks must be marked with defence lines at each end 40 feet from end of the rink.

Over at Noon.

The session will be a morning one only. The delegates will be guests of the S.P.A. at lunch at the Prince George at one o'clock, will attend the football match at Varsity in the afternoon, and the hockey match at the Arena at night.

NO PEACE PRIZE TO BE AWARDED

Norwegian Storthing Has Decided Against 1925 Award —No Prizes This Year.

ALL WITHHELD.

OSLO, Norway, Dec. 3 (Canadian Press).—The Norwegian Storthing, which is authorized to award the Nobel Peace Prize, has decided that there would be no award of this prize for 1925. This means that none of the five Nobel Prizes will be awarded this year for the first time in the history of the Nobel Institute, as the Institute already has decided against the giving of the other four.

FASCIST ARTISTS LED BY MUSSOLINI

Think Leader Can Awaken Nation's Cultural Activity.

MILAN, Italy, Dec. 3.—Fascistization of Italian art, with Benito Mussolini national director, is the next step in the process of transferring Italy into a Fascist state.

Artists and intellectuals in the ranks of the dominant party, seeking for a means of reawakening the nation's moribund cultural activity and of creating a truly Fascist artistic movement, have decided to entrust the task to their leader, confident he can succeed where others have failed.

A formal request to this effect has been made by the Directorate of the Corporation of Intellectual Professions and by the National Fascist Syndicate of Fine Arts.

"We desire," these artists told the Premier, "to collaborate directly with you in nourishing new forms and creating the new style of Italian beauty."

Mussolini was asked to choose five or ten men among "the new artists of Italy" to advise him and assist him in the work of applying modern Italian art in every aspect of the nation's life from designs for dwelling or government buildings.

Active co-operation between the Government and the artists, proponents of the plan asserted, is the only means of supplying Fascism with the cultural accompaniment which every great political movement must have.

RAYMOND GRIFFITH AND BETTY COMPSON IN "PATHS TO PARADISE" — FEATURE COMEDY.

Ray Griffith, the dapper little man, whose winning, sympathetic smile has the power to make friends on a moment's notice, is very emphatic on one subject. He does not want to be held up to the public as being a comedian. As a matter of fact, Hollywood calls him an actor —not a comedian. He is an actor equally at home in any situation, be it comedy or real drama. He has an uncanny knack in seeing and developing a comedy situation. The public laughs at his pictures because the situations are naturally funny. Never is he a funny man in a situation but rather a man in a funny situation. That, Hollywood experts point out, is the difference between "a comic" and a Raymond Griffith!

Griffith's latest picture is "Paths to Paradise," a Clarence Badger production for Paramount, coming to the Royal Theatre to-day. In this picture Ray is one of the cleverest of high-class crooks who appears one night at a fashionable mansion as a detective to guard some famous jewels. He is placed in full charge by the owner, who is to give the gems to his daughter the next night on the occsion of her marriage.

At the house Miss Compson is working as a maid, awaiting a chance at the big loot. She and Griffith meet, recognize each other, and then follows a battle of wits to gain possession of the gems, in which the highly trained dog, "Buddy," takes an active part. Cleverness and comedy intermingle during the contest, which ends when they agree on a partnership interest and walk out with the gems by tricking the real detective and his aides, who have arrived in the meantime.

In one of the most unusual chases ever screened, the law takes after the two crooks as they try to reach Mexico. Before the two have gone very far they discover a mutual love; comedy and pathos find a place at every town. Just as they reach the border and safety they decide that true happiness can come only by going straight. The diamonds must be returned.

Then starts the second leg of the chase as they race through cordons of police at every town along the route to San Francisco. There occurs the smashing climax, at the end of tense suspense and many laugh provoking situations.

Other prominent players in the cast are Tom Santschi, Fred Kelsey and Bert Woodruff. The story was written for the screen by Keene Thompson from Paul Armstrong's play, "The Heart of a Thief."

AT THE REGENT

REX, WILD HORSE ACTOR, STAR OF "BLACK CYCLONE"

New Roach Film Said to Be More Sensational Than "King of Wild Horses."

Rex, who acquitted himself so nobly in 'The King of Wild Horses' last year, is again to be seen on the screen. Hal Roach, producer of that film sensation and the proud owner of the wild horse he saved from an outlaw's death, tamed, trained and made a motion picture star of, has written 'Black Cyclone' to fit the marvellous talents of the horse. It will be the feature attraction at the Regent Theatre today.

"Black Cyclone" is a story of the Wild Lands, where herds of wild horses roam the hills and plains. Rex is first seen as a motherless colt who is driven out of the herd of the Killer, a hideously-spotted and fiendishly tempered stallion who has never been vanquished in battle. When Rex reaches full growth he is a magnificent creature and seeks and wins a mate. She is one day captured by the killer, who defeats Rex in battle.

The big climax comes when the bad man, in pursuit of Jane, shoots Jim's horse from under him. Seeing his man's predicament, Rex offers his broad, bare back, which Jim had several times tried, disastrously, to mount. But now Rex was docile and willing to bear this burden. Like the wind he swoops across the sagebrush plain — no horse in the world could have kept ahead of that demon — that black cyclone! Then, when he sees Jim winning in his hand-to-hand fight with the bad man, Rex rushes off to beat off the Killer, who has found Lady and come to claim her. For the first time in his mean life, the Killer is defeated!

Guinn Williams, Kathleen Collins and Christian Frank play the only human roles in "Black Cyclone," which is primarily the story of the life and love of a wild horse. The entire picture was photographed in Nevada, with no two sequences having the same background. Fred Wood Jackman, director of "The King of Wild Horses," also directed "Black Cyclone."

"HAVOC," SUPER FILM AT REGENT.

William Fox Screen Drama Shows Havoc Wrought By Ruthless Women Is More Devastating Than Cannons of War.

When a woman chooses to be a wrecker of the lives of men, she can make a World War seem trivial.

Look at Helen of Troy; look at Cleopatra; think of the countless thrones that have been won and lost through the machinations of clever and unprincipled courtesans of royalty!

It is on such premise that the plot of "Havoc" is founded —that sensational play which has been picturized by William Fox under the direction of Rowland V. Lee and which will open here at the Regent Theatre on Monday. Peterborough will see this year's greatest picture before the Toronto engagement, with the original musical settings as given in New York, where it ran for one whole year.

AT THE GRAND

BRINGING UP FATHER IN GAY NEW YORK.

It is not always necessary to recount the virtues of an established institution. However theer are occasions when it is essential to call attention to some particular features attached to certain theatrical offerings with the next attraction at the Grand Opera House, Saturday, Dec. 5th, being a point in mind. We refer to "Bringing up Father in Gay New York," the latest play, based on the world-famous "Bringing up Father" cartoons by George McManus.

This is the same contribution that was highly acclaimed at the Lyric Theatre, New York, one of Broadway's leading temples of amusement. Divided into two acts and six scenes the production provides unusual entertainment, besides establishing a note of originality seldom attained by vehicles of its kind. Music, pretty women, singers and dancers out of the ordinary, fun, hilarity, mirth, screams and joyous endeavor form a happy and successful combination. Matinee on Saturday.

THE DUMBELLS' NEW SHOW

Rich in new melodies, new sketches, new scenery, new costumes, new comedy and new lighting effects, but with all the familiar faces, "Lucky 7" The Dumbells' latest production and seventh annual revue, will make its second appearance here at the Grand theatre on Wednesday, December 9th, for a final return.

The general verdict in all places where "Lucky 7" has been seen this season is that it is the best production The Dumbells have ever made. It is well balanced, and in brightness, color, and snappy speed, it challenges comparison with the best.

"Red" Newman has the leading role in a hilarious skit "Red Goes on Leave," in which his skill as a comedian is demonstrated. His new songs, "Colonel Thingamabob and "Let's Start the War Again", are full of dash and vim, and the latter threatens to become a lively successor to "Oh, It's a Lovely War."

Al Plunkett is back in his old form with such songs as "Whiter Than Snow", and "Hi, Hi, Ho," with its rollicking chorus and in addition appears in a feature song entitled "As Long as She Loves Me", which strikes a more ambitious note.

Ross Hamilton continues his inimitable "Marjorie" impersonations, and this time he has two beautifully staged picture songs, "I'm Wonderful" and "Darling, I Love You", the latter written specially for him by Howard Fogg, conductor of The Dumbells, in which his voice is heard to better advantage than ever.

Morley Plunkett in "High St., Africa", a riot of clever burlesque; Pat Rafferty in two of his deliciously nonsensical ballads, "The Pioneer" and "I'm not all There"; Jock Holland in "Ain't It Nice?" Stan Bennett in a couple of character songs as a London "Johnnie" his well-known metier; and Ben Allen in comical monologue; as well as specialty dances by Glen Allen, in marvellous feminine impersonation, and Jimmie Devon, combine to make up an entertainment of exceptional comedy values, to which Captain Plunkett's famous Jazz Orchestra adds the finishing touch. Taken in all, it is an entertainment that has not been equalled since The Dumbells first began, seven years ago.

AT THE CAPITOL

"STAGE STRUCK" HAS BIG CAST

Lawrence Gray, Ford Sterling Support Gloria in Allan Dwan Film.

Supporting Gloria Swanson in the Paramount picture, "Stage Struck," which will be shown at the Capitol Theatre to-day, is one of the finest casts ever to appear with the popular star.

Lawrence Gray, who had a prominent role opposite Miss Swanson in "The Coast of Folly," is leading man in "Stage Struck," an Allan Dwan production written especially for Gloria by Frank R. Adams and adapted for the screen by Sylvia La Varre.

Gloria, as Jenny Hagen, a waitress in a one-arm lunch in a small western town, decides she's going to become an actress because young Gray, who also works in the restaurant, likes actresses. One of the famous Ohio River floating theatres comes to town and she gets a chance to "do her stuff" which is terrible. There are said to be more laughs in these scenes than in the entire length of "Manhandled."

Ford Sterling, who started them laughing and kept them laughing by his comedy antics in "The Trouble With Wives," is manager of the show boat. This is another great part for him.

Gertrude Astor, who recently brought to a close a successful vamping season on the West Coast and traveled East to support Gloria in "Stage Struck," plays the leading woman on the floating theatre. Miss Astor was recently seen in "Satan in Sables" and "The Pleasure Buyers."

Carrie Scott, Marguerite Evans, Emil Hoch and Margery Whittington complete the line-up of leading players.

Forrest Halsey wrote the screen play.

TRADE MARKS BEING UPHELD

Manufacturers Restrained From Using Similar Names and Wrappers.

"A CASE IN POINT."

A recent decision of a Federal Court on the subject of unfair competition in brands and packages is of timely interest to manufacturers and merchants whose trade is being filched away unfairly by the activities of certain members of the business community seeking to trade on the reputation of others.

Federal Judge Dickinson, sitting in the United States District Court of the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, has granted a permanent injunction against the Pennsylvania Soap Company prohibiting the Pennsylvania Soap Company from the manufacture, sale or advertising of a product wrapped in imitation of the universally known Palmolive Soap package. The Pennsylvania Soap Company product bore the name "Palm and Olive" and was wrapped in a green wrapper of a design similar to that of the genuine article.

The flood of cheap imitations of well known and extensively advertised trade-marked articles which has been sweeping the country in recent years is attributed by those who are in a position to know, to the business depression following the late war. The habit of thrift and economy of the housewife is being imposed upon by dishonest manufacturers who make a business of imitating articles of commerce which have established an enviable name for their quality and the goodwill of which has been built up through many years of intensive advertising. Frequently the imitation article is dressed up to appear as nearly as possible like the genuine product.

The retailer, in many cases unknowingly and, sometimes with malice aforethought, is allowing himself to become a party to the deal, little realizing that hereby he is laying himself open in injunction by the courts and suits for damages. The retail merchant who is offering "just as good" product to the purchaser as the genuine, is losing the goodwill of his trade when he is found out, as happens in most cases. Eventually he is left with a dead stock of unsalable merchandise which he is forced to throw on the bargain counter and sell at a loss.

From the many suits pending in the Federal Courts and before the Federal Trade Commission, it is quite apparent that many of the large manufacturers and owners of well-known trade-marked articles are successfully invoking the aid of the courts to put a stop to this nefarious practice.

HEN KILLING WOLF WAS SHOT IN SWAMP

Was Old and Almost Toothless, But Well Covered With Fat.

GUELPH, December 3. Canadian Press. — A male wolf, almost toothless, which had been creating havoc among the hen roosts of Eramosa township, during the past two weeks, was shot in a swamp on the fourth line of Eramosa, about eight miles from the city, by Arthur Parkinson, of Eramosa. Mr. Parkinson was with a party fox hunting, when they ran the marauder to earth. The old fellow, having gorged himself on a dead horse, had lain down on a log to sun himself, when the party came upon him. His grey pelt was in a prime condition, and he was well covered with fat, attesting the excellent condition of Eramosa farmers' poultry.

STRANGE SKELETON FOUND IN PACIFIC

Resemble Head of Huge Bird —Indian Says It Extinct Seal.

PRINCE RUPERT, B.C., Dec. 2.—(Canadian Press).—A curious skeleton of what seems to be the head of a huge bird was hauled out on a halibut hook recently by two fishermen in 30 fathoms of water off the Queen Charlotte Islands. No one knows what it is. The skull is nearly twelve inches long from the back of the head to the end of the bill. The bill, the upper part only remaining, is six and a half inches long and three inches across from eye to eye. An Indian who saw the skeleton, declares it to be the remains of a seal that once inhabited these waters, but which is now extinct.

HOREMANS WINS TITLE.

Defeats Schaefer, 1500 to 1495, in Billiard Match.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3 (Canadian Press) — Edouard Horemans, Belgian master of the billiard cue, is world's champion at 18.2 balkline billiards. He won the title from Young Jake Schaefer, 1500 to 1495, despite a run of 432 by the former champion in his desperate effort to retain the crown.

OBITUARY.

JAMES BELL.

BETHANY, Dec. 3.—James Bell, son of Ernest Bell, of Fleetwood, died this morning. The deceased boy, who was only eleven years old, was taken ill only yesterday.

MRS. SARAH NELSON.

Died on Wednesday, December 2, 1925, Sarah Nelson, wife of the late George Nelson, in her eighty-sixth year. She leaves to mourn her loss three sons, James T. Nelson, Peterborough, Robert Nelson, of Manitoba, and William Nelson, of Toronto, one daughter, Mrs. Adams, of Spokane, Washington. The funeral will leave the residence of her son, 856 George street, on Friday, December 4, at 1.30 p.m. and proceed to Fife's cemetery, Otonabee, with the Rev. J. E. Todd officiating.

MISS MARY DORIS.

The death occurred very peacefully at her home, at half-past one o'clock, this morning, of Mary Doris, youngest daughter of Mr. Thomas J. Doris, 488 Cedar Street, and the late Mrs. Doris.

The deceased, who had been seriously ill for eight weeks past, had a large circle of friends in the city, who will remember her always as an extraordinary example to others of fortitude and courage under difficulties. Suffering almost from birth from illness, Mary Doris was at all times one of the brightest members of any gathering, and cheerful patience was a characteristic of her last days of suffering, as it had been of her short life.

Survivors are her father, one brother, James J. Doris, King Street, and three sisters: Mrs. George Lynch, Rubidge Street; Miss Adeline, at home, and Miss Evelyn, of Toronto.

The funeral will take place at 9 o'clock on Saturday morning from St. Peter's Cathedral to St. Peter's Cemetery.

DONALD MENZIES.

The death occurred on Wednesday night of Donald Menzies at his residence, 280 King street. He leaves to mourn his loss, his sorrowing wife, one son, Roy of Kingston, one daughter, Mrs. Roy Lang, of this city, two brothers, James of Montreal, and William, of this city; and the Misses Jean and Kathleen Menzies of Peterborough. Deceased was a member of Otonabee Lodge, I.O.O.F., and also was the secretary of Peterborough Court, C.O.F.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, corner of King and Stewart streets, on Friday afternoon at 2.30 p.m. Interment will take place in the Little Lake cemetery.

GOOD REPORTS.

Raw Material Analysis Shows Over 90 Per Cent Pure, Reported.

A very large deposit of Crystalline Limestone was recently discovered at the mouth of Eel's Creek near the head of Stony Lake, which reputable engineers have estimated at 12,000,000 tons, of a quality that will justify the erection of an up-to-date plant of large capacity, for the manufacture of various lime and chemical products, and plans for the undertaking are now being completed by Jones and Delisle, manufacturing chemists and construction engineers, of New York and Buffalo, who are recognized specialists in the lime and chemical industry.

A company has already been incorporated under the name of Lakefield Lime Products, Limited, with head office at Lakefield, and capitalized at $300,000.00, divided into 20,000 shares of common stock and 10,000 shares of 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock, both having a par value of $10.00 per share.

On enquiries being made, it was learned that the personnel of the company is as follows:

Directors—Col. C. A. Ackerman, Peterboro; Col. A. T. Lefevre, general manager, Nitrate Railways, Antofagasta, Chili; J. W. Allan, merchant, Rochester, N.Y.; J. C. Strickland, Lakefield, Ont.; C. E. Strickland, Lakefield, Ont.

Officers.—Col. C. H. Ackerman, President; C. E. Strickland, managing director; J. C. Strickland, secretary-treasurer.

A few weeks ago, F. A. Delisle in company with the owners made a thorough survey of the property and it was stated by Mr. Delisle that it was the most wonderful deposit of its kind that he had ever seen or heard of, to say nothing of such excellent facilities to be enjoyed in the way of cheap fuel, water power, and water transportation, all so vital to a successful development of its kind. Average samples of the raw material were then selected from various parts of the deposit and taken to Buffalo. Analysis and manufacturing tests and final reports recently received state that the analyzing chemists reported the analysis the finest they had ever seen in all their experience, being almost chemically pure and free from iron stains and organic matter.

A sample of one of the finished products, hydrated lime, has been received and is as white as snow. An analysis of the raw material made by the Provincial Metalurgists shows 97.02 pure, it is reported.

The initial layout, plans for which are nearing completion, embraces the erection of one rotary kiln, 25 ton capacity for the manufacture of high grade lump lime; one 15 ton capacity hydrator and tunnel kiln for the production of high grade hydrated lime; two ring roll mills for the manufacture of various fillers employed largely in the manufacture of rubber, paper, glass, whiting, putty and paint. These latter products are also used extensively in water purification, in distillation, in coke ovens, in treatment of sewage and also in many lines of agriculture, especially in making lime spray.

Building for the housing of employees at the plant have already been erected and wood cutters are now working for the requisite supply of fuel to insure early operation of the plant in the spring of 1926.

It is understood that a considerable portion of the capital stock has been subscribed, and the company is now completing arrangements for opening an office in Peterborough to complete the sale of the balance of the stock.

ALL SAINTS' A.Y.P.A. VISITED OLD PEOPLE

Put on Programme and Served Refreshments at Protestant Home.

On Monday evening All Saints' branch of the A.Y.P.A. visited the Protestant Home and entertained the people there. The programme, which was greatly enjoyed by all, included the following:

Vocal solo—Miss Edith Tucker.
Violin solo—Alec Runnett.
Violin duet—Miss Grace Tucker and Mr. J. Howard.
Saxophone duet—Mr. B. King.
Reading—Mrs. Connolly.

The Sunday school orchestra was there and selections from them were greatly appreciated.

The president, Mr. J. Price, spoke a few words, also Rev. J. D. Paterson. Mr. Paterson said the A.Y.P.A. wasn't going to "Say it with flowers," but by a box of home-made candy.

Dainty refreshments were served at the conclusion of the programme

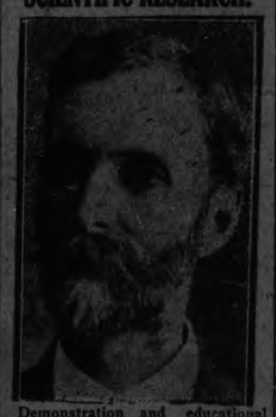
SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH.



Demonstration and educational work as performed on the Dominion experimental farms should be placed under a separate direction from research efforts, in the belief of Dr. Charles E. Saunders, former Dominion cerealist and famous discoverer of Marquis wheat. Scientific research with a view to producing a rust-resisting wheat is progressing too slowly, he said.

GERMAN RULERS BECOMING RICH

Are, in Fact, on Way to be Richest Men in Country.

BERLIN, Germany, Dec. 3.—The dethroned German sovereigns — kings, archdukes, princes and dukes —are in a fair way to become the richest men in Germany, richer even than they were before the world war. The revolutionaries confiscated the crown property in the various German states. Later, as it was difficult to decide between crown property and the private belongings of the ruling houses, most of the states tried to reach a peaceful settlement with the former rulers. This was effected in many cases, but as the revolutionary wave in Germany subsided the sovereigns took heart and made larger claims.

The outcome of a recent lawsuit has encouraged them to demand the return not of a part but all of their confiscated property. The Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, who is also a member of the British ruling house as the Duke of Albany, demanded the complete restitution of his property. The state offered $2,500,000 as a compensation, but the duke refused the offer, brought suit and won, thereby regaining possession of property that included about 60,000 acres of land, his art collections, palaces, museums and observatory.

Demand 100 Per Cent Return.

This result has encouraged not only certain other princes of land now grouped into the Thuringian state, but the house of Hohenzollern. One or two of the Thuringian princes now demand a 100 per cent return of their losses through inflation. If this is carried out it will bankrupt Thuringia. The Duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin and the Duke of Brunswick are trying to obtain 25 per cent. of the value of their confiscated property.

Greatest, however, are the claims of the former Kaiser and the House of Hohenzollern. Besides the return of strictly private property the Hohenzollern family obtained from the Prussian state the right to take part in the administration of the former Crown Prince's property, the expenses of which are to be paid by the state to the extent of nearly $1,000,000 while a definite settlement is being reached. These negotiations have been going on since 1919.

Ex-Kaiser Demands Settlement.

In 1920 the Prussian landtag refused the first compromise solution favorable to the Hohenzollerns, yet the ex-Kaiser has continued to demand a settlement on the basis of the rejected agreement. Today, the House of Hohenzollern estimates its yearly need at about $375,000 and, therefore, has raised a demand for possession and castle in Berlin valued at $2,500,000; castles in Potsdam and elsewhere, $3,750,00; other buildings in Berlin, $5,000,000; other properties outside of Berlin, more than $5,000,00. The Hohenzollern privately owned estates amount to nearly 10,000 acres and the family receives the income from estates of 400,000 acres more.

A bill has been prepared in the Prussian landtag, offering as a substitute for these claims a cash payment of $7,000,000 and about 300,000 acres of land with a certain number of castles, including Schloss-Bellevue and the Netherlands palace and the palace of Emperor William I. in Berlin.

This bill if passed would probably make the ex-emperor the richest man in Germany. The success of the bill in the landtag is problematical, but whenever a similar question has been taken into the courts, the decision has favored the former sovereigns.

COAL STRIKE IS UP TO GOVERNOR

Miners Did Their Part By Accepting Pinchot's Plan, Says Lewis.

GOVERNOR ON TOUR.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., Dec. 3. — (United Press). — Resting at his home here, following his return from Philadelphia, where he was in conference with Governor Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, in an effort to reach an agreement in the anthracite coal strike, John L. Lewis, president of the U.M.W., to-day declared the next move in the anthracite wage dispute was up to Governor Pinchot. In a brief statement to the press, Lewis said: "The mine workers have done their part by accepting the plan offered by Governor Pinchot." Nothing can be done until the last of the week, when the Governor returns to Harrisburg from a speaking tour.

Lewis said he planned to return to Philadelphia later in the week.

FREE WILL SERVICE IS BEST AND COMPULSION ABHORRED; CANON SHATFORD AT KIWANIS

Warning Given Against Perils That Beset a Service Organization.

GUARD EXTREMES.

Compensation, Professionalism, Pride and Jealousy Are Other Dangers.

"Whose Service is Perfect Freedom."

"Voluntariness is the essence of service. It is impossible to rule force out of life entirely, there was a time when service was altogether compulsory. In the days of feudalism and later under an autocracy there was no exercise of individual freedom. But we live in a democratic age, and Kiwanis has for its dominant note 'Democracy.'"

Canon Allan P. Shatford of Montreal was the speaker at Kiwanis luncheon to-day, and the announcement that he would give an address on "The Perils of Service," drew a record attendance. In twenty minutes he packed into a happy but impressive talk lessons from the past ages tempered with the sophistication and knowledge of these later years, drawing upon his varied experience and obviously deep study for apt illustrations and adroit expressions. President Charles Cook was in the chair, and Kiwanian Rev. J. D. Paterson moved the vote of thanks.

Kiwanian J. J. Turner introduced as his guests the candidates in the recent election of representatives to the Boys' Parliament, Adam Sands and Ted Outram. The assistance of Kiwanians was bespoken in behalf of the Symphony Orchestra concerts, and a benefit concert for the widow of the late J. Crompton. Kiwanian Walter Oke outlined a scheme for children's playgrounds, which was referred to the Executive Committee. R. Irwin was the day's booster.

Extremes of Service.

Canon Shatford, who is a member of the Rotary Club in Montreal, remarked that Kiwanis stands for service "Service" is one of the catch-words of the time, atmosphered with glory and raised to a lofty pinnacle. He had heard many addresses on the benefits and joys of service but never one on "The perils of Service" and he deplored the tendency to disregard the dangers and pitfalls. There was never anything invented by man that was not subject to abuse and excesses, and service is no exception.

The first warning note sounded by the speaker was that of "Compul-

'MUST I do it?' he asked; Because if I MUST I WON'T

A Presbyterian minister invited to preach from an Anglican pulpit one Sunday, found, on entering the vestry, that the Anglican rector's robes had been laid out carefully and conspicuously over a chair. He gazed at them in surprise for a time, and then turned to the member of the Church who was directing him, saying:

"Must I wear these? Because if I MUST, I WON'T!"

—Told by Canon Shatford at to-day's Kiwanis' luncheon.

POST OFFICE IS WILLING TO GIVE TWO CENT RATE

But One Cent War Tax Can Only Be Removed By Finance Department.

SAYS MR. MURPHY.

Officials of Department Not Convinced That Loss Will Be Made Up.

OTTAWA, Dec. 4. (Canadian Press).—The Post Office Department is both willing and eager to assist in removing the one cent war tax and restoring the two-cent postage rate," said Hon. Charles Murphy, Postmaster-General, yesterday, when asked about the possibility of restoration of the two-cent postage.

"This matter, however, does not come within the jurisdiction of the Post Office Department," added Mr. Murphy.

This is a matter to be determined by the Department of Finance. It's determination rests on considerations of revenue.

While the Post Office Department is ready to restore the two-cent rate, as stated by Hon. Mr. Murphy, officials of the Department, it is known, are not convinced that the loss to revenue from the abolition of the one cent war tax would be made up by increased business.

KIPLING PASSED POOR NIGHT BUT KEPT STRENGTH

Disease Did Not Spread, But Anxiety is Still Felt.

MUCH ANXIETY.

Village Telegraph Line Swamped With Messages —King Inquires.

BURWASH, England, December 4 —United Press. — Rudyard Kipling passed an indifferent night in his fight against pneumonia, but his strength was maintained and the disease did not spread.

This encouraging bulletin was issued this morning from the poet's estate on the Sussex downs, but despite it, there was still anxiety for his fate.

The village telegraph line was swamped with messages from all over the world, expressing regret for Kipling's illness and wishing him a speedy recovery.

Among others was one from King George, who asked that he be informed constantly as to the progress of the patient.

Mrs. Kipling has been at her husband's bedside, except for very brief intervals of rest, since her husband was stricken.

ULSTER RETAINS BOUNDARY AND IRISH FREE STATE RELEASED BY BRITAIN FROM PAYING WAR DEBT

Nude Bathing In Berlin Harasses Police Department

BERLIN, Dec. 4. (United Press). — Nude bathing with both sexes in the same pool continues here. A harassed police department cannot cope with the situation, and has admitted it to the reformers who have raised a great hue and cry against the practice.

"We would have our hands full if we raided all the swimming clubs indulging in nude bathing with the sexes mixed," the police head said. "Such a pastime is a daily and nightly event all over the city." Adherents of the nude cult spot heavily the little attempts of the reformers. "We are merely showing our devotion to nature," they say. "Evil to him who evil thinks."

Triple Agreement Made Possible By the Work of Boundary Commission.

SWIFT SETTLEMENT.

Free State Assumes Obligation For All Property Damage Claims.

LONDON, Dec. 4. — (Canadian Press).—The negotiations at London for settling the difficulty caused by the refusal of Professor John MacNeill, the Free State representative, to recognize the award of his colleagues on the Irish Boundary Commission, has been concluded with a celerity unusual in Irish disputes.

The terms of the new agreement amending the articles of the Anglo-Irish Treaty were issued last night, and Premier Baldwin was able to read them to the Commons before the House rose. The new agreement was signed in the Prime Minister's room in the House of Commons at eight o'clock last evening, and embodies settlement of the boundary question with the full assent of all parties concerned.

The agreement was signed in behalf of the British Government by Stanley Baldwin, Winston Churchill, Sir William Joynson-Hicks, Lord Birkenhead and Lieut.-Col. L. C. M. Amery; in behalf of the Free State by William T. Cosgrave, Kevin O'Higgins, Ernest Blythe and Peter O'Byrne, all members of the Irish Cabinet, and in behalf of Northern Ireland, by Sir James Craig, the Ulster Premier, and Secretary Black more of the Ulster Cabinet.

Final formalities were arranged with top speed in order to allow Mr. Cosgrave and his colleagues to match the night boat train for Dublin. Among the last proceedings was an interview between Premier Baldwin, Judge Feetham and Joseph Fisher of the Boundary Commission which arranged that the Commission's award is not to be published.

Released From War Debt.

The new agreement revokes Article 12 of the Anglo-Irish Treaty, which provided for the Boundary Commission and releases the Free State from obligation under Article 5 to pay a portion of the British war debts, while the Free State undertakes to shoulder the whole costs of compensation for damage to property in Ireland.

A slight concession also is made to the Northern Government in the transfer to the Ulster Parliament of powers heretofore invested in the council of Ireland. Ulster has the advantage, too, of retaining the existing boundary.

In his statement to the Commons, Premier Baldwin expressed the hope that the necessary legislation authorizing the new agreement would be passed before the House rises for the Christmas recess.

After the agreement was signed there was just time for the Free State Ministers to dine with President Cosgrave and the British Ministers who signed the document be-

WITHOUT SLEEP SINCE LEAVING LONDON, BRIAND PERSUADES THE CHAMBER TO PASS FINANCE BILL

Price Quotations Index Up 4.5 In November

OTTAWA, Dec. 4. (Canadian Press).—The price index number of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics rose 4.5 points in November.

Fifty-three price quotations were higher than in the preceding month, 33 were lower, and 150 were unchanged. The index number was 161.1, as compared with 156.6 in October.

Reached Heighs of Eloquence Though Exhausted—Tax Increase Approved.

MORE INFLATION.

Only Man in France Who Could Have Won the Deputies.

PARIS, Dec. 4. — (Canadian Press).—Premier Briand's appeal to the patriotism of all parties to unite to save France in the face of the economic and financial menace brought about the adoption by the Chamber of Deputies Thursday of the Government's bill providing for inflation of the currency to the amount of 7,500,000,000 francs and additional taxation ranging from 20 to 100 per cent.

Last evening the Finance Committee of the Senate accepted the text of the financial bill as voted by the Chamber and will recommend that it be adopted by the Senate. Many modifications had been discussed and inserted, when Premier Briand appeared before the committee. He declared to the members that unless the text was voted by the Senate as adopted by the Chamber "there was no Government possible." The Senators yielded, and it is practically certain that the Senate will adopt the bill to-day.

The Senate itself met for only a few minutes and heard M. Berenger's report on the bill, which it ruled should be published in the Official Journal to-day and discussed at the next sitting, which is set for this afternoon.

Small Majority.

In the Chamber the final vote on the bill as a whole was 257 to 229. It constituted the fifth vote of confidence in the Government during the lengthy session. The smallest majority in the voting which the Government received was seven—a vote of 246 to 239 on the inflation section of the bill.

Premier Briand appeared before the House, having passed a sleepless night, tired and harassed, but he rose to heights of eloquence never surpassed in the history of French politics. Veteran parliamentarians agree that M. Briand is the only man in France who could have jammed through a measure of this sort against the temper of the House in the early hours of the morning.

After M. Loucheur, the Finance Minister, had failed to impress the assembly with technical explanations, Briand mounted the rostrum and made his appeal. A voice in the Right Centre was heard to remark sarcastically, "There goes the 'cello soloist." But the interrupting member, too, was cheering before the Premier concluded.

The chamber adjourned at 12.15 p.m. and M. Briand had been without sleep since six o'clock Wednesday morning, when he left London. But he was on hand when the Senate convened shortly before three o'clock. M. Loucheur was exhausted and had turned over to M. Leon Perrier the task of introducing the financial bill.

Of the "Big Bertha" type of gun, used by the Germans to bombard Paris, seven were made, but only three were actually fired.

HEAD-HUNTER IN KANSAS CITY

Murderous Fiend at Large Who Decapitates His Victims.

THREE BODIES FOUND.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 4. — (United Press). — A murderous fiend with a mania for decapitating his victims is at large here, the police believe.

The discovery of three headless bodies has given the detectives and coroner a mystery without clues.

Meticulously stripped of every possible mark of identification, the bodies have been hidden in a selected spot where apparently they have been dragged, following a brutal slaying elsewhere.

Only one head has been found. It is the head of a woman, however, and the three bodies are those of men.

GRANT REFUSED TO WATERWAYS

Value of Advertising Done By Trent Association is Questioned.

DOUBT LEGALITY.

The Finance Committee was still in session as the County Council met this morning and accounts were read

In the matter of the grant to the Trent Waterway Association, a lengthy discussion was held as to the value of advertising. Chairman Curtis maintained that the best advertising was to treat the tourists well when they came here, and that the satisfied vacationists would tell their friends about the advantages of this district. Mr. Strickland stated that the tourist business was first attracted here by direct advertising.

A question arose as to the legality of making grants for such purposes.

A motion to grant $100 to the association for advertising purposes was followed by an amendment that no action be taken. The amendment carried.

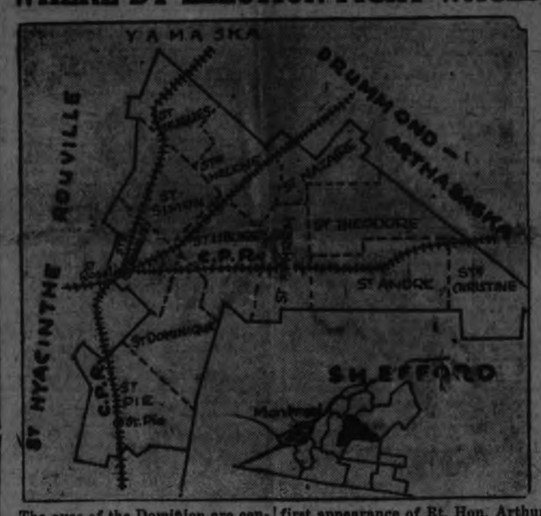
WHERE BY-ELECTION FIGHT WAGES



The eyes of the Dominion are centred this week on the Quebec constituency of Bagot, shown above, where a by-election is in progress to fill the seat rendered vacant by the death of J. E. Marcile. Additional importance is lent to the campaign there by the fac tthat it marked the first appearance of Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Conservative leader, in Quebec, since the opening of the recent general election campaign. G. D. Morin is the Liberal candidate. Andre Fauteux, former Solicitor-General, the Conservative standard-bearer, is a non-resident, whose home is in Montreal.

JOHN O'TOOLE SERIOUSLY HURT WHEN CAUGHT BETWEEN CAR AND STOP BLOCK AT QUAKER PLANT

Several Ribs Were Crushed In By Force of Impact.

ROLLING FREIGHT CAR.

Man Apparently Misjudged Speed of Car While Crossing Tracks.

Just at noon today as John O'Toole was crossing the tracks of Quaker Oats Company, by which firm he is employed a rolling box car struck him and pinned him against the stop block at the end of the rails. According to Dr. F. P. McNulty, the man's chest was very seriously injured as several ribs were crushed in.

The doctor said that he believed from what he had been told that Mr. O'Tool misjudged the distance and the speed at which the car was progressing. A number of men seeing his plight scured a stretcher and bore him to the western building. A ambulance was summoned and the injured man was rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital.

Dr. McNulty stated that in spite of the serious nature of the injuries Mr. O'Toole is resting easier.

Charged With Arson in Lindsay Court.

LINDSAY, December 4 — Wm. J. Cooper, of Guilford, late proprietor of the Royal Kushog Hotel, Haliburton, which was destroyed by fire a few weeks ago, and against whom a charge of arson is preferred, came up for trial on Thursday. On the request of the Crown a further remand was granted by Police Magistrate Jordan of Minden until Dec. 10. The accused, who has been in the county jail since the day of his arrest, was given his freedom on $10,000 bail.

LEVELLING TOWS.

De Jouvenal Says Order Must Be Restored Before Peace is Discussed.

BEIRUT, Syria, Dec. 4. (Canadian Press).—Almost simultaneously with the arrival of France's new High Commissioner in Syria, Henry de Jouvenel, the French have gone on the offensive against the rebel Druses in Southern Lebanon.

Yesterday they began throwing shells from their artillery against various points occupied by the Djebel Druses preparatory to a manoeuvre in which it is hoped to surround and capture 5,000 rebels who are still in the field. After the bombardment has been completed, infantry and cavalry are expected to be thrown into the fray against the tribesmen who, at a council of war at the headquarters of Sultan Attrass, their leader, announced that it was their purpose to give combat to the French to their last man.

The shells of the French yesterday had as their principal target the town of Hasbeiya, to the southwest of Damascus, and report has it that this stronghold of the Druses was slowly being levelled. No civilians were in the town.

High Commissioner de Jouvenel, on his first day in Beirut, told the newspapermen that order and security must be restored before peace with the rebels could be discussed.

Former Premier Fined Under Income Tax Law

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Dec. 4.—(Canadian Press).—Sir Richard Squires, former Premier of Newfoundland, was fined $6,400 yesterday for failure to make income tax returns during the years from 1918 to 1924. The defendant was fined $900 for each year he failed to comply with the income tax regulations, with the exception of 1921 for which the fine was $1,000.

TIMBER LIMIT HAS BEEN SOLD

Bayliss Company Disposed of Forest Tract at St. Anne to Syndicate.

TO BUILD MILL.

BINGHAMPTON, N.Y., Dec. 4. — Canadian Press. — The Bayliss Pulp and Paper Company of this city has contracted to sell its great Canadian tract of timber, covering 350 square miles, constituting the St. Anne river watershed, to a syndicate whose names are not yet made public by the company, at a price in excess of two million dollars, it was announced yesterday.

A large sulphite plant and news print mill will be built at Beaupre Quebec, in which the Bayliss Company will retain an interest as stockholder.

MANY REFUGEES LEAVING GREECE

Bulgars Say That Greek Officials Use Severe Measures.

SOME EXECUTED.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Dec. 4. (Canadian Press). — A fresh influx of refugees from Greece is sweeping over the wintry mountain border into Bulgaria, as a result, Foreign Office authorities say, of severe administration measures taken by the Greek officials at Lerin, near Monastir, Bere. The alleged measures include arrests, trials, internments, and executions.

Bulgarian officials point out that these excesses anti-dated the report of the League of Nations Investigating Committee which decided in favor of Bulgaria in the recent frontier incident.

LUTHER CABINET QUITS SATURDAY IT IS ANNOUNCED

Announcement in Keeping With Promise Made Some Weeks Ago.

TREATY IS SIGNED.

Will Give Chance For Formation of Cabinet To Support Locarno Pacts.

BERLIN, December 4. Canadian Press. — The German Cabinet will resign on Saturday. This is in keeping with an announcement made by Chancellor Luther on November 20, to the party leaders, that the government would withdraw from office after the Locarno pact signing ceremony in London, on December 1st, and that a new cabinet would be formed in sympathy with the Locarno policies and obligations. The Berlin papers publish an interview which Dr. Stresemann, the foreign minister, gave to a German correspondent in London, in which he expresses the greatest optimism regarding further negotiations over the questions arising out of the Locarno understandings.

There were only a few cars ahead of them, and Lacy worked up quickly behind the green Packard The moon was full It was one of those rare nights which make June so popular for weddings and outdoor drinking Ahead the road unwound in a gray, luminous band Higher and higher rose the hum of the motors as the two cars shook off the ferry traffic and raced past the tented nomads of Bayville

Pooch leaned forward "Here is th' jack," he said "I didn't want t' give it to you on th' ferry Never c'n tell who's nosin' round I want t' get shook of it, though I'll give it you, sis You c'n stockin' it fer th' boss here He's workin' now Count it There's fifty grand there Thank God, that's gone!"

A thick roll of bills bound with an elastic band was placed in Sister Connemara's hand as they lurched around a curve with the speedometer wavering around forty-five

Mechanically she leaned forward to the dashboard light, removed the strap, and counted the money Fifty brand new, fluttering thousand-dollar notes! Rolling them up, she hesitated a moment and then with sudden determination tucked them inside the voluminous folds of her nun's habit

Pooch again: "That damn Pierce's comin' up Drive up to the Packard an' I'll tell 'em t' take her out of second That bunch ought to be hackin' for some funeral parlor"

The big Isotta leaped ahead, with a warning croak—from the horn Trees, fences, hedges, softly lit houses flashed past in crazy panorama Rounding a corner on the wrong side of the road, they left a Ford sedan stranded in the ditch Gradually they drew up to the Packard Pooch cupped his hands and shouted, but the wind tore his words away The Packard driver seemed to understand, however, for he increased his speed and took the lead once more

Through the deserted streets of Glen Cove tore the two racing cars A sleepy policeman leaning against the bank at the four corners roused himself sufficiently to stagger to the curb and open his mouth several times after the retreating tail lights On past the Engineers, through Sea Cliff and up the winding hill flanking Roslyn Harbor They were approaching Roslyn

At the four corners where the North Hempstead turnpike joins the Sea Cliff road there was a right-angled turn Both cars threw on all their brakes and skidded into the main street Down the hill and through the town they tore, to the delight of the few village storytellers assembled in front of the local Greek's Around the Corner Behind them slid a Pierce runabout, its mudguard leaving a scar on the dummy cop as it swayed past The patrons of the local Greek cheered

At the clock tower the Packard swung suddenly to the left into the Mineola road Whether Lacy could not make the turn or whether he did not want to was not clear The Isotta wavered for a fraction of a second and then went thundering up the Roslyn hill toward New York The driver of a motor bus coming in the opposite direction stopped and, leaning from his seat, started to express his opinion of drivers who did not dim their lights He stopped in the middle of a withering line and gazed open-mouthed at the spark-spitting black streak that swept up the long grade as if it did not exist As he started again the lights of the following Pierce broke full in his eyes Throwing his wheel to the right, he buried the nose of the bus in the clay bank beside the road Two sleepy passengers picked themselves off the floor promising to have him discharged for reckless driving

Faster and faster, they shot on toward Manhasset Connemara clutched the side of the car with one hand and with the other pressed hard against her cowl Two cars appeared going in opposite directions half a mile ahead An instant later the Isotta was between them The lurching tonneau touched the small sedan on its right A sound resulted as of someone striking a dish-pan with his knuckles The sedan partly overturned and came to rest against a post

A shot sounded from the back seat Lacy's first thought was for his tires He glanced back Pooch had knocked out the back window and was kneeling on the seat, a revolver pointed through the opening

There was another report, but this time from the front of the car The right front tire went careening along the ditch beside them The hood leaped into the air Lacy jammed on the brakes, but it was too late Like a creature in its death throes, the car staggered back and forth across the road twice There was a ripping of steel through wood

The Pierce passed them stopped fifty yards down the road then backed to the wreck Two men with drawn revolvers got out

CHAPTER VI
By Meade Minnigerode

A discouraging odor—one of those odors which disengage themselves from catastrophes—or rather a concatenation of viciously incompatible odors—arose into the tenuous June night air like a flight of very bad angels Showers of stars, so it seemed momentarily to Connemara, sprinkled the vault of heaven with pyrotechnic splendor There was a hissing and a sputtering, a clanking and crunching, and above the uproar the steady booming of enraged profanity It proceeded from the overturned sedan, a man's voice complaining, bitterly and monotonously, like an intermittent foghorn

"What the blazes did you go and do that for?" he kept inquiring, invisibly persistent

"I think there's been an accident!" Connemara was moved to explain, but the man was not satisfied—nor, when she came to view the situation more critically, was Connemara

And what an accident! A sedan overturned in one ditch, imprisoning a very angry gentleman who would probably have a devil of a time explaining matters afterward to his wife The Isotta plastered like a mashed turnip against a telegraph pole in the other ditch, after having bounced Mr Pooch out into the road on one side and Connemara herself sitting somewhat incongruously on the spokes of the right front wheel, spinning slowly around like a spent roulette ball ju t before it flips into the wrong compartment And just in front the Pierce, from whose depths had come those two personages impending in the shadows with drawn revolvers, who appeared to be waiting for the whites of somebody's eyes!

Connemara made herself aware of these details in one comprehensive glance At the same time, while she still revolved physically on her spinning wheel, she likewise did so mentally around the more saliently depressing social aspects of her present situation

NEW LAMP BURNS 94 P.C. AIR

Beats Electric or Gas.

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U.S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up; is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coal oil).

The inventor, F. B. Johnson, 246 Craig St. W., Montreal, is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him to-day for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.

WEDDING BELLS.

LINN—WATSON.

BURNBRAE, Dec. 4.—A very happy event took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Watson on Wednesday, when their only daughter, Gertrude, was united in marriage to Mr. Gordon Linn, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Linn, Rawdon township. The ceremony was performed at 11 a.m., by the bride's minister, Rev. D. A. McKenzie, in the presence of the immediate relatives. After a dainty wedding breakfast the happy young couple departed on the afternoon train for Toronto, St. Catharines and Michigan. On their return, they will reside on the groom's farm, near Mount Pleasant, Rawdon township.

SUING TOWN FOR WRONGFUL SEIZURE

Cobourg People's Goods Were Taken For Unpaid Taxes.

COBOURG, Dec. 4.—Mrs. Mary Langslow, through her solicitor, Mr. T. F. Hall, K.C., has issued a writ against the Town of Cobourg for damages on account of the seizure of certain household furniture and goods for taxes. The claim is for damages for wrongful, improper, illegal and excessive distress of the plaintiff's goods, chattels and household furniture for taxes, claimed to be due and payable upon her dwelling house in the Town of Cobourg, and for damages for wrongfully depriving the plaintiff of the use of her goods and premises.

As Osgoode Hall last week-end, before Mr. Justice Riddell,Mr. T. F. Hall, K.C., acting for Mrs. Langslow, was granted an injunction restricting the defendant, the Town of Cobourg, from selling, offering for sale, dealing with or disposing of any of the goods and chattels or furniture seized or distrained for taxes claimed to be due upon the premises of the plaintiff in the Town of Cobourg, or for making any further distress or seizure until December 2.

I. Callahan for the plaintiff, Mrs. Della Galvin, was granted a similar injunction regarding sale of furniture at the Arlington hotel, for taxes.

The amounts involved for taxes were in both instances over $700.

The sales were to have been held respectively on November 30 and November 27.

OBITUARY.

MISS MYRTLE McMULLEN.

STIRLING, Dec. 4.— Deep sympathy and regret is expressed on all sides at the death of Miss Myrtle McMullen, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elijah McMullen, who passed away in the Kingston General Hospital on Monday afternoon.

She had been in poor health for the past year. Miss McMullen was formerly an employee of the News-Argus office here, where she learned the trade of a compositor, after which she was engaged in the Methodist Book Room, Toronto for some time, but was forced through illness to quit her work there. Deceased was about 30 years of age and leaves, besides her parents, two brothers, James and Percy of Rawdon township, and one sister, Mrs. Clifford Sharpe, of Wellman's Corners. The funeral will be held on Thursday afternoon to St. Paul's United church, interment to be in Stirling cemetery.

AGATHA M. COUSINEAU.

COBOURG, Dec. 4—The remains of the late Agatha M. Cousineau were brought from Toronto recently and taken to Bewdley for interment in the Byrne historic plot. Miss Cousineau was for some time engaged in missionary work among the French Italians, but of late had resided in Toronto as companion to Mrs. D. K. Byrne, and was a well-beloved member of the Byrne household. She became a member of the Christian Workers Tabernacle there as missionary and organist. Rev. D. J. Harnsuortt officiated at the funeral in the absence of Rev. D. K. Byrne, who was out of the city at the time. Her death was due to pneumonia.

D. H. TAYLOR.

COBOURG, Dec. 4.—The death of D. H Taylor, Esq., at Newcastle on Wednesday morning, removed a prominent farmer and well-known breeder, who resided for many years near Centreton in Haldimand township. Although in his 80th year, Mr. Taylor only gave up farming a year ago. He was a prominent exhibtor of heavy horses for many years at district fall fairs, and the Cobourg Horse Show. His wife died about a year ago and surviving him are two daughters, Mrs. H. W. Dudley, Newcastle and Mrs. Bellyou of Trenton.

MRS. SARAH GAGE.

COLDSPRINGS, Dec. 4.—The death of Sarah Gage, widow of the late William Varcoe, has removed one of the oldest residents of Hamilton township, and one who was held in high regard. Mrs. Varcoe passed away on Tuesday at the great age of 92 years. She leaves one daughter, Mrs. Brown, of Toronto, and two sons, Frank of Bewdley, and Richard on the homestead at Coldsprings. The funeral took place Thursday afternoon. Interment was in Camborne cemetery.

SPECIAL MEETING ALNWICK COUNCIL

Solicitor Advises That Road May Legally Be Sold.

ROSENEATH, Dec. 4.—Alnwick Township Council held a special meeting in the Clerk's office on Monday evening. The Clerk and Reeve had interviewed the Township Solicitor regarding the sale of the old Johnson road to Mrs. Jas. Chidley. They were advised that it could be done legally, but that the road would have to be closed for a certain period of time, and also advertised in some local paper, after which it could be put up for sale and sold to Mrs. Chidley.

On motion of Councillors Braithwaite and Timlin, it was decided to accept the present agreement and commence the work at once, and after the job was done to do the advertising. Mr. Cephas Linton, the Pathmaster of that beat, will be in charge, and it is expected the work will start on Wednesday.

A communication was received from the Cobourg General Hospital stating that Mrs. Geo. H. Hogg had been admitted there as an indigent patient, and that the township of Alnwick would be responsible for $1.50 per day during the time she is confined there.

YOUNG PEOPLE TO HOLD CONFERENCES

Four Will Be Held in Cobourg Presbytery Next Week.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 4. — The Echo Conferences of the Young Peoples' Societies in the Cobourg Presbytery of the United Church will be held next week at the following places: Monday at Newcastle; Tuesday at Pontypool; Wednesday, at Coldsprings; Thursday, at Colborne.

The two principal officers of these conferences are located in Campbellford, Rev. C. D. Daniel being chairman, and Miss Viva Dunk, secretary, both having been elected at the recent convention held at Port Hope. The programme will be practically the same at the different conferences and each society will elect to send its delegates to the one held at the centre most convenient to it. The motto of these conferences is to bring Cobourg Presbytery to the front for Christ; the aim is to have every Young People's Society represented at the sessions; the vision is the place of the young people in the work of the United Church of Canada. Topics of vital interest will be discussed at each conference and all delegates are asked to come prepared to take part in the proceedings.

There will be afternoon and evening session each day, and a returned missionary will be present to address the delegates.

BRITISH TARIFF ALARMS PAISH

Noted Economist Says Nation is Leading World Into Mischief.

LONDON, Dec. 4 — "Great Britain is leading the world into mischief," declares Sir George Paish, who views with alarm England's drift towards protection.

This foremost British economist has just returned from a tour of America and the Continent where he has been making an investigation into economic and industrial conditions. So seriously perturbed is he by the tendency of England to follow the lead of the rest of the world in the raising of tariff barriers, that he has uttered a warning to industries and workers concerned in them to check up the belief that tariffs are going to aid them.

He does not believe in prohibitive tariffs. He holds that they are a hindrance to the restoration of the economic prosperity of the world, and says no nation, least of all European, can afford the luxury of fostering behind tariff walls the "self-contained" illusion.

"The universal cry is: "Keep out the goods of other nations and be self-contained.' It cannot be done. It will only lead to ruin. The policy that made the world prosperous was the policy of ever increasing interchange of goods between the nations," says Sir George.

"England is drifting towards complete protection. This fact cannot be denied, and it is an extremely serious matter for the country. It is inconceivable to me that a nation which achieved a six-fold expansion of its income in a single century, and which depends for its very existence on the sale of manufactured goods, should be proclaiming to the world that it is a very bad thing to buy manufactured goods.

"If the British government imagines it is going to make the United Kingdom prosperous by the policy it is pursuing today, it will go on until one day it will find that in trying to safeguard British industry is has destroyed it."

The world situation, continues Sir George, demands a world wide reduction in tariffs, and this movement, he argues, is as important to America as it is to the struggling nations of Europe. He commented on the fact that thinking men all over the world are arriving at this conclusion.

Her Liver Was Bad And She Felt Tired and Depressed

Mrs. M. Siefert, Grosswerder, Sask., writes:—"I was greatly disturbed with pains in my liver, and felt tired and depressed most of the time. One day I read about and the next time I went to town I bought four vials of them.

Milburn's

LAXA-LIVER PILLS

I have used them regularly, and after two months' use I feel like an entirely different woman.

Now, I always recommend them to any of my friends who are troubled as I was."

There's only one "Laxa-Liver Pill", and that's the one put up, for the past 32 years, by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

BROWNLEE TO REST.

Alberta Premier Suffering From Cold.

EDMONTON, Alta., Dec. 4. — (Canadian Press)—Premier Brownlee will be confined to his house for the next ten days, it was announced at the Government Buildings yesterday. He is suffering from a severe cold and slight congestion of the lungs, together with a generally run-down condition, and while his illness is stated to be not at all alarming it is serious. It is thought likely that when he is able to be out again he will, if possible, take a complete rest for a short time in order to recuperate his health.
